STEVE ROBEL

Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Sergeant Robel, you were going to listen to tapes and compare them to the transcript or do something last night. Did you have a chance to do that.

A. I went ahead and I looked over the 2247 transcripts of Detective Zelis’s interview --

Q. Yes.

A. -- okay. -- regarding the -- January 19th.

Q. Correct.

A. And I was not present during that, so my thing is I think Detective Zelis would be able to shed more light on that than me.

Q. And he’s going to be here soon, I assume.

A. Correct.

Q. The transcript does show, however, that you were there. And your position is you were there and then left.

A. My position is I was there during the viewing of the video. And when the interviews took place with the individual children, I remained outside the room while Mr. Zonen and Detective Zelis conducted the interviews with the kids.

Q. And Mr. Sneddon as well; is that correct.

A. He was -- he was in and out as well. He was in and out, yes.

Q. All right. We'll talk to Detective Zelis about that.

Let me ask you if you had a chance to look at the other things that you were going to look at. You were going to look at -- or listen to Davellin's tape. Do you recall that.

A. Okay. I went over her transcripts more in detail.

Q. Okay.

A. So if you can refresh my memory regarding exactly what happened.

Q. That's fine. I'd ask that you look at page 28 of Davellin's transcript, and --

A. Okay. You're talking on the initial one, right, Mr. Sanger. The July interview.

Q. Let me just see here, because the note says page 28. To tell you the truth, now I don't know which one it was. Let me just look here. I think it was the second one.

A. Second interview.

Q. Hold on. Don't go anywhere yet.

No, I think it was the first one.

A. I'm on page 28 on the initial interview.

Q. Okay. I'm looking at yesterday's transcript, and there must have been -- okay. I'm sorry, I misread it. It's page 24. That's why I couldn't find it.

It was line 28 of the -- of yesterday's transcript, but it's page 24 of the one I'm asking you to look at right now. That's Davellin's -- yes. There it is.

A. Page 24 on the initial interview.

Q. That's correct.

A. That's where I am.

Q. All right. And do you remember -- yesterday I asked you if Davellin told you that Gavin and Star told her the stories, and you said that was true. And then I asked if she had told you, “Yeah, it’s like one tells me and the other one agrees to it.” And I believe you said you had to refresh your recollection either by listening to the tape or reviewing the transcript in order to determine if that’s what she, in fact, said.

A. Yes, I’m looking at that right now, and that is, in fact, what she said.

Q. Okay. And Detective Zelis, in your presence, on that occasion - this being the 7/7/03 transcript - on that occasion, Detective Zelis said, “So are they together when they tell you this.” And Davellin says, “Yeah, most of the time.” And Detective Zelis says, “Most of the time. Okay.” Is that what actually transpired in that interview.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Now, I also asked you if Davellin had -- at some point in the interview had told you that she was always by herself at the ranch, and she was not allowed to be with her mother. And you said you were going to check the transcript to see if that’s what she said.

And I know you’re going to ask me for a page on that, and best laid plans --

A. Well, I went over both of my interviews with her, the initial and also the follow-up. And if you can direct me to a page where it states that, I would appreciate it, because I could not find it, where she said that she wasn’t allowed to see her mother. I found something that --

Q. All right.

A. -- was close to that.

Q. What page did you find there. You can help me on that. How about that.

A. I’m trying to find it myself again. It may have been on the follow-up. I thought I had it marked, but I don’t. But I did not find it in either one, where she stated that she wasn’t able to see her mom.

Q. Okay. But she said something like that, that she was -- she was not with her mom most of the time.

A. No, what she said was, is that it was very seldom that she saw her brothers.

Q. Okay.

A. That she did not see them while at the ranch. Very seldom did she see them, because they were with Michael and they were with each other.

Q. All right. Hold on one second. Let me come back to that, and I’ll see if I can find a better quote for you on that, or a page on that. I want to do one other thing here with you, if I can.

Is this your witness.

MR. SNEDDON: My witness.

MR. SANGER: Okay. I’m sorry.

Your Honor, may I approach the witness.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: And I’d like to have this document marked next in order. And even if we had some blanks there, if it’s all right with the clerk, perhaps we could make this 5036, so it will go with Sergeant Robel’s other exhibit.

Is that right.

THE COURT: Yes. I’m waiting for the clerk to tell me, because I never know what exhibits you’ve marked that I don’t know about. I only know the ones that you’ve marked.

THE CLERK: That’s fine.

THE COURT: That’s a good number.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you.

THE COURT: 5036.

MR. SANGER: With the Court’s permission, Mr. Sneddon has no objection to my putting a blank version of this --

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: -- this chronology up on the --

and what's on the overhead is what is also marked as 5036, but the actual exhibit I'm going to hand to the witness, if I may.

THE COURT: How do you want the record to reflect what that exhibit is. What do you want to call it.

MR. SANGER: It's a timeline from February 1 to March 13.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: Bob, do you happen to have a copy for us. Thank you.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Sergeant Robel, you've had a chance to look at that for a moment.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. What you have in your hand -- because you haven't written on it yet. I've got it on the board. There are three dates that are typed in on this timeline. One is --

Can I borrow the pointer, if you have it.

MR. OXMAN: Bob. Right there.

MR. SANGER: Oh, we have our own. Okay. Thanks, whoever brought that.

Q. Okay. One -- and I don't want to shine this in the court reporter's eyes. So we're okay, right. I'm going from the top. I don't want to do something wrong here.

One is the 16th. And we have 2-16, "Brad Miller Interview," showing February 2003, the 16th of February, 2003. Is that your understanding of when that taped interview occurred.

A. I believe it was.

Q. Okay. And then we have 2-19 to 2-20, which is in the late evening hours of 2-19 onto the early morning hours of 2-20 when the rebuttal tape was being filmed; is that your understanding.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And then we have 2-20, later in the day, which would be February 20, 2003, we have the DCFS interview. Is that your understanding of when that occurred.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Okay. Now, what I'd like you to do, if you would, sir, is put your name once again where it says "witness." And I note last time you say "Sergeant S. Robel," and it looks like it says "515."

A. Well, I just put my body number down there.

Q. That's your badge number, or body number, or something.

A. Body number.

Q. Everybody in the sheriff's department has a different number so you can figure it out.

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. All right. Now, what I'd like -- what I'd like to do, based on your investigation as the lead investigator in this case, is I would like you to -- in general, and then I'm going to ask you specifically. But in general, I'd like you to try to put in some of the important dates that you have learned from your investigation in this case, so that the jury will have an idea of what was going on during this February and March period of time. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. All right. And then it will not show up here, but it's going to show up there, and we'll put that up after you finish.

First of all, do you know when the "Living with Michael Jackson" aired in the United Kingdom.

A. I believe that was on the 4th. 4th or 5th, one of those two. I'm not positive.

Q. Could it have been the 3rd.

A. It could have been.

Q. I'll tell you what. For now, then, why don't -- on your copy, why don't -- without directing it to a particular number, since you're not sure, why don't you just, above the general area of the 3rd, 4th and 5th, put "Living with Michael Jackson."

A. Okay.

Q. And do you know when the Arvizos flew to Miami on Chris Tucker's private chartered jet.

A. I believe it was the 6th.

Q. Could it have been the 5th. Is there something you can refer to to refresh your recollection.

A. Well, I would like to.

Q. If you have it, could you do that.

A. I don't have it up here, the timeline.

Q. Do you have a second to confer with the prosecutors. Can you get something that would help you.

A. Like I said, I don't have it up here.

Q. That's what I'm saying. Do you need a second. Perhaps you could confer with Mr. Sneddon and see if there's something that might help you.

MR. SNEDDON: What, do you want me to testify.

THE COURT: Well, Counsel, the way you have to do that, either you're prepared to give him the documents that you want him to testify from or you're not. You don't ask the other side to start producing materials for you.

MR. SANGER: Well, I didn't mean to -- the witness was indicating he thought he had something.

THE COURT: Well, if he doesn't have it, you have to move along to the next question.

MR. SANGER: That's fine.

Q. So in other words, whatever you have, you don't believe you have it in the courtroom; is that what you're saying.

A. That is correct. If you have something that would refresh my memory, that would be great.

Q. We'll go over this with other witnesses, then.

Do you know the date of the return, the date when Michael Jackson and the Arvizos came back to Santa Barbara and went out to Neverland Ranch.

A. I want to say I believe it was the 7th.

Q. Okay. February 7th.

A. February 7th, yes.

Q. So why don't you make a note of that.

And just to be clear, as the lead investigator, it's your responsibility to review all of the evidence, including other reports and other things that people have done in this case; is that correct.

A. That is correct. But there's so much involved in this, that some of these things, it's been a while since I have reviewed them.

Q. All right. Do you know -- so the Arvizos and Mr. Jackson come to the ranch on February 7th. Was it in the evening; do you recall.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object to the lack of personal knowledge on the part of the officer as to the date. He wasn't there.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Do you feel you can give us a timeline of essentially -- earlier you testified about some dates in March when you believe the Arvizos were at the ranch.

A. Correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Actually, Your Honor, can I impose an objection. This is really beyond the scope of direct examination. I didn't put this witness on for a timeline, and I didn't think I got into any of this. And he wasn't prepared to testify to it, so I object it's beyond the direct.

MR. SANGER: I believe on direct he did talk about certain dates and --

MR. SNEDDON: Connected to the search warrant.

MR. SANGER: If he's not the witness who's able to do this, we will certainly be able to do it. I do think he talked about the March dates earlier.

THE COURT: He did discuss the time when the family had returned from Miami and were at the ranch.

The problem I’m having is, after listening to all that testimony yesterday, I’m not sure which one of you asked that question.

MR. SANGER: I’ll tell you what we’ll do, because -- may I ask a question. And I’ll withdraw whatever is pending so I can ask a different question.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Sergeant Robel, as a lead investigator in this case, who do you feel from your department would be best able to present a chronology based on a review of the documents.

A. Well, the people that were assigned to the 2258 case, we all were familiar with the timeline. But there were so many different dates in there, that I’m familiar with it as well as anybody else. But I would like something up here to refresh my memory to make sure I’m correct on the exact chronological events that took place.

Q. And you have those materials, but you don’t have them in the courtroom.

A. I don’t have them with me in my binder.

Q. But you do have those materials somewhere.

A. Yes, we do.

MR. SANGER: So what I’ll do at this point, Your Honor, is I’m not going to ask any further questions on this. I would like to have Sergeant Robel review this, since he is the lead investigator, so he can give us a timeline. And in the meantime, if we can work it out with another witness, we’ll do that.

THE COURT: That’s fine.

MR. SANGER: All right.

THE COURT: Mr. Sneddon, you look like you might want to say something.

MR. SNEDDON: Am I allowed.

THE COURT: Well, I have to decide after you start talking.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, I just want to make it clear that I'm not trying to stop Mr. Sanger's cross, but this was not the purpose for this person at this particular point in time. And we had intended to do much the same thing at another point in time, and --

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: And I don't want to --

THE COURT: I did agree with you, that a lot of what was being asked was beyond the scope of the direct examination. But you didn't object, and I thought that was fine.

MR. SNEDDON: I didn't realize we were going to plow this field again today. So I figured it's time to stop.

THE COURT: All right. So are you going to ask -- go ahead, Counsel.

MR. SANGER: I'm sorry. All I was going to do is ask that -- I'm going to officially ask, or on the record ask that Sergeant Robel review his materials. And rather than hold us up at this moment, ask that he review his materials and then ask for permission to call him back sometime perhaps later today or tomorrow.

I understand there will be other police officers, so we can cover this. If in the meantime Detective Zelis or somebody else can do it, that's fine, too.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, with regard to that request, could counsel and I approach the bench for just a second. It's a personal thing --

THE COURT: No.

MR. SNEDDON: -- that you should be aware of.

THE COURT: No.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor --

THE COURT: If you're through with this witness - you've asked him to prepare - I'll have him step down. If you're not through, I want you to ask any questions that you have.

MR. SANGER: I am through with this witness except for the preparation. And I understand what Mr. Sneddon said and will accommodate the witness.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: There is an issue, and I understand, and we'll accommodate him.

THE COURT: You can talk to each other about that.

MR. SANGER: Fine.

THE COURT: Do you want to have some redirect.

MR. SNEDDON: With the Court's permission, yes.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Detective Robel, first a couple of easy questions for you. Prior to the time that you were assigned to this particular case -- excuse me just one second.

Prior to the time that you were assigned to this particular case, had you and I ever met.

A. Prior to the case, no.

Q. Now, I asked you to look at Detective Zelis's report last night, and specifically asked you to review the report with a view as to whether or not that report contained information about the Arvizo children saying that they had seen the rebuttal tape before your actual first interview with them. Not "seen the rebuttal tape," but participated in some interviews that we have now called "the rebuttal tape." Did you do that.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did that refresh your recollection.

A. Yes, it did.

Q. And did you, in fact, have that information prior to the initial interview with the children.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, on November the 18th of 2003, you've told the ladies and gentlemen of the jury that you went and participated in the execution of a search warrant that was authorized by a Judge of the Superior Court, correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. On that particular date, was there also an arrest warrant issued by that Judge for the defendant, Michael Jackson.

A. Yes, there was.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object and move to strike. Object and move to strike on the grounds of relevance and also beyond the scope of cross.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was “Yes, there was.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, Mr. Sanger asked you a lot of questions about what you did from after you interviewed the Arvizo family on a couple of occasions until the point that you executed the search warrant on November 18th. Do you recall those questions.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Now, was there a decision made with regard to how those search warrants were going to be executed.

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Was there a strategy involved in that.

A. Yes, there was.

Q. And what was that.

A. After interviewing --

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object. This calls for hearsay, and it does not appear to be relevant, and it’s beyond the scope of cross.

THE COURT: Doesn’t it -- isn’t that exactly what you were going into yesterday.

MR. SNEDDON: Absolutely.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Go ahead and tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury.

A. After conducting the interviews with the Arvizo family, myself, along with the other investigators, including the D.A.'s Office, met and we conferred and we decided at that point, like we do on several investigations, sometimes, you know, we'll go in and advance further and interview people to gather more information prior to serving a search warrant.

In this case we chose not to, due to the nature of the investigation, and the high-profile case being involved with Michael Jackson. So what we decided to do is drop a search warrant and serve it. And we did it that way because if we were to go out and contact people prior to that, we were concerned about evidence that we were looking for that would corroborate the statements of the children would be destroyed or would not be there, and it would compromise our investigation. So that's the reason why we chose to serve the search warrant.

And then after serving the search warrant, or during the search warrant service, I was able to -- due to the statements from the children, I was already corroborating some of their statements to me as I was walking through and searching through the house and things that they depicted.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to move to strike the last part as being nonresponsive.

THE COURT: I'm going to strike the last paragraph that starts, "And then after serving the search warrant."

MR. SNEDDON: All right.

THE COURT: And I'm going to admonish the jury to disregard that statement as a conclusion of the witness.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I don't --

THE COURT: It's nonresponsive.

MR. SNEDDON: It's nonresponsive.

THE COURT: It was nonresponsive and a conclusion of the witness.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes, sir. All right.

Q. Now, Detective Robel, at the time that you executed the search warrant on November 18th of 2003 - okay. - did you, during the course of the execution of that search warrant observe, you personally, observe items or things that you felt corroborated the statements of the Arvizo children.

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: On the date that you executed the search warrant, did you see the mannequin.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the briefcase with the pornography.

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Object.

MR. SANGER: Yes, objection. Violates the Court’s rule.

THE COURT: You didn’t say “adult material.”

MR. SNEDDON: Oh, God. I’m sorry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: I --

THE COURT: Rephrase your question. Sustained.

MR. SNEDDON: Well, you know, you think like a lawyer. I really apologize. I apologize to everybody.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Okay. Did you see the briefcase with the adult material in it.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you go to the arcade.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the jukebox.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go in the cellar.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the wine.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go up the stairway to Mr. Jackson’s bedroom.

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I believe this is beyond the scope of cross. I object.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Did you stand on the landing and look towards Mr. Jackson’s bed.

A. Yes.

Q. On the day that the search warrant was executed, simultaneous with the execution of the search warrant, were other search warrants executed.

A. Yes, there were.

Q. And were there interviews that were done simultaneous off the ranch premises.

A. Yes.

Q. And who was the person who was interviewed.

A. Jesus Salas.

Q. Now, don’t tell us anything about what was said, because we’ll get into that later. But were you informed of the results of that interview while you were at the ranch that morning.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Were you present when a search warrant was executed on the residence of Marc Schaffel.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Okay. Let’s talk a little bit about some of the things that Mr. Sanger asked you this morning and yesterday.

You were asked by Mr. Sanger to review some statements with regard to Davellin, and specifically to Davellin with regard to that portion of the transcript where she is describing events that -- where her brothers are present and they’re talking about things.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall that.

A. Yes.

Q. From reviewing the transcript, can you tell us - tell the jury more importantly - tell them whether or not, from the review of the transcripts, that she’s referring to statements that have occurred on the ranch or after they left the ranch.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to -- I’m going to object. That calls for a conclusion. It’s either a statement of the witness or it’s not.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Can you tell from a review of the transcript as to when those statements are made.
A. No.
Q. And just to be clear, the conversations themselves, can you tell when -- the conversations she’s talking about, when they occurred.
A. I can tell when they occurred during their stay on Neverland, but exact dates, no.

Q. Now, you were asked yesterday by Mr. Sanger with regard to whether or not Davellin told you that she was aware of the urine bottles incident. Do you recall that.
A. Yes.
Q. And did you have a chance to go back and look at the transcript with regard to her statements to you about that.
A. Yes.
Q. And can you tell from a review of the transcript when she was aware of the urine bottles incident.
A. It was --
MR. SANGER: Objection. That calls for speculation.
MR. SNEDDON: Let me rephrase it, Judge. I can probably help you.
THE COURT: All right.
Q. Can you tell from a review of the transcript whether or not she was aware of the urine bottle specimen while she was at the ranch or --
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. I just have a couple more.
You were, you’ve told the jury, one of the officers who interviewed Gavin Arvizo in the initial interview and in the follow-up interview, correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. And during the initial interview, Gavin Arvizo disclosed to you certain things that Mr. Jackson did to him, correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, can you describe to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what Gavin’s attitude or demeanor was at the time that you got into that part of the conversation.

A. Prior to getting into that area, we were just discussing just his stay on the ranch, and he appeared to be, you know, fine with talking with us, open, very positive.

As I got into questioning him regarding the actual molestation acts and having him share with that openly, immediately noticed a major change in Gavin’s demeanor, and he basically became very, very quiet, folded his arms, and just sunk down into his chair.

And it took me approximately ten minutes or so to reassure him that he was doing the right thing. And he, at one point in time, kind of got a little -- a little choked up. And eventually he was able to go on ahead and disclose what acts occurred.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object and move to strike the last sentence as a conclusion of the witness.

THE COURT: Stricken. The jury’s admonished to disregard the last sentence.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, yesterday Mr. Sanger asked you several questions about statements that Gavin Arvizo made to you about the number of times that he told you that Mr. Jackson molested him. Do you recall those questions.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall that on a couple of occasions he told you he thought it was between five and seven times.

A. Yes.
Q. And do you recall in the courtroom here he indicated that there were at least two times that he was very specific about the information in which he was -- the defendant molested him. Do you recall that.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you find any inconsistencies between what he told you and what he said in the courtroom.
MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor. That calls for speculation and comment on a witness's testimony.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Were you present during a conversation where Gavin Arvizo explained the five and seven -- the five figure that he gave you versus the two figure that he testified in court.
A. Yes.
Q. And what did he say in that regard.
MR. SANGER: Objection; vague as to time.

MR. SNEDDON: It's a --
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Go ahead.
A. During my initial interview with him, he had told me that -- that he was specific about two events that he recalled occurring. And he also told me that he believes that it happened between five and seven times. And he could not articulate exactly what occurred, but he believes that it happened more than twice.
MR. SNEDDON: No further questions, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Recross.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Now, you said you were aware of the rebuttal tape. How were you aware of the rebuttal tape.

A. During interviews with Mrs. Arvizo.
Q. With Janet Arvizo.
A. Correct.
Q. You had no idea what the rebuttal tape looked like at the time you talked to Janet Arvizo before November 18th; is that correct.
A. That is correct.
Q. And you did not ask any of the children about the rebuttal tape prior to the search on November 18th, 2003, correct.

A. I believe that's correct.
MR. SANGER: May I just put up 5035. That's the timeline that --
THE COURT: Yes, that's fine.
MR. SANGER: It's already in evidence. Just so we have a visual here.
Q. Okay. So again, search, November 18th. And sometime after that -- sometime between November 18th and January 19th, you saw a portion of the rebuttal video, correct.
A. That is correct.
Q. And one of the other officers said, "Look at this," and he was looking at it on his screen, and you came over and looked at it.
A. Yeah. It was a DVD, or video.
Q. Okay. And then the first time you watched the full tape was January 19th; is that correct.
A. That's correct.
Q. When you first -- who was it that showed you this tape, by the way.
A. Detective Bonner.
Q. Okay. So when Detective Bonner showed you this tape, he called you over and said, "Look at this," right.
A. Yeah.
Q. And when you first saw, it was rather remarkable, wasn't it.

A. Remarkable in what way.

Q. I'm asking you. Let me ask you this, then: It did not appear to you at that time to be consistent with what you had been hearing from this family up until the time you saw it.

A. When I saw bits and pieces of what he showed me on that day, I was not alarmed by that because of -- I recalled what Janet had told me in her initial interview about them being forced to do that by Dieter, so it was not alarming to me at all regarding what I was seeing and the way she was acting, if that's what you're asking.

Q. So forced to say things like "Call Michael Jackson 'daddy' and 'father figure'," and all that.

A. Exactly.

Q. Okay. And you weren't -- you've sat here now, you've seen the cards where that's what this family does. They call people "father" and "mother," and they tell them they love them and they do all that, right.

A. According to the cards, yes.

Q. You weren't aware of that at the time, were you.

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. So when she explained, and later the kids explained, "Oh, Dieter made us do it," you weren't aware that that's what they, in fact, did spontaneously prior to ever meeting Dieter, right.

MR. SNEDDON: Excuse me.

MR. SANGER: That was a long question.

MR. SNEDDON: It's vague, ambiguous and --

MR. SANGER: Let me withdraw it.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: I think it was compound, actually. Let me try to break it down.

Q. Prior to -- let's put it this way: When did you first learn that this family would send very effusive cards and letters to people calling them "mommy" or "daddy," and telling them they're part of their family, and that sort of thing.

MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object to the question as "this family" is vague. If he has specific people he wants to refer to, I think he should do that.

MR. SANGER: I'm referring to Janet, Star, Gavin and Davellin, whose names already show up on the cards in evidence in this case with regard to Palanker and Michael Jackson.

THE COURT: Just a moment. I don't know how this has deteriorated where both of you are talking freely to the jury about your questions. So let's go back to the --

MR. SANGER: I'm sorry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let's go back to the specific objections, and not respond to them. The objection is overruled.

You may answer now. And I'll have it read back, because there's been a conversation take place.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Upon reviewing, after the search warrant, some of the items that were seized, when I was going through some of those items, I ran across some of the cards and so forth that you have displayed here in court.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, the cards to Miss Palanker, you were here in court when those were displayed.

A. That is correct.

Q. You didn't see those cards until a couple months ago; is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you indicated that you proceeded -- Mr. Sneddon was asking you how you proceeded with this investigation. And basically, you said that you talked to the family and you didn't -- you didn't develop other evidence before going to get the search warrants, correct.

A. Meaning --

Q. I'm paraphrasing what you were saying, and perhaps not accurately, because you're not agreeing. I believe in response to Mr. Sneddon's question, you said on November 18th, you got search warrants, and you proceeded in that fashion rather than going out and interviewing other people, other than the family, and I guess Dr. Katz, right.

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. And I take it from what you are saying, you did that, and I think you specifically said, because this was a high-profile case, correct.

A. What I meant is, is that due to the nature of the case being a molestation case, this is not something that -- it’s out of the ordinary for me, as an investigator, that, on molestation cases, you do not --

MR. SANGER: I’m going to move to strike. That’s a narrative and not responsive.

THE COURT: Overruled. He’s answering your question.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Go ahead.

A. That we take those differently, and each one is dealt with differently as far as how far we pursue it before we do a warrant, because it would compromise evidence that we would possibly lose if we were to go out and contact the people.

Q. Now, you once said that you were concerned about, for instance, calling the Beverly Hills Police Department, didn’t you say. Not here in these proceedings, but previously. Were you aware of that. I don’t know if you said it or --

A. I don’t know if it was me. I think it was one of the other investigators that was assigned to that.

Q. And you were concerned about calling the Beverly Hills Police Department why.

A. I --

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, I object. Lack of knowledge, personal knowledge.

MR. SANGER: That’s fine.

Q. If you don’t know -- you’re the lead investigator, right.

THE COURT: Just a minute.

MR. SANGER: Let me withdraw it.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. I'm basing this question on your position here as the lead investigator. I take it, as lead investigator, you have a say -- or you discuss with your superiors, but you have a say on what happens in the case, correct.

A. Mr. Sanger, I have a say in what happens in the case. But the magnitude of this case, you know, I'm the lead, but I don't know every little thing that goes on and gets my approval. So I'm unaware of some things that don't go on on a regular basis.

Q. Well, you're aware, for instance, as you have told us, that Mr. Sneddon himself went down to Beverly Hills and did some investigation, correct.

A. He went down to Beverly Hills. But it wasn't for investigation.

Q. Well, sir, he went to Brad Miller's office --

THE COURT: Just a minute, Counsel. I just feel that the examination is losing its focus. Every time he answers something a little differently, you go down that street. And we're -- I wonder if you could get back to what you were asking him about originally.

MR. SANGER: This is --

THE COURT: I don't --

MR. SANGER: I can indicate to the Court --

THE COURT: I think you're taking every side street that comes up, and I'd like you to concentrate on your recross of this witness.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

Q. The recross, and the focus of this, Sergeant Robel, is what you just told us about, you told Mr. Sneddon, this is a high-profile case, that's why you proceeded in this fashion. I asked you about that, and you responded --

MR. SNEDDON: Object as a narrative.

THE COURT: Just ask your next question.
MR. SANGER: All right.
Q. And one of the things that your department did, because you said this was a sensitive case, was not contact the Beverly Hills Police Department; is that correct.

A. I did not say that, to not contact Beverly Hills. That wasn't me that said that.
Q. Somebody in your department said that; is that right.
MR. SNEDDON: Object as lack of personal knowledge.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: If you know.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled. I'll have the question read back, because he added something at the end.
Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: I believe so, yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. And the reason for that was, you were worried about leaks.
A. That's correct.
Q. All right. Now, do you have any information whatsoever that the Beverly Hills Police Department would leak information.
MR. SNEDDON: Object, Your Honor, calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. SANGER: It's just "yes" or "no." All right.
Q. In fact, at that same time period you contacted the Los Angeles Police Department to go see where Mr. Moslehi lived or confirm his address, didn't you.

A. Mr. Moslehi.
Q. Moslehi. However you say it. I apologize to him, but --

A. I believe we did.

Q. Okay. And in any event -- so sometimes you would -- before the 18th, there were occasions when you did make some inquiries and occasions when you didn’t, based on your concern about sensitivity; is that right.

A. I guess that would be a fair way of putting it, yes.

Q. And on November 18th, you not only got search warrants to search for evidence, but as you just told Mr. Sneddon, you also got an arrest warrant; is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. So November 18th, you and your department formed the opinion that you should -- you had probable cause, you should go out and arrest Mr. Michael Jackson in this case, based on what you had then, right.

A. That is correct.

Q. And then you investigated the case after you got the arrest warrant.

A. That’s incorrect.

Q. You didn’t investigate the case after you got the arrest warrant.

A. We investigated the case prior to the search warrant. We continued to investigate the case, and we are currently continuing to investigate the case as this trial is going on. This is a continuing investigation.

Q. So a part of the continuing investigation you’re just talking about, for instance, is an attempt to discredit witnesses who have come forward to say that the Arvizos are not telling the truth; is that correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object to this as beyond the scope.

THE COURT: I’m not going to sustain the objection.

Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Can you repeat that, please.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: To discredit, no. It’s when we receive reports from you, as the defense, that we have accusations or things in your reports, we’re going to go and see if we can interview them to clarify and to make sure that that is correct. And we’re also having other people coming forward besides your witnesses that you’ve talked to that we’re following up leads regarding this case.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. When you say “our witnesses,” we submit reports to you, part of what our investigators do through our office, right.

A. Correct.

Q. And give you an opportunity to follow up and talk to them and figure out what’s going on, right.

A. That is correct.

Q. And there have been a couple of witnesses - without going into a lot of detail - a couple of witnesses very recently, who I think have already been referred to -- but I think there have been a couple of witnesses who came forward and said they would talk only to both sides at the same time, correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. And you went down -- I think you personally went down once with Mr. Sneddon, once with Mr. Zonen, and interviewed these witnesses, correct.

A. No, I just went down with Mr. Zonen. I didn’t go with Mr. Sneddon.

Q. You’re aware that Mr. Sneddon went down on another witness with another investigator, is that --

A. Yes.

Q. And as to one of those witnesses, you had your officers -- as lead investigator, you had your officers, or law enforcement agents, go door to door in the neighborhood to see if people could say anything about the witness who had come forward, correct.

A. No.

Q. Were you aware that --

A. I had them go down there and make sure that was the address where that particular person was living. It's part of making sure that we have the right location.

Q. And knocked on the doors, and asked people about their neighbor, the witness, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And you ran a -- about a 150-page Equifax credit check on one of the witnesses, didn't you, or had it done; is that correct.

A. A credit Equifax.

Q. Equifax credit check.

A. I'm unaware of that.

Q. Did you ever run an Equifax credit check on Janet Arvizo or any of the other people that are accusing Mr. Jackson.

A. We have run backgrounds on everyone involved in this case, whether they're a witness or whatever. That is procedure for us to find out who we're dealing with before we send our investigators out.

Q. Did you ever run an Equifax credit check on Janet Arvizo.

A. I believe we did.

Q. You did. An Equifax.

A. I believe so. I'm not sure.

Q. If you find that, would you provide it in discovery to us.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, that's argumentative.

MR. SANGER: Well, but --

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right. Very well. I have no further questions.

MR. SNEDDON: No further questions.

THE COURT: All right. You may step down.

MR. SANGER: Subject to the request that he take a look at those materials.

THE COURT: Well, we'll discuss that.

Call your next witness.

He’s always subject to re-call. He’s not excused.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: Mr. Sanger.

THE BAILIFF: I’ll get it. Excuse me.

MR. SNEDDON: Detective Zelis.

THE COURT: Please remain standing and raise your right hand.

PAUL ZELIS

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Paul Zelis. Z-e-l-i-s.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Zelis.

A. Good morning.

Q. You’re employed by the Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Department.

A. Yes.

Q. And would you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury how long you’ve been employed by them.

A. I’ve been employed with the sheriff’s department -- well, I’ve been in law enforcement for about 12 years. First four years was with the marshal’s office, Santa Barbara. And remaining with the sheriff’s department.

Q. How long have you been a detective.

A. Almost four years.

Q. And with regard to the investigation involving the defendant in this case, Michael Jackson, were you assigned at some point to be an investigator on that investigation.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall when that was.

A. It was June the 13th. It was a Friday.

Q. Of what year.
A. 2003, I’m sorry.
Q. All right. And the jurors probably heard this, but we should hear it from you. You participated in some interviews of the Arvizo children; is that correct.

A. Yes.
Q. And those interviews were videotaped.
A. Correct.
Q. Now, at some point on November the 18th of 2003, did you participate in the execution of a search warrant at Neverland Valley Ranch.
A. I did.
Q. And what was your role in the execution of the search warrant.
A. To attempt to locate evidence.
Q. And were you assigned to a particular place to search.
A. Yes. I was assigned to the main house, specifically Mr. Jackson’s bedroom.
Q. Any particular place within Mr. Jackson’s bedroom.
A. The upstairs part of the two-story suite.
Q. All right. I want to show you an item that’s in evidence as No. 340.
Excuse me, Counsel.
Ask you to take a look at that for just a moment.
THE CLERK: That’s not 340.
THE COURT: You have not identified that exhibit correctly.

MR. SNEDDON: I said 340, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s not 340.
THE WITNESS: 317.
MR. SNEDDON: No, that’s the item number.
THE COURT: 340 is two disks.
MR. SNEDDON: You’re right. I transposed the numbers. 470.

THE CLERK: It hasn’t been received in evidence.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Do you recognize that item.
A. Yes, I do.
THE COURT: It’s not in evidence yet.
MR. SNEDDON: All right. I’ll take care of that right now, Your Honor.
Q. The item that’s in front of you as 470, is that the right number.
A. Exhibit No. 470.
Q. Let me write that down. I had the wrong number written down. All right.
When and where did you see that for the first time.
A. I saw that during our search warrant on November 18th. And I first located this in the downstairs closet next to the stairway that leads up to Mr. Jackson’s bed.
Q. And after you looked -- after you saw it, did you take it into your custody.
A. I did.

Q. Did you open it.
A. Yes.
Q. And did you see what the contents were.
A. Yes.
Q. And what were the contents.
A. Pornographic --
Q. You can’t use that word. I already messed up. It’s “adult material.”
A. Adult material.
MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I --
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. SANGER: I’m going to ask the Court to explain the significance.
MR. SNEDDON: That’s fine.
THE COURT: I think I already did tell the jury the significance.
Go ahead.
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. “Adult material”; okay.
A. Yes.

Q. What did you see inside.
A. Commercially produced adult material magazines.
Q. And after you had opened it up and observed the contents, what did you do with it.
A. I gave it to Detective Padilla to be booked into evidence.
Q. Did you give Detective -- without saying what you said, did you give him information as to where it was located.

A. Yes.
Q. And where was Detective Padilla located when you gave it to him.
A. He was within the downstairs den area of the two-bedroom suite.
MR. SNEDDON: I move that be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. SANGER: No objection.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Two photographs I’m going to hand you.
With regard to the first photograph, Your Honor, and Counsel -- I’m sorry, let me have those back, because one of those is a new photo. The other one’s already in evidence.
Now, with regard to the first photograph, it’s marked for identification purposes, which is 85. Do you see that photograph.
A. Yes.
Q. And is -- is that photograph an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: I move that 85 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. SANGER: No objection.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And with regard to People’s 86, do you recognize that photograph.

A. Yes.

Q. And is that -- that’s already in evidence. Do you recognize what’s depicted in that photograph.

A. Yes.

Q. And when is -- where was that when you first saw the items depicted in that photograph.

A. I pulled it out of the closet as depicted in Exhibit No. 85. I pulled it to -- outside the closet in an area of the floor that I could open it. Opened it and had a picture taken of it.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, may we have the Elmo turned on, please.

Q. All right. With regard to the photograph that’s depicted on the Elmo above, what does that show, Detective.

THE COURT: What exhibit is that.

MR. SNEDDON: This is 85.

THE COURT: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: It shows the briefcase in its original location within the closet.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And where was that closet located.

A. It was directly next to the stairway leading up to the upstairs bedroom area.

Q. And now I’m going to put 86 on the board. With regard to the Exhibit 86, does that depict the condition of the briefcase when you first opened it up.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you personally go through and inventory all the items inside the briefcase at that time.

A. No.

Q. So what did you do after you opened it up and looked at it.

A. I had forensics take a picture of it, and I closed it, sealed it, and booked it into evidence.

Q. Okay. We can take that down. All right. I’ve shown you a photograph, No. 75, which is in evidence, I believe, Madam Clerk. That’s what it says on the tag, so I’m -- Do you recognize what’s depicted in that photograph.

A. Yes.
Q. All right. And what is that.
A. It is the upstairs bed area of the two-story suite.
Q. Is that the area in which you were conducting your search.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, do you see anything depicted in that photograph that contained items that you seized on that day of November 18.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Did you seize things from other areas of the bedroom.

A. Yes.
Q. Where.
A. In a nightstand directly opposite of this picture that's on the right-hand side of this.
Q. I got the wrong picture. Okay. We'll correct that.
A. Okay.
Q. That was a test.
All right. The next photograph that's in front of you, the number on that is.
A. 338.
Q. Is that in evidence.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. With regard to 338, when and where was the first time that you saw the item depicted in that photograph.
A. I located this photograph of the children in the nightstand, as I previously mentioned, to the right of the bed, in the bottom drawer.
Q. Okay. Would you turn that one over, if you would.
The next photograph, the number on that is.
A. 83.
Q. And that, I believe, is not in evidence.
Do you recognize what's depicted in that photograph.
A. Yes.

Q. And is that photograph an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: Move it be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. SANGER: No objection.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And the next photograph, Officer -- Detective.
A. 285.
Q. With regard to 285, do you recognize that.
A. Yes.
Q. And is that an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: I move that 285 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Is there any objection.
MR. SANGER: No objection, Your Honor.
THE COURT: All right. It’s admitted.
MR. SNEDDON: We’re going to need the Elmo again, Your Honor.
Q. All right. I’m going to have Exhibit No. 338 put up on the Elmo.
Now, do you recognize that photograph.
A. Yes.
Q. And where was it the first time you saw it.
A. In -- located within the second bottom drawer of the nightstand to the right of the bed.

Q. Now, with regard to that particular exhibit, 33 -- with regard to the photograph depicted in the Photograph 338, what did you do with that photograph.
A. I had it booked into evidence.
Q. And do you recognize the people in that photograph.
A. Yes.
Q. And had you met them prior to the execution of the search warrant.

A. Yes.

Q. And you say you had it booked into evidence. Would you describe to the jury what you did with regard to this particular item to get it processed and booked into evidence.

A. I provided it to Detective Padilla, who was gathering all the evidence and taking note of who located it and where it was found.

Q. All right. Now, we’re going to put the Exhibit 83 on the board.

Do you recognize what’s depicted in the Exhibit 83.

A. Yes.

Q. And with regard to that particular exhibit and the magazine, did you direct that photograph be taken.

A. Yes.

Q. By whom.

A. Forensics.

Q. And when and where was that magazine the first time you saw it.

A. Just as you see it there inside the drawer.

Q. So that’s exactly where it was before it was touched.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Do you recall how many magazines that you found of a similar nature in that particular drawer.

A. An exact amount, I don’t. But I know there were several. Exact amount, I don’t know. I know there were several.

Q. Oh, “several.” I couldn’t hear the last word. Okay. Thank you.

All right. You can take that down.

I’m going to place 285 up on the board right now and ask you if you recognize it when it gets cleared up. All right. 285, do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. And did you play a role in having those items displayed on the bed.

A. Yes, I placed them there.

Q. And were you present when the photograph was taken.

A. Yes.

Q. And where are -- the items that are depicted in that photograph, where did you obtain them from.

A. These were all items located in the bottom drawer of that nightstand.

Q. All right. You can take that down.

Your Honor, may I have just a moment to get the right photograph.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. I think we can clarify this.

I've handed you a photograph that's marked as People's 77; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And People's 77, do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, does that photograph depict the location of where you found the items that you just testified about.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. That felt pen, is that still up there somewhere.

A. No.

Q. No. No, it isn't, because I took it.

Now, on the exhibit People's 77 - okay. - I want you to just put your initials on the location of the item of furniture which you obtained those magazines in the photograph.

A. Okay.

Q. And what have you put on the photograph.

A. My initials. "PZ."

Q. All right. Thank you.

During the course of the time that you executed this warrant, did you see a mannequin in the room.

A. Yes.

Q. And where was the mannequin when you saw it for the first time.

A. In the upstairs bedroom area of the two-story suite.

Q. And when you saw the mannequin, what did you do with it.

A. I booked it into evidence.

Q. So this was another item that you took down and gave to Deputy Padilla.

A. Detective Padilla, yes.

Q. Detective Padilla.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you just generally describe what the mannequin looked like.

A. It's a mannequin, life-sized mannequin of an eight-year-old Afro-American girl.

Q. Okay. Now, during the time that you were processing these pieces of evidence, were you wearing gloves.

A. Yes.

Q. During the course of the search that day, did you see anything that looked like some kind of a folding chair or a futon of some kind in Mr. Jackson's room.

A. Yes.

Q. Would you describe where it was and what it looked like to you.

A. It was -- it was actually to the right of the right nightstand where I've located these items. It was like a little cushion seat. I think you can fold it out. I'm not quite sure of this, but it looked like the type that could be folded out and slept on.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to move to strike based on speculation, Your Honor, the last part.

THE COURT: Sustained. And it's stricken.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, at this time I have one other exhibit I'd like to have marked for identification purposes, which is 561. And it's a brown bag with the number in black at the top, 365, and its contents.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Detective Zelis, I've handed you an item that's marked as -- I forgot the number. What's the number. 571.

A. 561.

Q. 561. Do you recognize that bag.

A. Yes.

Q. Would you please take the item out of the bag.

Do you recognize the item you took out of the bag.

A. Yes.

Q. When and where was that the first time that you saw it.

A. I saw this in the upstairs bed area of the two-story suite.

Q. And what did you do with it after you saw it.

A. I seized it and had it booked into evidence.

Q. Do you remember specifically where upstairs it was.

A. It was over by this chair that I described on top of some books, or some boxes, I should say.

Q. Okay.

MR. SNEDDON: I need a moment, Your Honor. Your Honor, it's time for a break and we have a minor thing to straighten out. So that would be better than doing it in front of the jury and you.

THE COURT: All right. Let's take the break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: All right.
MR. SNEDDON: Thank you, Your Honor.
Q. Detective Zelis, I want to direct your attention back to the Exhibit No. 561. Oh, sorry. I want to direct your attention back to the Exhibit 561 for a moment, if we can.
A. Yes.
Q. Prior to the recess, you withdrew one book from that brown bag; is that correct.
A. That is correct.
Q. And the bag actually contained two books.
A. Yes.
Q. And we found the second one during the recess.
A. Yes.
Q. And do you recognize the second book.
A. Yes.
Q. And those are the items that you found in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom.
A. Correct.
MR. SNEDDON: Move that those items be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. SANGER: Other than objections previously stated, we have no objection.
THE COURT: All right. Admit them.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. At this point I’m going to hand you an exhibit that’s been marked as 286 for identification purposes. Okay.

MR. SANGER: May I see it, please.
MR. SNEDDON: 286, Your Honor. And it’s a chart.

MR. SANGER: Oh, okay.
MR. SNEDDON: I’ll show it to counsel.
MR. SANGER: Yeah, fine.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Do you recognize the floor plan depicted in the chart, 286.
A. It appears to be the upper bedroom portion of the two-story suite.
MR. SNEDDON: Okay. Your Honor, I would purport at this time, like we did before, with the same admonition, that it does not necessarily mean that the numbers as to the dimensions of the room are accurate, but to be used to demonstrate this witness’s testimony as to the locations of certain items. And that’s what I discussed with counsel before.
MR. SANGER: I have no objection to that.
THE COURT: All right. It’s admitted on that condition.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, Detective Zelis, if you could, for the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, first of all, could you indicate for them the location --
We’re going put the chart up on the board, if we can, Your Honor. And --
You’re going to need to mark on this.

All right. I want to direct your attention to the Exhibit 256. Now, can you indicate to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, on this particular exhibit, where it was that you found -- where the nightstand was located and the items that you found there.
A. The nightstand would have been approximately in this area.
Q. All right. You’re indicating to the lower right-hand far wall of the bedroom.
A. Correct.
Q. Would you indicate that on the -- on the exhibit.
All right. Would you describe for the record what you put there.

A. I drew a square, and inside the square I put “NS,” for “nightstand.”

Q. All right. Now, within that nightstand, you found some magazines, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And you found the picture of the Arvizo children.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Would you just put a little, like a line to the nightstand thing, and write those in there.

All right. Now, you’ve indicated to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury you found two books that have now been admitted into evidence as 561. Where did you find those in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom.

A. Do you wish me to point --

Q. Please.

A. There was numerous boxes and cabinets in this general area of this side of the bedroom.

Q. You’re indicating to the exhibit, 286, that down towards the left lower wall of the room.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And would you, on the Exhibit 286, please indicate generally where you found the two books that are now in evidence as 561.

A. Okay.

Q. All right. And what did you put on the Exhibit 286, the chart.

A. I drew a rectangle with a “B,” for “books.”

Q. Now, you told the ladies and gentlemen of the jury that you found a mannequin in the bedroom that you took.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you have a photograph in front of you, which I believe is 153, which is in evidence.

A. Correct.

Q. Do you recognize the item depicted in that photograph.

A. Yes.

Q. And what is that.

A. It is the mannequin.

Q. And can you indicate on the exhibit that’s up on the wall there, which is a replica of 286, where you found the mannequin.

A. I first located the mannequin, it was on the floor generally in this area.

Q. You’re indicating, again, towards that far wall, and on this exhibit towards the lower left-hand part of it.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Would you please just put an “M” in the general area of where you found the item depicted in 153, the mannequin.

A. Okay.

Q. Okay. Now, on the exhibit chart, 286, you told the ladies and gentlemen of the jury that you found the briefcase that’s in evidence, that’s 470, in a particular location below that bedroom; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Are you able to show the ladies and gentlemen of the jury the general area on the chart, 286, as to where the entryway to that closet is in relationship to the bedroom.

A. The entry door was on the bottom floor, right next to the staircase, so it would have been in this area here.

Q. So towards the area on the chart where the stairs are, but just to the right of it; is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. Would you please indicate on the exhibit chart, 286, just put the number -- or just put “Briefcase” in the general area of where you found the briefcase.

A. Okay.

Q. And I’ve handed you a photograph that’s marked as People’s 72, which is in evidence.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recognize -- what is People’s 72; tell the jury.

A. It is a picture, downstairs, of the stairway and several entry doors. One to a closet; one into the actual room where the picture was taken. The stairs are what is depicted in this diagram here.

Q. Diagram 286.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Could you put your initials on the door that led to the closet where you found the Item 470.

A. Okay.

Q. All right. So we’ve now put up for the jury to see the photograph, 72, which is in evidence. And I notice it has a dark “P” and a “Z.”

A. Correct.

Q. Those are your initials on the door that led to the closet where 470 was found.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I have a few questions about that, and then we’re going to be done.

With regard to the Item 470, the black briefcase - okay. --

A. Okay.

Q. -- prior to the time that you went to the ranch on November 18th, had you participated in an interview with the Arvizo boys, Gavin and Star.

A. Yes.

Q. And had they described to you an incident involving Mr. Jackson showing them adult materials.

A. Yes.

Q. And did they describe to you where -- the container that the adult materials were in.

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you take Exhibit 470, the black briefcase.

MR. SANGER: Objection. State of mind is not relevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: When you observed the Item 470, can you tell us whether or not it matched the description of -- the description given by the Arvizo boys.

A. It matched the description exactly.

Q. Now, with regard to that particular Exhibit 470 -- and we can take that one down. And I want to show this one again. That’s Exhibit 86, a photograph. With regard to that particular exhibit, did you testify before the grand jury.

A. Yes.

Q. And did the grand jury request to be able to look at the materials inside of this suitcase.

A. Yes.

Q. And were you the officer who was chosen to be the one to take the briefcase in and show them the materials.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you allow anybody in the grand jury to touch any of those materials.

A. No.

Q. Did you, in the course of showing those things to the grand jury, take any precautions so your fingerprints wouldn’t show up on those materials.

A. Yes, I wore latex gloves.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you. No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Sanger.

MR. SANGER: Let’s -- you don’t have to give me all of them. Just give me the one that was just up there. That’s fine. Yeah, okay.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Detective Zelis, starting with the item we left off with there, this is Item 315 as it was booked into evidence, right.

A. Yes.
Q. So the entire briefcase, with all of its contents, was booked into evidence as Exhibit 317.
A. Correct.
Q. You testified on direct that you gave it to Detective Padilla, who booked it into the evidence locker or into the evidence system in the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Office; is that correct.
A. That is correct.
Q. And he booked in -- as you gave it to him, he booked in the entire briefcase and the contents, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. And it was numbered Item 317, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, I believe you said something about forensics on direct examination with regard to this. But I may be wrong.
So let me ask you, was it your intention that the contents of this briefcase be evaluated and analyzed by the CSI or forensic unit at the sheriff’s department.
A. No.

Q. Did you think anything about that.
A. No.
Q. You were wearing gloves when you -- when you seized this item, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. And you put it in a plastic bag, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. You didn’t think forensics was ever going to look at this.
A. Well, I’m sure they would.
Q. Okay. And you’re sure they would for what purpose. Look at that for fingerprints, perhaps.
A. Perhaps.
Q. Okay. Do you think that would be pretty much a priority.
A. Possibly.
Q. Possibly.
And in 2004, April -- March and April of 2004, in that time period, this briefcase was brought to the grand jury in Santa Barbara; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And it was your understanding it had been to forensics, right, when you brought it in.

A. That I'm not sure of.

Q. You're not sure.

By the end of the grand jury proceeding, you came to realize that nobody had checked for fingerprints on these materials inside of Sheriff's Item 317; isn't that correct, sir.

A. Yes.

Q. That was kind of a shocker, wasn't it.

It wasn't a shocker.

A. No, not to me.

Q. You're kind of smiling. This -- in fact, when that was learned, that's when you were sent in with gloves for the grand jury to look at the materials, so that they wouldn't be picking it up and handling it; is that right.

A. Correct.

Q. However, during the course of that grand jury, the contents of this, of this briefcase, Sheriff's Item 317, was handed to Gavin Arvizo so he could look through it, see if he could identify it; isn't that correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Objection. No personal knowledge, no foundation.

THE COURT: I think he's asking him if that happened, so I will overrule the objection.

THE WITNESS: I would not know.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: So you weren't advised by the end of the grand jury proceedings that Gavin Arvizo had taken the contents of this and looked through it at the request of the District Attorney.

MR. SNEDDON: Same objection.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. After the -- 317. I'm referring to Item 317 for a reason. It is an exhibit here in court with a different number, but Sheriff's Item 317, this whole briefcase, was booked into evidence at the grand jury; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And when you were assisting the grand jurors to look through this material with gloves, it was in evidence, it was in the possession of the Clerk of the Court of the County of Santa Barbara; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And after you assisted the grand jury in looking through this with gloves, it remained -- this Item 317, the briefcase and the contents, remained with the Clerk of the Superior Court; is that correct.

A. To my knowledge, yes.

Q. And during the testimony in the case with regard to Item 317, do you or do you not know -- let me withdraw that and start again.

During the course of the grand jury proceedings, do you know how many witnesses were shown the contents of this briefcase, Sheriff's Item 317.

A. How many witnesses.

Q. Yes.

A. I do not know.

Q. And after you completed your assistance to the grand jury by wearing gloves so they could look through this material, do you know whether or not the court clerks wore gloves when they went through and inventoried all this material.

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know when this item was removed from the grand jury for the purpose of doing a fingerprint analysis.

A. I do not know. I did not remove it.

Q. Okay. But you were the -- one of the lead detectives on this case; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And so in that capacity, it's your job to know pretty much what's going on in the case, isn't it.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And in the course of acting as one of the lead detectives on the case, you came to realize that fingerprints had not been taken until after this briefcase was released from evidence sometime in the summer of -- spring or summer of 2004; is that right.

A. That is my understanding.

Q. Now, you were -- you were a deputy marshal. I just want some factual -- and I don't mean to be rude in anything I'm asking here, but you were a deputy marshal to start with; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And as such, you were employed by the County of Santa Barbara as -- in part, as a bailiff in the Santa Barbara Municipal Court; is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. And you also served civil papers, like complaints and subpoenas and divorce papers in civil cases; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. You did that for about four years.

A. Yes.

Q. And then you -- did you go to the sheriff's department when there was a merger of the courts.

A. Yes. We all became sheriff's deputies.

Q. Okay. So when the -- when the Municipal Court was done away with and it all became a Superior Court, all the judges became Superior Court judges, the deputy marshals then became deputy sheriffs, if they wished to do that; is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. And you opted to do that; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. How long were you -- let me withdraw that.

What was your first assignment when you were a deputy sheriff.

A. My first assignment was patrol.

Q. All right. So you went out in a black-and-white and patrolled the streets and highways of Santa Maria and the environs up here; is that right.

A. Correct.

Q. And how long did you do that.

A. A little over four years.

Q. Okay. And then you became a detective; is that right.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a particular assignment as a detective.

A. I was assigned originally to the Santa Maria station, and then shortly thereafter assigned to the Solvang station.

Q. Okay. And you were -- you didn't have a particular detail that you were assigned to. You were assigned as a detective --

A. Correct.

Q. -- just to generally work in that capacity. You weren't doing narcotics in particular.

A. No. Criminal investigations.

Q. You weren't doing sex crimes in particular.

A. Occasionally.

Q. Occasionally. And occasionally you did narcotics, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Occasionally you did just about everything that came through the door, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And so at the time that you were assigned, in June of 2003, to work on this case, you had been a detective for about two years.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, again -- and I don't mean this in an offensive fashion, but just -- there were a lot of detectives in the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department who had much more experience than you did in sex crime investigations as of that time; isn’t that correct, sir.

A. Yes.

Q. All right.

THE COURT: Is it all right if I turn the light on.

MR. SANGER: Yes. Yes. Thank you.

Q. Now, I’ll work backwards a little bit here through what was said, since it’s fresh in our mind. You mentioned that the Arvizo boys -- you had interviewed the Arvizo boys - I think this was the way it was put - and the briefcase matched a description that they had given of a black briefcase, correct.

A. Correct. Except I think they used the word “suitcase,” instead of briefcase.

Q. So you found a black briefcase, and it seemed to be similar to what they were describing as a suitcase; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Do you know whether or not the Arvizo boys went through various rooms in Mr. Jackson’s house when Mr. Jackson was not there.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object; lack of personal foundation, personal knowledge. It’s clear that he doesn’t --

MR. SANGER: That’s a speaking objection

THE COURT: Sustained. The question is “Do you know,” so I’ll allow the question.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE COURT: Do you want it read back.

THE WITNESS: Please.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: I do not know.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. When we’re talking about evidence here, you have before you Exhibit 561, which is Sheriff’s Item, I think, 365; is that correct.

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: And has that been received into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: 561.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. 561 is a bag that contained eventually two books here; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, sir, are you familiar in your training and experience with what's called "chain of custody".

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Can you hold the bag up, with the Court's permission, so the jury can see it, just in general, and I'm going to ask you some specifics. Hold it still for a second.

All right. Okay.

MR. SNEDDON: Excuse me, Counsel. Can I consult with counsel before he asks the next question, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Do I have a say in that.

THE COURT: Yes.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

THE COURT: I should have given you permission --

MR. SANGER: Excuse me one second.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

MR. SANGER: Okay. We're all up to date in Kansas City, here. May I proceed.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Detective Zelis, we were talking about chain of custody of evidence, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with that.

A. Yes.

Q. And you held the bag up. Could you hold it up again. And I'm going to ask you to just point out what happens when somebody opens the bag to look at it before you come to court. In other words, it's -- let me start this -- it's a little easier to do it this way:

When something's first put in the bag, the bag is sealed, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you show how that bag was first sealed.

A. It would have been sealed at the top, stapled, evidence tape put on it, and then initialed and dated with a marker.

Q. Okay. And then when the bag is subsequently opened, what do you do. Do you just rip open the top.

A. No. You try to open it in a different area, and seal it in the same manner when the items are put back.

Q. So you would -- hold that up again, if you would, please. In other words, this is a regular bag, as it were. It now has red tape all over it on the sides.

That red tape was not on the sides when the books were first put in there; is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. The red tape was then put on each side when the bag was opened for one reason or another.

A. Yes.

Q. And then it was resealed, new red tape was put on that seam; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, when you came down here, you had one book in the bag; is that correct. Or, I'm sorry, when you say -- when you came down here an hour before, whenever it was, there was one book in the bag, right.

A. I didn't bring the book down.

Q. Were you asked to look at the bag.
A. Yes.
Q. And there was one book in it when you first looked at it; is that right.
A. Correct.
Q. And then at the break, somebody went back up and found another book; is that right.
A. It was still here in the courtroom.
Q. It was sitting here someplace.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. The reason to be cautious about the chain of custody is to make sure you have the right items in the right bag when you come into court; is that right.

A. Absolutely.
Q. Now, for Mr. Sneddon's benefit and the Court, I will point out that we agreed that the bags could be opened so the items could be marked for court. That would be the last time. In other words, the last opening. We agreed that could be done without doing it right on the record.
MR. SNEDDON: Well, it was more than that. That they --
MR. SANGER: If there's going to be an argument, Your Honor, I'd ask we be heard elsewhere.
THE COURT: Proceed.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.
THE COURT: That's a good argument. I'll ask you to have the arguments elsewhere. I didn't realize how good that was.
MR. SANGER: Another county, maybe.
(Laughter.)
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Now, let's talk about the contents of that bag.
And may I approach, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: I'd like to retrieve the contents of the bag.
Let's have the bag and the contents. And I'll let you hand it to me. You don't have to put it in. Put it on top. And I’m going take this back, if I may.

Q. All right. The first book that you -- that was in this bag, the one that was there when you first looked at it - and the bag I’m referring to is Exhibit 561 - the first book is by Robert Maxwell; is that correct.

A. I believe so.

Q. All right. Do you know whether or not Robert Maxwell is a personal friend of the Jackson family.

A. No, I do not know that.

Q. Now, you were at the initial walk-through of the search of the residence of Mr. Jackson; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. When -- in fact, I believe you were in the very first car that drove up to the front door; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And you were with -- for the most part, you were with Sergeant Robel during the initial walk-through; correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Lieutenant Klapakis was there as well.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Mr. Sneddon showed up in the foyer at some point during the walk-through; is that correct.

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Yeah. And when you walked through, you walked through the whole main house; is that right.

A. Correct.

Q. And then did you also walk through the other areas, such as the office area, the security office. The video library, did you walk through that building.

A. No.

Q. Did you walk through the arcade building.

A. No.

Q. All right. So talking just about the main residence that you walked through, the main residence, did you observe a number of books in the main residence.

A. Yes.

Q. Is it safe to say that there were probably thousands of books in the main residence.

A. I don't know about thousands. Maybe hundreds.

Q. Hundreds. Okay. And in Mr. Jackson's, what you called his suite, the first floor, there were stacks of books in front of the big screen T.V.; is that correct.

A. To the side of a big screen T.V., yes.

Q. Along that wall.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And then there was also a bookcase with books right next to that door that you showed us; that you showed us the inside of the door, but just outside of that door where the stairway is, that was a bookcase.

A. Yes.

Q. With a lot of books there.

A. Yes.

Q. There were also all sorts of books and magazines piled up in the upstairs bedroom part; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Just stacks of books here and there and all over the place, right.

A. Yes.

Q. In addition to that, there were -- in the main house that you went through, including Mr. Jackson's suite, there were a number of items that appeared to have been sent by fans. Would you say that's correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And there were a number of items that seemed to have been given to Mr. Jackson or sent to Mr. Jackson by other celebrities; is that correct.

A. I don't have personal knowledge of that.

Q. Well, did you see a letter sitting on the piano from Steven Spielberg, for instance.

A. No.

Q. Did you see any cards from Liza Minnelli.

A. No.

Q. Are you aware that any of those -- that Liza Minnelli card was seized.

A. Yes.

Q. So it was somewhere. You just didn’t see it while it was sitting there.

A. Correct.

Q. Did you see items that were original items signed by Walt Disney, for instance.

A. I didn’t see that.

Q. You didn’t see that in the same closet that you were retrieving the black briefcase from.

A. There may have been some frames on the wall. I don’t know who signed them.

Q. And there were a lot of -- there was a lot of memorabilia from other movie stars, including Shirley Temple, and a number of other movies; is that correct.

A. Yes. Memorabilia.

Q. Memorabilia. And it appeared that Mr. Jackson had saved -- in stacks or piles or bookcases or on the floor, all over his private quarters, he had saved a tremendous number of things that had been sent to him by other people, right.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. So you don’t know where the Maxwell book came from, do you. You just found it.

A. I know it came from his bedroom.

Q. Okay. And of all the materials that you observed, there were no materials of an adult nature or sexually explicit nature, there were no materials that were, in and of themselves, illegal to possess, were there.

A. Not that I recall, no.

Q. Okay. And the magazines that you picked out -- I won’t put them back up unless you want me to. But the magazines that you picked out and you pulled out of the drawer to photograph on the bed, for instance, those are commercially available magazines. You could go to a store and buy them, right.

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: All right. Can we have the screen again, please, Your Honor. And still up there is No. 86.

Q. Did you determine the date of the top magazine, the “Barely Legal”.

A. I did not.

Q. Were you aware that it is dated after the time that the Arvizos were at the ranch.

A. No.

Q. And that hasn’t come to your attention.

A. No.

Q. All right. You don’t know -- of the materials you seized, you don’t know when they were actually placed or stored or put wherever you located them. In other words, you don’t know when they came to be there. You just know they were there on November 18th, 2003; is that right.

A. Correct.

Q. So you don’t know what, of those items, was there, if any, in February or March of 2003, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. You also indicated that you found Exhibit -- You can turn off the thing, Your Honor. Thank you. I think it’s Exhibit 338. You found a picture that appeared to be of the Arvizo children, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And it appears to be a picture -- well, maybe I could put it up, Your Honor, if I may. It appears to be a picture that was taken of the children and probably given to Mr. Jackson, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. It doesn’t look like a candid snapshot. It looks like some kind of a commercially prepared picture; is that right.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. When you looked through the house, just the main house that you looked through, Mr. Jackson had a tremendous number of photographs of adults, children, people of all sorts all over his house, did he not.

A. Yes.

Q. And it appeared that quite a number of those photographs were, in fact, sent to him by fans or people who were sending him photographs. They weren’t snapshots taken by Mr. Jackson; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. I want to ask you about the mannequin and the -- well, it’s not here. Do you have the photograph of the mannequin.

A. Here it is.

Q. Oh. It’s up there.

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: Uh-huh.

MR. SANGER: What else do you have there. Let me see, so I don’t make too many trips. Now, 153 I believe is in evidence; is that correct, Your Honor. In any event, I’d like to publish it. I believe it is.

THE COURT: Yes. 153’s in evidence. You may show it.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. When you look at 153 - and you have to wait a second - it appears to be a -- a mannequin of a child, you said, right.

A. Yes.
Q. Do you know if that is a mannequin that represents some member of Mr. Jackson’s family.
A. I don’t know.
Q. Were you aware that someone had defaced this mannequin.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And did you examine the mannequin to see the portion that was, in fact, defaced.
A. Yes.
Q. All right.
I’d like to have I think it’s 5033. This was marked for identification previously with another witness, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It was.
MR. SANGER: I’d like to approach the witness, if I may.
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.
Q. Let me show you 5033, and ask you -- let me -- let me go back here to ask you a question, if I may.
Showing you 5033, does that appear to be the portion of the mannequin that was defaced.
A. Yes.

Q. Basically -- and let me ask, is that -- does that appear to be an accurate depiction of the actual subject matter.
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I’d move 5033 into evidence.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
MR. SANGER: May I approach to retrieve it.
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, does it appear that somebody defaced this with a marking pen of some sort.
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: All right. Your Honor, I’d like to publish this, if I may.

THE COURT: You may.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Standing -- and I’m going to turn it first so you can see the evidence -- exhibit tag, and then I’ll show this here.

So it looked like somebody had drawn in -- drawn this in on this particular doll; is that correct.

A. It appears that way, yes.

Q. Did you find out who did that.

A. No.

Q. You interviewed the Arvizos a number of times, the Arvizo children, Star, Davellin and Gavin, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Did you ever ask them if they did this.

A. No.

Q. Excuse me one second.

Did you ever have occasion to go up to the --

Your Honor, if you wanted to hit the light, that would be okay. Thank you.

Did you ever have occasion to go up to the administrative office for the ranch.

A. Yes.

Q. And the administrative office of the ranch is up on the hill -- well, there are a lot of hills there. But anyway, let’s try it this way.

The administrative office for the ranch is not in the residential complex we just described down below; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. It’s up on a hill, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And it’s a working office, correct.

A. Appears that way, yes.

Q. There’s secretaries or assistants -- there’s a couple of executive offices of some sort.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. It’s actually a metal building, something you’d see on a ranch, I suppose; is that right.

A. I didn’t take notice.

Q. Okay. And there’s actually a fire department there. There’s a bay with a fire truck there.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, in the administrative office, when you’re up there, did you have occasion to see -- on November 18, to see the pile of materials that had been sent by fans within the last five to seven days.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object. It assumes facts not in evidence and lack of foundation as to the date.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. I’m talking about November 18, 2003, the -- is that when you were at the administrative office.

A. No.

Q. Oh, I see. When were you at the administrative office.

A. The last search warrant, which was in December of ‘04.

Q. Okay. All right. That’s fine.

You were part of the group that came to Mr. Jackson’s house early in the morning on December - what was it - 3rd of 2004; is that correct.

A. I’m not specifically sure on the date. But it was December of ‘04, yes.

Q. All right. It was a Friday, was it not.

A. Yes.

Q. And what time did you arrive.

A. I believe it was around nine o’clock, maybe ten o’clock in the morning.

Q. Did you arrive at the first -- with the first car on that occasion.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And Mr. Jackson and his children were in residence there, in their house at that hour.

A. That was my understanding.

Q. Nobody called ahead to say, “We’d like to come out to your ranch and look at things”.

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. And how many people showed up that day from law enforcement, or associated with your search.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object as beyond the scope of direct examination and relevance.

THE COURT: Are you saying that none of the seizures that he was testifying to on direct occurred on December 4th.

MR. SNEDDON: That’s correct, Your Honor. And I didn’t ask any questions about December.

MR. SANGER: The question was the materials received from fans. And this is evidently when he saw them.

MR. SNEDDON: Well, no.

THE COURT: The question you asked was, “How many people showed up on that search.” I’ll sustain the objection.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. At some point, you went from the house area up to the administrative building; is that correct.

A. In 2004.

Q. December of 2004, the Friday, which --

A. Correct.

Q. -- could be the 3rd.

Okay. And when you went up to the administrative office, did you search the administrative office.

A. No.

Q. Did somebody search it.

A. I don’t believe so.

Q. Were you given something from the office voluntarily.

A. No.

Q. When you were up there and you went through the office, did you see a large pile of materials, of things, sent to Mr. Jackson from all over the world.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Let me --

If I may, Your Honor, I’d like to show that Exhibit 72, which shows the door to the closet.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: And that’s been received.

Q. Okay. You indicated that that was the stairway that goes up to Mr. Jackson’s upper bedroom area, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And what we’re talking about, this is the door to his downstairs area; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And just to the left of that, there are bookcases; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And to the right of that, along the outside of that wall, there were piles of books; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And around the piano, behind the piano, there are bookcases. The piano’s on the other side of the wall in that room; is that correct.

A. I’m not sure if there was a bookcase.

Q. And there were books piled up around and near the piano; is that correct.

A. I don’t know.

Q. All right. And besides books, there were magazines, reading material of all sorts all over the place, right.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, where you -- where you put your initials there on the door, that is a long, walk-in kind of closet, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And there were quite a number of items stored specifically in that closet; is that correct.

A. Appeared so, yes.

Q. Again, memorabilia, photographs, boxes, all sorts of things, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And there was also clothing in there, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, what I want to do is go to a question that Mr. Zonen -- Mr. Sneddon had asked you if you did these interviews.

And, Your Honor, we can turn the light on, if you want.

And, in fact, there were interviews which were done of the Arvizo children on 7-7-03, July 7, '03, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And you participated in that interview; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. You interviewed Davellin, Star and Gavin on that day; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And that's tape-recorded.

A. Yes.

Q. And you have transcripts of the tape, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And then there were follow-up interviews on 8-13-03. You participated in those; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And again, you interviewed all three of the children at that time; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. You then had the search, which was November 18 of '03, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And then there was some brief interviews on November 26, '03; is that correct.

A. I don’t -- I don’t remember that date specifically.

Q. Well, do you remember a date in November. Was it the day of the month or you don’t remember doing it at all. Did I say 26th or 25th. In any event, November 25th.

A. Of 2003.

Q. Of 2003.

A. Interview with the children.

Q. With Gavin and with Star that were tape-recorded and transcripts made.

A. I’m not sure.

Q. Okay. Would it help if I showed you a transcript to see if that refreshes your recollection.

A. Yes.

Q. Take a look at that. My question was, were you there. I’m showing you a transcript of an interview. And I believe Detective Robel indicated he was there, if that helps you.

A. I don’t recall this interview.

Q. Were you advised of that interview at all by Detective Robel.

A. I would have to read it further.

Q. Take your time.

A. He may have briefed me on the interview. I don’t think he got into detail.

Q. All right. In any event, so what you’re saying, you may or may not have known that there was an interview. You think you probably were told.

A. Correct.

Q. And you don’t think you were there.

A. I don’t believe so.

Q. Okay. The next interview was January the 19th, 2004; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And you were at that one.

A. Yes.

Q. And who was at that interview.
A. Deputy District Attorney Ron Zonen. I believe District Attorney Tom Sneddon.
Q. And who else.
A. Lieutenant Jeff Klapakis. Sergeant Robel. The Arvizo children.
Q. All right. Did Sergeant Robel stay for the entire interview.
A. I do not believe so.
Q. Okay. Did you stay for the entire interview.
A. Yes.
MR. SANGER: All right. May I retrieve my book, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.
Q. Now, at the time of this interview, let's say before January 19th, had you ever seen the rebuttal video.
A. I don't believe so.
Q. All right. And this interview process started with a showing to the Arvizo children of the rebuttal video; is that correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And before it was shown to them, they were -- let me withdraw that.
Before the rebuttal film was shown to them, the Arvizo children were told what they were about to see; is that correct.

A. Yes.
Q. And after the film was shown to them, they were then interviewed on tape; is that correct.
A. Correct.
Q. And Mr. Sneddon actively participated in the interview; is that right.
A. I do not believe so.
Q. Okay. We'll come back to that. I want to direct your attention to Davellin's interview first, if I may. And in Davellin's interview, she was asked, in general, how they could have responded the way they did in this rebuttal film based on the allegations that they were making, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And specifically Davellin was asked about the hand-holding. Remember that.

A. Vaguely, yes.

Q. Do you remember the scene in the rebuttal video where Janet Arvizo doesn’t appear to know that she’s even on film and she says, “Hey, hey, get this, get this. Get us holding hands just like Bashir,” and everybody kind of joins in as to what a good idea it is. Do you remember that.

A. Vaguely.

Q. All right. And do you recall asking her -- did anybody ever talk to you or talk to Gavin and your mother that they should hold hands together, “Gavin and your mother during this,” and then it’s unintelligible. Remember that question.

A. Yes.

Q. And Davellin says, “Oh, yeah, they -- because they -- they wanted to -- because the fact that they did the Bashir thing, they wanted my mom to do it so it could erase what they saw of Michael.” Remember that.

A. Yes.

Q. And later, as she was asked, she was asked about the part of the video where they are calling Michael Jackson “daddy” and talking about him as “daddy” and his family. Do you remember that.

A. Yes.

Q. And her explanation for that was that Frank and Dieter told them to do that; is that correct.

A. Mainly Dieter is my recollection.

Q. Okay. Primarily Dieter. But you remember her talking about Frank as well, “Frank told us,” and “Dieter told us” at one point, too.

A. I recall mainly she mentioned Dieter.

Q. Okay. Now, did you interview the kids independently, or were they all sitting there together.

A. Independently.
Q. They were all sitting there together to watch the film, though, correct.

A. Correct.
Q. And you didn’t record what they said during the film while the film was being played for them, did you.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object. Assumes facts not in evidence.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Did they say anything while the film was being played.
A. No.
Q. Nothing at all.
A. They were instructed not to talk to each other.
Q. All right. On the -- when you talked to Gavin -- let me withdraw that for a second. Before they saw the film, they -- the Arvizo children, Gavin and Star in particular, had been confronted before that -- before they saw the film, they had been confronted by law enforcement as to the fact that there was a film in which they appeared to be very happy with Michael Jackson, correct.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object to the use of --
MR. SANGER: I’ll withdraw it. We won’t say “confronted.” We’ll say they were advised. They were asked.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry, could you repeat the question.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: The Arvizo children, particularly Gavin and Star, were asked about the rebuttal film before they saw it.
A. I’m not sure.
Q. Okay. And when you just briefly reviewed the Gavin transcript there from 11-25-03, was there any question asked about a rebuttal video at that time.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object to the question. He said he doesn’t believe he was present.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Were you advised that -- before they saw the video on -- you’re the detective, one of the lead detectives in this case, right.

MR. SNEDDON: Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. When you’re sitting there on January 19th, 2004, with Mr. Sneddon, Mr. Zonen and the other people, including your lieutenant and your sergeant, you are concerned about what these kids are going to say about this video, correct. You want to know what they have to say.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Object. That’s compound.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike the answer.

THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You wanted to know what they had to say about the video, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And so as the investigator, one of the lead investigators at that time, you were aware that the fact that the video had been discussed with at least Gavin and Star -- I’m not talking about Janet Arvizo. That’s another subject. But as to the children, it’s been discussed with at least Gavin and Star the fact that there was a video where they portrayed themselves of being very supportive of Michael Jackson. That was discussed with them before --

THE COURT: This question is just going on and on.

MR. SNEDDON: Move to strike.

THE COURT: Start over.

MR. SANGER: Let me start over, okay.

Q. Did you discuss -- let me withdraw that.

Were you aware that the Arvizo children had discussed with law enforcement the fact that there was a rebuttal video before they showed up on the 19th to watch it.

A. I don’t believe I was aware.

Q. So you thought this was just cold, outside the box; nobody had ever talked to them about it.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, that’s argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: When you say you weren’t aware, was it your belief at that time when they sat down that they weren’t even aware you had a rebuttal video.

A. I don’t know what they were aware of and what they were not aware of.

Q. Well, as an investigator, the state of mind of the subject that you’re interviewing is important, is it not.

MR. SNEDDON: Object; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Maybe I should clarify that.

THE COURT: No, you should just answer the question. Do you want the question read back.

THE WITNESS: Please.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Now, when Gavin was asked about the video, after he saw the rebuttal video on January 19, 2004, he said that Dieter had told them what to say; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And he also said that 99.9 percent of what was shown on the rebuttal video was not true -- or let me rephrase that. 99.9 percent of what was said on the rebuttal video was not true; isn't that correct.

A. That is not correct.

Q. All right. You don't have a copy of this with you, do you.

A. I may have.

Q. I think you attached it to one of your police reports. If it's not handy, I'll show you mine.

A. It may take me some time to find it. If you have it handy, that would be more efficient.

Q. All right. I think it was -- let me -- I'll just show you mine.

May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I'm showing you page 12. And you're welcome to read before and after, whatever you want to do, but I'm kind of directing your attention there to the middle of that page. I'd like you to read that. And then after you're through, tell me if that refreshes your recollection as to what Gavin said.

A. Okay.

Q. Okay. And that refreshes your recollection.

A. Yes.

Q. And he said, "Like 99 percent of the things weren't true"; is that correct.

A. That Dieter, or "they," were telling them what to say on the rebuttal video. Not what was said on the rebuttal video. What they were told to say.

Q. And what they were told to say was the same they said they were saying. They were claiming it was the same thing that they said, was it not.

MR. SNEDDON: Object as argumentative.

THE COURT: Do you understand the question.

THE WITNESS: Well, I don't know the exact specifics of what Dieter told them to say prior.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: The question -- you'd be asking questions about the calling Michael “daddy” and saying they were members of his family, and they were -- all of those things were the subject matter of what you were asking about, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And he said Dieter told him to say it, right.

A. Of the things to say, yes.

Q. And he said 99.9 percent of that wasn’t true, right.

A. Yes, he does say that, to what Dieter told him to say.

Q. All right. Never told you Dieter told him to say anything that he didn’t say, did he. He didn’t say, “Dieter told me the moon’s made out of blue cheese, but I wouldn’t say it”.

A. No.

Q. All right. Now, on another issue in this same interview -- well, let’s set the stage by going back to the 7th of July interview. And let me ask you in general.

During the -- during the three interviews that you had conducted -- and there was a fourth one, the 11-25-03, but you don’t know about that other than what you’ve seen, so I’ll exclude that.

Of the three interviews, July, August and January, was Gavin consistent as to when he claimed the acts of molest that he was alleging had occurred.

A. Yes.

Q. In July, he said, “It was one of the last days that I was staying at Neverland,” correct.

A. Something to that effect. I believe so, yes.

Q. Okay. And in August, he was not clear as to whether it was before or after the DCFS interview, correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m -- I’m going to object, Your Honor. That --

THE COURT: Sustained. It’s a conclusion. Calls for a conclusion.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Let’s just go to the January 19th, 2004 -- okay. In January of 2004, did he tell you that he was sure as to the dates when the molest occurred, the alleged molests.

A. That he was sure.

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. And at that time, he said he didn’t know whether it was before or after DCSF, but that, “You guys would know.” Remember him saying that.

A. That’s not what he said.

Q. Okay. What did he say.

A. He was asked -- and this is my recollection. He was asked of when the molestations occurred, and if they could have been prior, or if they were prior or after the DCFS interview. And he said, “I think so,” period. That’s my recollection.

Q. He thought so, that they were prior to it, before it.

A. I think so.

Q. He said, “I think so.” And then he said, “You guys would know,” right.

A. No. He said we would know to when the DCFS interview occurred.

Q. Okay. So you’re interpreting that as, “You would know when DCFS occurred”.

A. Correct.

Q. He didn’t say, “You guys would know when the DCFS interview occurred”.

A. He indicated that we would know when the DCFS interview occurred.

Q. Okay. So he said he thought it could be prior, could be before.

A. The molestations occurred.

Q. Yes.

A. He said he thought so.

Q. He thought so.

A. Yes.
Q. All right. And then you also interviewed Star on that same occasion, on January 19th; is that correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And once again, Star’s answer, after he saw the video, was that Dieter told him to use terms such as “father” and “humble”; is that correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And at that time you didn’t ask him about using those terms before he ever met Dieter, did you.
A. No.
Q. At that time were you aware that Star and the rest of the family had sent cards to Michael Jackson in 2001 calling him “father,” talking about him being part of their family, using all those same terms that are on the video.

A. Can you repeat the question.
MR. SANGER: Could we have that read back.
THE COURT: All right.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: I know cards were sent. I do not know the dates of when those cards were sent.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you ask him about those cards.
A. Personally, I don’t think so.
Q. So you didn’t say, “Well, Dieter told you to say this, but you also said this in the cards”. You didn’t ask him about that subject matter.
A. No.
Q. Were you aware that the family used that same language in dealing with other people such as Louise Palanker.
MR. SNEDDON: Can I object as to vague as to the “same language”. Because there’s a number of different terms.
MR. SANGER: Okay. “Mommy” instead of “daddy.”
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Were you aware that they were calling Louise Palanker “mommy” and saying they were part of her family --

A. No.

Q. -- using the same kind of language.

Did you recently learn that.

A. No.

Q. Are you still on this case.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Let me have just one second, Your Honor.

Let me go one more time to the interview on January the 19th. And do you remember Mr. Sneddon actually asking questions in that interview, or making comments in that interview.

A. Which interview. Of which interview.

Q. Of Gavin. Yes, of Gavin.

A. I --

Q. January 19th, 2004, interview of Gavin.

Sorry.

A. I do not recall.

Q. Okay. Do you recall whether or not Mr. Sneddon expressed concern in the presence of Gavin, the complaining witness in this case, about why he made these kinds of remarks on the rebuttal video.

A. I do not recall.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Gavin responded to Mr. Sneddon, to Mr. Sneddon’s remarks.

A. I do not know.

MR. SANGER: Okay. May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: What page are you talking about, Counsel.

MR. SANGER: 13.

Q. I’m going to show you page 13, but you can read the whole thing if you want. Do whatever you want. I’m going to ask you if it refreshes your recollection about the exchange between Mr. Sneddon and Gavin Arvizo.

A. Okay.

MR. SANGER: May I retrieve the book, Your Honor.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection.

A. Yes.

Q. Before I ask you about what was said, let me put this in context.

As an investigator, when you're interviewing a witness, you're supposed to get information. You're not supposed to convey to the witness what you would like them to say, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall now, having refreshed your recollection, that Mr. Sneddon said, "So, in your mind, one of the things that you're thinking is, they're doing this video that they want you guys to do, that if you ever told them the truth about being molested by him, that nobody would believe you". Remember that question.

A. Yes.

Q. And then Gavin Arvizo says, "Yeah, that they would use that and say that we're lying. That's what I think they used it for. I think that's why they told us to say all those things in the tape. They told us it was for -- they told us it was for so they could release the tape out to the media for rebuttal for what they were all saying, but I don't think -- they were, like, kind of forcing us to say those things. 99.9 percent of the things they were telling us to say weren't even true."

So -- and then the answer ends.

Was that what Mr. Sneddon said and what Gavin Arvizo said in response.

A. Yes.

Q. And at that point in the interview, as the investigator in the case, it was your understanding that what Gavin Arvizo was saying at that point is that he was claiming he was molested before the rebuttal, and that this was to -- the rebuttal was to cover up a molest; is that correct.

A. No.

Q. Well, that's what Mr. Sneddon was asking, wasn't it. "If you ever told the truth about being molested by him, that nobody would believe you".

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, that calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness. It's --

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right. Excuse me one second.

Q. You may need to look at this again, so I'll let you do that if you need to. But just so we're clear on that -- and Mr. Mesereau was kind enough to direct me on this. Just so you're clear on this, just preceding this exchange with Mr. Sneddon, the question was asked, "The acts of molestation, had they already begun by the time you did this video."

MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object to this as asked and answered. He's just reading. There's no question pending.

THE COURT: No, I'm going to allow him to read that. I assume it's the preface to a question.

MR. SANGER: Right.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And I think you did refer to this, but to put it in context, the question:

"The acts of molestation, had they already begun by the time did you this video; do you know.

"A. I think so."

And then:

"Q. Within hours after doing the video was that meeting with the workers from the Child Protective Services. Is that how you remembered it, or you're not certain.

"A. I don't know. I'm not sure it happened -- whether it happened before or after. You guys probably would know that date."

That's what I had asked you about before.

Is that all accurate.

A. Yes.
Q. And then immediately following that, Mr. Sneddon says, “So, in your mind, one of the things you’re thinking is, they’ve done this video that they want you guys to do so that if you ever told them the truth about being molested by him, that nobody would believe you,” correct.
A. Correct.
Q. And then Gavin Arvizo essentially adopts Mr. Sneddon’s interpretation.
A. It was -- that question asked by Mr. Sneddon was a clarification of an idea that was given to us by Gavin prior to that.
Q. So that he was molested before the video, and the video was done in order to negate any claim that he was molested.
A. No.
Q. And you understand that other times, Gavin Arvizo has claimed that the molest occurred at the end of his stay at Neverland, not in early February or mid-February, correct.
A. Are you asking my understanding. I’m sorry, could you repeat the question.
Q. Well, let me clarify it, if I may.
Other times, you told us July 7th, he said it was right at the end of his stay. That would have been March, correct.
A. Correct.

Q. And you don’t know what he testified to here in court.
A. No.
Q. You weren’t here.
All right. Now, let me go back to the beginning of your involvement in this case. You said you started in June, June the 13th of 2003, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. When you took over this case, it already had a case number; is that right.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, case numbers are assigned in the sheriff's department for each new case, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. In other words, just because a person was involved in a case doesn't mean that person will have the same number, either as a suspect or reporting party or anything else, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. A case number is assigned when a case is open, when an investigation is open on a particular subject matter, right.

A. Correct.

Q. And it's your understanding that Terry Flaa, Detective Terry Flaa, had been assigned to go investigate this case when it was first opened, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Terry Flaa at that time, in fact, was the lead investigator on the case; is that correct.

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. You -- he -- let me withdraw that.
He filed a report saying that there was no criminal activity; is that right.

A. Correct.

Q. And that report was filed on April the 16th of 2003, correct.

A. I'm not sure of the date.

Q. It was filed sometime before you got involved in the case, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And then June 13th you requested his police reports and files; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever talk to Detective Flaa.

A. Yes.

Q. When did you talk to him. Well, did you ever talk to him about this case.

A. I don't believe so.

Q. All right. So you took over the case and requested his reports, but you never talked to him about the case.

A. Correct.

Q. And then about a month after you got involved in the case, Sergeant Robel was brought in; is that correct.

A. No. He was brought in right away.

Q. “Right away,” meaning what. The 13th, 14th of June, or sometime later.

A. I don’t know. You’d have to ask him. I don’t remember.

Q. Well, we did. But do you recall.

A. No.

Q. All right. When you were first assigned to the case, you were the lead investigator in the case; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And eventually when Sergeant Robel was brought in, he was then designated as the lead investigator.

A. Co-lead.

Q. So you and he were co-lead investigators.

A. Correct.

THE COURT: All right. Let’s take our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. SANGER: Are we to assume that somebody brought food for the Court. Just a joke.

THE COURT: The people in the back of the room didn’t hear your joke.

MR. SANGER: Ahh. Having risked my life once on that joke, I think I’ll let it go, if that’s all right with the Court.

A VOICE FROM THE AUDIENCE: Ahh.

MR. SANGER: All right. May I proceed, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. All right. So before the break, just to pick up where we left off, you indicated you were appointed as an investigator on this case June the 13th of 2003, correct.

A. Yes.
Q. And then Sergeant Robel, sometime after that, came in as co-lead investigator, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. And you told us you did not call Terry Flaa to gain the benefit of what he had done on the case; is that correct.
A. I did say that before the break. But I thought about it, and I believe I may have spoken with him.
Q. You may have. Do you know if Sergeant Robel spoke to him.
A. I don’t know.
Q. Okay. And Detective Flaa was still working for your department in June of 2003, correct.
A. I’m not sure.
Q. And he had -- and again, I don’t mean any offense, but he had considerably more experience as a detective than you had at that point; is that correct.

A. Yes. He’d been in the division a lot longer than I had.
Q. And he also had quite a bit of specialized training in sexual offense cases; is that correct.
A. That’s my -- that’s what I believe, yes.
Q. Okay. And he eventually, by the end of the year or so, he left the sheriff’s department, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And then he went to work at the Santa Maria Police Department; is that correct.
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. During that year, or I’m sorry, half a year while he was still at the department, did you and Sergeant Robel consult with him on this case.
A. Together, do you mean.
Q. Independently or together.
A. I can’t speak for Sergeant Robel, but I believe I may have talked with him, yes.
Q. You may have talked with him. Do you recall consulting with him on this case.

A. Not specifically, but I may have.

Q. Okay. And he found that there was no criminal activity, right.

A. Correct.

Q. And he was pretty much out of the picture after that; is that correct.

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay. No further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Detective Zelis, I actually have just one question. And I want to direct your attention back to Mr. Sanger's examination about Gavin's response to my question on the day that you were interviewing him. Do you recall that.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall, that report in front of you, is that with the one you took a long time to find.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. At the time -- let me ask you a question. If you don't remember the answer, I'll allow you to look at it and you can refresh your recollection.

Mr. Sanger didn't finish reading the rest of the questions and answers, but at the time that Gavin made that statement, was he talking about something that he believed at the time that the rebuttal was made or something that he was reflecting back on.

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Based -- based on Gavin's statement during that conversation, was he indicating that that was his current belief as to what happened or that was his state of mind at the time that the rebuttal film was made.

MR. SANGER: I still object. That calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge --

THE COURT: You can have him state what he said, not what his conclusion is.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. I was trying to do it -- all right. I'll do that.

Q. Question by me: “Did you think that at the time, or that that's what you think now, now that you see it.

“A. No. That's what I think now, when I see it, everything.”

Was that his statement to you at that time --

A. Yes.

Q. -- in relationship to the question Mr. Sanger had brought to your attention that I asked him earlier.

A. Yes.

Q. That was the question and answer that preceded the entire conversation.

A. Correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. All right. Just so we're clear, because we had the words “preceded” and so on there, what Mr. Sneddon just read to you, you were following in the transcript; is that correct.

A. Not at the same time, no.

Q. Oh, okay. Then during the break he reviewed this with you; is that correct.

A. No.

Q. Did you see this during the break.

A. You let me read it.

Q. Pardon.

A. I believe you let me read it.

Q. Okay. Okay. So maybe I didn't ask that question correctly. Mr. Sneddon, during the break, let you read that part of the transcript.

A. No.

Q. What are you talking about. You said he let you read it.

A. No, I said, “You let me read it.”

Q. Oh, okay. I didn’t let you read it during the break.

A. No.

Q. But if you’d asked, I probably would have, but -- all right. During the break, did you discuss that with Mr. Sneddon at all.

A. No.

Q. All right. So he got up there and he asked you about these comments preceding the comments that he made; is that right.

A. Yes.

Q. These comments did not precede the comments that Mr. Sneddon made, did they. May I approach the witness.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I’m going to show you the transcript.

MR. SNEDDON: That’s what I was trying to do.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: What Mr. Sneddon just read to you came after the exchange between Mr. Sneddon and Gavin; is that correct.

A. May I --

Q. You can look at whatever you want to look at in there.

A. It is after the question by Mr. Sneddon to Gavin.

Q. And after Gavin gave his explanation about, “Yeah, that’s what they were doing, and it was 99.9 percent of it was not true.” Right.

A. Correct.

Q. And then what Mr. Sneddon read followed that; is that correct.

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: Okay. I have no further questions.

May I approach to retrieve my book.
MR. SNEDDON: No questions, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes.
All right. You may step down. Call your next witness.
MR. SNEDDON: Detective Alvarez.
THE COURT: All right. When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

VICTOR M. ALVAREZ
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.
THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: My name is Victor M. Alvarez. A-l-v-a-r-e-z.
THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Detective Alvarez, you're a deputy sheriff.
A. That's correct.
Q. How long have you been a deputy sheriff.
A. About 25 and a half years.
Q. And you're a detective now, correct.

A. That's correct.
Q. How long have you been a detective.
A. Five and a half years.
Q. And did -- some point in time, did you get assigned to work as one of the detectives on the investigation into the child molestation charges against the defendant in this case, Mr. Jackson.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Do you recall when it was that you were assigned.
A. I think it was approximately one week before the initial search warrant.

Q. And do you remember what month and year that would have been, then.
A. It would have been November of 2003.
Q. During the course of your time as a detective on this particular case, were you asked to obtain some rolled fingerprint impressions from the Arvizo boys.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember when you did that. Just generally the month and the year.
A. I would imagine it was three or four months ago.
Q. All right. Let me show you an exhibit. It might help.
(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I've handed you an exhibit marked 287 for identification purposes. Do you recognize that exhibit.
A. I do.
Q. When and where was the first time you saw that exhibit.
A. When I sealed it, and when I rolled these fingerprints.
Q. And you were the one responsible for rolling those prints.
A. That's correct.
Q. Where were you when you rolled them.
A. At the Arvizo home.
Q. And the prints contained in that exhibit are the prints of both boys.
A. That's correct.
Q. All right. And then you sealed and booked it into evidence.
A. I did.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I move that be admitted into evidence, People's 287.
MR. SANGER: No objection.
THE COURT: All right. It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Let's go back a little bit in time to prior, at the time that you were assigned to the case.

Were you involved in the execution of the search warrant on November the 18th of 2003 at Neverland Valley Ranch.

A. Not -- I was assigned to do an interview prior to going to the ranch.

Q. And did somebody go with you to that interview.

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that.

A. Detective Bonner.

Q. And where did the interview take place.

A. At the Santa Maria Sheriff’s Department Substation.

Q. And who did you meet there.

A. Jesus Salas.

Q. And did you videotape that conversation.

A. We did.

Q. And do you speak Spanish.

A. I do.

Q. Mr. Salas speaks Spanish.

A. He speaks English pretty good. But if there was a word that he didn’t understand or was stuck on a word, I translated for him.

Q. Now, after you completed your conversation with Mr. Salas on the 18th -- by the way, we didn’t establish everything, but what time was it when you made contact with Mr. Salas.

A. We called Mr. Salas, or we were to meet with Mr. Salas, it was a prearranged meeting, at 7:00 in the morning.

Q. Did Mr. Salas know what the purpose of the meeting was.

A. No.

Q. And did you meet him at 7:00.

A. If it wasn’t at 7:00, it was very close to 7:00, shortly thereafter.

Q. After you finished your conversation with Mr. Salas, what did you do.

A. We left the Santa Maria substation and went to Neverland Ranch.

Q. When you say “we,” who was with you.

A. Detective Bonner.

Q. And do you remember about what time it was when you got to the ranch.

A. Close to ten o’clock.

Q. And when you arrived at the ranch, were you assigned any particular responsibilities at that time.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. What responsibilities were you assigned.

A. To help with the interview of the Neverland employees.

Q. And after you completed that, were you given any other assignments.

A. Yes.

Q. And what assignments were those.

A. To search -- to help continue the search of Mr. Jackson’s master bedroom.

Q. And do you recall approximately what time it was when you became involved in those activities.

A. I’d say about 11:00 or 11:30 in the morning.

Q. During the course of the time that you were there, did you seize some items that were eventually booked into evidence.

A. I did.

Q. Do you remember the first thing that you found.

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that.

A. They were some books containing adult material that were located near the bathtub in the master bedroom -- or master bathroom.

Q. All right. Anything else that you found that day that you eventually seized.

A. Yes.

Q. What else.

A. A black computer bag that would be for a laptop, the name was Targus, T-a-r-g-u-s, that contained adult videos and adult magazines.

Q. And where was that located.

A. That was located on the floor in the master bathroom next to the sink area, so it would be in between the sink and the round bathtub.

Q. All right.

MR. SANGER: What’s the number.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m putting that on there now.

Your Honor, I have a large brown paper bag with the numbers “03-5670” at the top in black. I’ve shown the bag and its contents to Mr. Sanger for his examination. I’d like to show it to the witness.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: I guess the question was, did it have an exhibit number.

MR. SNEDDON: I beg your pardon. 288.

Q. Would you take a look at the item contained in People’s 288. Do you recognize that.

A. I do.

Q. And when and where was the first time you saw that item.

A. I saw it in the master bedroom -- I’m sorry, in the master bathroom downstairs area on the floor next to the sink.

Q. Now, when you obtained that item, what did you do with it after seizing it.

A. Prior to seizing it, I opened it up and saw the material that was inside.

Q. All right. And then what did you do with -- did you take the materials out or did you leave them inside.

A. I left them in, and I sealed this bag and the big evidence bag.

Q. All right. So it was then booked into evidence.

A. The whole thing was, yes.

Q. Okay. Move that People’s 288 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. SANGER: No objection. Obviously, other than prior objections.
THE COURT: Right.
MR. SANGER: May that remain unstated.
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to show you a photograph, and that photograph has been marked as People’s 57 for identification purposes, and ask if you recognize that photograph.
A. I do.
Q. And are the areas depicted in that photograph an accurate depiction as you saw it on the morning of November the 18th, 2003.
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: Move that be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. SANGER: I have no objection.
THE COURT: All right. It’s admitted.
THE BAILIFF: Your Honor, would you hit the button.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, we’re going to need the Elmo.
THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. People’s 57 is up on the board. Do you recognize that photograph.
A. I do.
Q. All right. Could you show the ladies and gentlemen of the jury where the bag, People’s 288, was the first time that you saw it on November 18th, 2003.
A. It would be right here. Can you see. It would be right there.
Q. All right. You’re indicating at the base of the cabinet just below the big speaker.
A. Right. Here’s the sink. There’s the bag. And the tub is over here somewhere.
Q. All right. Go ahead and sit down, if you want.

Now, we can put the lights back on, Your Honor, for right now.

All right. Are you okay.

Your Honor, I'll describe for the record what we've just done with counsel. We've marked for identification three items. The first item is a small brown bag with some white paper on it, with the number 0-3-5670, and has on it the Exhibit 565.

Exhibit No. 566 is a large plastic bag, which has a white binder, and it has the number "Item 309-B-1" on the front of it.

And the last item is Item 3 -- I'm sorry, Item 567. That's another white, clear plastic bag, and with -- containing a white binder with the number "Item 309-B-2" on it.

In addition to that, Your Honor, I have -- in addition to that, Your Honor, I've shown counsel two photographs. The first one I'm going to have marked as 289 for identification purposes, and the second one I'm going to have marked as 290 for identification purposes.

Madam Clerk, is that okay.

THE CLERK: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Why don't you go ahead and take that bag, the black bag, Exhibit 288, and put it back in there, if you would.

All right. Let's start with the smallest of the bags, the brown bag there, and the number on that is 289.

A. It says "565."

Q. Oh, 565. I'm sorry. You're right. We already pre-numbered those. Different numbering system. Okay, 565.

A. Okay.

Q. And with regard to that particular item, do you recognize it.

A. I do.

Q. And when and where was it the first time you saw it.

A. Inside the black computer bag.

Q. Okay.

A. Actually, the contents were inside the black computer bag.

Q. The brown bag wasn't.

A. But the contents were, right. Correct.

Q. Why don't you take the brown bag out -- or take the contents out.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, do you recognize those items that you just pulled out.

A. I do.

Q. And how do you recognize them.

A. Just from reading the contents, the outside package of them.

Q. Do you recall those are the ones you found inside of the Exhibit 288.

A. Yes.

Q. And were you -- were you the one responsible for placing them into that envelope and booking them into evidence.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. I move that the contents of 565, the bag and the contents, be admitted into evidence.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Let me have those for a second.

Your Honor, we're going to need the lights down.

Q. With regard to 565, there are two videos inside and I'm going to show the first one. Just go ahead and show it.

Now, is that one of the exhibits that you found inside that black briefcase.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Why don't you show the other one.

A. Can you see.

THE JURY: (In unison) Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: Probably don’t want to.
Q. Is that the other one that you found.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Thank you.
By the way, inside of that briefcase, do you recall whether you found any documents or indicia of belonging to Mr. Jackson.
A. I don’t recall.
Q. Okay. We’ll get back to that.
Now, let’s take the clear plastic bags that are in front of you, okay. And let’s talk, first of all, about the one that is marked as 565 for identification purposes. Do you see that.
A. No, I see 290 and 289.
Q. No, not the --
A. I’m sorry.
THE COURT: 565 is the one you just showed.
THE WITNESS: 567.

THE COURT: Go ahead.
MR. SNEDDON: I’m sorry, Your Honor.
THE WITNESS: I have 567 and 566.
MR. SNEDDON: All right. My sheet’s wrong.
Q. All right. Let’s talk about 566 first.
Now, with regard to -- there’s a photograph up there in front of you that goes with that binder, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. You can flip it over on the other side to match up the number.
A. Okay.
Q. Is that correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And the photograph is exhibit what.
A. 289.
Q. All right. Now, is 289 an accurate depiction of the front cover of the Exhibit 566.
Take it out and look at it, if you want to.
A. Yes, it is.
MR. SNEDDON: Move that 289 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And with regard to the Exhibit 566, that's the item that you found in the bag and that was also booked into evidence; is that correct.

A. That's correct.

Q. And you were responsible for that.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. I move that 566 be admitted.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object to 566. It's been placed in a binder, and there's -- there's not an adequate foundation for the exhibit as offered right now.

THE COURT: All right. Sustained.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. That's not a problem.

Q. Okay. Why don't you put that back in the bag.

Let's turn to 567.

A. Okay.

Q. And there's a photograph that goes with 567. And what's the number on that. 290.

A. 290.

Q. All right. Now, with regard to the Exhibit 567, where was that the first time you saw it.

A. Inside the black computer bag.

Q. The one that's in evidence as 288.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And were you responsible for booking that into evidence.

A. I was.

Q. Now, at the time that -- that you booked that particular item into evidence, was it in a binder like that.

A. No, it wasn't.

Q. It was still all together.

A. Like a normal paperback magazine.

Q. Okay. Now, take a look at the Exhibit 290, the photograph.

A. Yes.
Q. Is the Exhibit 290 an accurate depiction of the front cover of the Exhibit 567.
A. It is.
MR. SNEDDON: Move that 290 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
MR. SNEDDON: Ron. Would you scoot that down so we can see. All right.
Q. Detective Alvarez, the exhibit marked as 289, is that the exhibit that you found inside of 288.
A. Yes.
Q. Is that the condition of the magazine at the time that you seized it.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Let’s put up 290. And was this the other magazine you seized.
A. Yes, it was.
Q. And was that the condition of the magazine at the time you seized it.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Thank you.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)
MR. SNEDDON: Okay.
MR. SANGER: Yeah.
MR. SNEDDON: In addition to that, Your Honor, I have -- I’ll identify this in just a moment.
THE COURT: All right.
MR. SNEDDON: Or I can do it now, if it makes it easier.
I have a brown paper bag with the number “304” in black letters in the upper right-hand corner. And that’s been marked as People’s 562, the brown and its contents. “The brown.” The bag.
And then there is a clear plastic bag, Your Honor, that contains two exhibits. One is a white -- another plastic bag with a white binder with the number “563” on it, and the number “Item 304-C” on the outside.

And the next item has been marked as 564, and it’s another white binder with “Item 304-D” on it, Your Honor.

And then I have three exhibits that I’d like to have marked. The first one is -- is a photograph marked as 291. The second one is another photograph that has the number “304-C” on it, and that is 292.

And the last photograph is 304-D, and that will be 293.

Do you want to look at these.

MR. SANGER: I think I know what they are, but let me look at them.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay.

MR. SANGER: Yeah.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And maybe you could -- I’ll take these back, actually. How’s that.

Okay. Detective Alvarez, let’s start with the brown bag, if we could. That, I believe, is Exhibit 563.

A. 291. Brown bag is 291. Or, I’m sorry, 562.

Q. 562, all right. Do you recognize the bag.

A. I do.

Q. And how do you recognize it.

A. I booked this into evidence.

Q. All right. Would you open the bag up and take out the contents.

All right. Do you recognize the contents.

A. I do.

Q. And when and where was that. Where did you see that for the first time.

A. In the master bed -- master bedroom bathroom in between the sink and the tub, on the floor area.

Q. And is that one of the items you collected.

A. I did.

Q. Now, there is a photograph.

A. Yes.

Q. 291. Do you see that.

A. I do.
Q. And is that photograph an accurate depiction, or does it accurately depict the cover of the exhibit --
A. Yes.
Q. -- 562.
A. Yes.
Q. And is the exhibit, 562, the magazine you’ve taken out of the brown bag, in the same condition that it was at the time that you seized it on November 18th, 2003.
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: All right. I move it be admitted, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Let’s move -- if I didn’t, Your Honor, I’d like to move that 291 be admitted, the photograph.
THE COURT: It’s admitted. Okay.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, if we can move to the next exhibit, one of the -- either one of the binders is fine. Take whatever one you have. Tell us an exhibit number on that one.
A. 564.
Q. And does that have an item number on it, on the front of the binder.
A. Item number is 304-D.
Q. 304 --

A. “D” as in “David.”
Q. Okay. Now, you have a photograph up there.
A. Yes.
Q. That’s 293, I believe.
A. 293.
Q. Okay. Would you compare 293 with the front cover of the Exhibit 564.
A. It’s the same.
Q. And what’s -- and that’s 293, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. The photo. And is that --
A. 293.

Q. Is that an accurate depiction of the cover of the Exhibit 564.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, with regard to the Exhibit 564, at the time that you first saw it and the time that you seized it, was it in the condition that it is in now.
A. No.
Q. And when you seized it and placed it into evidence, what was the condition of that particular item that we've had identified as Exhibit 564.
A. It was in a regular paperback magazine condition.
Q. Okay. All right. Let's -- you can put that one back in the bag, if you'd like.
And if you'd keep the photograph, 293, with it, that would be great.

Now, let's direct your attention to the last exhibit that you have up there.
A. Okay.
Q. And the number on that is what, on the plastic bag with the --
A. Okay. The item number is 304-C --
Q. Okay.
A. -- as in "Charles."
Q. And what's the exhibit number.
A. 563.
Q. Okay. Now, with regard to that particular exhibit, there is a photograph up there, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. 292.
A. 292.
Q. Would you comapre the photograph, 292, with the front cover of Exhibit 563.
A. Okay.
Q. And is it an accurate depiction of what that cover looks like.
A. Yes, it is.
Q. And with regard to that particular exhibit, 563, was that exhibit in a binder when you first found it.

A. No, it wasn’t.

Q. What was its condition at the time that you seized it and booked it into evidence.

A. It was a regular paperback magazine condition.

Q. Hand me the photographs, the three photographs, if you would. And go ahead and put that back in the bag.

All right. We’re going to display the exhibits on the board. We’re going to start with 291. It’s in evidence.

Is that an accurate depiction of the book at the time you first saw it and seized it.

A. Yes.

Q. At least the cover.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Go ahead, you can -- that’s 293, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And is that an accurate depiction of the book when you first saw it and seized it.

A. Yes.

THE COURT: 292 and 293 haven’t gone into evidence yet. You didn’t ask for them.

MR. SNEDDON: I do, then, Your Honor. I apologize. I get so routine about them.

THE COURT: All right. 292 and 293 are admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. So did we --

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. SNEDDON: Was 292 already up.

MR. ZONEN: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Let’s do the last one, 293, then.

MR. ZONEN: 293 was the last one. 292 is the one before it.

MR. SNEDDON: We’re going to do 292 now.

Q. Do you recognize that.

A. I do.

Q. Is that the condition of the magazine at the time that you seized it.

A. Yes.

Q. And I say -- by “that,” I mean the Exhibit 292.

A. Yes.

Q. That’s depicted in that.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Thank you.

When you seized the bag, 309 --

A. Yes.

Q. -- okay. - did you go through the contents of the bag or did you just --

A. Yes, I did. I opened it up, and I saw what was inside.

Q. Did you go through the paperwork in the bag.

A. I went through everything that was in that bag.

Q. Okay. Let me -- and -- I guess I have to ask you to take that bag out again.

Your Honor, for purposes of the record, I want to indicate that I’ve withdrawn a document from Exhibit 309. I want to show it to counsel before we move to the next step, but it did come out of the exhibit. It’s 288, I’m sorry.

THE COURT: 288.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes, sir. So if you’d just hang on to that.

Your Honor, I’d like to have the document marked as 294 for identification purposes.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll need you to bring that over to the clerk here.

MR. SNEDDON: May I go this way, Your Honor.

THE CLERK: He has a tag, Judge.

THE COURT: Oh, he has a tag.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes, she gave me some ahead of time, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I didn’t know that. Go ahead.

MR. SNEDDON: And I’ve shown this document to counsel.

Q. Detective Alvarez, with regard to the document I just handed you, Exhibit 294, was that document inside the bag, 309, at the time that you seized it on November the 18th, 2003.
A. Yes.
Q. And is it in the same condition now as it was when you saw it for the first time inside that bag.

A. It sure looks like it, yes.
MR. SNEDDON: All right. Move that be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. SANGER: I'm going to object on the grounds that it violates a current order on a pending matter, if that makes sense.
THE COURT: I don't have the document, so --
MR. SNEDDON: You don't have it.
MR. SANGER: Should I approach, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Just hand it to me. You don't need to approach.
MR. SNEDDON: I'm sorry, Your Honor.
THE COURT: I'll sustain the objection pending further ruling on that issue.
MR. SNEDDON: May I have the officer testify at least showing indicia of the ownership of the bag.
THE COURT: Oh. For that purpose.
MR. SNEDDON: That's why I was offering it.
THE COURT: That's the only purpose you're offering it.
MR. SNEDDON: At this point in time, pending the Court's ruling, that's why I'm offering it.
THE COURT: All right. Just limit his testimony to that part of the document that would do that.
MR. SNEDDON: Yes, sir.
Q. Now, the document that's in front of you that's 294 --

A. Yes.

Q. -- is it addressed to Mr. Jackson.

A. It is.

Q. And it’s a multi-page document, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Does each page bear the initials “MJ” on it.

A. On all 12 pages.

MR. SNEDDON: No further questions, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: May I approach to retrieve the exhibits.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: Here’s some of them.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. All right. Let’s start with your background, if I may, Detective Alvarez. You were a deputy marshal.

A. Right.

Q. How many years.

A. Well, it was from ‘83 to ‘97.

Q. Okay. And your duties as a deputy marshal were to be a bailiff in the Municipal Court in the South County, in Santa Barbara.

A. For, yeah, that, and serve warrants, evictions, civil process.

Q. Okay.

A. Criminal warrants.

Q. And then after the courts consolidated, the Municipal Court consolidated with the Superior Court, you opted to become a deputy sheriff; is that correct.

A. We were absorbed as a -- one department.

Q. Okay. So when the courts consolidated, the marshal then -- the marshal’s office consolidated.

A. Correct.

Q. And the deputy marshals then became deputy sheriffs; is that right.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And at that point you began working as a detective immediately.

A. No.

Q. You were on patrol for a while.

A. Well, I went to -- I became a background investigator. I actually had a knee injury that put me out on light duty for about six months. And I continued to work, and I was -- I worked in personnel as a background investigator. I went -- once I was cleared by my doctor, I went back to work in the courts for -- so --

Q. For a while, okay. And when you say “personnel investigator,” you were doing background checks for people who were applying to work at the sheriff’s department.

A. That’s correct. New hires.

Q. All right.

A. And also, I was helping in the detective bureau doing interviews and -- just helping out.

Q. All right. There you go. In any event, I guess my question is, when did you become a detective.

A. November of ‘99.

Q. Okay. So as of the time of the case that we’re talking about here, the -- let me withdraw that.

When did you become involved in this case.

A. Approximately a week before the initial search, which was November 18th of 2002.

Q. How about November 18th of 2003.

A. 2003.

Q. Okay.

A. Correct.

Q. I don’t want to talk you into anything, but --

A. A year and a half ago.

Q. Okay. So -- and you started as a detective in November of ‘99, right. So you had four years as a detective at the time you were assigned to this case.

A. Approximately.

Q. All right.

A. I’ve got over five years as a detective now, and I’ve been on this case for about a year and a half.
Q. Okay. So that would be about four years, right.
A. Sounds good to me.
Q. Okay. And you remained -- after you were brought into the case, you remained as one of the main detectives on this case; is that correct.
A. That’s correct. One of the lead investigators.
Q. So you’re a co-lead investigator with Detective Zelis and with Sergeant Robel.
A. And Detective Bonner, yes.
Q. And Detective Bonner. All right.
Okay. Now, let me ask you -- let’s just start again somewhat at the end of things. You were aware, were you not, sir, that the events in this case were alleged to have occurred in February and March of 2003; is that right.
A. Yes.
Q. And so in November of 2003, you get assigned to the case and eventually you end up out at Neverland Valley Ranch during the search, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. I’m going to ask you -- in fact, what I might do is just approach -- well, let’s do it this way. Let me put it up, if the Court doesn’t mind.

Are we hooked up to this.
MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.
MR. SANGER: These were 293 and 292.
Q. 292 is a “Penthouse” magazine of some sort, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And that’s commercially available, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. It’s also not unlawful to possess it, in and of itself, correct.

A. No.

Q. I said “correct.” I’m sorry. Is it lawful to possess it, for an adult to possess this magazine.

A. For an adult, yes.

Q. Okay. There you go.

All right. And you’re aware that the alleged incidents, the incidents were alleged to have occurred in February and March of 2003, right.

A. Correct.

Q. What’s the date on this magazine.

A. I can’t read it from here. It’s --

Q. Okay. May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I can bring you the magazine, but I think you can see it on the exhibit here.

A. I still can’t read that.

Q. All right. Let me bring you the book that goes along with that.

May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I’m going to bring you the books here, and we’ll talk about these a little more in a minute.

I’ll ask you, if you look at that --

Let me stand here for one second, Your Honor, and make sure.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. Okay. That’s the actual magazine. What’s the date of the magazine.

A. I don’t see a date on it.

Q. You don’t see a date on it.

A. I don’t.

THE COURT: You can go up and show where it is.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Look right under the “SE” in “Penthouse.”

A. Okay.

Q. Does it say “July-August of 2003”.

A. It does.

Q. So is it safe to say, to your knowledge, as one of the co-lead investigators, no individual associated with this case, none of the Arvizos claimed that they saw this particular magazine in February or March of 2003.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, can I object to that question as being compound. Because -- I won’t say anything else, but I object as compound.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. To your knowledge, did -- well, this may be compound. I’m going to ask about them as a group. You can say “yes” or “no,” and we can take it one by one.

To your knowledge, did any of the Arvizos claim that they saw this magazine in February or March of 2003.

A. This particular one.

Q. Yes. That particular one.

A. I don’t know.

Q. As a detective, an investigator, you would suspect that they would not have seen it, correct, since it was published after the events.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object to that. It calls for a conclusion as to when it was published. No more. I object. Lack of foundation as to when the magazine actually hit the stands.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. Based on your experience, do magazines hit the stands, you know, three or four months before their publication date.

A. No.

Q. Sometimes it’s a month before a publication date.

A. I’d say a month. If you’re a subscriber, you usually get them a month early.

Q. All right. And I’m going -- I brought you the other book, just in case you can’t read this. But I’m going to put up 293, if I may, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And again, this is a commercially available magazine; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And you can buy it in a store, in other words.

A. Some stores.

Q. Yes. Well, not every store, I would agree. What’s the date on this magazine.

A. July 2003.

Q. While you have those books up there, you notice that the books -- I’m going to take another one out of the bag here, just as an example, just to follow on, but you notice that the books are encased in a three-ring binder, and then each page appears to be in some kind of plastic sleeve; is that correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. And did you do that.

A. I did not.

Q. Let me ask you about the magazine -- I think you may still have the actual magazine up there, but I have 291, which is 562. Put it this way, 562 is the actual magazine. 291 is the copy of the cover. Oh, here it is.

A. I have 564 and 563, Mr. Sanger.

Q. You’re right, it’s over here. In any event, I’m going to put this up, if I may, 291, Your Honor. 291 is a book, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. That’s a cover of the book that you seized; is that right.

A. That’s correct. Soft-cover book.

Q. And the actual book is a book of illustrations done by an artist, is that correct, or by artists.

A. Yes.
Q. All right. And that is also a commercially available publication. Is that a commercially available publication.
A. It appears to be.
Q. All right. And it’s not illegal to possess that per se.
A. No.
Q. Now, excuse me one second.
(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You did the prints that were marked as Exhibit 287, right.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And you -- to take those fingerprints, you simply rolled the fingerprints.
A. They weren’t done with a machine. But the palm prints were done with a roller.
Q. Okay. Say that again, because I couldn’t hear what you said.
A. You’re looking at the fingerprints themselves.
Q. Fingerprint cards.
A. Those were done by hand.
Q. So you actually rolled the prints.
A. Yes.
Q. You had --
A. There’s a technique, but, yes.
Q. Okay. And you are not a certified fingerprint examiner; is that correct.
A. Not examiner, no.
Q. All right. You, however, have experience in booking people and rolling their prints, right.
A. Booking a lot of people and booking a lot of prints.
Q. All right. But you know the difference between that and being a certified fingerprint examiner, of course.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, going back to your testimony about going through the house, you got there and started your assignment of searching through the house at some time late morning, I think you said it was around 11:00.

A. I think I got there at -- I think we interviewed Mr. Salas for about two hours. And driving time from Santa Maria to Los Olivos, another, I don’t know, half hour, 40 minutes. So it was close to 10:00 when we got there.

Q. All right. And then --

A. Or a little after 10:00.

Q. Okay. And your first assignment was to do something else other than search.

A. Yes.

Q. So what I’m getting at, is when you started to assist in the search, that was around 11:00.

A. Could be.

Q. All right. And by the time you got there to search, quite a number of officers had already been through the house; is that correct.

A. There were -- excuse me. There were a lot of officers in the house, but not in Mr. Jackson’s master bedroom area.

Q. How many officers were in Mr. Jackson’s master bedroom area when you first arrived there.

A. Could have been two or three maybe.

Q. When you --

A. To start.

Q. When you say “master bedroom area,” you’re talking about the whole suite, the first floor, second floor, the bathrooms, all that.

A. Yes, I’m talking about down the corridor area where the secure door is.

Q. All right. And you believe there are two or three officers there when you arrive.

A. No, when I started assisting.

Q. Well, that’s what I meant. When you arrived to assist. When you started assisting on the search.

A. Yes, there wasn't a whole lot of detectives in that area.

Q. All right. Were you joined by other officers or other law enforcement people in that room as the time went on.

A. Yes.

Q. How many people were in there. How many different people were in there while you were there.

A. Throughout the day.

Q. Yes.

A. I -- there was quite a few detectives in there, and forensic people, yes.

Q. And Mr. Sneddon came through at one point, did he not.

A. He did.

Q. All right. Did Mr. Franklin go through that area of the house.

A. He did.

Q. Before you got there -- by "there," I mean, you started your search detail. Do you know how many officers had gone through that area.

A. I can't tell you an exact number, but I know it was very limited, because that was the instructions.

Q. Okay. So if people followed the instructions, it would have been limited; is that correct.

A. "If people followed the instructions," I didn't hear your second half.

Q. It would have been limited; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And you're aware there was a cameraman and a number of detectives who went through the area before the search started itself; is that correct. Well, let me put it this way: I guess that's part of the search. Before the actual seizures of items commenced, a cameraman and detectives walked through the area; is that right.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object as lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Just a minute. My feed's not working.

THE REPORTER: I know, Judge. We're working on bringing it back up.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: When you located this black bag that you referred to - and you've got it up there. I believe it's Exhibit No. 288 - it was in the position that you indicated to the jury on the photograph, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And about what time of day did you locate that black bag there.

A. I can't recall the exact time.

Q. Did you note it in a report.

A. It might be on the bag when it was booked in.

Q. Do you have the bag there or -- if it helps refresh your recollection.

A. That looks right.

Q. Now, having looked at that, do you have a recollection of when you located that bag.

A. It says two o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Okay. But the question is, did that refresh your recollection as to approximately when you located it. About two o'clock.

A. It's hard to say. Probably -- I was there from eleven o'clock, starting the search, to 11:30 that night, so somewhere between 11:00, I would say, and early afternoon.

Q. All right. Do you have Exhibit 294 up there.

No, you don't. It's here.

Do you remember Exhibit 294.

May I approach to show him.

A. Yes. The paperwork.

Q. The paperwork. All right.

The paperwork is -- without going into the contents of it, it's addressed to Michael -- it's a letter addressed to Michael Jackson, care of a company in Los Angeles; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And then it’s also addressed to two other entities of some sort, two other entities.

A. Right.

Q. So it appears to you, from the letter, that it’s the kind of letter that went out -- or is a letter that went out to three different recipients; is that right.

A. Yes. It’s addressed to three different people, it looks like, on the front page.

Q. Okay. And there’s no indication by way of a check mark, or a circle, or anything else, as to which copy this was; is that correct.

A. No, I don’t believe so.

Q. All right. In the exhibit that’s marked Exhibit 565, there’s two videos; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Or there are two video cases; is that correct.

A. Right.

Q. And one of the video cases does not have a video -- I mean, it doesn’t have a CD in it, or whatever, DVD; is that correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. There’s no contents is what I’m trying to say.

A. It’s an empty case.

Q. And you didn’t find that video anywhere in your search, did you.

A. I personally did not.

Q. That also -- that appears to be a commercially prepared -- or commercially, yeah, prepared video of some sort; is that right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And nothing unlawful about owning that video.

A. If you’re over 18.

Q. If you’re over 18.

The other one, entitled “Believe It or Not,” appears to be a Leisure Time Europe video; is that correct.

A. I remember the front of it. I don’t know anything about Leisure Time Europe.

Q. Okay. And this particular video -- okay. Mr. Zonen is trying to bring me up to date here.

A. Okay.

Q. He’s reminding me it’s a DVD, not a video. But all right. I suppose it’s a video captured on a DVD, but we could both be right. But I accept that assistance.

May I approach the witness, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. I’m going to ask you about this. And put on your glasses, if necessary, reading the fine print down there.

A. I don’t have my glasses.

Q. These won’t help you. Can you see it.

A. No.

Q. Can’t see it.

Do we, by any chance, have a magnifying glass, or does somebody have reading glasses. I have bifocals, and I don’t want to --

Are these reading glasses. We’ve got some. We’ll find out how well they work. I should get a waiver on practicing optometry.

A. I can read it now. It’s still really small, but I can read it.

Q. Okay. Didn’t get any bigger, but you can read it. All right.

On that disk, does it say when the disk was released.

A. Well, it says July 3 of 1995.

Q. No, that’s not when it was released. That’s something to do with the -- it’s not in front of me, but it has something to do with the law.

A. I’m still reading.

Q. Right down at the very end.

A. “Which was produced on 1-22-03 and released on 3-27 of ‘03. Printed in the USA.”

Q. All right. To your knowledge, as a co-lead investigator in this case, to your knowledge, no witness has identified either one of those videos or video boxes; is that correct.

A. Per name, no.

MR. SANGER: Hang on one second.

All right. I have no further questions.

Oh, wait. Wait one second.

Q. One of my colleagues pointed out something. Let me ask you about this. And I may have to approach for this purpose.

May I do that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I’m going to show you 294, which again has not been received into evidence. There’s been limited testimony about it. I’ll take these back.

A. Okay.

Q. What is the date of that letter.

A. May 1, 2003.

Q. Okay. Thank you.

All right. I have no further questions.

MR. SNEDDON: No questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: I think I’ll let the jury step out early. I have a couple of things to take up with the attorneys before we take our break, so you get a longer break right now.

THE JURY: (In unison) Thank you.

THE COURT: But no pizza.

THE JURY: (In unison) Ahh.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right. The jury is out of the room.

The first thing I wanted to take up with you is the -- the prosecution has asked for a little more time to respond to the motion -- points and authorities on George Lopez evidence, which I had asked them to have in by today, I think.

So I'm not quite sure what -- how much more time did you want.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, is it the case that the Court requests of Mr. Blancarte, who's the attorney --

THE COURT: No, no, I'm not addressing that.

They can't hear you in the back here.

I just want to know how much time you need to respond. I know what you said.

MR. ZONEN: This is on the issue of Lopez.

THE COURT: Get to the microphone.

MR. ZONEN: I'm sorry. The answer is a couple days after we received --

THE COURT: I don't know about receiving it. It's not conditional on that. I'd like you to respond to the points and authorities.

MR. ZONEN: Then we can have it within two days.

THE COURT: All right. Friday.

MR. ZONEN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. I'll extend that time.

MR. SANGER: Is there going to be a date for a hearing on that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: We're just going to fit it in. It wasn't a formal motion. I asked you -- or you volunteered a little more points and authorities, and I'm not treating it as some date. I want to read what you say, and if I want to hear any more from you, I'll let you know.

MR. SANGER: All right.

THE COURT: The second thing is the issue of the request by the People to respond -- to have their 1108 hearing. And did you just get that today.

MR. MESEREAU: Just got it, yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I’m going to treat this the same way. It’s not a motion, you know. It’s something in abeyance; when are we going to have it; and they’re asking, “Can we have it sooner than later.” And I want to give you a couple of days to respond. How much time do you need.

MR. MESEREAU: Let’s see, today’s Wednesday. Could we -- we would certainly need through the end of the week.

THE COURT: Through Friday.

MR. MESEREAU: Could we -- could we file it Monday, Your Honor.

THE COURT: They’re asking to do it next week, so I don’t think that’s right. We could handle it orally. I mean, it’s not a thing that even needs written points and authorities. The question is, when is the right time to hear it. I want to give you a chance to file something.

MR. MESEREAU: I appreciate it. Today’s -- I guess we could file something Friday, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Bring it in with you --

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: -- when you come in.

MR. MESEREAU: As far as the hearing goes, is the Court contemplating a hearing where they simply call witnesses, or do we get a chance, if we choose, to put on our own witnesses to attack their credibility.

THE COURT: Well, I said that they definitely have to call witnesses. Then -- and I’m really going to be judging their evidence. But I would consider an offer by you.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. For example, Your Honor, there’s some witnesses --

THE COURT: You don’t need to -- I can imagine the example already. You don’t need to go into it.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: I guess the answer is maybe, depending on what I hear and what your offer of proof is then. And let me look at -- in the meantime, I'll look at the law, if you want to give me anything on that.

It is unusual to have opposing evidence at a hearing like that, but I'm not sure it's not -- I'm not sure that that means that that's not what we should do.

MR. MESEREAU: You could at a hearing, for example, put on witnesses that say, "They told me the opposite," or "They have a reputation for lying," that type of thing.

THE COURT: I see. I expected you to be talking about credibility issues.

MR. MESEREAU: We have one Judge's order certified from another trial that --

THE COURT: This is not the time to argue. But I will take under consideration what you're suggesting. All right.

MR. SANGER: There was one other matter that is still floating - if I could just click my computer once. Thank you - and that was the issue you were going to take up on Thursday, which --

THE COURT: That's the George Lopez.

MR. SANGER: No, there was the motions to quash and the remedy, the financial --

THE COURT: Oh, yes. Yeah.

They can't hear you in the back.

I need the break. I've promised the court reporters not to do this.

MR. SANGER: Just wanted to remind you, that's all.

(Recess taken.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. SNEDDON: Karen Shepherd.

THE COURT: Come forward, please. When you get to the witness stand, remain standing, raise your right hand and face the clerk.

KAREN SHEPHERD

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Karen Shepherd, S-h-e-p-h-e-r-d.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Okay. Scoot up close to that thing so we can all hear what you have to say. Thank you. You're employed by the Santa Barbara Sheriff's Department.

A. Yes.

Q. And how long have you been with the department.

A. For approximately seven and a half years.

Q. And did you have any law enforcement experience before that.

A. No.

Q. And what is your current assignment.

A. My current assignment is I'm a detective with the Special Operations Division. That started just this Monday. Before that, I was assigned to the Criminal Investigations Division.

Q. And in connection with those responsibilities, were you assigned to perform some search responsibilities in connection with a search warrant executed on Neverland Valley Ranch on November the 18th of 2003.

A. Yes.

Q. And specifically, do you recall about what time you got there.

A. It was early in the morning before the sun was out. We had a briefing in the Solvang area.
Q. Okay. And you eventually went to the ranch.
A. Yes.
Q. What responsibilities were you assigned at the ranch.
A. I was first assigned to search the main house, the master bedroom and master bathroom area.
Q. And do you recall about what time it was that you started those responsibilities.
A. I believe -- I don’t know the exact time. I can estimate maybe 10:00 a.m. is when we started.
Q. Now, in the course of your working and doing this search, what area were you searching.
A. I focused most of my searching in the master bathroom area.
Q. Now, during the course of the time that you were there, did you seize some items for evidence.
A. Yes.
Q. And when you seized an item or items, what was the process you used in order to have them booked into evidence.

A. If I found an item that I thought was of interest, I would tell either the investigating officer or someone who was in charge. I would take the evidence, if it was something that they wanted, and I gave it to Detective Padilla, who was in charge of seizing and packaging the evidence.
Q. And in some cases were the items photographed in their location.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Now, I’m going to show you some photographs and ask you some questions about those photographs.
(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Do you recognize the photograph, People’s 59. It’s 59, is it not --
A. Yes.

Q. -- for identification that I placed in front of you.

A. Yes, I do recognize it.

Q. And does it accurately depict the area that it purports to represent.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Move that it be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

THE WITNESS: I'm going to need it.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes, you are.

Okay. Now, before we get to the overhead, I want to ask you a couple of other questions.

I have a package that's been marked, Your Honor, as People's 569 for identification purposes. It's a brown bag; has Item No. 301 at the top, and inside the bag are five DVDs. I'm withdrawing them from the bag, showing them to counsel, and they're marked 570 through 574 respectively.

Q. Detective Shepherd, I've handed you the exhibit that's been marked as 569, which is the brown bag, and the five DVDs that are marked 70 through 74 respectively. Would you take the DVDs out of the bag and examine them, please.

Do you recognize those.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall where they were the first time that you saw them.

A. Yes. They were on top of the television.

There's a television that's alongside the Jacuzzi tub and they were stacked on top of the television.

Q. And did you seize those items.

A. Yes.

Q. And did you arrange to have them booked into evidence.

A. Yes.

Q. And are those items in the same condition now as they were when you seized them.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Move that they be admitted into evidence, Your Honor; 69 through 74.

THE COURT: They’re admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: Now I’m going to put the overhead on for just a second.

Q. Okay. This is the photograph that you have just identified moments ago as People’s 59, which is now in evidence. Do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. I had you pick up a little laser pointer. And could you indicate to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury the location of the Items 570 through 574 at the time that you first saw them.

A. Right there on top of the T.V.

Q. Right on top of the T.V., okay.

Now, at the time that you were out there that day, did you take any other items of evidence.

A. Yes.

Q. What else did you take.

A. Can I use the laser pointer.

Q. Sure. Absolutely. That’s what I want you to do.

A. Okay. There was a magazine that contained adult material that I found within this stack of books and magazines. There was another magazine containing adult material which was inside of this metal briefcase. And I also found three books in this plastic bag that contained adult material.

Q. Okay. Now, we’re going to talk about those in a little bit more detail now, but I think we can turn the lights back on.

Okay. I’ve handed you back the photograph that the jury just saw that was up on the board, People’s 59. What I want you to do, there’s a black pen right in front of you there, and I’m going to ask you to take the exhibit, People’s 59, and I want you to draw a little circle around the area where you found the DVDs that are in People’s 570 through 574, and right from the circle put a little line, “570 through 574.”

A. Okay.

Q. And would you put your initials by that, please.

And what did you put.

A. “KKS.”

Q. “KKS”.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Okay.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. I think we’re ready to go now.

Q. All right. We have a brown paper bag which has been marked as People’s 576 for identification purposes, okay. I want to ask you to take a look at that bag, and then I’m going to ask you some questions about it and the contents.

All right. Do you recognize the items that were contained in the bag, 576.

A. Yes.

Q. And when and where were those items the first time that you saw them.

A. They were inside the plastic bag near the bookcase.

Q. And were you the one responsible for taking those and placing them into evidence, having them booked.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, with regard to the item -- the items that you took out are what, three books.

A. Three books, yes.

Q. And those books have individual numbers; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And with regard to Item No. 577, do you see that.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, in front of you are some photographs. Can you mate up the photograph with the -- I believe it’s 297.

A. Correct.

Q. Is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that photograph an accurate depiction of a book that you seized, which is marked as 577.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Let’s go to the next one, 578. Do you have that in front of you.

A. Yes.

Q. That’s one of the books you seized, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And with regard to 578, there’s a photograph, 296.

A. Correct.

Q. Is that photograph, 296, an accurate depiction of the book that you seized, 578.

A. Yes.

Q. And with regard to the next item, which is 579 --

A. Correct.

Q. -- do you see that.

A. Yes.

Q. And 579, there’s a photograph marked as 631.

A. Correct.

Q. Is that an accurate depiction of the front cover of the Item 579.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, with regard to the Items 577, 78 and 79, these are the items that you seized and then had booked into evidence; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And are they in the same condition now as they were at the time you seized them and had them booked.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I move 576 through 579 be admitted into evidence.

THE COURT: All right. They’re admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: And I request that photograph

297, 296 and 631 be admitted into evidence.
THE COURT: They’re admitted.
MR. SNEDDON: Mr. Zonen thinks I neglected 578. If I did, I’m sorry. It should be 576, 77, 78, 79.
THE COURT: That’s what I thought you had requested admission of. I admitted those.
MR. SNEDDON: Thank you.
Q. With regard to the exhibits, 577 through 79, you have the photograph in front of you, People’s 59.
A. Yes.
Q. And could you indicate to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, by placing on that exhibit, the location of the area, the approximate location of where you seized the Items 577, 578 and 579.
A. With a black marker.
Q. Please. If you would.
A. Okay.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Mr. Zonen.
We’re going to need the lights, Your Honor.
Q. Now, on the board is the exhibit marked as People’s 296 that’s in evidence. Do you recognize that.
A. Yes.
Q. And that’s the cover -- that’s the photograph that you indicated reflects the cover of that particular item that you seized.
A. Yes.
Q. And by “that particular item that you seized,” I’m talking about 578 --
A. Correct.
Q. -- is that correct.
A. Correct.
Q. All right. Thank you.
And 297, the photograph of 297 reflects the front cover of Item 577; is that correct.
A. That’s correct.
Q. And those were all seized in that plastic bag.
A. Yes.

Q. And the last one, which is 631, do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. Was that also in the plastic bag.

A. Yes.

Q. And this is Exhibit 631, and it would be -- the actual book itself is 579.

A. Correct.

Q. Thank you.

Your Honor, I have another bag that I’ve shown to counsel for his examination that I’d like to have marked as 575 for identification purposes. It’s a brown bag with the number “#302” at the top.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to hand you -- oh, wait. I need to show these to counsel.

While we’re doing this, if you would simply look at the Exhibit 575, it might save some time. I guess I’ve already showed it to him.

Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. Now, before we start talking about 575 for a moment, I want to go back. I gave you some photographs, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And there’s a photograph that shows the Exhibit 570 through 574, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And what exhibit number is that.

A. 65.

Q. And with regard to that particular photograph, is that an accurate depiction of where those items were located at the time that you seized them --

A. Yes.

Q. -- on November 18th.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Move that that photograph,

People's 65, be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Okay. Now let's deal with that bag that I gave you, which is 575. All right. Do you recognize the bag.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recognize the contents inside the bag.

A. Yes.

Q. And with regard to that particular item, where was it the first time that you saw it.

A. It was within a stack of books and magazines located on the edge of the Jacuzzi tub.

Q. And were you the one responsible for seizing it and booking it into evidence.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Now, with regard to the Exhibit 575, Your Honor, which I seek to admit into evidence at this time --

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, there's a photograph in front of you. It's marked as People's 64 for identification.

A. That's correct.

Q. I better look at that. That didn't quite look like the right one. Have I asked you about this one here.

A. No.

Q. Okay. This is the one. All right. I misspoke myself. Not for the first time today. People's 62 for identification, do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. And is it an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: I'd move that 62 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, with regard to the exhibit, People's 62, do you see in that exhibit the location where you found the Item 575.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Could you take that little magic marker you've got up there again and put a little line to just the general area, and then put a "575" on it.

A. Okay.

MR. SNEDDON: The next exhibit, Your Honor, has been marked as People's 580 for identification. It's a clear plastic bag; has "#306" marked on it, and it appears to contain a binder. I've shown it to counsel.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Do you recognize the item depicted in that photograph. I'm sorry, I'm on automatic pilot here.

With regard to the exhibit I just handed you, the item number on that is 580, the plastic bag.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, could you take the binder out of it, if you would, please, and just examine -- there was a brown bag inside of the plastic bag, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And that's the brown bag that you use for booking evidence; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Now, look at the binder, if you would. Just the front cover.

All right. Do you recognize that item.

A. Yes.

Q. Where was that item the first time that you saw it.

A. It was located inside the metal briefcase that was on the edge of the Jacuzzi tub.

Q. And you opened the briefcase and withdrew the item.

A. Yes.

Q. And did you have a photograph of it taken before you had it booked into evidence --

A. Yes.

Q. -- to document the location of where you found it.

A. Yes.

Q. And I believe there's a photograph in front of you.

A. Correct.

Q. Was that the photograph that was used to document it.

A. Correct.

Q. What number is that.

A. It's Exhibit No. 62.

Q. And is that Exhibit 62 an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Move that People's 62 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I think it already was.

MR. SNEDDON: Is that already in.

THE COURT: It's in.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, I don't want to show something that hasn't been admitted, and I want to make sure I've got this down correctly before I do it, so I don't want to get at cross-purposes. But as I understand it, People's 65 is in evidence,

People's 64 is in evidence, and People's 63 is in evidence.

THE COURT: 62 and 65 are in evidence.

THE CLERK: 64 hasn't been identified.

MR. SNEDDON: 64 has not been identified.

THE COURT: No.

MR. SNEDDON: But 65 and 63 have been and are in evidence.

THE COURT: No, 62 and 65 are in evidence.

THE CLERK: Just 62 and 65. 63 and 64 have not been identified.

MR. SNEDDON: I'll take care of that. Thank you.

Q. With regard to the exhibit in front of you, People's 64, do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. And what is that.

A. It's adult content magazine.

Q. And is that an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.

A. Yes.

Q. And what exhibit does that match up to. What's the title on that.

First of all, let me do this: Move that it be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. It's admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: Man, I can't find 62.

THE WITNESS: 62 is right here.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. That's fine.

Q. When I showed you Exhibit 62 and I asked you to make notations on it as to the location where you found Item 575, was that photograph an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay, Your Honor. I believe 62 and 64 should now come into evidence.

THE COURT: 64 and 65 are in. And you have not yet identified 63. 62 is in.

MR. SNEDDON: Yeah, I -- this is 63. No, I....

Q. All right. Let's try it again. 63; do you recognize 63.

A. Yes.

Q. And is that an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Move that it be admitted, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to ask you some questions.

A. Okay.

MR. SNEDDON: Go ahead.

MR. ZONEN: We need the individuals and the video.

MR. SNEDDON: I need the exhibit number on it, of 65.

Q. With regard to the exhibit People's No. 65, do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the location of those items when you seized them.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And with regard to People's 64, do you recognize that.

A. Yes.

Q. And is that the condition of the magazine at the time that you seized it.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And People's 63, that's the one that was inside of the metal case.

A. Yes.

Q. And you took it out and put it on the metal case and photodocumented it.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And People's 62 is the one that you indicated the location of the Item 575.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Thank you.

All right. I think we can have the lights, Your Honor.

I have one last exhibit, Your Honor, that has the number "633" on it. It's a brown paper bag with the number "315" at the top right-hand corner in black. I've shown it to Mr. Sanger, and I'll show it to the witness.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Have you had a chance to examine it.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recognize the item --

A. Yes.

Q. -- 633.

A. Yes.

Q. And where were those items when you first saw them.

A. I located these items. They were inside the master bathroom closet area. They were inside a black E-Z-Go suitcase located inside this manila envelope.

Q. And you were responsible for taking those and having them booked into evidence; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And are they in the same condition as they were at the time that you seized them on November the 18th.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Move they be admitted, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. They’re admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: And I believe everything is in evidence, and I appreciate the Court and clerk’s help. I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Detective Shepherd, you were assigned -- you were detailed to do this particular work; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. You were not assigned as a co-lead investigator, or anything, on this case; is that correct.

A. No.

Q. So a number of detectives and deputies and other personnel were brought to Neverland Ranch on the 18th of November to assist, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And do you know the approximate number of people that were there.

A. No.

Q. All right. Quite a few, though.
A. Quite a few.
Q. And a number of those people, then, after doing whatever they did, they went on with other assignments and no longer worked on the case; is that correct.
A. Correct.
Q. And that was pretty much your situation; is that right.

A. Correct.
Q. All right. Now, among the materials -- let me stop for a second. You went through -- as a part of your assignment that day, you went through the master bedroom suite; is that correct.
A. Correct.
Q. What other parts of the premises at Neverland did you go through.
A. I was assigned, after the master suite area, to be the scribe in the office memorabilia room.
Q. All right. So just as far as what you saw - you don’t have tell me what you did, but what you saw of the premises - was the main house -- did you see the whole main house.
A. No. I was just in the master suite area.
Q. Okay. Did you see the library, by any chance.
A. No.
Q. Okay. And then you went to the -- to the office, so you saw the office area, which is a building adjacent to the main house, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. Did you go to any other structures while you were there.
A. No.
Q. All right. Now, in the part of the house that you were in, there were books and magazines and photographs and other items that were pretty much stacked up all over the place; is that right.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And among the items that were stacked up there were art books; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. History books.

A. I’m sure.

Q. Okay. Do you remember seeing any Black History books, for instance.

A. I don’t recall seeing any.

Q. Okay. Did you -- and you saw a lot of memorabilia from different kinds of films or things from The Three Stooges, for instance; is that correct.

A. I don’t recall seeing any.

Q. You don’t, okay.

Do you recall that there were a number of Three Stooges -- when I’m saying “memorabilia,” a number of things that related to The Three Stooges.

A. I don’t remember seeing anything related to The Three Stooges.

Q. A number of things related to Shirley Temple, right.

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. A number of things related to Disney and Disney productions, correct.

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: If we could, Your Honor, I’d like to put 65 up.

Q. Just coincidentally, right under the thing on the right, is something about The Three Stooges, is it not.

A. Correct.

Q. None of the things that you seized were contraband; is that correct.

A. No.

Q. So, in other words, they were lawful for adults to possess.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And all of what you seized was essentially commercially produced, commercially available material; is that right.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, there were -- when we talked about art books, there were a lot of art and photography books that you saw --

A. Correct.

Q. -- in the various places. And in the office as well, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And Mr. Jackson is a performer and an artist; is that correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. You’re aware that his -- that his likeness is sought by photographers all over the world. Are you aware of that.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Are you aware that photographers send him their work on a regular basis with the hope that he’ll let them photograph him and be his photographer.

A. I’m not aware of that.

Q. None of the items that -- none of the items that you seized -- well, let me withdraw that for a second.

I think I need to look at what you have up there.

So may I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Why don’t I just take it all.

THE WITNESS: Oh, okay.

MR. SANGER: And then I don’t have to keep coming back.

Q. Now, I think we talked about books and magazines as being commercially available, books and magazines being commercially available. That’s also true of all the DVDs.

A. Correct.

Q. They’re something you can buy at the store, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And you conducted your part of this search on November 18th, 2003, correct.

A. Yes.
Q. And you don't know what, if any of this, was there in the residence in February and March of 2003, correct.
A. No.
Q. One of the items that you actually seized was shown in the picture, 65. G2445 27.
And if I may, I'll put that back up here, which is there on that side there.
Are you aware that that is a film that was shown on HBO.
A. At the time that I seized it, I was not.
But then I saw it, after the search warrant, on HBO.
MR. SANGER: All right. May I have just a moment, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Let me ask just a few more questions based on what we were just discussing there.
Do you recall the nature of the various art books that you saw. The other ones. Not the ones you seized.
A. Yes.
Q. And what was the nature of the art books that you saw.
A. One of the books was -- contained children and --
Q. Other than the ones that you seized.

A. Oh, other than the ones.
Q. Other than the ones, yes.
A. The one that I do remember seeing in the office was -- I believe it was pictures of Marilyn Monroe.
Q. Okay.
A. It was a memorabilia book. And that's -- there were a lot of books, so I don't remember a whole bunch of them off the top of my head.
Q. All right. Well, let's take the office for just a second. The office is in the building right next to the house itself, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And the office itself has a room that you walk into. It might be, in some other circumstances, like a reception area; is that correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. And then you go through a door, and the next door -- or the next room is what appears to be Mr. Jackson’s private or personal office, with a desk and so on; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And in those offices, there are mannequins of various sorts; is that right.

A. That’s right.

Q. Some of them somewhat humorous.

A. Correct.

Q. Depending on your point of view, I suppose. All right. And there are also displays of various movie memorabilia and things from Disney, that sort of thing; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. As you go through the door into this first area that I called the reception area, for lack of a better term, if you go to the left there’s a hallway; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And if you go all the way down to the end, there’s a bathroom, right.

A. Correct.

Q. But if you take a left from that hallway, there’s an L-shaped room. It might be like a walk-in-closet-size sort of thing, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And that’s actually lined with bookcases, and there’s hundreds, probably thousands of books in there; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And then in Mr. Jackson’s office itself, besides chairs and mannequins and memorabilia, there were stacks of books in different places, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Now, do you recall seeing items in that office; for instance, a letter from President Bush.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Do you recall seeing letters or items from various other celebrities or personalities or --

A. No.

Q. -- people of stature.

A. I was assigned as a scribe in that area, so I didn’t do any of the searching.

Q. So -- okay. So you didn’t look through the materials that were there.

A. No.

Q. All right. But did you go in that room, that L-shaped room, and look at some of the books in there.

A. I saw the L-shaped room. I noticed there was a lot of books and there was a lot of stuff in there.

Q. All right. Did you notice that, as you just -- I understand you didn’t search it per se, but did you notice that there was some books where there were multiple copies of the same book.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Back in the house, where you were going through the residence, did you focus your entire efforts in the master bathroom.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So you didn’t go upstairs.

A. No.

Q. Did you even walk upstairs to see what was --

A. I did walk up, but I didn’t search.

Q. So when you walked up and you saw upstairs, there was stacks of books and items stacked and lined up and in bookcases around that room; is that correct.

A. Stacks of -- I don’t know if they were books. There was stacks of stuff everywhere.
Q. A lot of movie memorabilia.
A. Yes.
Q. A lot of art type of books, photography type of books.
A. Yes.
Q. And downstairs, going back downstairs, did you go into the hallway and the bathroom areas on the right side of the -- of the room, if you were to face the big screen television.
A. Yes, I walked through there.
Q. You walked through. You were not detailed to search that area, though; is that correct.
A. No.
Q. And did you notice that there was movie memorabilia there.
A. Yes.
Q. Things from Disney, again Shirley Temple, other regular commercial movies and that sort of thing.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And then in the main -- on the main floor, in the big room on the main floor with the big screen T.V., there were stacks of books on the floor right next to the television; is that correct.

A. Yes.
Q. And again, there were books in a bookcase to the right, just before you went into the hallway before going up the stairs, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And do you remember a piano there in the big room.
A. Yes.
Q. The grand piano, the black one.
A. Yes, I remember that.
Q. And there were -- there were some books and things that were sitting on that piano.
A. There might have been.
Q. Okay. And do you remember, behind the piano, there was an alcove there where there was bookcases with books.

A. Yes.
Q. Now, did you discern that in different areas, there were different themes, or did all the books seem to be pretty much mixed up.
A. I didn’t search through those books. I spent my time searching in the bathroom.
Q. But you did notice, when you were going through, a tremendous number of books in that whole area on the first floor were photography and art or entertainment kind of books; is that correct.

A. I can guess, assume so, yes. I didn’t go through all of them.
Q. You didn’t go through all of them, but what you saw --
MR. SNEDDON: Excuse me, move to strike. Speculation. Use of the word “assume so.” Lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. SANGER: Okay.
THE COURT: Stricken.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: I don’t want you to just assume. I realize you didn’t go through every one, but as you picture it in your mind and as you looked at it at the time, did you notice there were a lot of books about movies and art and photography in this area.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And in the master bathroom area that you’ve described, there were a number of books about art and photography and entertainment.
A. Yes.
Q. And as we -- as I asked before, in addition, mixed in with that in this particular area, there were, from time to time, some other books on other issues, like history or current events, that sort of thing.
A. There may have been. I don’t remember seeing any.

Q. All right. Did you go into the closet. There was a closet off that master bathroom, like a walk-in closet there.

A. Yes.

Q. And there were some books in there, were there not.

A. Yes, a lot of books.

Q. Do you remember the subject matter of those books.

A. No.

Q. Were you assigned to search that area as well.

A. Yes.

Q. So in that master bathroom, with the books that we saw stacked up here and there, and the closet, those were two areas that you were searching. Were there any other areas that you searched.

A. No, that's it.

Q. Okay. So, just in that -- in those areas, how many books do you think there were.

A. Hundreds. I --

Q. And of the hundreds, you seized the ones that you felt were appropriate; is that correct.

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. I have no further questions.

MR. SNEDDON: No questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

All right. We'll recess until tomorrow morning, 8:30. See you then. Remember the admonitions.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, could the Court wait one moment as to one small detail.

MR. SANGER: Remember, he asked.

MR. ZONEN: Two small details.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, we've -- apparently the Court's in possession of the product of the subpoena duces tecum issued by the People for legal records relating to the 1993 matter in Mr. Feldman's office. I've asked counsel to think about whether they would agree to it being turned over to us for copying, and they're still debating the issue. If, in the event their position is "No," we'd like the Court to set a time when we can argue it.

MR. OXMAN: Excuse me, Your Honor. On the subpoena, I think we would like to have time to determine what we want to do with it.

THE COURT: Yes, I'll give you time.

MR. OXMAN: Okay.

THE COURT: How much time do you want.

MR. ZONEN: The Court should know, they've known about it for a couple of days already.

MR. OXMAN: Would till Monday be acceptable.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. ZONEN: Monday would be fine.

THE COURT: You have one other --

MR. SNEDDON: Short, I promise.

I promised the Court and counsel and the clerk that I would find the rest of the exhibit that goes to -- there's a photograph we used, which is, I believe, 346, Madam Clerk. And these are the originals. And we were going to substitute. But if you would rather me just have them marked as a separate number, we could do that as well, Your Honor. I just wanted to make sure we have the originals in evidence.

THE CLERK: That was 246.

MR. SNEDDON: 346, I'm sorry.

THE CLERK: I'm sorry.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Mesereau, is it all right if he substitutes the original of those notes for the copy and we leave the same number on them.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.
MR. SNEDDON: Thank you, Your Honor.

Thank you, Mr. Mesereau.
MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, we had stipulated to make a copy of the cover of the Neverland Valley Guest Book --
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. MESEREAU: -- which is Exhibit 5031, and we have made copies. With the Court’s permission, we’ll have them entered in evidence.
THE COURT: All right. Do you want the book itself to remain in evidence, or do you want to substitute the photos of the front for the --
MR. MESEREAU: We had agreed to use the front cover.
THE COURT: Okay.
MR. MESEREAU: The prosecutor had objected to other pages of numerous writings, so at this point we may use the original further in our case.
THE COURT: Do you want to just leave it in right now and mark those at a different time.
MR. MESEREAU: Sure, if we could, Your Honor. Thank you very much.
MR. SNEDDON: That’s acceptable, Your Honor.
THE COURT: What number would that be.
THE CLERK: Would you want that an A and a B.
THE COURT: We’ll put it under A under the --
MR. MESEREAU: Whatever the Court would like.
THE COURT: Under the number that the actual guest book is, we’ll put those as an A. Is there two separate exhibits.

MR. MESEREAU: No, there’s just one, Your Honor. That will be A, whatever number that is.
MR. SANGER: Let me just address that. The book was withdrawn so we could make the cover, so we have to bring the book back.
MS. YU: Tomorrow.

THE COURT: That will be fine.

MR. SANGER: We'll bring the book back.

THE COURT: You have enough witnesses through Friday. There's no problem.

MR. SNEDDON: You warned me. I'm not going to get chewed out. We'll make one up if we have to.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:35 p.m.)

THE COURT: Good morning.

THE JURY: (In unison) Good morning.

COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The reason we’re starting a little late this morning is we had a conference with counsel. And, for several reasons, I’m going to release the jury tomorrow so that they do not have to be here.

And the reasons are, one, that one of the jurors has a pressing family matter that, while it doesn’t demand that we close the court down, it would be better if we did.

Secondly, the attorneys and myself have been, I think, pushing ourselves very hard, or I’ve been pushing everybody very hard. Depends on how you look at it. And I think a break for everybody is in order.

And there are three or four minor -- by “minor,” I mean -- I shouldn’t say “minor.” There are three or four issues that the attorneys and the Court need to deal with before next week. They’re issues that have been mentioned yesterday that we just couldn’t get to. This way, we can work for what I would anticipate to be a short time tomorrow morning on those issues, and then you would have the rest of the day off. We all would have the rest of the day to do our other work. So that’s what I’m going to do.

The Court will also be in session only one-half a day next Tuesday. Tuesday afternoon we are dedicating the new Juvenile Court facility, and the new Juvenile Hall in Santa Maria out on -- off of California Street. And of course you're all invited. I know, I won't see you there. But that's the reason that we will not be in session Tuesday afternoon. I will stop at 11:30, at our normal 11:30 break.

All right. I think that that takes care of the issue of being dark tomorrow.

And Mr. Jackson, you do not need to attend, unless you want to, tomorrow morning.

THE DEFENDANT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE COURT: Are you ready to proceed.

MR. ZONEN: Yes, Your Honor. We'll call our next witness. We call Fritz Coleman to the stand, please.

THE COURT: Remain standing, raise your right hand, please.

FRITZ COLEMAN

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Fritz Coleman, F-r-i-t-z C-o-l-e-m-a-n.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Coleman, good morning.

A. Good morning.

Q. Sir, what is your current occupation.

THE COURT: Back in the back, Counsel. Is your mike on.

Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: Yes, it is.

Q. Sir, what is your current occupation.

A. I'm a weather forecaster at Channel 4, the local NBC station in Los Angeles.

Q. And how long have you held that position.

A. 23 years.

Q. Prior to that, did you have other television experience.

A. Minor television experience. That was my -- I was in the stand-up comedy business before that, actually.

Q. Do you know Jamie Masada.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you know the business that he runs.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What business is that.

A. Owner of The Laugh Factory, a comedy club in Hollywood.

Q. And tell us what The Laugh Factory is. What do they do.

A. The Laugh Factory is a comedy nightclub that has one to two shows per night every week where a cavalcade of five to six comedians perform every night.

Q. Have you ever performed there.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do they have a camp, a summer camp, that they run out of The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes, they do.

Q. Have you ever worked with that summer camp, with the children who go there.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And the type of children who go there, they're from where.

A. Underprivileged children, at-risk children. Group homes, poor families.

Q. How long has that summer camp existed.

A. I don't know the answer to that. I think five or six, seven years maybe.

Q. All right. Did you ever have an opportunity to meet any of the children in the Arvizo family.

A. Yes, I did. I was invited, as were many of the comedians that performed at The Laugh Factory, to be a guest teacher for one day, on one Saturday. And the Saturday that I taught there, I met all three of the children.

Q. Can you tell us their names. Do you recall their names.

A. Gavin, Star, and Davellin.

Q. Were either of their parents, a mother or father, present at the time that you met them.

A. The mother came to pick them up at the end of the day. That was my brief encounter with her.

Q. And do you remember her name.

A. I don't know, I'm sorry to say.

Q. And did the children perform during that day.

A. Yes, they did.

Q. Did you work with them during that day.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And how did you find them at that time.

A. I found them personable and polite and charismatic and --

Q. And do you remember how long ago that was.

A. I would say 1999.

Q. At some time did you learn that one of the three children became afflicted with cancer.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall when that was, the year that was.

A. Um, I think it was 2000, because after my tenure as the teacher there, I lost touch with the family until a group of people just sort of began to discuss that Gavin was in Kaiser with cancer.

Q. All right. At some point in time, did you have an occasion to visit their home, the Arvizo family home.

A. Yes, I did. Once. The Christmas after the summer when I was the instructor there, my good friend, Louise Palanker, and I decided that we would, for lack of a better term, adopt this family for Christmas. They were, to our learning, in dire financial straits.

And I had two young sons who were 12 and 10 at the time, and wanted to seize an opportunity to do something nice for a family and sort of bring them along the process, just to help them appreciate more what they had in their own lives.

So my friend Louise and I went to Best Buy, and bought several hundred dollars worth of Christmas gifts - video game equipment, movies - and wrapped them. And then my sons and I and Louise took them down to their home in East L.A., and I was in their home for a total of 20 minutes, just to drop the gifts off, and get hugs from the kids, and we were out of there.

Q. Did anybody from the Arvizo family solicit those gifts.

A. No.

Q. Did they ask you in advance.

A. No.

Q. Did they know in advance that you were doing this.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you tell them in advance that you were doing this.

A. I don’t think so. I think after we bought them we said, “May we pay you a Christmas visit.” And they sort of -- they knew before the precise moment we took gifts down there, but it was something we just sort of did a couple of weeks in advance and brought them into the process later. They didn’t know before we shopped or anything. It was totally our idea.

Q. All right. How did you know where they lived.

A. My friend Louise got their address, and we just navigated our way down there.

Q. Was Gavin healthy at the time or -- was this prior to the --

A. This is before the cancer, yes.

Q. And the kids were approximately how old at that time, if you recall.

A. I would say between 8 and 11. Somewhere in that area. I’m sorry I can’t be precise.

Q. Did you, in fact, go to their house and go into their apartment.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you have a recollection of what the apartment looked like.

A. Yes, it was very small. Very clean. And I remember that the room was partitioned with sheets, because there were -- with the three children and the two adults, five people, living in a very small space. I was just stricken with how small it was.

Q. And the small space you’re describing, was it more than one room.

A. I didn’t take a tour of the home. It seemed like it was one room. Again, partitioned by these sheets that they had set up to sort of divide areas of the room.

Q. When you were there, did you have a conversation with any of the members of the family.

A. Yes. The people who were there. I -- I’m not actually sure if the father was there. But I remember the mother being there, and the three children. And it was really a very brief encounter. 15 to 20 minutes.

Q. Would you describe the mother’s reaction to your bringing the gifts.

A. Very thankful. The children, very thankful. I got the feeling that this might have been the only Christmas they were going to have. It just seemed like it was the right thing to do, and perhaps it was -- it saved Christmas for them. That was my feeling. They never expressed that, but it was my feeling.

Q. And your kids came into the home as well.

A. My children came into the home. My young son was actually afraid to get out of the car. This was not a neighborhood that he was familiar with, so he had to be coerced from the car.

So my older son went in with me first, and then we went and got my younger son, who wanted to stay in the car.

Q. All right. When was the next time that you had an opportunity to visit with any member of the Arvizo family; do you recall.

A. Having learned that Gavin had cancer, I saw -- I don’t remember which of the siblings was at the hospital, but the next time I saw him was he and his dad at the hospital.

Q. What was Gavin’s condition at the time you saw him.

A. Very ill.

Q. How did he appear to you.

A. He appeared very drawn and pale. And this was in the darkest days of his diagnosis when they weren’t sure he was going to make it. And he was very sick to his stomach, and it was very hard to watch.

Q. All right. How many times do you believe you visited him at the hospital.

A. Several. I would say between three and five, if my memory serves me.

Q. During the period of time that he was ill, were you involved in any fund-raising efforts on behalf of either the Arvizo family or Gavin Arvizo specifically.

A. Yes, I was. The Laugh Factory decided they wanted to do a fund-raiser for this family. It was apparent to us that they needed the money, because David was not working. He was staying every night at the hospital with Gavin, and so we thought it would be a good idea.

I’m not exactly certain where this idea came from. I’m assuming it was Jamie Masada, because he did those things all the time, charity events at the club.

And so I was happy to be involved. I was happy to make an announcement on my television station about it. My station was very liberal in allowing me to do community outreach charity events like that, as long as I didn’t benefit from them personally.

And so I made an announcement inviting our viewers to come, and also made an announcement about the need for blood for Gavin. He needed transfusions at that time. And so we did this benefit, as we’ve done for many other people.

Q. Did Gavin’s mother involve herself in any way with you in efforts to arrange solicitation for his charitable donations.

A. Not with me, no.

Q. Did she ever have a conversation with you at all about that.

A. No.

Q. Did you have a conversation with any member of the Arvizo family for that.

A. No, my relationship for that fund-raiser was totally with Jamie Masada. It was -- he spearheaded the evening, and I was just doing sort of what he suggested.

Q. Do you remember if there was actually -- if the fund-raising effort actually occurred.

A. Yes.

Q. Was that at The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us where The Laugh Factory is.

A. It’s the corner of Laurel Canyon and -- Laurel Avenue and Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood.

Q. That particular event, did that take place in the evening.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember approximately when it took place.

A. It was a weekday event. If it’s like his other shows, if I can remember, it was probably an eight o’clock start, and there were five or six comics. And I was on early in the evening, because I had to go back and do the eleven o’clock news.

Q. Do you know if that was during the time that Gavin was still ill with cancer, before he went into remission.

A. I can’t be certain about that, but it seems to me like it was close to the beginning of his being ill when we were all concerned about him every day. I think it was close to the beginning, if I’m not mistaken.

Q. Was that in conjunction with the effort to get blood to him.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Which would suggest that he was probably still in need of it.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the mother of this child, Gavin’s mother, at that fund-raiser at The Laugh Factory.

A. No.

Q. Do you remember if you saw any other member of the Arvizo family.

A. I saw David. I went in the front door upon arriving, and my recollection was that they had a table set up to the right of the entrance of The Laugh Factory where they had, I’m not sure how many people, but it seemed to be a representative of The Laugh Factory and David himself and people taking tickets, and maybe taking further donations if anyone decided to make a donation to the family over and above what the cover charge of the club was. But I couldn’t tell you how many people. David was the only person, other than Gavin, that I saw there that night.

Q. All right. Were you involved in any way in the distribution of the money that was collected.

A. No. No.

Q. Are you aware as to how much money was collected that night.

A. No. Check that. I heard in conversation afterwards that it was a couple thousand dollars. Just in talk amongst the comics and Jamie. But it was an unofficial thing. I saw no bookwork, I saw no cash exchange hands. I wasn't involved in that at all.

Q. Could you tell if it was a fairly good turnout at The Laugh Factory.

A. That club is always full, so I -- it probably was a relatively full room. I couldn't tell you exactly how many audience members were there.

Q. Do you remember what other comedians were there.

A. Well, I was at the beginning of the show, because I was -- again, it was a lunch break for me, and I was on my way back to do the news.

I think that Chris Tucker was there. Maybe Bob Saget. Some of the ongoing Laugh Factory regular comedians. But I didn't see the rest of the show, so I couldn't swear to their presence there, honestly.

Q. Do you remember any other occasion where you may have seen the mother of Gavin, Gavin's mom.

A. I saw Gavin's mom a total of three times in my whole experience with the family. One was when she came to pick the children up at the end of comedy camp. The other time was when we delivered the presents to her house. And the last time was my final visit to see Gavin in the hospital after his first bout. She came in toward the end of my visit there. And I hadn't seen her.

I think the legend was that because David was not working and staying with Gavin, she was working all the time. So they were never at the hospital at the same time.

However, my last visit, she came in at the end, and that was it. And that was a total of a half hour.

Q. Do you remember anything unusual about your conversations with her at all.
A. No.
Q. Did she ever solicit money from you.
A. No.
Q. Did she ever ask you to do anything on her behalf or on behalf of her family.
A. No.
Q. Was there anything at any time inappropriate about her behavior with you.
A. No.
MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.
THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Good morning, Mr. Coleman.
A. Good morning.
Q. My name is Thomas Mesereau and I speak for Mr. Jackson.
We have not met before.
A. Right.
Q. Never spoke on the phone.
A. No, sir.
Q. You did talk to one of our investigators, Mr. Scott Ross, right.

A. Right.
Q. How many times did you speak to him.
A. Two times in person, one time when he did the initial interview, and one time when he issued my subpoena. And I think one time on the phone, I think.
Q. Okay. When did you first meet the Arvizo family.
A. I met them at the comedy camp, as I stated earlier, which was a Saturday in the summer, I think, of 1999. It was a one-day encounter with them, because each of the instructors was only there for one day.

Q. Okay. Now, at that point was Gavin ill.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Approximately when do you recall Gavin becoming ill.

A. I remember learning about it - I'm real fuzzy about this - anywhere from six months to a year after I met the family. I'm sorry, I'm --

Q. Okay. And approximately when do you think the fund-raiser took place.

A. I want to say -- I'll be honest with you, the timeline that we've discussed since this investigation started seems to be about October 2000.

Q. Okay. Now, at some point, did you learn the Arvizo family had obtained over $100,000 in a lawsuit with J.C. Penney.

A. No, I hadn't.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, I'm going to object to information that would be hearsay. Move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever have a discussion with any of the Arvizos about their filing a lawsuit against J.C. Penney.

A. No. My first knowledge that I was even mentioned in the J.C. Penney arrest was when the New York Daily News called me at the beginning of this case to ask me if I had a comment about it, and that was my first learning of that information.

Q. And what did you learn about your name being used in that case.

MR. ZONEN: I will object as hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you learn at some point that your name had come up in the J.C. Penney lawsuit.

MR. ZONEN: I will object as hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know anything about

Janet Arvizo telling the Los Angeles Police Department when she called them about David that you were going to help her --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as hearsay and irrelevant.

THE COURT: I have to have the complete question.

Did you finish the question, Mr. Mesereau.

MR. MESEREAU: I’m not sure. I think Mr. Zonen may have interrupted before I completed it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I can’t tell if you completed it either.

MR. MESEREAU: I can rephrase it, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. Coleman, did you ever authorize Janet Arvizo to tell the Los Angeles Police Department that you were going to help her in a domestic violence case against her ex-husband David.

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever learn that she had told the Los Angeles Police Department, “Fritz Coleman, Kobe Bryant, and Michael Jackson are going to help me in my case against my husband”.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where did you learn that.

A. I learned it from a New York Daily News reporter who was calling me to get comments about this particular case.

Q. And did you respond.

A. I said I knew nothing about it.

Q. So you never had a discussion with her about that.

A. No.

Q. You never authorized her to use your name, correct.

A. No.

Q. Have you ever authorized Janet Arvizo to use your name in any lawsuit.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Have you ever discussed any lawsuit with Janet Arvizo.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, you indicated that you visited the -- what was described to you as a family residence in East Los Angeles, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And that was on Soto Street, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And who arranged for you to visit the residence at Soto Street.

A. My friend Louise Palanker, who was working at The Laugh Factory at the time, and was sort of my liaison with the family. She learned the address. I don't know how she learned the address. But she had the instructions, and I drove.

Q. Now, did anyone ever tell you that there was a second address in El Monte that the family used.

A. No.

Q. Did you know anything about where their grandparents lived.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Have you ever been to a different location in El Monte where that family has lived.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Were you aware of any efforts by the Arvizos to obtain automobiles from other celebrities.

A. No.

Q. Knew nothing about any attempt to obtain an automobile from Michael Jackson.

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were you aware of any other attempts by the Arvizo family to obtain cash from celebrities, other than the fund-raiser you're talking about.

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as vague. Which Arvizo.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll go through them. I’ll rephrase.

Q. Were you ever aware of any attempt by Janet Arvizo to obtain cash money from any celebrity.

A. No.

Q. Were you ever aware of David Arvizo attempting to obtain cash from any celebrity.

A. May I say that I had heard conversation about him having done that. I don’t know if it works in this case. There were some stories that he had approached George Lopez and was -- David, and was fairly persistent about it, raising George’s anger.

Again, this is hearsay. I heard this third-person rumor. But there were conversations around The Laugh Factory that he, in fact, had become a problem with George Lopez.

Q. Were you ever aware of Gavin Arvizo calling Jay Leno on the phone to ask for money.

A. No.

MR. ZONEN: Assumes facts not in evidence; objection.

THE COURT: All right. The answer is in: “No.” And next question.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. Did you ever hear of Janet Arvizo approaching Mr. Leno for money.

MR. ZONEN: Objection; assuming facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Calls for hearsay. Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: To your knowledge, was Janet Arvizo approaching any other comedian and asking for money at the same time that you were making efforts to raise funds for the family.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Were you -- did you have any knowledge of either -- well, let me just go one at a time. Did you have any -- let me rephrase it.

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object to any questions starting with “Do you have knowledge” if there’s no foundation that it’s personal knowledge.

MR. MESEREAU: Well --

MR. ZONEN: Simply hearing something from somebody else is hearsay.

THE COURT: We have to wait till the question is completed. And you can’t object in advance to all questions.

Go ahead.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. Coleman, obviously you were involved in efforts to raise money for the Arvizo family, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And the motivation for your efforts was your belief that the Arvizo family needed money for medical expenses, true.

A. I would say that my understanding was that the Arvizo family needed money, and I -- my involvement wasn’t because of a specific need for medical expenses. It was just that I had been to their home and know that, for whatever reason, they needed money.

Q. But you had mentioned to our investigator, Scott Ross, on one occasion, that it was your belief that you were raising money for medical expenses for Gavin, correct.

A. That may have been part of the conversation. But I think my original desire to be involved with it really wasn’t that specific. I just said, “Yes,” not even needing specific areas where the money would go.

Q. Did you know that the Arvizo family was engaged in any other fund-raising efforts at the time that you were doing this.

A. No.

Q. Did you know of any newspaper ads saying chemotherapy costs $12,000 a session. Do you know anything about that.

A. No.

Q. Okay. And did you ever have a discussion with any of the Arvizos about whether they had insurance coverage that was paying all the medical bills.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Did you know anything about efforts to solicit funds or benefits from Los Angeles police officers.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, I assume you met Star Arvizo, correct.

A. Right.

Q. Davellin Arvizo, right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Obviously Gavin.

A. Yes.

Q. And you met his mother.

A. Yes.

Q. And you met David.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you meet any other people that were related to the Arvizos, to your knowledge.

A. No. No.

Q. And you visited their home on Soto Street in East Los Angeles how many times.

A. Once.

Q. And was the purpose, in your mind, for you to donate something to the Arvizos.

A. It was -- my purpose in it was to teach my children something, which was we’re going to do something for folks who can’t afford to have a really good Christmas like we always have.

And Louise and I -- and I don’t know when the conversation came up -- said that this would be a great way for us to do that, to take care of the Arvizos, that we had become very fond of because of comedy camp, and to do this for my kids. It was just -- it was a spur-of-the-moment thing. That was the only reason.

Q. Now, correct me if I’m wrong, I think you said in response to the prosecutor’s questions that it was your belief David Arvizo was not working, right.

A. Well, I don’t see how he could have been, because he was at the hospital every time and slept overnight in an adjacent bed. So I think we all assumed that he had taken a leave from work or was not -- between jobs or something. No one told me that. It was just sort of what we observed.

Q. And did you know at that time whether or not Janet Arvizo was actually working.

A. I was told that she was, which was why we never saw her at the initial few visits to the hospital.

Q. Okay. You mentioned a blood drive.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Or I think the prosecutor mentioned a blood drive.

Were you part of any effort to put together a blood drive for Gavin.

A. I wasn’t part of putting it together. I made an announcement on television about this benefit, which I’m allowed to do unofficially all the time.

And in the context of that announcement, I mentioned that “We’re also trying to find some blood for this child.” But I wasn’t part of the organizing of the drive, or the location, or the times, or the official carrying out of the event at all.

Q. Were you ever aware of Michael Jackson putting together a blood drive for Gavin.

A. No.

Q. Okay. So you never participated with Michael Jackson --

A. No.

Q. -- in any fund-raising activity --

A. No.

Q. -- or blood-drive activity.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, who told you this family was impoverished.

A. Well, the prerequisite to be in the comedy camp was to be from a needy situation. They had children who were from group homes with disciplinary problems, emotional problems, or people from poverty stricken areas. That was Jamie’s mandate.

So that them just being in attendance at this comedy camp sort of put them in that area.

Q. Now, this would have been before Gavin became ill, correct.

A. Right. That was my first meeting with him, which was the summer of ‘99.

Q. Now, when you first met the Arvizos before Gavin became ill, was it your understanding that David was employed.

A. I didn’t have an opinion about it at that point. I knew nothing about the family’s personal life. I just knew that they were probably in these circumstances because they were there.

Q. And before you -- excuse me. When you first met the Arvizos, again, before Gavin became ill, was it your belief that Janet was unemployed.

A. I -- again, I didn’t have that knowledge. I just --

Q. But your assumption was they must be poor or they wouldn’t be in this program, correct.

A. Absolutely.

Q. And you never had -- made any effort to find out whether they were working or not working, right.

A. No.

Q. Did you know whether or not they were collecting welfare.

A. No.

Q. Did you know whether or not they were collecting disability benefits.

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether or not they were collecting food stamps.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. Were you aware of their being in any other programs for impoverished families.

A. I knew nothing about their personal life at all.

Q. Now, you were active in The Laugh Factory at that point, right.

A. Yes. Uh-huh.

Q. And were you active in organizing this summer camp that you've described.

A. No, I was a guest teacher. Every Saturday they had a different guest. Arsenio Hall and George Lopez and Bob Saget and comedians who worked there regularly would donate eight hours a Saturday. We had one instructor per Saturday, and this happened to be my particular Saturday when I met the Arvizos.

Q. Who did you believe was responsible for deciding who is impoverished and who needs help at The Laugh Factory.

A. The decision was Jamie Masada's. It was his club. It was his program. And I -- I'm assuming that -- well, I shouldn't assume. But I would gather that he worked in conjunction with social service agencies to maybe get these children funneled there. It seemed like there were people from that, from that realm there as well. I'm not certain about that. I'm assuming that.

Q. Do you know whether or not the Arvizos approached Jamie Masada, or Jamie Masada approached the Arvizos for purposes of that summer camp.

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Okay. Now, before Gavin became ill, did you -- were you aware of any efforts at The Laugh Factory to raise money for the Arvizos.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Were you aware of any other efforts anywhere else to raise money for the Arvizos.

A. No.

Q. Okay. And who told you Gavin was ill.

A. I don't remember precisely who it was. It may have been my friend Louise Palanker, who was sort of my liaison with The Laugh Factory on a ongoing basis. It may have been Jamie Masada. Just -- it became knowledge among the comedians down there.

Q. And was it your understanding that Louise Palanker was donating money to the Arvizos.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever learn how much.
A. Yes.
MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as hearsay, unless he was personally present.
THE COURT: As to the question and the answer that were given, the objection is overruled.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
Q. Did you ever personally see Louise Palanker write out checks to the Arvizos.
A. No.
Q. Did she ever tell you how much she had given the Arvizos.
A. Yes.
Q. How much was that.
MR. ZONEN: I'll object as hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And was Louise Palanker encouraging you to give money to the Arvizos.
A. No.
Q. Do you have any knowledge of Chris Tucker giving anything to the Arvizos.
A. Not firsthand knowledge, but it was legend that he had been extremely generous with shoes and cash and those things. But I'm not a friend of Chris's. This was just sort of legend around The Laugh Factory at the time, he had been very generous with them.
Q. Now, was Chris Tucker a regular at The Laugh Factory, as far as you know.
A. Yes. When he was not doing movies, he would appear there periodically.
Q. Would you see him often.
A. No.

Q. Now, at the point in time where you met the Arvizos before Gavin became ill, how often would you see them.

A. Never. As a matter of fact, from the time we made that donation -- not the “donation,” the Christmas gifts, until the time when we were made aware that he was ill. I hadn’t seen them, however long a period of time that was.

Q. And at the fund-raiser, you were present, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And was that on a weekend.

A. No, it was a weekday.

Q. Okay. Was it at night.

A. Yes.

Q. And you saw David Arvizo and Gavin Arvizo there, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And did you see any other Arvizo family members, to your knowledge.

A. I think one or both of the children were there. But I just can’t remember. I was in and out very quickly.

Q. And was this fund-raiser advertised; do you know.

A. Yes.

Q. And where was the advertising taking place.

A. I was the advertisement for at least a portion of it. I mentioned it on our news program, that we were doing this for this family, and -- which I’m allowed to do. And that was my only experience with any advertising concerning this event.

Q. Do you know if any other celebrity was engaged in advertising for this fund-raiser.

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Okay. Did you think you were the only one at that point.

A. I had no opinion about that. I was just sort of reacting to what I could do, and I really didn’t know. It seemed very fast. The idea was borne and a couple of days later we made the announcement, and I wasn’t paying that much attention to the other aspects of it.
Q. Now, The Laugh Factory is on Sunset, not far from Fairfax, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. And The Laugh Factory has signs out front, doesn’t it.
A. Yes.
Q. And The Laugh Factory will typically advertise what’s going on that evening on those signs, right.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall whether or not The Laugh Factory had a big advertisement about this fund-raiser for the Arvizos.
A. I couldn’t answer that. I’m sorry.
Q. But typically that sign does change almost on a daily basis, doesn’t it.
A. Yes.
Q. And because there seemed to be events at that Laugh Factory most evenings, right.
A. Right.
Q. And how long have you known Jamie Masada.
A. Ten years.

Q. Was it your belief that he was really in charge of putting this whole fund-raiser together.
A. Yes.
Q. And when you got there for the fund-raiser, was he there.
MR. ZONEN: “He” being Masada.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes.
THE WITNESS: To my recollection, yes.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you see other celebrities at the fund-raiser.
A. Chris Tucker.
Q. Anyone else.
A. No, because, again, I was sort of threading

a very small needle to come and make my appearance and go back to work to do the eleven o’clock news, so I didn’t stay to see who else was there.

But Chris was there, because I remember him being engaged with Gavin.

Q. Now, was the fund-raiser inside The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes.

Q. And as you walked into The Laugh Factory, did you notice any way money was being contributed.

A. As I mentioned before, as you walked in, they had a table set up to the right, adjacent to what is the normal box office. And I remember David Arvizo being -- either sitting or standing in back of this table. There were several people seated. They were selling tickets, and people could make donations over and above if they chose to.

I didn’t pay any attention to the transactions that were going there. I was just sort of walking through this foyer into the main club.

Q. And when you walked into The Laugh Factory, did you see Gavin anywhere.

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you see Gavin.

A. There’s a balcony area upstairs where comedians waiting to go on can linger, and I was up there with Louise and Gavin and his father and Chris Tucker. Sort of all milling around. We weren’t in one group. But we were all in that area.

Q. To your knowledge, were people being introduced to Gavin.

A. Yes.

Q. And tell the jury how that happened, based on what you saw. I mean, would people be led upstairs to see Gavin.

A. Not necessarily. It was sort of very unofficial and informal. When the people would drift in and out of that little room, people would come up and introduce themselves. They knew who he was. And I really can’t delineate who -- between who he knew and who he didn’t know, to be honest with you. I wasn’t paying that close attention.

Q. Were there photographs of Gavin at the fund-raiser.

A. I think so, yes.

Q. And where did you first see a photograph of him.

A. I can’t recall.

Q. Okay. Do you recall Kobe Bryant being at that fund-raiser.

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see --

A. If he was there -- again, I was only there at the beginning of the evening. He may have later. But I didn’t see him.

Q. Approximately how many people did you see at the fund-raiser.

A. I saw about two-thirds of a roomful of people, which was my point in the evening at the beginning, whatever that turns out, 100, 150 people.

Q. Do you know if any requests were made for cash at that fund-raiser by anybody.

A. I have no recollection of that.

Q. Do you know if people were typically paying by check. Did you see this.

A. No, I didn’t pay any attention to the money transactions at all.

Q. Do you know if Jamie Masada was getting any portion of the money that was raised.

A. I have no idea.

Q. Did you ever discuss that with him.

A. No.

Q. And I think you said that you have no idea how much was raised, correct.

A. No. The conversation after it was over was, a couple of thousand dollars. We did pretty well. It was a couple of thousand dollars. It was really just to raise awareness about Gavin’s condition. It wasn’t a dollar amount that we were heading for.

Q. Did the fund-raiser last a couple of hours.

A. Typically those events do. 8:00 to 10:00, 8:00 to 10:30.

Q. How did you learn a couple thousand dollars was raised.

A. Just in conversation afterward. “How did we do.” Well, a couple thousand dollars. It wasn’t bad. It wasn’t a lot of money.

It was very unofficial and just a matter-of-fact conversation about it.

Q. And are there often fund-raisers at The Laugh Factory --

A. Yes.

Q. -- that you’re involved in.

A. Yes.

Q. Was this any different than others you’ve seen.

A. No. Jamie is very good about doing various things for the underprivileged or homeless during the holiday, feeding groups of people. He’s great about that. There’s things like that happening all the time down there.

Q. Do you have any knowledge how the Arvizos arrived for that fund-raiser.

A. No.

Q. Or who drove them or what car they used.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Did you ever see the Arvizos after that fund-raiser.

A. Well, let me see. I can’t remember if -- no, I think that was after Gavin was out of the hospital, after it went into remission the first time, and then I didn’t visit with him.

I wasn’t -- I wasn’t connected to the family much for his second visits when it got really bad again, so, no, I didn’t.

Q. You did visit the hospital a number of times to see Gavin, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you did, on one of your visits, see a huge gift package from Michael Jackson, right.

A. Yes, that was my final visit.
Q. Please describe what that basket looked like, if you can.
A. It looked like a huge box that had a number of gifts in it. I didn’t look really closely at it. But I remember Gavin beaming that it was a gift from Michael. I said, “Wow, that’s phenomenal.”

Q. So Gavin told you it came from Michael Jackson.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever discuss Michael Jackson’s gift basket with any other member of the family.
A. No.
Q. You saw that gift basket obviously before your family made a trip to Soto Street to what was described as the Arvizo residence, right.
A. No, the Christmas gift-giving from me was before Gavin even got sick.
Q. Okay.
A. That was my second encounter with him. That was the Christmas after I had met them at comedy camp. Gavin got sick after that point.
Q. Now, was it your understanding when you visited Soto Street before Gavin was ill that you were trying to contribute to an impoverished family.
A. Right.
Q. And at that point in time, how did you determine they were impoverished.
A. Well, they had to be impoverished to be in this comedy camp.
Q. Was that your only criterion.
A. That was my only criterion. And then after I met the children. And I remember having a conversation during the day when I was instructing that the children had to take three or four different bus routes to get to the comedy camp that day with their mom.
And so it just touched my heart, so we wanted to do something. I mean, I didn’t investigate whether they were truly impoverished or not. I just had a good feeling about them. I thought they were wonderful children and wanted to do this for my kids, and so that was it.

Q. When you first met the Arvizos, you met Janet, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And where did you meet Janet.

A. She came to pick them up at the end of this comedy class.

Q. Okay. So that was at The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes.

Q. How many times have you seen Janet at The Laugh Factory, if you know.

A. That was the only time I saw her at The Laugh Factory.

Q. Okay. Okay. And typically would you see the father with the children at The Laugh Factory, when you saw them.

A. I only saw the family gathered once at The Laugh Factory, and that was the fund-raiser. And that night David and Gavin were there, and either one or both of the siblings. I can’t remember which.

Q. And I think you described this, but I’m not too sure of the details. When you first went to the Soto address --

A. Yes.

Q. -- with your children --

A. Yes.

Q. -- before you ever heard Gavin was ill --

A. Right.

Q. -- were you there to contribute.

A. I was there to give them these gifts that we had bought to try to make their Christmas. That was it.

Q. Did someone tell you they can’t afford gifts for Christmas.

A. No.

Q. You just assumed that because they were in that summer program.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Can I ask you what you brought them.

A. We brought, I would say, $300 to $350 worth of gifts. We brought an Nintendo game, and some DVDs and some other games. All from Best Buy. I can’t remember precisely what it was.

Q. When you say “we,” is that you and Louise Palanker.

A. Louise Palanker, right.

Q. Did anyone else provide gifts, to your knowledge.

A. Not on this occasion.

Q. Did you ever give them any gifts after that.

A. No.

Q. Okay. So between -- the first time you gave any of the Arvizos was the family visit, and you did nothing by way of fund-raising until the fund-raiser at The Laugh Factory.

A. Exactly.

Q. Okay. And how much time elapsed in between, if you know.

A. I can’t be sure. It seems like, as I mentioned before, six months to a year. It just seems like it. It’s fuzzy.

Q. Mr. Coleman, do you know who asked you to advertise the fund-raiser on the air.

A. Nobody asked me to do it. I’ve done it for previous events like that. And I volunteered it immediately upon learning what they wanted to do. Nobody had to ask me for it.

Q. Okay. And after your family visited the Soto address, did you maintain constant contact with the Arvizos.

A. No. They -- they would write cards of thank you, and call me at work and say they appreciated it, but they -- contact sort of dropped off a little bit after that. We all went our separate ways.

Q. Okay. Would you see them from time to time at The Laugh Factory.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Was it your understanding they kept involved with Mr. Masada at The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that understanding based on.

A. I have no specific understanding about it. I know that he’s sort of -- considers himself a mentor to many of those children, and went out of his way to maintain a contact with them, sort of unofficially.

Q. And when did you last talk to Janet Arvizo.

A. The last time I spoke to her was the last day I went to visit Gavin in the hospital, when she had walked in late. And that was my first time I had seen her visit her son in the hospital. And that was it.

Q. Now, you say you often saw David there and not Janet. And how many times did you visit Gavin at the hospital.

A. I’m saying between three and five. I can’t be more specific, I’m sorry. But every time I was there, David was there. And I’m sure we had discussed the fact that he was not working and he was staying overnight in the bed adjacent to his son.

Q. What was your understanding that Janet was working based upon. Was it just supposition.

A. I can’t name anything specific, but I think 2500 I might have discussed it with my friend Louise that, “Wow, she’s having to work for both of them during this period of time.” I -- it’s just a feeling I had. I didn’t have any specific information about it. If I’m not mistaken, she was working -- if my memory serves me right, she was working as a waitress at the time.

Q. Do you recall receiving any cards from the Arvizos.

A. I think I did. I think I received a thank you note after the Christmas gifts were given.

Q. Do you recall what kind of words were on that thank you note.

A. No. Nothing dramatic. Just --

Q. Okay.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Counsel.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Coleman, the thank you note that you received, was there anything inappropriate written on it.

A. No.

Q. Was there anything that caused you to sit back and be concerned.

A. No.

Q. All right. When you went out to the house in East Los Angeles -- and I say “house.” It was actually a studio apartment; is that right.

A. Right.

Q. Was there anything that you saw in this apartment that caused you to question whether or not they really were a family in need.

A. No.

Q. All right. And you said that the room was divided up. Explain how it was divided up for us.

A. It seemed like they partitioned off a portion of it with a sheet. A sheet had been hung. I don’t know if it was to separate children’s living areas. I didn’t want to take a tour of it. I didn’t want to make them uncomfortable with showing me what they did or didn’t have in their life. So it seemed to me they had various areas partitioned off with a sheet hanging with a cord across to sort of divide a room that wasn’t otherwise divided. That was my initial impression.

Q. All right. And were there beds or anything that looked like beds that you were able to see from your vantage point.

A. I don’t remember.

Q. All right. The fund-raiser, as Mr. Mesereau refers to, the event that took place at The Laugh Factory, was that the only event that you were aware of that was done for Gavin.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a fund-raiser or was it for blood donations.

A. It was both. It was both. It was to bring people down to The Laugh Factory, and to raise awareness about him needing a specific blood type.

Q. They weren’t taking blood at that time.

A. No, it was just to -- if people were interested, they could contact The Laugh Factory or -- I wasn’t sure if we had asked them to contact the specific number at Kaiser or what. But it was a very unofficial -- just sort of a consciousness raising announcement more than a specific thing.

Q. Mr. Coleman, I have one last question. Are we expecting rain this weekend.

A. Well, you know, I should be back there trying to figure that out right now.

Q. Thank you. I have no further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

Call your next witness.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Our next witness is Kiki Solveig Fournier.

THE COURT: Come to the front of the courtroom, please.

When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

KIKI FOURNIER

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Kiki Fournier. It’s K-i-k-i F-o-u-r-n-i-e-r.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Ms. Fournier.

A. Good morning.

Q. Have you in the past worked for Michael Jackson at Neverland Ranch.

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do. How were you employed at Neverland Ranch.

A. I was a housekeeper.

Q. Can you tell me the time frame that you worked for Mr. Jackson.

A. I started in September of ‘91, and worked off and on till September 28th, 2003.

Q. Okay. When you say -- yeah, you have to speak directly into that microphone so we can hear you.

A. Okay.

Q. When you say “off and on,” can you give me a little more specific description of what that means.

A. Well, I worked a couple years, and then I would take some time off. I had a child back in 1993 also, so -- and then I would take a couple of years off, and then I would go back for a couple of years.

Q. And you said you left ultimately in September of 2003.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you leave of your own accord.

A. Yes.

Q. At any time have you ever been terminated as an employee from Neverland Ranch.

A. No.

Q. Please describe your duties as a housekeeper at Neverland.

A. Cleaning the main residence, cleaning the guest quarters, cleaning the theater.

Q. Would you have interaction with guests of the ranch.

A. Yes.

Q. And would you do anything other than just cleaning.

A. Serve food sometimes.

Q. Did you have a particular shift that you worked.

A. Well, it varied. It depended on who wanted to work during the day -- excuse me -- and who wanted to work at night. So I would sometimes more frequently work the nights.

Q. And describe for me what time frame we’re talking about. What does the night shift consist of.

A. Basically it was, you know, catching up on laundry and, you know, taking care of the guests, serving them dinner. Getting them anything that they needed.

Q. But as far as the time frame, from what hours. What would your hours be for the night shift.

A. It depended. It just depended on if there was guests or if anybody was at the house.

Q. So you would finish up work at a different hour depending on the night.

A. Depending on what the demands were during the day.

Q. What time would you normally report for work as a night-shift housekeeper.

A. It all varied, but usually we tried to make it so that who came in later would work later.

Q. Did you ask not to have to testify in this case.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And why is that.

A. I don’t want --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Goes to her credibility, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I can answer.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes, you can answer.

A. I don’t want to have anything to do with this. I just don’t like being the center of attention either.

Q. All right. As an employee of Neverland, who was in charge at Neverland Ranch.

A. Mr. Jackson.

Q. Were there certain administrators who were in charge of various functions, various functions concerning the operations at the ranch.

A. Yes.

Q. Who were the main administrators.

A. Joe Marcus was the ranch manager when I was there. And Jesus Salas was the house manager. And Violet Silva is the security, head of security.

Q. Okay. Were those three managers working during the time period of 2002 to 2003.

A. Yes.

Q. And did they have those assignments as managers during that period of time.

A. Yes.

Q. What was -- do you know what Joe Marcus’s job was as ranch manager.

A. I -- oversee all the departments.

Q. Okay. So would he oversee Violet Silva.

A. Yes.

Q. And Jesus Salas, who was the house manager.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you observe his relationship with the defendant, Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes.

Q. Could you characterize that for me, please.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I can be more specific.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You said you observed the relationship with Mr. Jackson. How often would you see them interacting in the course of your duties as a housekeeper.

A. Well, not that often. I wasn’t familiar when they were on the phone or when they would meet in person, but I do know that they would -- they would meet and they would speak to each other.

Q. Okay. And were you present during any of those conversations when they were interacting.

A. I probably was, but I don’t really remember.

Q. Okay. Do you know if Mr. Jackson would give Mr. Marcus directives.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did you yourself have interaction with Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes.

Q. How often.

A. It depended on when he was there.

Q. Okay. How often -- can you characterize how often he was there.

A. As a percentagewise.

Q. Yeah. And let’s focus on the time period between 2002 through the time that you left in 2003.

A. He was there a lot in the beginning of 2003.

Q. Okay. So my question was -- where we started here was, did you interact with Mr. Jackson personally.

A. Yes.

Q. In what fashion. How would that come about.

A. I would serve him his foods. I would clean his house. I would answer the phones.

Q. And what was the level of service that was provided to Mr. Jackson at Neverland Ranch by his employees.

A. We always tried to provide him with the best of service.

Q. If Mr. Jackson wanted something a certain way, would there be any hesitation to tell you or let you know exactly what he wanted.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you want the question read back.

THE WITNESS: Yes, please.

THE COURT: Okay.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: He wouldn’t always tell us directly. He might tell Joe or he might tell Jesus, and sometimes he would tell us.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: But it would be communicated to you.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever seen the defendant, Mr. Jackson, fire anybody, been present.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; 352.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, it’s offered to show the defendant’s level of influence over his own employees.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll limit it to a “yes” or “no” answer.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Did you ever see him fire any of his employees.

A. I never saw him personally fire somebody.

Q. Okay. Were his employees generally aware that Mr. Jackson could fire them.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; speculation; vague; relevance; no foundation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mr. Jackson was the employer of these people.

THE COURT: Well, you may have a couple more reasons.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: I’ll sustain the hearsay objection.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Were you aware that you could be terminated at any given moment.

A. Yes.

Q. Were you aware of anybody that had been fired -- was anybody fired at Neverland while you were there.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; 352; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer. “Yes” or “no.”

THE WITNESS: Sorry, what was the question again.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Were you aware of anybody who ever got fired at Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who fired them. Who was the person responsible for their termination.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Just answer that question “yes” or “no.”

Which answers your objection.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I was aware that he had fired people, Mr. Jackson. And --

THE COURT: Just a moment. I just wanted a “yes” or “no” answer to that.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry.

THE COURT: So the answer is “Yes.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: When you were around Mr. Jackson in his presence, can you characterize his level of attention to the details of the service that -- the services that were provided to him.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I think she’s qualified to answer that question.

THE COURT: I’m going to allow you to answer. Would you like it reread.

THE WITNESS: Yes, please.

THE COURT: Okay.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Mr. Jackson is a very detail-oriented person, so he did like to have his service the way he wanted it.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you ever observe Mr. Jackson to have overnight visitors at the ranch.

A. Yes.

Q. How often would that be provided. How often would he have overnight guests.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague and foundation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll be more specific.

Q. During the period of 2002 to 2003.

A. Yes. He had overnight guests.

Q. How often would he have overnight guests during that time frame.

A. I can’t say exactly dates, but there was a lot of guests during that time. There was people there.

Q. Would you provide services to those guests.

A. Yes.

Q. And can you characterize the level of service that you provided the guests of Mr. Jackson.

A. Again, we always tried to provide the best service, so we always tried to be detail oriented in doing our work.

Q. Was Frank Tyson a guest at Neverland Ranch during that time frame.

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Who is Frank -- is Frank Tyson -- well, let me back up.

Were you around Mr. Jackson when he was in the presence of Mr. Tyson.

A. Yes.

Q. And when was the first time that you’re -- you became aware that Mr. Tyson was a guest at Neverland Ranch.

A. That would have been when he was rather young. Sometime around, I would say, 1991. I would guess, but I can’t say for 100 percent sure. But he was still young.

Q. And can you characterize the nature of the relationship between Mr. Tyson and Mr. Jackson, based upon your personal observations.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: They were close friends, it would appear.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know if Mr. Tyson ever worked for Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes, I believe he did.

Q. Do you know what his assignment was, or his title.

A. I remember hearing something about an assistant, or something like that. But I never knew for sure what his title was.

Q. Why do you say that they had a close relationship. What do you base that upon.

A. They were just together when they were at the ranch and they would talk a lot. And there was a lot of communication between them it seemed.

Q. Okay. And how often was Mr. Tyson at the ranch, if you could characterize, during that period of -- let's go back ten years to when you first started.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Go ahead. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: How often was he there.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yeah. You worked for Mr. Jackson for over ten years, correct.

A. Off and on, yes.

Q. And you just told us that you were aware of Mr. Tyson visiting the ranch sometime around the beginning of your employment there, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. So over that time span, can you give us an idea of how much time these two people would spend together at Neverland Ranch that you saw.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection.

THE COURT: Just --

MR. MESEREAU: I jumped the gun. Excuse me, Your Honor. Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you see Frank Tyson and Michael Jackson together at Neverland Ranch.
A. Yes.
Q. Over that ten-year period, which you previously stated that Mr. Tyson was -- began and was a guest of the ranch when you left, how often did you see them together.
A. When Frank was at the ranch, they would be together often.

Q. And how often was he a visitor at the ranch.
A. He could not be there for six months and then he could show up for a month, or -- you know, as an example. And -- or he could not be there for weeks, and then just come for a couple of days, and --
Q. Okay. Now, in the period of 2000 -- early 2003, did Mr. Tyson visit the ranch.
A. Yes, I believe he did.
Q. Do you know if that was one of these month-long periods, or a couple of day periods, or something in between.
A. I think he stayed for a while.
THE COURT: Counsel, we'll take our break.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you.
(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Go ahead.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you.
Q. Miss Fournier, do you know an individual by the name of Vinnie Amen.
BAILIFF CORTEZ: Get closer.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Vinnie Amen, do you know that name.
A. Yes.
Q. How do you know that name.
A. He worked out at the ranch with Frank.
Q. All right. Do you know what time period that was.
A. It was during the beginning of 2003.
Q. You say he worked with Frank. Do you mean Frank Tyson.
A. Yes.
Q. And do you know -- what do you mean by “worked with Frank Tyson”.

A. I don’t know what his title was. But I know that he worked with Frank.

Q. And was Frank working at that time.

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. And what was Frank doing at that time, as far as you know.

A. What Frank did.

Q. I mean, who was Frank working for.

A. Mr. Jackson.

Q. Do you know an individual by the name of Dieter Weizner.

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know that name.

A. He also worked for Mr. Jackson.

Q. Did he ever visit the ranch.

A. Yes.

Q. During that same time frame, end of 2002, the beginning of 2003, did Mr. Weizner visit there, the ranch.

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Do you know what his title was or what he did for Mr. Jackson.

A. I think he was a business associate of some kind.

Q. Do you know how often -- can you give me an example of the frequency of visits Mr. Weizner would have in relationship to that time frame period, and I want to focus -- in these next few questions, I’m going to focus on the time frame between the end of 2002 and the first three months, say, March, April of 2003.

A. Okay.

Q. During that time frame, can you give me an idea of the frequency of visits Mr. Weizner would pay upon Mr. Jackson at the ranch.

A. If my memory serves me correct, I would say that he was there quite a bit.

Q. All right. Ronald Konitzer. Do you know that name.

A. Yes.
Q. And how do you know that name.
A. He was also, as far as I knew, a business associate of Mr. Jackson's.
Q. During that same time frame, frequency of visits at the ranch.
A. Not as much as Dieter.
Q. Okay. And Frederic -- well, Marc Schaffel, Schaffel --
A. Yes.
Q. -- do you know that name.
A. Yes.
Q. And how do you know that name.
A. He was a guest at the ranch --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You may answer.
A. He was a guest at the ranch. And he was also -- I remember working on some sort of a birthday party, or something like that, for Mr. Jackson.
Q. He was working for Mr. Jackson in some capacity for a birthday party.
A. Yeah, there was some big party at the ranch around Mr. Jackson's birthday in August. And --
Q. August of which year.

A. 2003. So I know that he worked for him then, too, as far as I knew.
Q. Do you know what his title was or what his duties were with regards to this party.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague, and foundation, and assumes facts not in evidence.
THE COURT: The question should be answered only "yes" or "no." I'll have it reread to you.
(Record read.)
THE COURT: "Yes" or "no."
THE WITNESS: I think so. So, yes.
THE COURT: She said, "I think so." That's acceptable, too.

THE WITNESS: Sorry.

THE COURT: But the reason I sustained that is that that’s part of the foundation. I’m really sustaining a foundation objection ultimately.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Very well. Thank you.

Q. You said, “Yes.” What do you base that upon, that answer upon.

A. Because I know that he was coordinating somehow on handing out checks for this birthday party that had gone on.

Q. Were you a witness to that.

A. Yes.

Q. And were you a witness to Mr. Schaffel giving any orders or instructions concerning this particular party.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Foundational.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. And did -- were you informed -- did you ever have any interaction with Mr. Schaffel --

A. Yes.

Q. -- concerning this party.

A. Well, not concerning the party. I mean, I was there with him. He gave me a ride on a golf cart one time when he was handing out checks. Actually, it was right after the party. The day after, I believe it was.

Q. All right. Were you there when this party occurred.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me about it, the type -- what type of party was it.

A. Um --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: There was a deejay there. And they had set up -- there was tents on the property, too, with artwork in them. And it was just a big birthday party. I mean, there was also cake there for Mr. Jackson. And he had some guests there, and --

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know what the artwork had to do with the party.

A. I’m not exactly sure.

Q. Do you know if -- if this party had any -- if it cost money to attend this party. Do you know that. Yes or no.

A. Yes, I think it did.

Q. And can you characterize the party in terms of its scale. Was it big. Maybe why don’t we begin with about how many people attended this party, if you can estimate.

A. 800, a thousand. I don’t know.

Q. All right.

A. I can’t say for sure.

Q. Would children be among the overnight guests at Neverland while you were working there.

A. Yes.

Q. How often.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And based upon your own personal experience, in other words, what you observed, can you characterize how often children would be overnight guests at Neverland during your employment there.

A. Let me just answer by explaining that there would be times when there would be nobody there, and then when Mr. Jackson would come home he would have guests with him, so they could stay a couple of days, weeks, or maybe even a month.

Q. Okay. Let me refine that a little bit.

During the time that you worked at Neverland and during the time that Mr. Jackson was on the property, how often would children be overnight guests at Neverland.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Under both grounds or --

THE COURT: The last ground.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE COURT: Assumes facts not in evidence.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Were children ever overnight guests at Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. I’m going to repeat my last question. How often were they guests at Neverland when Mr. Jackson was on the property.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You may answer.

A. I would say quite a bit.

Q. Would the children who were spending the night at Neverland have their parents with them when they’d visit or spend the night.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague, and foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained on foundation.

Q. Were you a witness as to whether or not these children came with their parents or were without their parents.

A. Sometimes they came with their parents and --

Q. That’s a yes-or-no question first. We have to do this in order.

A. Yes.

Q. You were a witness, true.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have personal knowledge as to whether or not the children’s parents were with them when they visited Neverland.

MR. MESEREAU: Vague as to time.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: During your period of employment.

A. Yes.

Q. You do, okay.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And going back to my last question, can you tell us how often children would be overnight guests at Neverland without their parents.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation and vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: They were there quite a bit without their parents.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: How are children treated at Neverland.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Like any child wants to be treated.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And what do you mean by that.

A. Well, like you could watch movies. You could watch videos, play video games. Eat whatever you want to eat. Candy. Stay up as late as you want. Ride amusement rides, so --

Q. Okay. Are there rules.

A. Not really.

Q. Is there discipline.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague, and foundation.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Are the children disciplined, is the question.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Well, I mean, there’s the employees who would frequently interfere with their fun sometimes and tell them it was enough. But, I mean, as far as parents go, no.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would Mr. Jackson, based upon your personal experience, discipline the children.
A. Sometimes, yes.
Q. Okay. Tell me about it.
A. Like if they got too rowdy at the dinner table, and sometimes I want to say practically have a food fight or something, but he would tell them to behave, kind of stuff like that, and tell them -- you know, if they would get into candy-throwing fights in the theater, and, you know, he was upset about that, and he would, you know, tell them to stop it, or, you know.
Q. Did he himself ever engage in that type of conduct.
A. I never saw that in the theater with Mr. Jackson.
Q. All right. In terms of the limits that Mr. Jackson would set upon these children --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; vague; relevance.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I haven't finished the question.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. The question is, in terms of -- you've talked about that there were times when Mr. Jackson would say "enough."
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Can you characterize, in terms of the whole latitude Mr. Jackson would give these children in terms of their behavior.
MR. MESEREAU: Vague as to time.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: During your period of employment. Do you understand the question.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Can you characterize that.
THE COURT: Well, there's -- I'll overrule the objection. But what's happened is you've kind of spread the question out. So would you rephrase it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.

Q. My question is, we’ve -- you’ve talked about Mr. Jackson stepping in when he felt that things have gone too far with the children’s behavior in terms of discipline, this type of thing.

My question is, can you characterize the type of -- the degree of latitude that he would give children who were guests on the ranch in terms of when he would step in, when discipline, when authority would be provided for these children.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Compound and vague.

THE COURT: It’s compound. Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll strike “authority” from the question. So, same question. When would he step in and discipline these children, in terms of scope. How far would he let them go.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection. Compound --

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Sometimes they would get pretty rowdy. And he would -- more frequently than not, they would be much more rowdy, you know, and he did let them have, you know, a free hand, so to say, that they could get pretty rambunctious sometimes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would children have extended stay -- would some of these overnight children have extended stays at Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. And what do you mean by -- or what do you consider to be an extended stay.

A. During the school year, or time when school was on, a couple of weeks.

Q. What are the sleeping arrangements for the children. And I’ll be specific. Let’s talk about in the years -- let’s go back to the year -- the time frame of 2002, 2003.

A. The guests that were there at that time.

Q. Yes. The children guests.

A. They had -- the Arvizo children, they had their own units, but --

Q. I’m speaking generally now. And I will ask you about the Arvizos in just a moment. But generally with the children, what are the sleeping arrangements for the children who spend the night at Neverland.

A. Well, usually they had get assigned someplace to asleep, but a lot of times they would stay with Mr. Jackson.

Q. Okay. Now, as far as the assigning of someplace to sleep, tell me about that. How does that work.

A. Well, typically when the guests came, they would get their own room. And the children would -- you know, it depends on if their parents were there or not, and they would get their room.

Q. So they’d get a room assigned to them.

A. Yes.

Q. Would the children who were assigned to a given room always end up sleeping in that room.

A. No.

Q. What do you base that upon.

A. Well, the beds weren’t slept in when we went to go clean the room, so nobody had been there to stay the night, or appeared to be that way.

Q. All right. As far as these extended guests who were children at the ranch, Mr. Jackson’s guests, did you ever notice a behavioral change in these children during the time they were at the ranch.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague; foundation; leading.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: This is a foundational question.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: When you were at the ranch, did you spend time serving the children who were guests there.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you spend time interacting with these children.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have an opportunity to -- to observe their behavior.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to the children.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see them playing with Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And based upon everything you observed during those -- under those circumstances, where you were interacting and watching these children, were you able to determine whether or not their behavior changed during that time that they were at the ranch.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague; foundation; opinion.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s a proper --

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. You may answer.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You may answer the question.

A. Yes, and some -- their behavior did change. It seems as if the more free rein they got to do what -- you know, to play, they became very, very wild and in some ways destructive.

Q. Was this uncommon.

A. No.

Q. Did you see this behavior change -- you mentioned Gavin and Star Arvizo.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Gavin and Star Arvizo.

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know them.

A. When I was working at Neverland.

Q. Okay. Were they guests of Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you observe that behavior change in Gavin and Star while they were at Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. Tell me about it.

A. Gavin was always really polite with me, and it just -- I was surprised when I went to go clean his room sometimes that he -- he shared with his brother Star, that it was just -- I mean, it was a mess. It was a mess. And just -- for whatever reason, it was a mess.

Q. Okay. And was -- was this something that changed during the time that they were at Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, their room, the room that you had to clean up.

A. Yes, because in the beginning it wasn’t like that.

Q. Did some of these children return as guests on more than one occasion.

A. Yes.

Q. During your employment -- going back to the big time frame, during your employment at Neverland, did you ever observe Mr. Jackson to form a special -- any especially close relationships with these children.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you characterize whether or not he focused his attention on these children that he formed these relationships with to the exclusion of other children present.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague; leading; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you want the question read back.

THE WITNESS: Yes, please.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I can simplify the question, I think, Your Honor. I’ll rephrase it.

Q. Did he pick some kids over other kids to spend his time with and focus his attentions on.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember any of their names.

A. Um --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague as to time.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Over your ten-year period.

A. Yes, I --

MR. MESEREAU: Relevance; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: He had -- some of his buddies were like Brett Barnes. Little Michael.

MR. MESEREAU: I'm going to object based on the Court's ruling on 1108.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I can go to sidebar on this, Your Honor. We're not going any further than this.

THE COURT: I'll hold you to that.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Okay. Go ahead.

A. Little Michael. His name was Omar. Frank Cascio. Aldo Cascio. I think Dominick. I get the two confused.

Q. Is Dominick a Cascio as well.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that one of Frank's brothers.

A. Yes.

Q. Is Aldo one of Frank's brothers.

A. Yes.

Q. Any other names.

A. Like Gavin was another person that he really took in. Macaulay Culkin. I can't really think of anybody else right now.

Q. Do you know an individual by the name of Jimmy Safechuck.

A. Yes.

Q. Was he one of them.

A. Yes.

Q. How about Jordie Chandler.

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I'm going to object. The Court's ruling on 1108.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: Move to strike.

THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: How about a child named Elijah.

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: I'd like to make a motion, Your Honor.

THE COURT: We'll take it up later.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And were there any boys from Los Olivos, local boys, who he formed a special bond with.

A. Yes.

Q. All right.

A. Not quite as much as the other children, though. I mean, it just seemed like they weren't as close.

Q. All right. Did these individuals that you've named share anything in common.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Vague; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did -- these individuals that you named, were they of a similar age.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. 1108; vague; and leading.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I can go through them and ask what the ages of each one were, if you'd like, approximately.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. We'll do this serially.

Q. Can you tell me -- during the time that Mr. Jackson had this special relationship with Mr. Jimmy

Safechuck, can you tell me about what Jimmy

Safechuck's age was.

MR. MESEREAU: Leading; compound; violates the Court's ruling on 1108. I'd like to make a motion.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. MESEREAU: And misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: It's overruled, too. The first question has to be whether or not she knows the age.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE COURT: If that's -- that's the first question I want you to ask.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: And then if she can answer that "yes," you can ask the next question.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Jimmy Safechuck. Do you know or do you believe you could characterize -- first of all, let me -- do you know what his age was during the period of time that he was a close friend of Mr. Jackson.

A. No.

Q. Could you characterize -- approximate his age based upon his appearance.

A. Ten to 13, 14 years old.

Q. Okay. What about -- same question for Mr. Robison. Did you know his age.

A. No.

Q. Could you characterize it based upon your observations.

A. About the same age.

Q. Omar Bhatti, or Omar, the guy -- you said Omar. What about him, did you know his age.

A. I think he was 14 when I left, but I'm not sure. 14 or 15.

Q. Okay. And how long had he known Mr. Jackson or were you aware of their relationship prior to the time that you left.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I can -- I can follow that up. I'll strike that last question, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: When was the first time that you met Mr. Bhatti. I’m sorry, I’m using -- Mr. Bhatti, Omar, the 14-year-old you knew as “Omar.”

A. I think 1998.
Q. Okay. And if -- and he was about 14 in ‘93 (sic).
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Was that what you’re saying.
A. Yes, something -- 14 or 15.
Q. All right. Frank Cascio. I think you said that -- how old -- did you know how old Frank Cascio was when you left in ‘93 (sic).
A. I think he was 22 or 23.
Q. Okay. And you previously testified you first met him in 1991, I think; is that correct.
A. Yeah, I think it was ‘91.
Q. Aldo Cascio, can you characterize -- do you know how old he was when you left the ranch in ‘93 (sic).
A. In 2003.
Q. I’m sorry, ‘93. I’m saying “’93.” 2003. That’s what I mean.
A. I think he was 12.
Q. All right. What do you base that upon.
A. You kind of get to know the kids a little bit, and I think he was about that age. Somewhere right around there.
Q. Okay. McCaulay Culkin. Do you know how old he was during the period of time that he was a close friend of Mr. Jackson or formed --
A. No, I really don’t.
Q. Okay. Can you characterize it, based upon your observations.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Asked and answered. No foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: I don’t know. Ten, 12, 13 years old.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Brett Barnes. Do you know how old he was during the time that he was a close friend --

A. No.

Q. -- of Mr. Jackson.

And same question, follow-up question. Can you characterize his approximate age.

A. About the same age.

Q. 11 to 13.

A. Yeah.

Q. Elijah, do you know how old he was when he had a special or a close friendship with Mr. Jackson.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I’m going to object to the characterization. Misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did -- based upon your observations, did the individual you named as Elijah have a relationship with Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes.

Q. And how would you characterize it.

A. Close friendship.

Q. Okay. And during the time that he -- this individual named Elijah was a close friend, shared a close friendship with Mr. Jackson, do you know how old he was.

A. Well, I think Elijah is also a relative.

Q. Okay. Is he someone who lives locally.

A. Yeah. Not too far from here.

Q. As far as you know.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And do you know how old he is today.

A. No.

Q. Do you know how old -- so does Elijah continue to visit the ranch.

A. When I left in September he did.

Q. And can you characterize, based upon your observations, of his approximate age.

A. When he started coming there.

Q. No, when you left the ranch.

A. I think he was over 18.
Q. How about when he started there -- when you started there.
A. He was -- he was pretty young, so I would say around eight years old.
Q. He was about eight when you first saw him come to the ranch.
A. Yeah.
Q. And you mentioned some local boys from Los Olivos. We didn’t talk about how many of them there were. Do you know -- how many boys are you talking about when you say “local boys from Los Olivos”.
A. Four or five.
Q. Were they of different ages or similar ages.
A. I think they were all in the eighth or ninth grade.
Q. Okay.
A. Maybe even the seventh grade. I’m not too sure.

Q. During your time as an employee for Mr. Jackson, did you ever observe him to drink alcohol.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you observe him drinking alcohol during the time period that we’ve talked about, from 2002 through 2003 when you left.
A. I think so, but I can’t say for 100 percent certain. I didn’t pay attention.
Q. Okay. Do you know what his alcoholic beverages of choice were.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence; no foundation; leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I can lay some foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you ever observe -- you said you observed him drinking alcohol.
A. Yes.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It depends on the time frame. She didn’t say she remembers him drinking during the time frame you gave. So if we’re assuming your question’s continuing the time frame --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Very well.
THE COURT: I’ll sustain the objection.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I understand.
Q. Based upon your experiences during the entire time frame you were an employee of the ranch - okay. --

A. Okay.
Q. -- you said that you observed Mr. Jackson drinking alcohol.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you know what his -- what type of alcohol he would drink.
A. Wine.
Q. Okay. Anything else.
A. Sometimes he had vodka.
Q. All right. During your entire employment at Neverland Ranch, have you ever observed children to appear to be intoxicated.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s a fair question.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: On approximately how many occasions.
A. I can’t say for sure how many times, but I’ve seen it a couple times.
Q. Okay. Have you seen children to be intoxicated in the presence of Michael Jackson.
MR. MESEREAU: Objecting; leading.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.

THE WITNESS: They were acting different. I don’t know if they were intoxicated.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did they appear to be intoxicated to you.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Asked and answered; sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

Q. Have you told detectives in this case that you observed children to be intoxicated in the presence of Mr. Jackson.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s impeachment.

Q. Go ahead. You may answer.

A. I believe they were intoxicated, yes.

Q. And is that your belief, your true belief, that these children were, in fact, intoxicated.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Asked and answered; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You said it happened; you couldn’t characterize exactly how many times. Was it more than two. More than three. Can you help me out with a little more specifics.

A. Three to four times.

Q. Okay. Do you remember -- do you remember any specific instances.

A. One time when I was serving them dinner, they appeared to be intoxicated.

Q. All right. What -- what time frame are we talking about.

A. This would be in September, about, of 2003.

Q. How many children were at the dinner table.

A. Four or five.

Q. Was Mr. Jackson at the dinner table.

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any adults at the dinner table.

A. No.

Q. And of the four or five children, how many of them appeared to be intoxicated.

A. At least three of them.

Q. Do you know where those children were immediately before dinner.

A. I think they were at the ranch house.

Q. And what do you base that upon.

A. Because you kind of can keep tabs about where everybody’s at, because you have certain duties you have to do, like clean the rooms when the guests are out and about, so you kind of keep tabs, you know, if they’re in the amusement park or the theater, so --

Q. Do you know if Mr. Jackson was at the ranch house with them.

A. I don’t know that, but I think so.

MR. MESEREAU: Move to strike, Your Honor. Speculation.

THE COURT: It’s stricken. The jury’s admonished to disregard that.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Let’s talk about -- do you remember another event where you saw children that appeared to be intoxicated.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s fresh in your mind, other than the one we just spoke about.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Sitting here right now, I can’t remember exactly an incident.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Have you ever heard the term “Pinocchio’s Pleasure Island”.

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled. She said “Yes.” Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Where did that term come from.

A. The story of Pinocchio.

Q. But, I mean, the phrase “Pinocchio’s Pleasure Island,” where did that come from.

A. I believe I said that.

Q. And what did you say that in reference to.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; 352; foundation; leading. Move to strike. And opinion.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: With the absence of an authority figure, these children became wild. And without their parents there, it became like Pinocchio's Pleasure Island sometimes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Neverland did.

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, I'm sorry. There is one question that I forgot to ask this witness, if I may reopen just briefly.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: During the period of time that you were at Neverland, at the end of 2002 -- you came back to work at the end of 2002.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember the month.

A. December.

Q. Okay. Do you know, during that time, from December of 2002 until you left in 2003 -- and I believe it was September --

A. Yes.

Q. -- where the key for the wine cellar in the arcade was kept at Neverland Ranch.

A. It was supposed to be in the safe in the housekeepers' break room.

Q. Was there a safe in the housekeepers' break room at that time.

A. Yes.

Q. And the rule was to keep the key in that safe.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who had the combination to that safe.

A. The housekeepers. And I did, too.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Thank you. No further questions

THE COURT: Cross-examine.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning.

A. Good morning.

Q. Is it pronounced “Fournier”.

A. That’s fine.

Q. “Fournier”.

A. “Fournier” is fine.

Q. My name is Tom Mesereau and I speak for Mr. Jackson.

A. Okay.

Q. You and I have never spoken before, right.

A. No.

Q. Okay. During the time that you were employed at Neverland, when did you typically start the day.

A. It all depended.

Q. Did you have any set schedules from time to time.

A. We tried setting schedules. But depending on the amount of people that were coming to visit, the guests, I mean, it never worked, because you always needed more people with more hours.

Q. So, I mean, would you -- let’s take a typical week. Would you attempt to abide by a schedule where you might start at 8:00 and finish at 6:00, or something like that.

A. Yeah. Typically when there was nobody there, we would try to do 9:00 to 5:30. And my schedule was always kind of crazy because I was always going to school at the same time that I was working.

Q. Okay.

A. And working around children’s babysitting schedules, too, so --

Q. Could you explain that a little bit. When were you going to school.

A. Pretty much all the time.

Q. Okay. What schooling were you doing.

A. Community college.

Q. Okay. Would that be local.

A. Yes. Here in Santa Maria.

Q. Okay. And what college was that.

A. Hancock.

Q. And what years were you going to Hancock.

A. I’ve been going too long. Off and on. I still am going. I just recently dropped my classes, though, but -- so quite a bit.

Q. And when did you start going to Hancock College.

A. You’re going to embarrass me. ‘87.

Q. Okay. I’m not trying to do that. And obviously you were going part time, right.

A. Yes. Some semesters it was part time and other semesters it was full time.

Q. Typically, would you be going to college at night or during the day.

A. It depended on what semester it was.

Q. Okay. Now, when you went full time, were you still working at Neverland.

A. No. I don’t think so, no.

Q. If you can, please tell the jury when you went to college full time.

A. Probably around 1990, the end of ‘91, beginning of ‘91, something like that.

Q. You’ve gone sort of part time since then.

A. Yeah, taking two or three classes.

Q. And if you take two or three classes, how much time does that require that you be off the premises of Neverland.

A. Just to attend the class or including homework.

Q. How about the class. Start with that.

A. Couple hours on certain days.

Q. And would there be commuting time as well.

A. Yes.

Q. And what would that be, about, back and forth.

A. 45 minutes each way, and a two-hour, three-hour class, depending on, and then 45 minutes back.

Q. And how many days a week did you, on average, attend college part time, would you say.

A. Two or three days a week.

Q. Okay. And how about your homework. On a typical week, how many hours a week do you think you'd spend on homework.

A. 10, 15.

Q. Okay. Would you typically do your homework at Neverland.

A. No.

Q. Okay.

A. But I did keep my note cards in my pocket quite a bit, and I did do my homework as I worked sometimes.

Q. Okay. The prosecutor was asking you some questions about titles, and he asked you if Frank Tyson had a title and Dieter had a title.

You don't know of any titles these people ever had, do you.

A. No. Not formally, no.

Q. And you don't really know what kind of relationship, in terms of business, Frank Tyson had with Michael Jackson, do you.

A. No.

Q. And you don't really know what kind of a business relationship, if any, Marc Schaffel had with Mr. Jackson, do you.

A. No, I just knew that he worked for him, and something with the birthday party. That's all I know. But I don't know the title name exactly, no.

Q. So you knew that Marc Schaffel had something to do with a birthday party for Mr. Jackson, right.

A. Yes.

Q. But you don’t really know if he, in any shape or form, was an actual partner or shareholder or employee or anything with Mr. Jackson, right.

A. No, I don’t know that.

Q. And you don’t know whether Mr. Tyson had any type of actual business relationship with Mr. Jackson in terms of employment or partnership or business venture together, do you.

A. Well, I know that Frank did work for Mr. Jackson and he was out at the ranch for a couple of months.

Q. But he would be there for a couple of months and then just disappear for six months, right.

A. Yes. But I joked around with him that he was working with the commoners now.

Q. Well, was it your understanding that he was trying to get in the music business.

A. Yeah. When you mention it, I remember hearing something about that, yes.

Q. Was it your understanding that he was trying to present himself as a promoter of music ventures.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Hearsay; no foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I just remember something about music that Frank was trying to do, but I don’t --

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: But you don’t really know what, in fact, he was doing.

A. No.

Q. He could have been puffing up his credentials and his importance and there could be nothing there, right.

A. True.

Q. And he never, ever said to you, “I have this particular business association with Mr. Jackson.” He just demonstrated an interest in music and the life that Michael was leading, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, the prosecutor did not mention Marie Nicole, his sister. Do you remember that.

A. Yes.

Q. And Marie Nicole, Frank Tyson's sister, was a frequent visitor at Neverland, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And when you say "Frank Tyson," that's Frank Cascio, right. He seemed to use both names, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. So his sister Marie Nicole stayed there often, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And his brother Aldo stayed there often, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And his father Dominick stayed there often, didn't he.

A. Not as much as the kids. But, yes, he was there.

Q. The whole family would visit from time to time, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. How about Frank's mother.

A. She would visit, I would say, a couple times a year. At Christmastime.

Q. Did Frank impress you as someone who liked to sort of promote himself or brag about his association with Mr. Jackson.

A. I don't know if he bragged about his association with Mr. Jackson, but he was different.

Q. He bragged a lot, right.

A. I can't remember him directly bragging to me. But I know that he liked himself.

(Laughter.)

Q. Okay. All right. That's good enough.

Okay. And did he impress you as the kind of person that would come back and forth with a very irregular pattern. I mean, you just never knew when he would pop up, and then he would just flat out disappear, right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; vague as to time.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes, he would.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Certainly you could not characterize his being at Neverland as appearing to be some type of pattern where he'd check in or check out, or anything like that, at a particular time like an employee would, right.

A. No. But I do know for a while he was an employee, because he told me that.

Q. He told you he was an employee.

A. Yeah.

Q. But he didn't tell you who was paying him, did he.

A. No.

Q. You don't know actually what company was paying him, if one was, right.

A. No, I don't know.

Q. All right. Now, would you agree, in the world of Michael Jackson, all kinds of characters show up claiming they're his friend, right.

A. Yes.

Q. All kinds of characters are always showing up trying to act like they're close to Michael Jackson, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And Michael Jackson has made the employees aware at Neverland that all kinds of imposters, kooks, nuts, crazy people show up saying, "I'm his friend," right.

A. Yes.

Q. And they actually try to get in often, don't they.

A. Yes.

Q. And -- and all kinds of wild people call up all the time trying to pretend that they are close to Michael, right.

A. Yes. They have called.

Q. You've seen these people come and go for years, right.

A. Do you mean breaking in on the property, too.

Q. Just trying to get close to Michael Jackson.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Some line, some yarn they're spinning, whatever it is, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you've seen people show up from time to time and look as if they're close to him, and then you never see them again suddenly, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, you mentioned Vinnie -- or, excuse me, the prosecutor, or the government mentioned Vinnie Amen. Do you remember.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, he was in his early 20s, as far as you know, wasn't he.

A. Yes.

Q. And Frank Tyson was in his early 20s, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And Vinnie Amen also appeared to try and promote himself as having something to do with the music industry, right.

A. I never knew what Vinnie was doing.

Q. Did you see him -- did you see him hang out with Frank a fair amount.

A. Yeah. And they both got desks up in the video library, so --

Q. Right. Right. But he didn't come on any regular basis, did he. He was another one of these guys who would show up, you'd see him for a while, and then the guy disappears, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you certainly never really knew what business relationship, if any, he had with Michael, right.

A. Yes.
Q. But he was another one of these guys that would just strut around and promote himself because he supposedly knew Michael Jackson, right.
A. Yes.
Q. You’ve seen a lot of young people in their 20s suddenly come around and act like they know Michael Jackson, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And you’ve seen a lot of people say they’re music promoters or music agents, or whatever, to claim that they are part of the world of Michael Jackson, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, during the time you’ve worked at Neverland, you’ve seen thousands of children, probably, come to Neverland, right.
A. Yes.

Q. Neverland appears to be designed for kids, doesn’t it.
A. Yes.
Q. You’ve got an amusement park, right.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. You’ve got a zoo, right.
A. (Nods head up and down.)
Q. You’ve got fields where kids could play, right.
A. (Nods head up and down.)
Q. You’ve got a theater where they can go in and get popcorn or ice cream or sodas, right.
A. (Nods head up and down.)
Q. And there’s a lot of freedom at Neverland regarding what movie you can see, right. Isn’t there some big library where you can get videos and play those --
A. Yes.
Q. -- movies.
You’ve got the arcade with all sorts of games, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And you’ve seen, during the time you’ve worked there, busloads of kids, impoverished kids from the inner city, for example, coming out to visit Neverland, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And they can be a little wild from time to time, can’t they.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And you’ve seen hundreds of kids come at one time with maybe a couple of adults escorting them around, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And they’ll spend the whole day at Neverland, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were you ever asked to help supervise or organize these busloads of kids that often come out.

A. No.

Q. Your job was strictly what.

A. Cleaning and serving.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, sometimes when these hundreds and hundreds of kids will show up from the inner city or from schools, or wherever they’re from --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as mischaracterizes the testimony. We’ve gone from 100 to hundreds and hundreds.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase it.

Q. You’ve seen, on a given day, literally hundreds of children show up to spend the day, haven’t you.

A. Yes.

Q. And -- bless you.

A. Yes.

Q. And you have also seen this happen quite a bit, haven’t you, where, on a given day, buses or carloads of kids come to spend the day.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; compound.

THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And typically what will happen is these children will come late morning, spend the whole day, and sometimes into the evening, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, you don’t typically see Michael Jackson supervising these kids, do you.
A. No.
Q. In fact, you almost never see Michael Jackson supervising these kids, right.
A. No.
Q. And it’s your understanding that typically when these busloads or carloads of children show up, that they’re with people, adults, who are in charge of them, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And you have seen these children from time to time be pretty rambunctious or wild, right.
A. Yes.
Q. You’ve seen them be a little wild on the rides, right.

A. Uh-huh.
Q. You’ve seen them go a little crazy when the elephants come walking through the property, right.
A. Yes.
Q. You’ve seen sometimes the camel comes walking out with a zookeeper and the children all love that, right.
A. Yes.
Q. You’ve been -- have you seen the children go to the zoo and go from area to area to see the alpacas and the giraffes and the tiger and the chimps and all that.
A. Yes.
Q. And you’ve seen children, at times, get out of line, haven’t you.
A. Yes.
Q. They start throwing things, right.
A. Yes.

Q. You’ve seen kids throw stuff from the rides, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Would you agree that it’s to be expected at Neverland that when you have hundreds of children, many of them from impoverished areas, they come to this world of amusement, and zoos, and films, and candy and popcorn and ice cream, and all that stuff, they sometimes go crazy, don’t they.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Calls for a conclusion; argumentative.

THE COURT: It’s argumentative. Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. Is it unusual for young kids, seven, eight, nine, ten, thirteen, whatever they are, to just start going wild at Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. It’s not unusual, is it.

A. No, it’s not unusual.

Q. Okay. Is it your impression that these busloads of children that periodically come to Neverland just look like they’ve sort of walked into a fantasy world.

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, in the evening at Neverland, you hear Disney music playing, don’t you.

A. Yes.

Q. And you have trees with lights that almost look like it’s Christmastime, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you hear Disney-like voices coming from loud speakers, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you’ve seen many of these children want to stay there into the evening because of this sort of fantasy-like world at night, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, would it be accurate to say that these kinds of trips that children make to Neverland happen quite often.

A. The busloads.

Q. Busloads or carloads, however they get there. You have children visiting Neverland a fair amount, don't you.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Is it your impression that Neverland appears to almost be designed as a place for children.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. You have a train, right, that travels around Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. And it's almost out of a Walt Disney-type movie, isn't it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object. 352; relevancy; undue consumption of time.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you see kids jump on those trains, that train, and travel all around Neverland, don't you.

A. Yes.

Q. You have clocks everywhere, don't you.

A. Yeah.

Q. And they're big clocks that look sort of Walt Disney-like, don't they.

A. Yes.

Q. You've got a big clock on a hill that's partly flowers, isn't it.

A. Yes.

Q. And that's where a train station is, right.

A. Yes.

Q. You even have your own little fire station, with a fire truck, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Auchincloss mentioned Dieter. And you indicated you had seen him there a few times, right.

A. Yes.

Q. But you never really knew if he had any formal type of business relationship with Mr. Jackson, did you.

A. The only thing I remember with Dieter is there was a doll, probably like this high, that was porcelain, that was Mr. Jackson; that he had told me that he was working on making those. Because I offered to glue it back together because it broke, and he said it wasn't needed because there was many, many more where that came from.

Q. So he was telling you he was trying to manufacture dolls.

A. Something like that. Porcelain -- porcelain figurines.

Q. Okay. Did he tell you where they were going to be manufactured.

A. No.

Q. But if Michael Jackson even knew about this or was involved in it, you don't really have firsthand knowledge, right.

A. I don't know.

Q. Okay. Did Dieter seem like a promoter to you, sort of. Would that be an accurate word.

A. I guess, yes. He seemed like a businessman. That's how I would describe him.

Q. Did he seem impressed with himself.

A. I guess you could say that. Somebody might say that.

Q. Did he talk much.

A. No.

Q. Okay. If he had any contractual relationship with Mr. Jackson or partnership relation, whatever it could be, you're not aware of it.

A. No.

Q. And did he sort of come and then disappear, too.

A. Yes.

Q. Let's talk about Ron. Do you know who I'm talking about.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Konitzer is his name, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to him very much.

A. No.

Q. Did he seem like a self-promoter also.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as calls for a conclusion. Vague as to “self-promoter.”

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did Mr. Konitzer seem like he was impressed with himself.

A. I never really talked to either of them, so -- they seemed -- Ron seemed much nicer.

Q. Nicer than Dieter.

A. Ronald. Yes.

Q. But you never really talked to Ron or Dieter.

A. No.

Q. And I think it goes without saying, if Ron had any type of formal association with Mr. Jackson, you don’t know what it was, right.

A. No, I don’t know.

Q. And didn’t he sort of show up at unexpected times and then just not be there for many, many months.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Schaffel would show up once in a while, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And then he would disappear, right.

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, there were periods where months would go by, you’d never see Schaffel, right.

A. No, you wouldn’t.

Q. Did you get the impression that Schaffel was trying to promote himself as someone who knew Michael Jackson.

A. I don’t want to sound odd when I say this, but I think he was an opportunist. I --

Q. He was one of many opportunists that you bumped into while working at Neverland, right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer that.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry, what was the question.

THE COURT: I can have it read back to you.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, if Dieter was telling things to Michael Jackson, you don’t know what they were, right.

A. No.

Q. If Ron was communicating with Michael Jackson about anything specific, you don’t know what that was, right.

A. No.

Q. And if Frank was communicating anything specific to Michael Jackson, you don’t really know what that was, right.

A. No.

Q. If Vinnie was communicating anything to Michael Jackson, you don’t know what that was, right.

A. No.

Q. Same with Schaffel, right.

A. Yes. Same.

Q. Now, let me ask the question a slightly different way: If Ron was withholding information from Michael Jackson, you wouldn’t know anything about it, right.

A. No.

Q. If Dieter was withholding information from Michael Jackson, you wouldn’t know anything about that, right.

A. No.

Q. If Schaffel was withholding information from Mr. Jackson, you don’t know anything about it.

A. No.

Q. And the same would apply to Frank and Vinnie, right.

A. Yes.

Q. So what they were really telling him and what they weren't telling him, you don't know.

A. No, I don't know.

Q. And would it be accurate to just say, in summary, these characters would show up once in a while, disappear, and you never could predict when they would be there or not be there, right.

A. Yes, you never could predict.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, in your work, if you can -- if you can generalize it -- I don't know if you can, but let's take 2002 to 2003. When you weren't in school and you weren't doing your homework, and you were at Neverland, how often might you see Michael.

A. If he was there, a couple of times a day. Sometimes not at all if -- you know, depending on how he was feeling.

Q. Would Michael disappear for long periods of time and go places that you weren't even aware of.

A. Do you mean leave the property.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, he would.

Q. And sometimes he'd be away for a long time, wouldn't he.

A. Yes.

Q. Weeks, months, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And when he was at Neverland, you didn't really know everything he was doing, right.

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him go into his studio.

A. The dance studio.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And you weren't always in there when he was in his dance studio, were you.

A. No.

Q. And if he were creating or choreographing or whatever he was doing, you weren’t knowledgeable about it, right.

A. No.

Q. And would you see Michael sometimes in the evening walking around the property.

A. Yes.

Q. Sometimes he’s alone, right.

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, you would often see Michael alone walking around, wouldn’t you.

A. Yes.

Q. He would take long walks and do his creative work alone, right.

A. Well, what he was doing on his walk, I don’t know. But he would walk.

Q. Did you ever see Michael sitting up in his tree where he likes to think and create.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Are you aware of a tree that Michael Jackson will sometimes just sit in alone so he can create his musical work.

A. I’m aware of the tree.

Q. Okay. Do you know where it is. Right near the main house, right.

A. Yes.

Q. It’s in the front.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. All right. Clearly, you would not keep tabs on where Michael was on any given moment when he was at Neverland, right.

A. No, but, I mean, you kind of had an idea of where he was so you could do what you needed to do, you know. If you needed to mop the floor or something, are they going to watch a movie for two hours so you can get this thing done, that kind of thing.

Q. Now, you mentioned someone named Joe Marcus.

A. Yes.
Q. What is his title, if he has one.
A. Ranch manager, I think.
Q. Okay. And did you typically report to him.
A. No, I would report to the house supervisor first.
Q. Okay. And was it your understanding the house supervisor would report to Mr. Marcus.
A. Yes.
Q. And would you often get direction about what you are supposed to do from the house supervisor.
A. Yes.

Q. Would you ever get it from Mr. Marcus.
A. Yes.
Q. In a typical day where you do your work at Neverland, do you pretty much start the day knowing what your assignments are.
A. Yeah, you do. You know, if there’s guests there, your duties change. And if there’s nobody there, you know, it’s just cleaning. But when there’s guests there, it’s serving the guests.
Q. Now, the prosecutor for the government tried to suggest that Michael Jackson is on top of all the details at Neverland. Do you remember that.
A. Yes.
Q. Isn’t it true that there are months where Michael isn’t even around.
A. Yes.
Q. And you don’t get your direction from Michael specifically during those months, do you.
A. No. But I believe that he laid it out the way that he wanted it. I mean, he wants us to take care of the house when he goes away and that kind of thing.
Q. Well, sure. There are general duties that everybody has that’s employed at Neverland, right.
A. Yes.
Q. You’ve got a zookeeper who’s told to take care of the zoo, right. You’ve got people in charge of the amusement rides, right.

A. Yes.

Q. You’ve got someone in charge of the theater, right.

A. Not really in charge of the theater. That’s kind of what we did, so --

Q. But someone was certainly in charge of making sure it’s cleaned and that kind of thing, right.

A. That would be us, yeah.

Q. Okay. So the house supervisor would essentially be in charge of what you did at the theater.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Okay. And you certainly had a general responsibility to make sure that theater was clean, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And would it be -- would it be, oh, accurate to say that when that theater was filled with kids watching a movie, they might leave and leave things a little messy.

A. Absolutely.

Q. And would you see popcorn everywhere and things like that.

A. Yep.

Q. And you were one of the people who had to clean that, right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Okay. Okay. So you’ve got a fairly large staff there, don’t you.

A. Yes.

Q. Would it be accurate to say, on average, during the time that you worked at Neverland, there may have been 50 or 60 employees.

A. Yes.

Q. Because you’ve got security people also, don’t you.

A. Yes.

Q. And would you be in touch with the security people on a regular basis.

A. You’d see them throughout the day, so -- but we wouldn’t necessarily report anything to them. I mean, unless there was a problem.

Q. Right. Let me know if this is an accurate statement: You’ve got an average of 50 to 60 employees with different tasks that have been spelled out for them, right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Whether it’s security, the main house, the zoo, whatever it is, right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. You’ve got people with various levels of supervisory authority, right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And you’ve got long periods where Michael isn’t even around, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And Neverland seems to run even when Michael isn’t there, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Even when Michael is there, there are periods where he seems to be off alone doing whatever he’s doing, right.

A. Yes.

Q. When you said that he’s a detail person, you weren’t trying to suggest that Michael spends 15 hours a day supervising everybody’s tasks, did you.

A. No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was “No.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: In fact, most of the discussion about what people are going to do on a daily basis is not with Michael, right.

A. No.

Q. Now, once in a while, because he’s the owner, he does directly tell someone his wishes, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Because that’s where -- he lives there and his family lives there, right.

A. Yes.

Q. But most of the time, wouldn't you discuss your daily responsibilities and obligations with people other than Michael.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, how many employees, would you say, are assigned to the main house.

A. When I was there, nd when I left in September, there was five.

Q. Okay. And during the many years that you've worked at Neverland, do people's responsibilities typically remain or do people shift into other types of jobs from time to time.

A. They shift from time to time.

Q. Now, have you shifted a little bit.

A. A little bit sometimes, yes.

Q. What kind of shifting have you done.

A. I helped with the kids a little bit. But very little.

Q. Do you mean Michael's children.

A. Yes.

Q. Could you tell the jury their names.

A. Prince and Paris and Blanket.

Q. Okay. And their ages.

A. I think Prince is about eight, and Paris is about seven. And the little one is two now, I think.

Q. Okay. And what have your responsibilities been with the three children.

A. Well, I would just watch them briefly, you know, when the nanny was busy doing something.

And -- you know, or take them out to the zoo. One time I did, you know, so -- and watch Paris when she was little for one night.

Q. Okay. The prosecutor for the government asked you a question about children not staying in their assigned rooms. Remember that.

A. Yes.
Q. And you said something to the effect that sometimes a child would have a room, I imagine in the guest units, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And you would see the bed not made, right.
A. Do you mean not used or not made.
Q. Pardon me, not made. Let me strike that. Wrong choice of words.
You would sometimes come in and see a room that just didn't appear to be used, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And I think what the government prosecutor was suggesting was the kids must have been somewhere during the evening, right.
A. Yes.
Q. But I'm curious. You also said that you looked at Gavin's room and it often was a mess, right.
A. Toward the end, yes.
Q. Suggesting that Gavin was staying in the room, right.

A. I believe it was he and his brother that were staying in there.
Q. And they made a real mess out of that room, didn't they.
A. Yes.
Q. Quite often, didn't they.
A. Toward the end, yes.
Q. And they were known -- they had a reputation at Neverland for having disciplinary issues with the staff, didn't they.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Calls for hearsay and calls for a conclusion; improper characterization of the evidence.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Not really with me. I mean, Gavin was always respectful with me. Always. Star could be a little bit ornery. And Davellin, we'd talk every once in a while. But I never experienced any problems.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: But you knew other employees did, didn’t you.

A. Well, I knew that they were becoming demanding, yeah, but I don’t really remember a specific incident.

Q. Now, when you say you learned that they were becoming demanding, could you tell the jury what you mean.

A. Well, every night we’d make dinner, and he always wanted something other than what was made for dinner.

Q. Who was this, now.

A. Star.

Q. Would make demands on you personally.

A. Yeah. They’d want certain kinds of foods made at certain times. And usually it was chicken noodle soup, which wasn’t that difficult, but --

Q. Would you get upset at those demands.

A. Honestly, I got irritated sometimes because of the demand. There was so much to do. There was so much to do, and I -- when the kids got a little ornery, it was -- it was a lot. It really was. It was -- and I felt like there was no respect.

Q. And they seemed to sort of get very spoiled there at some point, didn’t they.

A. Yes.

Q. And weren’t there complaints about their throwing candy.

A. Yes.

Q. There were complaints about their throwing objects from the amusement rides.

A. Yes.

Q. There were complaints from other employees that they were almost acting like they owned the place.

A. I don’t remember that one, but I know that they were getting a little ornery.

Q. Do you remember their crashing carts.
A. All of them crashed the carts. I don't remember specifically if they did or not.
Q. Okay. Okay. Now, did you ever learn that they were caught with adult material.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 403 ruling.
MR. MESEREAU: I think the Court said I could ask.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever learn that.
A. No, I don't remember that.
Q. Did you ever learn that they were caught masturbating in the unit.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Okay. You never had any discussion with anyone about that.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Okay. Do you recall learning that they had driven off the property at one point into town.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever hear about that.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I know that they left with

Chris Carter one time.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You don't have any knowledge of their going into town on their own, do you.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Did you ever see the Arvizo family riding around in a limousine.
A. I know that they were taken in the -- Mr. Jackson's vehicles sometimes, so --
Q. And when you say "Mr. Jackson's vehicles," please tell the jury what kind of vehicles you're talking about.
A. A lot.
Q. Okay. No, what -- describe the vehicles, if you would.

A. Rolls Royces. I know that he owns a limousine. There’s a black Navigator. So just different cars.

Q. And it was -- was it your understanding that these kids would demand that they be taken places in those vehicles.

A. I didn’t know about that.

Q. Okay. Did you see their mother very much.

A. No, not that much. She pretty much stayed in her guest unit.

Q. Did you ever see her walking on the premises.

A. Not really, no.

Q. Ever see her at the theater.

A. Can’t remember if I’ve seen her at the theater or not.

Q. How about in the main house.

A. Yes.

Q. You’ve seen her in the main house a lot, right.

A. Yeah, she would come in there and eat dinner in there sometimes.

Q. And she’d be in there in the morning also, wasn’t she.

A. Usually I wasn’t there that much in the morning.

Q. Okay. Now, you’ve indicated, I think - correct me if I’m wrong - that there were times you cooked for the Arvizo family, right.

A. Did I cook for them. I don’t remember.

Q. Do you remember Star pulling a knife on you in the kitchen.

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately when did Star pull a knife on you in the kitchen.

A. Do you mean about what month it was.

Q. Month or year, if you remember.

A. Well, it was during that time period between -- I want to say it’s, like, February. I think.

Q. And when Star pulled a knife on you in the kitchen, were you preparing food.

A. I was doing the dishes.
Q. Okay. And was he trying to cook in the kitchen.
A. Yes.
Q. That was against the rules, wasn't it.
A. Well, it's just not really wise to have a child in there cooking with everybody, because it's kind of -- plus, you know, you've got things that you have to do, so you have to work also.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. So --
Q. Now, the prosecutor for the government asked you questions about where the key to the wine cellar was supposed to be, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And I believe you indicated it was supposed to be in a safe.
A. Yes.
Q. But you don't know if there were periods of time when it was out of that safe, do you.
A. No.
Q. Were you often in the wine cellar.
A. Not often, but I've been down there.
Q. Okay. And could you please describe for the jury what the wine cellar looks like.
A. It's kind of like a cave in some ways, I want to say. It's got rock walls. And it's kind of like walking into, like, a basement or a cellar. And it's got a main room, and there used to be a table in there. And they have -- there's wine on the wall. And there's like another area with, like, a little sink and a refrigerator and a freezer in there, too. And there's hard liquor in the cabinet in the wine cellar where the kitchen is.

Q. Sometimes that wine cellar was open, wasn't it.

A. Yes.

Q. You found it open, didn't you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; vague as to time.

MR. MESEREAU: I'll rephrase, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: During the time you worked at Neverland, you sometimes found that wine cellar open, didn't you.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, it wasn't your responsibility to keep it locked, was it.

A. No.

Q. Okay. And isn't alcohol kept in the kitchen.

A. Yes. But on the wine cellar, it wasn't our responsibility to keep it locked. But when we left, you know, we locked it. We didn't leave it open, I mean, if we went down there for a purpose.

Q. But there certainly were many times, for whatever reason you happened to be in that area, and saw that it was open, right.

A. Yes. If you went down there and checked the door, yeah.

Q. Yes. Okay. Were you at -- excuse me. Let me rephrase that.

Were you working at Neverland during the period of, say, February 1st, 2003, to March 12th, 2003.

A. Yes.

Q. Were you working full time.

A. Yes.

Q. Were you going to college then.

A. Yes.

Q. And during that period of time how often would you go to college.

A. I think it was three days a week.

Q. So would you be following the schedule that you defined a little earlier in our questioning.

A. The radical schedule. Yeah, I would come in later. I would come in late because that way I could get my kids off to school and sleep a little bit, too, so that way I could do the late shift again.

Q. And it was a 45-minute drive into town to go to school.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And a couple hours at school and then 45 minutes back, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And then you would do your homework during the schedule you talked about earlier, right.

A. Yeah, here and there.

Q. Okay. Okay. You have people at Neverland who were in charge of security, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And about how many people are employed at Neverland who are involved in security.

A. There used to be a lot more. But I don’t know. Like when I left, I want to say like seven, eight, something like that.

Q. Okay. Now, at one point you said that towards the end of their stay at Neverland -- excuse me, let me rephrase that.

Toward the end of the Arvizos’ stay at Neverland, you noticed that Gavin and Star’s room was consistently messy, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And that’s the room in the guest quarters, right.

A. Yes.

Q. When you say “towards the end,” what do you mean.

A. Before they didn’t come back, really.

Q. Would that have been, say, a week before they didn’t come back. Two weeks.

A. Two weeks probably.

Q. So approximately two weeks before the Arvizos left for good, you noticed that Gavin and Star’s room was consistently messy, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And that indicated to you that they were staying in that room, right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I thought they were. But I don’t know if they were or not.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: But there was a period where you would often not see their rooms a mess, right.

A. Yes. I mean, they were sloppy. But towards the end, their room was just -- things were broken and it was -- it was a mess.

Q. Now, during this last couple of weeks that they were at Neverland, when you say their room was a mess, what did you do when you discovered this.

A. I was with Maria one time and -- when we discovered it, and we decided to talk to the house manager and let him know, because it was getting really bad.

Q. And during those last two weeks that the Arvizos were at Neverland, what specifically did you notice about Gavin and Star’s room.

A. That it was just torn apart.

Q. They really trashed it.

A. Yeah.

Q. Please tell the jury how they trashed it, if you know.

A. I can’t say for sure what had happened, but there was things spilled. There was glasses broken. The refrigerator was a mess, too. Every unit has its own refrigerator, and it was -- it just looked like somebody had just gone in there like a tornado and -- like a whirlwind.

Q. Did you ever talk to Gavin or Star about that.

A. No, I don’t think I did.

Q. Okay.

A. Because it wasn’t my place to.
Q. Was it your responsibility simply to clean it.
A. Yes.
Q. And you said you made a complaint to somebody.
A. Yes.
Q. Who did you make a complaint to.
A. The house manager.
Q. And who was that.
A. Jesus Salas.

Q. Okay. Did you tell Jesus Salas that they had broken things in the guest unit.
A. Maria was with me, and I think he even came in and saw the mess. I can’t remember for sure. But I know that he -- somehow he knew about it.
Q. And was their bedroom a complete mess.
A. Yes.
Q. Was the bed a mess.
A. Yes.
Q. What was broken.
A. There was some glasses in the rooms that they have. Every room has a couple of glasses in it, and some wine glasses and that kind of thing, and the glasses were broken.
So I don’t remember which glass in specific it was, but there was broken glass, and there was no attempt to clean up the mess.
Q. Was anything else wrong with their room during those last two weeks the Arvizos were at Neverland.
A. Not anything else that I can think of. Just about how -- how it was just -- there was no care as to how the room was kept. It was like that.
Q. So the bed was a mess, right.
A. I remember -- if memory serves me correct, yes.
Q. The chairs were a mess.
A. The furniture was moved, yes.

Q. Was there garbage around.
A. Yes.
Q. Broken glass around.
A. Yes.
Q. Did it look like furniture had been damaged to you.
A. I don’t know if it had been damaged, but it had been moved.
Q. Was there food around.
A. Yes.
Q. Did it look like they’d spilled drinks around.
A. Yes.
Q. How about the bathroom. Did they make a mess out of the bathroom.
A. I think the door was shut.
Q. Okay. All right. Did you ever mention any of this to their mother Janet.
A. No.
Q. All right.
A. It wasn’t my place.
Q. Okay. So you didn’t think it was your responsibility to talk to them about this, right.
A. No.
Q. You just felt it was your responsibility to clean it, and report it, right.
A. I just thought it might be good for somebody to know what was happening.

Q. Okay. And you didn’t ever directly report this to Michael Jackson, right.
A. No.
Q. You just reported it to the person in the chain of employment that you were supposed to report to.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Did you discuss it with anyone else besides Jesus Salas.
A. Maria.
Q. And who is Maria.
A. Maria Gomez, another housekeeper.

Q. And do you know if she did anything about it.

A. Well, like I said, I think that it was she and I together that went and told Jesus.

Q. Okay. Together you did that.

A. Yeah, I believe it was together, because I remember being in the room with her also when -- I think we went to go clean it together.

Q. Okay. Was your complaint an oral complaint, or was it in writing.

A. No, it was verbal.

Q. Okay. To your knowledge, did Jesus Salas do anything about it.

A. I don’t know what he did.

Q. Okay. Did you just make one complaint.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, I mentioned security at Neverland. There was a lot of concern about security at Neverland, wasn’t there.

A. Yes.

Q. You yourself, for example, were worried about Michael Jackson’s fans, right.

A. Yes.

Q. You told the sheriffs you were worried about his sicko fans coming onto the property and being a threat to people, right.

A. Only some of them.

Q. Only some of them.

A. Yes. Not all fans are sicko.

Q. No, I didn’t mean that.

(Laughter.)

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: But you were worried about the fact that Mr. Jackson is so popular around the world that, as you described it, sicko fans could provide a security threat, right.

A. Well, yeah, there was one incident that stood out in my mind about a fan that was quite unstable, would seem to me. And people like that don’t really make me feel comfortable.

Q. And did this person try to get on the property.

A. Many of them have, yes. Actually, one of them did. A couple of them did.

Q. And what happened.

A. Well --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object as to relevancy and time.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: The property at Neverland is approximately 2800 acres, right.

A. Yes.

Q. You have fence around the property for the most part, don't you.

A. Split rail fence, I think it's called.

Q. Split rail fences that actually a child could almost get in and out if they wanted, right.

A. Yes.

Q. When you say "split rail," you mean essentially a wooden post and a couple of wooden rails, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Adults or children typically could go in or out if they wanted, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And very close to those split rail fences are roads, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Roads where cars speed back and forth, right.

A. Yes.

Q. You've got houses on Figueroa Road right across from Neverland, don't you.

A. A school is, yes.

Q. There's a school. And the school isn't far from those split rail fences, is it.

A. No.

Q. And would it be fair to say that children at Neverland could easily go through a fence onto a road where cars are speeding.

A. Well, it's a long ways from the main house, but --
Q. It could happen, couldn't it.
A. If you kept walking, yes.
Q. Are you aware of any moments when children from the school tried to get into Neverland.
A. No, I'm not familiar with any of those.
Q. Okay. To your knowledge, do the security people sort of travel around the perimeter of Neverland once in a while, just to make sure nobody's on the property when they shouldn't be.
A. Well, I know that they make perimeter checks, and they would check around the property and make sure that there's no parked cars or that kind of thing out on the property, and then go all throughout the whole property, too.
Q. But typically when somebody enters Neverland, they go to a closed gate, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And they stick their arm out of the car and push a button, right.

A. Oh, to get into the front gate.
Q. Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. And they then hear, through an intercom, a voice asking who they are, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And then if they're permitted in, these wooden gates open and they can drive in, right.
A. Yes.
Q. But wouldn't you agree that not too far away from that entrance are those split rail fences.
A. Well, it's right next to it, yes.
Q. And realistically, if children wanted to go in or out, or run across the road or dart across the road, there's always a danger of that, isn't there.
A. Yeah, if they wanted to get out from the fence, they can. There's no question of that.
Q. How many children go to the school across the street, if you know.
A. I think a couple hundred.

Q. And has that school been there during the time that you’ve worked at Neverland.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Do you remember Michael Jackson having a blood drive at Neverland in approximately December of 2002.
A. I remember there was a blood drive for Gavin, but I don’t remember when.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I just show you a police report on that with a date.
A. Sure.
MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes, you may.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I see it, Counsel.
THE WITNESS: I think it was donated, but I don’t remember right now. I probably guessed right there, around about, but I can’t say for sure right now.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
Q. I have to ask you a few questions that I’m required to ask.
A. Okay.
Q. Have you had a chance to review that page of the police report.
A. Yes, that section.
Q. And does it refresh your recollection about when this blood drive may have occurred.
A. No, I’m sorry.
Q. Do you think it was 2002.
A. No, I don’t, because Gavin came back, and when he came back, I hardly recognized him, because he looked so much better. Because before, he was so thin and so frail. So I joked around about that with him, but I don’t think it was in December of 2002 when the blood drive was.
Q. When do you think it was, if -- if you know.

A. I don’t remember. I really don’t.
Q. Were you involved in that blood drive.

A. No. They needed O negative blood, not AB. I thought it was O negative.

Q. But your understanding was that Michael Jackson had organized a blood drive for Gavin at Neverland, right.

A. Yeah, he did.

Q. Were you involved in helping set that up.

A. No. I remember I had school at that time, too, so I couldn’t be there for that.

Q. Were you there for any of that blood drive.

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, were other employees at Neverland participating in helping set up a blood drive.

A. I don’t know if the employees did or not, but, I mean, I’m sure they probably made food for the people to eat, and the employees would have helped that way, and set up the tent and got utensils to eat and that kind of thing.

Q. So there was a tent set up for the blood drive for Gavin.

A. I believe so, if I remember correctly. Not that I saw it, but I heard.

THE COURT: Counsel, let’s take our break.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor. Oops. Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Are you enjoying this.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. We’ll keep going, then. All right. When you first started working at Neverland, did you go through a training-type program.

A. My supervisor trained me.

Q. And who was that.

A. Gayle Goforth.

Q. Okay. And what did the training consist of.

A. Just taking me around and showing me what my duties would be.

Q. Okay.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: They can’t hear.

THE WITNESS: Is that better.

MR. MESEREAU: Pardon me.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: That’s fine.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. And has your job changed during the time you were working at Neverland.

A. Basically stayed the same.

Q. Okay. Did you go through any other training programs while you were at Neverland.

A. We did CPR training.

Q. Okay.

A. Otherwise not for the job, no, not that I can think of.

Q. Okay. You were interviewed by the Santa Barbara sheriffs a couple of times, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And they asked you if you were aware of the Arvizos feeling that they were confined at Neverland and couldn’t leave. Do you remember that discussion.

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: I don’t remember that discussion. You asked her, but -- I’ll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you recall, in your interview with the Santa Barbara Sheriffs, discussing the question of whether or not the Arvizos were free to leave Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. But you basically laughed at the idea, didn’t you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Calls for a conclusion; no foundation

THE COURT: Argumentative. It’s sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Didn’t you tell the sheriffs, “How hard is it to leave. Just walk”.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. It’s argumentative; calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you want that question read back.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir, please.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes, something along those lines.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. And in your opinion, the idea that they would be confined, confined at Neverland, is ridiculous, right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative; calls for a conclusion; no foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: In your police interview, or, excuse me, one of them -- actually, it's the sheriffs. In your sheriffs' interview, you described the Arvizo children as destructive, didn't you.

A. Yes.

Q. You were asked questions about Mr. Jackson's relationship with the Cascio family in your sheriffs' interview, right.

A. I can't remember, but I'm sure you'll tell me if I did.

Q. And you indicated that Michael was a close friend of the entire family, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Including the parents and the children, the boys and the girl, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, the prosecutor for the government asked you some questions about other young boys, as he put it, that Mr. Jackson knew through the years, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And would you agree that, like most people, Mr. Jackson sometimes became a closer friend of some families rather than others, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And the so-called “young boys” the prosecutor referred to would come with their families, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, Jimmy Safechuck was married at Neverland, wasn’t he. Do you remember that.

A. I didn’t even know he was married.

Q. Okay. McCaulay Culkin’s family would come, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Did it seem -- let me rephrase that. You’ve said that during the time you’ve worked at Neverland, thousands of children have visited, right.

A. Yes.

Q. But certainly there are families that Michael Jackson, in your opinion, was closer to --

A. Yes.

Q. -- than others, right.

A. Yes.

Q. There are friendships he’s developed through the years which seem to have lasted for many years, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And like any other human being, some families would visit periodically, rather than others, right.

A. Yes.

Q. There would be many celebrity-type visitors to Neverland from time to time, right.

A. Yes.

Q. You would see the Brandos.

A. Yes.

Q. Who else would you see.

A. Elizabeth Taylor. Chris Tucker. I think Chris Rock was there. I don’t know the names of the basketball players.

Q. And did the people you just identified seem to be close friends of Michael Jackson.

A. I wouldn’t -- as far as I could say, I don’t think that all of them were close friends, but some of them were, I think.

Q. And from time to time, there would be various functions at Neverland, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And, for example, you would see tents put up for a special event, right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Please tell the jury what special events you recall seeing at Neverland.

A. Weddings, birthday parties, that kind of things.

Q. Would you get involved in those events.

A. Serving and cleaning, yes.

Q. Okay. Okay. Is that something you looked forward to.

A. No. I still don’t.

Q. All right.

(Laughter.)

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Would it typically vary from month to month how many functions, as you described, would take place.

A. Yes, it would vary.

Q. And sometimes you would have hundreds of visitors for these functions, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And where would all these people park.

A. They would park down by the amusement park. It depends on where the tent was set up. Or they would park in front of the gates that are inside Neverland with a big sign that says “Neverland” over it. There’s a new parking lot there.

Q. And would you agree that most people who visit Neverland like to walk through the main house, don’t they.

A. Walk through the main house.

Q. If they can.

A. Yes.

Q. They like to see all the artwork and the antiques and the way Michael Jackson has decorated his home, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And isn’t it typical that visitors will make a request, “Can we see the main house.”

A. Sometimes they have, yes.

Q. And is it your understanding that quite often Mr. Jackson will allow someone to take them through.

A. Yes.

Q. He allows that a lot, doesn’t he.

A. Yes.

Q. Sounds like you don’t think he should, right.

A. No.

Q. Do you think he’s too nice to a lot of people who visit Neverland.

A. Sometimes, yes, I -- sometimes I got a little concerned, but it’s not my place.

Q. Okay. You thought he was being too generous and nice to visitors, right.

A. Yes. And sometimes -- yes.

Q. Okay. When did you notice the Arvizo children becoming so destructive.

A. Towards the end of their stay, in the beginning of 2003.

Q. The beginning of 2003.

A. Yeah, towards the end of their stay in the beginning, 2003.

Q. Did you make any complaints other than the one you just described.

A. Not that I can remember, no.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, I was asking you a question, and I think I got sidetracked a little bit. It had to do with the availability of alcohol in the kitchen. Remember that question.

A. Yes.

Q. And isn’t alcohol found in the kitchen from time to time.

A. Yeah, I think by the sink to the left, there was a cabinet that did have some alcohol in it.

Q. And that generally wasn't locked, right.
A. No.
Q. Would you find alcohol once in a while in the refrigerator unit, you know, with the see-through glass.
A. Yes. We would put that in there.
Q. Going back to these functions that go on at Neverland, sometimes Mr. Jackson isn't even there, right.
A. Yes, sometimes he's not there.

Q. So there will be a function for hundreds of people, there will be a tent, there will be staff, there will be food, there will be parking privileges, and Mr. Jackson won't even be at Neverland, right.
A. Yeah, that's right.
Q. Now, you never saw Mr. Jackson give alcohol to a minor, did you.
A. No.
Q. And when you said that you saw three kids at the table one time that you were concerned might be intoxicated, you never saw Mr. Jackson give them anything.
A. No.
Q. Now, are you aware -- excuse me. Let me just limit this to a time period. Let's say 2002, 2003. You were aware that Mr. Jackson had some medical problems from time to time, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And you would see his doctor, for example, come to Neverland once in a while, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And you were aware that he needed injections.
A. Yes.
Q. And he would, at times, have a reaction to those injections; do you remember that.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you said -- you used the term “Pinnochio’s Pleasure Island” in response to the government prosecutor. Were you suggesting that you thought Michael Jackson himself should supervise kids more personally.

A. No, I don’t think that he should. I mean, how could he supervise that many children. There needed to be more people to supervise them, or their parents.

Q. So were you -- excuse me. Let me rephrase it. Were you meaning to be a little more critical of their parents when you talked about kids being out of control.

A. Well, yes, that too. Because some kids -- I mean, well, some parents won’t discipline even their own children, so sometimes the parents didn’t even help. But I think it’s just sometimes the character of the person, too, because some of them were just crazy.

Q. Yeah. Did you ever voice your concerns that parents should be paying more attention to their kids at Neverland.

A. I might have, over the years, to some of my co-workers. But I can’t think of anything right now.

The thing that really worried me that I can say that I thought about, too, is that there’s a lake there. And I worried more about the lake than I did about the pool. If you leave these children unsupervised, I mean, they could fall in the lake. And that’s just always what concerned me more.

Q. And you would see lots of children that you thought should be better supervised at Neverland during periods when Michael wasn’t even there, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And your understanding was he had allowed people to bring children to Neverland, enjoy the premises, and when he wasn’t even around, right.

A. Yes.

Q. When that would happen, was it your understanding that Mr. Jackson was relying on the Neverland personnel to try and supervise or keep control.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Foundation. Personal knowledge as to what Mr. Jackson knew.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry, could you say that again.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes.

Q. When large numbers of children would visit Neverland with whoever came with them --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- and Mr. Jackson was not there, was it your understanding that Neverland staff or employees were supposed to supervise.

A. Yes, to some degree. And sometimes there was some children that got really out of control. Like, for instance, I think sometimes we would put the golf carts away or put the quads away, because some of them just -- they would probably have been a danger to themselves. So in that way, we did take a little bit more authority, probably, than we should have sometimes, but --

Q. When you say you would take authority, do you mean that you would sort of, in your mind, substitute for a parent almost.

A. Yeah. Sometimes, I think, yes.

Q. And are you talking about situations where, say, a lot of kids would come on buses, say, from the inner city, and in your opinion there would be too few adults taking care of them.

A. Typically those seemed to be better supervised than the kids that were left at Neverland without their parents.

Q. Right.

A. Because if Mr. Jackson wasn’t there and their parents weren’t there, it kind of would fall on us, and --

Q. Okay. Were there rules and procedures in effect at Neverland.

A. Somewhat, yes.

Q. And were they written up, to your knowledge.
A. As far as -- well, there was an employee handbook.
Q. And to your knowledge, did the employee handbook discuss what to do in situations where you had visitors.
A. I can’t remember. Sorry.
Q. When is the last time you looked at that handbook.
A. Probably ‘92, ‘93.
Q. Okay. That was quite a while ago. All right.
Now, in your interviews with the Santa Barbara Sheriffs, you often described Mr. Jackson as acting like a big kid.
A. Yes.
Q. But he seemed to enjoy playing with kids, right.
A. Yes.
Q. He seemed to enjoy the whole spirit of Neverland being to have fun with kids, right.
A. Yes, the whole thing of eating too much candy and riding the rides to get sick.
Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson do that.
A. No, I’m not saying that he did that, but I’m saying that’s the idea.
Q. Did you see Mr. Jackson eat a lot of candy.
A. Sometimes.

Q. How about on the rides.
A. No, I didn’t see that.
Q. When did you last work at Neverland.
A. September of 2003.
Q. Okay. So you worked for, what, 12 years or so.
A. Off and on, yeah.
Q. Off and on.

A. Off and on.

Q. Okay. You never saw the Arvizo kids look like they were intoxicated, did you.

A. No. I don’t remember them specifically being intoxicated. I don’t.

Q. You don’t remember you looking at their behavior and saying to yourself, “They look intoxicated to me,” right.

A. Yeah, no, they --

Q. That never happened, right.

A. No, I didn’t really ever pay attention.

Q. Okay.

A. So I don’t know.

Q. But just based on the times you were there, and the work you did and what you saw, you don’t recall ever seeing Gavin Arvizo, Star Arvizo, or Davellin Arvizo intoxicated, right.

A. Well, like when Star put the knife in my back, I mean, was he intoxicated. I don’t know. Was he just playing around. I don’t know. So --

Q. Let me just rephrase it, then.

To the best of your knowledge, during the time you observed the Arvizo children at Neverland, you never thought they were intoxicated, right.

A. I didn’t think so, no.

Q. Okay. Did you ever, in your mind, smell alcohol on the Arvizo kids.

A. No. I never paid attention.

Q. Okay. Now, you mentioned a party in August of 2003, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And that had something to do with Schaffel, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Was it your understanding that Schaffel hired special staff for that party.

A. I knew that he was doing something with it. If he hired somebody, I don’t remember. But I know that there was a lot of volunteers working there.

Q. People that normally didn’t work at Neverland.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And was it your understanding that Schaffel was trying to promote a particular artist.

A. I don’t know that.

Q. You don’t know what the purpose of the party was, right.

A. It was a birthday party, and I didn’t quite ever figure it out.

Q. Okay. You don’t know if Schaffel, for example, was promoting tickets on radio stations in Los Angeles, do you.

A. No. But I remember a radio station being there, I think, yeah. But I don’t know what the whole purpose was.

Q. Was it a Los Angeles radio station, if you know.

A. I can’t remember.

Q. Okay.

A. I think it was, though, when I think back. I want to say it was KISS FM, but I’m not sure.

Q. Was it your understanding that more people showed for that party than the staff at Neverland anticipated.

A. Yes. That was typical.

Q. Typical of parties.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when you’re planning a party -- excuse me, let me rephrase that.

When a party is going to take place at Neverland, how does the word get out to the staff.

A. It depends on how big it is or if there’s going to be a caterer. I mean, there’s -- there’s different ways that we would find out.

Q. Is a memorandum, for example, a memo --

A. Yes.

Q. -- typically generated.

A. Not -- I don’t want to say “typically,” but it has been, or else it was communicated verbally from a supervisor.

Q. And would a supervisor typically come to someone like you and say there’s going to be a big event on such and such a date at such and such a time.

A. Yes.

Q. And would you be asked to contribute in some way.

A. Yes.

Q. And were your jobs at these events typically the same or did you have different things to do, depending on the event.

A. Cleaning and serving.

Q. Okay. And where would all the food typically be cooked.

A. It depends on if there was a caterer or not. Sometimes it could be done at the barbecue area. Sometimes in the kitchen. Or if there’s a caterer, they could cook it outside. Or there was a barbecue out by the theater. So there was different places.

Q. Do you remember, in February of 2003, a number of entertainment executives from New York visited Neverland.

A. Oh, guy, I remember there was some special guests, but I don’t remember who.

Q. Do you remember Ed Bradley from --

A. 60 Minutes.

Q. Yeah.

A. Yes.

Q. You do remember him coming.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know approximately when that was.

A. No. I can’t say. I think it was after the documentary aired.

Q. Do you know if the Arvizos were visiting at that point in time.

A. I think they were.

My stomach’s growling. I’m sorry.

(Laughter.)

JUROR NO. 8: Do you want some candy. Do you want some.

THE WITNESS: I have some. Thank you.

BAILIFF NARRON: You can’t do that, ma’am.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you speak to Mr. Bradley.

A. No, I don’t think he spoke directly to me.

Q. Okay. Do you remember who he was with.

A. Other camera people. The crew. I think there was some other -- somebody else from 60 Minutes that was there, too.

Q. Did you ever meet a Mr. Jack Sussman, for example.

A. I can’t remember.

Q. Okay. Did you see Mr. Bradley walking around the property.

A. I remember him being in the kitchen. And I remember serving him lunch or setting out the food, a buffet for them.

Q. And where was the buffet.

A. In the kitchen, on the -- what do you call it. A bar.

Q. So Mr. Bradley and whoever he was with were in the main house, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you don’t know what time of day they were in there, do you.

A. No, but I want to say it was 11:00, 12 o’clock, something like that, 1:00.

Q. Okay. And one of your responsibilities was to prepare a meal for them.

A. No, I didn’t have to cook it. I would just have to help serve it and -- yeah.

Q. And were they eating at the main dining table.

A. Um, I think -- I know they ate in the kitchen. And they might have eaten at the dining table also, but I don’t remember.

Q. Okay. Do you recall Gavin and Star Arvizo visiting Neverland with their father David.

A. You know, in the back of my mind, I do. But I don’t remember anything specific about them being there.

Q. Okay. Do you have more of a memory of their being there with their mother.

A. Yes.

Q. And your memory of the Arvizo children being at Neverland with their mother is in primarily 2003; is that right.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall if you observed Janet Arvizo supervising her children while they were staying at Neverland.

A. What do you mean by “supervising”.

Q. Well, do you recall if Janet was -- appeared to be keeping tabs on her children at Neverland.

A. She stayed in her room a lot.

Q. But you said you would see her in the main house, right.

A. Yeah, when she went to go eat, or pick up her clothes from the laundry room, or --

Q. Would you see her in the main house with her children.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see her in the main house with her children often.

A. In the evenings she would mostly be there.

Q. In the main house.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And what would you see Janet Arvizo doing in the main house in the evenings at Neverland during 2003.

A. Eating dinner. Sitting with the kids. Playing a game that was on the counter in the kitchen. Just being with the kids.

Q. As best you can recall, would you see her spend hours in the main house at night.

A. I don’t want to say “hours,” but she’d probably spend a couple hours there. I was always so busy working, I didn’t really pay attention to what really the guests were doing.

Q. Did Janet Arvizo, in your opinion, tend to have her evening meal in the main house.

A. As far as I can remember, yes, is what I would say, yes.

Q. And would she typically eat with her children.

A. I don’t want to say typically eat with them, because they might eat at different times.

Q. But I guess what you’re saying is, you served her quite often, didn’t you.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in the main house, when a guest comes to eat, there often is a menu on a blackboard, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And the menu will say what’s being served that day, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And it could be breakfast, lunch or dinner, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And was it your understanding that Janet Arvizo would decide each day what type of food she wanted.

A. Well, if it wasn’t written on the blackboard, you know, the chefs or we would tell them what we had for dinner that night.

Q. And while the Arvizos were there, they would essentially give you their order, right.

A. Yes, I remember taking the order from the Arvizo kids at the dining room table. More often than not, they would eat in there. For a while, anyway.

Q. When you saw the Arvizo kids eating with their mother, was there often anyone else at the dining -- excuse me. Let me rephrase that.

When you would observe the Arvizo children eating with their mother in the main dining room, did you often see Michael there.

A. No, not typically.

Q. Would you typically see someone else having dinner with them.

A. With the Arvizo kids.

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the Cascio kids were there for a while when the Arvizos were there, and they would all eat dinner at the dining room table. And Gavin’s mom wouldn’t be at the dinner table, and neither would Mr. Jackson, for a while there.

Q. And where would you -- excuse me. Where would Janet Arvizo typically eat if she wasn’t at the dining room table.

A. At the table in the kitchen area, or like at the bar.

Q. Would you please describe for the jury what you mean by “the bar” area.

A. It’s just a place where you have like barstools, where you have the long counter, and there’s just barstools sitting there. And it has an arch with bricks over it, and it’s right there by the kitchen.

Q. That bar area is not far from the main dining room, right.

A. No, it’s not too far.

Q. And typically if you go there any time of day, you see some seats at the bar area, right.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And 24 hours a day, you’ll see glass dishes with various buns and --

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. -- doughnuts that were made for the day, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Jackson lets people go in there anytime and pick up a doughnut and take it with them, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And that refrigerator area is typically open, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Guests can walk in there and get juice or water or whatever they want to, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you would see Janet in that bar area quite often; is that correct.

A. Yeah, that's where I remember her eating, would be there.

Q. Would she sometimes eat before her children ate in the main dining room.

A. I can't say if it was before or after. But for a while there, she wasn't eating with them.

Q. But you also saw her eat with them from time to time, didn't you.

A. Yes, she had, too. I think that the reason why they were eating in the dining room, the kids, was because the Cascio kids were with them, and they were the ones that were eating in the dining room. But later on, she would eat in the breakfast -- or the breakfast nook or the bar with her kids.

Q. When you say "breakfast nook," would you see Janet eating breakfast in the main house.

A. I really didn't --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm going to object as cumulative. Relevancy.

THE COURT: She already said she didn't work in the mornings. Next question.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. Would it be accurate to say that Mr. Jackson seemed a lot closer to the Cascio children than the Arvizo children.

A. He's known them a lot longer, I think, so I think that he's formed more of a bonded relationship with them.

Q. Did it appear that when the Cascio children were at Neverland and the Arvizo children were at Neverland, that Michael Jackson would spend more time with the Cascio children than the Arvizo children.

A. Yes.

Q. You indicated you remember the Cascio children having food in Michael Jackson’s bedroom, right.

A. If that’s what it was, yes.

Q. And when you say “bedroom,” you’re talking about this part of the house that has two levels, right.

A. Yes.

Q. You go through a door and there’s a bottom level --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- right.

And then you can go up the stairs to an upstairs level, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you’ve seen the Cascio children on both levels, right.

A. Well, the only other time that I’ve really been in his bedroom is when he wasn’t home, to help move furniture or to put something in his room.

So I was only upstairs in his bedroom that one time when the Cascio kids were there when I was serving dinner, and that was the only time.

Q. And to your knowledge, they visited Neverland for years, right.

A. Yes.

Q. They’ve been visiting Neverland since you first started work, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know the father, Dominick.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen him there often.

A. Yes. Not as much as the children, but he was there often.

Q. Did you meet with any prosecutor to talk about what you were going to say today.

A. I spoke with them about coming here, yes.

Q. And when was that.

A. Yesterday.

Q. Who did you speak with.

A. Mr. Auchincloss.

Q. Was it by phone.

A. No.

Q. Did you have a meeting with him.

A. Yes.

Q. And where did the meeting take place.

A. At my house.

Q. Okay. And did Mr. Auchincloss come to your house.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a meeting with him.

A. Yes.

Q. How long was the meeting.

A. An hour or two. Two hours.

Q. Was anyone else there.

A. Detective Alvarez.

Q. Okay. Did Mr. Auchincloss give you anything to read.

A. No.

Q. Did you talk about what you’d be asked today.

A. Yes.

Q. And did he tell you what questions he was going to ask.

A. Just kind of gave me a guideline about where everything was going to go.

Q. Did you discuss with him what your responses to the questions might be.

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Auchincloss give you any suggestions --

A. No.

Q. -- about how to phrase things or anything like that.

A. No, no, no, no.

Q. So he would ask you questions and you would just tell him what your answer was, right.

A. Yeah.

Q. And it went an hour or two.

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. How many meetings have you had with Mr. Auchincloss.

A. Two.

Q. And when was the first meeting, other than the one you just described.

A. Probably around January.

Q. Okay. And where did that take place.

A. My house.

Q. How long did that meeting last.

A. Two hours.

Q. Okay. Did Mr. Auchincloss give you anything to read.

A. No.

Q. Have you ever been sent anything to read about this case from either the sheriffs or the prosecution.

A. No. I think that I -- I don’t know if I saw a copy of my testimony or something. I think I saw that.

Q. Did you. Okay.

A. I think.

Q. Do you know where you got that. Did somebody give it to you.

A. No, nobody gave it to me. I just saw it.

Q. Okay. We’re almost there.

A. Okay. Thanks.

THE COURT: From now on, on your subpoenas, I want you to put “Bring an energy bar.”

(Laughter.)

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. All right. I think we’re done.

THE WITNESS: Okay, great.

MR. MESEREAU: Just one second, if I can. I’m going to backtrack for a second. May I, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Where is the ranch house.

A. Probably like a half a mile or a mile away from the main house.

Q. And please describe for the jury what the ranch house looks like.

A. It’s just an older home that I think was there before the main house was built. And it’s -- it has two bedrooms, and two bathrooms, and a living room.

Q. And do guests sometimes stay at the ranch house.

A. Certain guests, yes.

Q. Do employees sometimes stay at the ranch house.

A. Yes, they have.

Q. You don’t often see Mr. Jackson at the ranch house, do you.

A. No. He’s been there, but he doesn’t really stay there.

Q. Did you ever see the Arvizos there.

A. Not that I can remember.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Thank you.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE COURT: Counsel.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Miss Fournier, did you ever deliver food to Mr. Jackson at the ranch house.

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions.

A. Well, I don’t know if he was there. I know that Joey was there, and he called to get some food to be delivered to the ranch house.

Q. Okay. Did you take the call.

A. I don’t remember if I took the call or not, but -- or somebody told me, but I brought the basket of food down there.

Q. Do you know -- what were your instructions as far as this basket of food goes.

A. To take some munchies down to the ranch house.

Q. On that day that you took some munchies to the ranch house, did you see Mr. Jackson in the presence of children after that period.

A. Yes.

Q. Did any of those children appear to be intoxicated.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember which -- what their names were.

A. I think Joey was there at the table.

Q. What’s -- do you know Joey’s last name.

A. No.

Q. Okay.

A. And there was -- I don’t remember their names right now.

Q. Okay. Were any of these children local children from the local community.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what town they’re from.

A. I think Los Olivos.

Q. Do you remember any of their names.

A. I can’t think of any of them right now.

Q. All right. You talked about the fact that there were certain -- there was a certain amount of excess at Neverland with children.

A. Yes.

Q. How long did that go on during your period of employment. How long was it that you felt that children were allowed -- didn’t have boundaries.

A. Well, the first day that I got there, there was silly string all over the inside of the house, so I don’t know if you would consider that, but -- no boundaries, but just something like that.

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson intoxicated.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I don’t know if he was intoxicated or he was under a doctor’s orders taking medication. I don’t know.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. My question goes to intoxicated by any substance, regardless of what. Did he ever appear to be under the influence of some substance.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see him where he appeared intoxicated in the presence of children who appeared intoxicated.

A. I can’t say for sure on that one.

Q. If you have an opinion, I’d like to know it.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You said you can’t say for sure. Why is that.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer that.

THE WITNESS: Well, that one time at the table, I remember him appearing like he might be intoxicated when I was serving.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. When the other children were also intoxicated.

A. I believe some of them were, yes.

Q. Yes. The three children that you mentioned.

A. Yes.

Q. Did Janet Arvizo ever have food delivered in her room.

A. Yes.

Q. When the Cascio children were there, did they spend time with the Arvizo children.

A. Yes.

Q. Would the Cascio and Arvizo children spend time together with the defendant.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you believe that Neverland is a healthy place for children.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; improper opinion.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Based on every -- well, I can finish the question, add a little to the question.

THE COURT: You may finish your question.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Based on everything you've seen there -- you've talked somewhat extensively on cross and direct about these boundaries, and about children misbehaving, and authority, that kind of thing. Based on everything you've seen and know about Neverland during your period of employment there, do you believe this is a healthy place for children, healthy environment.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Improper opinion; no foundation; relevance; 352.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you allow your own children to stay at Neverland.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; improper opinion; 352; foundation.

THE COURT: Relevance; sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: How far is it from the main gate of Neverland to the main residence.

A. I'm really bad on distances, but a mile, mile and a half maybe.

Q. And how far is it from the main gate to the nearest town.

A. Five miles.

Q. You mentioned that there were visitors that Mr. Jackson would invite into his house, and that was somewhat common; is that fair to say.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Would he invite these visitors who came into the house, typically would he invite them into his bedroom suite.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If you know.

THE COURT: All right. Answer "yes" or "no" if you know whether or not visitors were invited.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You do know.

A. Yes.

Q. Would they spend time in his bedroom suite.

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation; 1108.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s fine. I’ll move on.

THE COURT: I’ll overrule the objection and limit the questions in that area based on your objection.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

Q. You can go ahead and answer that question.

THE COURT: She did.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you.

THE COURT: The answer was “Yes.”

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You mentioned the phrase “wild boys.” Can you tell me what you mean by that.

A. When the children were unsupervised, they frequently became wild.

Q. And this supervision issue or the fact that children would become problematic in their behavior, was that known to Mr. Jackson based upon -- well, let me back up.

Did the children’s misbehavior occur in Mr. Jackson’s presence.

A. No.

Q. Was he aware that they would destroy things at Neverland.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know if Mr. Jackson was made aware of the destruction of golf carts, things of that nature, at Neverland.

A. Sometimes I think he was, because he would notice that things were broken or things were missing. So sometimes, yes.

Q. The families of -- you mentioned on cross-examination that the list of boys who were special friends of Mr. Jackson, you said that their families would stay at Neverland; is that true.

A. Yes.
Q. Would any of those children on that list stay at Neverland by themselves, without their families.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall which ones.
A. Brett Barnes did. Elijah did. Little Michael did. Is that enough.
Q. Well, I can just -- I can make this simple. I can go down the list. Frank Cascio.
A. Yes.
Q. How about his brother Aldo.
A. Yes.
Q. McCaulay Culkin.
A. Well, as an adult he was there alone. But when he was a child, I pretty much remember his parents being there when I was there.
Q. Brett Barnes.
A. He would come alone sometimes.
Q. Elijah.
A. Yes.
Q. Gavin.
A. I remember Gavin always having his mom.
Q. Okay. How about the Los Olivos boys that you've talked about.
A. They would be there without their parents.
Q. Jimmy Safechuck.

A. I think he did come a couple times without his parents.
Q. Wade Robison.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; 1108.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I believe it's a follow-up to counsel's question. But I'll move on.
Q. You said that you had a conversation with Frank about being an employee.
A. Yes.
Q. Did he tell you who he was an employee of.
A. No. I just assumed it was Mr. Jackson.

Q. Was he working at Neverland Ranch at the time.
A. Yes.
Q. What time period was this.
A. I don’t remember. I’m sorry.
Q. Okay. Do you know if it was in the 2003 -- the year 2003.
A. No, it was before that. I want to say about like 2001 or 2002.
Q. You said that Frank and Vinnie had desks set up in the video library.
A. Yes.
Q. When was that.
A. Oh, boy, I don’t remember. I don’t remember.
Q. But it was the period of time -- do you know if it was the period of time when the Arvizos were there.

A. Well, the desks were up there then, yes.
Q. Do you know if Frank and Vinnie were working at those desks during the period of time that the Arvizos were there.
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. Do you know who Frank was working for at that time.
A. Like I said, I assume it was Mr. Jackson.
Q. You said that busloads of kids would come to visit Mr. Jackson at Neverland, or visit Neverland, I should say.
A. Yes.
Q. Was Mr. Jackson there typically, when the busloads of kids would be there.
A. Not typically, but sometimes he was.
Q. Would those children spend the night.
A. Not the busloads of kids, no.
Q. Okay. So was there a difference between the kids that would be guests and children who would just come up in a busload.
A. Somewhat, yes.
Q. Was there a difference in the behavior of the children who were guests of Mr. Jackson than the behavior of the kids in the busloads.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.
THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: As far as Mr. Jackson leaving the ranch, you said that would be a frequent occurrence.
A. He did every once in a while. And sometimes we knew when he left, and sometimes we didn’t.
Q. Was there a difference in the attitude and behavior of the employees when Mr. Jackson was on the property.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: She’s an employee. I think she’s qualified to answer it.
MR. MESEREAU: Relevance.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled.
You may answer. Do you want the question read back.
THE WITNESS: That’s okay. I think I got it.
THE COURT: You think you got it.
THE WITNESS: We would always try to be on our absolute best behavior when Mr. Jackson was home.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And why was that.
A. Because we were supposed to, too, and because, you know, nobody wants to get fired.
Q. You said that Gavin always treated you with respect.
A. Yes.
Q. You were asked a question about did the Arvizo boys crash any carts, and then your answer was, “All of them crashed carts.” What did you mean by that.

A. All the kids that stayed as guests. I mean, I can’t think of anybody that would be exempt from crashing of the carts.
Q. So that would be a destructive behavior of all the kids that stayed.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll withdraw it.

Q. You said that Star Arvizo pulled a knife on you in the kitchen.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you feel threatened.

A. No.

Q. You're smiling.

A. Well, I mean, I didn't feel comfortable about it. Who wants a knife in your back, you know, but --

Q. Was it your impression that Star was joking with you.

A. Yes. I thought he was joking and trying to assert some sort of authority.

Q. All right. He didn't hurt you with the knife.

A. No.

Q. And didn't -- what did you say in response to him.

A. "You're going to have to catch me first."

Q. So did you feel like you were joking back to him when you said that.

A. Yeah, I was --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: You may answer the question. You started to answer it. Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Well, I didn't like it, so --

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: When you said that, did you feel like you were joking back.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; mischaracterizes the testimony.

THE COURT: Well, it's asked and answered.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, did you run afterwards. That's the --

A. No.

Q. So you weren't serious when you said that.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Were you serious when you said that.

A. Well, if he would have chased me, yes.

Q. But did he chase you.

A. No.

Q. Okay. As far as the destructive behavior, the problem with the guest unit where the glass was broken, I think you said soda was spilled on the floor --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- do you know when that occurred.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Not by me.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: It was towards the end of their stay in the beginning of 2003.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Do you have a distinct recollection of all these events in -- being in the beginning of 2003.

A. With the rooms being a mess, yes.

Q. Fair statement. So do you know, was it -- what shift were you working at that time.

A. Usually the late shift.

Q. So you saw the room in this condition at what time, approximately.

A. Actually, I think those few times I came in, the room was a mess, I think that they had actually left the property, because it was -- it was -- it was during the day that I had seen that.

So sometimes I would work earlier hours if there was nobody there, too, so it wasn’t required that somebody would stay late to serve dinner. So I think those instances would be more during the day that I remember them, not at night.

Q. Okay. And when you say they were staying in that unit, what does that mean.

A. That they were sleeping there.

Q. Okay. Do you know that they were sleeping

there.

A. No.

Q. Do you have any idea where those children were sleeping on those given nights.

A. No. Because I wasn’t there.

Q. Okay. So -- all right. Thank you.

A. Uh-huh.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. No further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Thank you.

MR. MESEREAU: May the witness be subject to re-call.

THE WITNESS: Is it okay if I go.

THE COURT: You’re free to leave. The attorney’s indicating that they may want to call you back, so that would be if somebody telephones you only. Under those conditions, you would have to come back.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. SNEDDON: Shawn O’Grady.

Your Honor, I would indicate to the Court we’re going to go back into the area that we were exploring yesterday.

All right. We’ll do --

THE COURT: Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

RUBY WOLFF

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record

THE WITNESS: Ruby Wolff, W-o-l-f-f.

THE BAILIFF: We have the wrong witness.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m sorry.

THE BAILIFF: This is Ruby Wolff.

MR. SNEDDON: I know that. She was already here.
THE BAILIFF: You called O’Grady.
MR. SNEDDON: I know. We changed it. She was already in the courtroom, so --

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. You’re employed by the sheriff’s department.
A. Yes.
Q. You’re going to have to lean into that.
How long have you been employed by the sheriff’s department.

A. Six years.
Q. And what is your present duty assignment.
A. I’m a detective.
Q. And where are you assigned in your detective responsibilities.
A. Santa Maria station.
Q. All right. And back in November 18th of 2003, were you assigned to participate in the execution of a search warrant at Neverland Valley Ranch.
A. Yes.
Q. And specifically what was your duty assignment at that time.
A. I was an interviewer and also a searcher.
Q. And during the course of the time that you were a searcher, did you seize anything at the location.
A. Yes.
Q. And could you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, where was it that you seized the item.
A. It was in the master bathroom in Mr. Jackson’s residence.
Q. And specifically what was it that you took.
A. It was a card.
Q. And where was the card located when you saw it for the first time.
A. It was next to a dresser next to a sink in the bathroom.

Q. And what did you do with that card after you seized it.

A. I took it to Detective Padilla.

Q. And he was what we call “the scribe”; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. You told him where it was located.

A. Yes.

Q. Where you found it.

Do you have that exhibit with you.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Let me identify it first.

No, the bag.

Your Honor, I have a brown bag with the number “#310” in the upper right-hand corner in black. And we’ve marked this as People’s 712 for identification purposes.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, would you just remove the item that’s inside the bag. 712. And do you recognize that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And was that the item that you seized and gave to Detective Padilla.

A. Yes.

Q. And is it in the same condition as it was at the time that you seized it.

A. Yes, it is.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Move that 712 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

MR. MESEREAU: May I look at it for one second, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

No objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. It’s admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: No further questions, Your Honor.

MR. MESEREAU: May I just look at the card, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Does -- Detective, is that the --

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Thank you. Detective, you found this card where.

A. In the master bathroom.

Q. Okay. And the card says, “I miss you, Daddy Michael,” correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you read the card when you found it.

A. Yes.

Q. And what did you do after you read the card.

A. Gave it to Detective Padilla.

Q. Okay. Now, this card says the following: “Dear Daddy Michael. How are you. I can’t wait to see you again and play with you at Neverland, because we are going to be best friends and you are my daddy forever,” right.

A. Right.

Q. It says, “You are the finest grown-up in the world. I love you, Daddy Michael. And tell my little brother and little sister that I love and care about them. Thank you for everything, Daddy Michael. Thank you for being my Daddy Michael. Thank you for helping me be happy and beat cancer. Happy Daddy’s Day, and I love you more. Love, your Doo-Doo Head, Gavin Arvizo,” right.

A. Yes.

Q. And then there’s a heart and there’s print inside the heart that says, “I love my Daddy Michael forever,” right.

A. Yes.

Q. And then it says, “P.S.: Please give me your new phone numbers, because I miss talking to you.”

And then the writing continues, “My phone number is 626-452-1693,” right.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, this card was in the purple envelope, right.

A. Yes.
Q. And the envelope was addressed to “Daddy Michael, from your son Gavin,” right.
A. Yes.
Q. And you see little faces that appear to be sort of written on the envelope, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever discuss this card with anyone besides the person you gave it to.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Did you ever see it after you gave it to the person you gave it to.
A. Not up until coming here.
Q. Okay. Okay. Did you know, when you came in here, you were going to be asked questions about this card.
A. Yes.
Q. How did you know that.
A. We were just told to review our evidence.
Q. Okay. Were you told you’re not going to be asked questions about anything else you seized, just the card.
A. That’s the only item I seized.
Q. Okay. So during your search, that was the only thing you actually seized that day.
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Do you recall having a meeting before the search with all of the people involved in the search.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, she -- I’m going to object as beyond the scope of direct.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you receive any direction before you seized this item from anybody.

MR. SNEDDON: Same objection, Your Honor. It would call for hearsay.

THE COURT: You can answer that “yes” or “no.” You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Who did you receive direction from.

A. We all had a copy of a search warrant.

Q. Did you also have a copy of a Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Department operations plan.

MR. SNEDDON: Same objection, Your Honor. Beyond the scope of direct.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you read that operations plan.

A. Yes.

Q. And approximately when did you read it before you searched the main house.

A. I don’t recall the exact time frame.

Q. And do you know the date that you conducted the search.

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that date.

A. November the 18th, 2003.

Q. Do you know approximately how many people were involved in that search.

A. Approximately 69 people.

Q. Were they mostly sheriff’s personnel.

A. Yes.

Q. Did the 69 people who searched Mr. Jackson’s home meet somewhere before the search.

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you meet.

A. I can’t recall the exact street.

Q. Did all 69 people arrive at the same time.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object as vague, as to arrive where.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase it, Your Honor.

Q. Did all 69 people involved in the search of

Mr. Jackson’s home enter the premises at the same time, to your knowledge.

A. I can’t recall. We were all behind one another.

Q. What was your assignment.

A. I was an interviewer and also a searcher.

Q. Were you told specifically where you were going to search.

A. I can’t recall.

Q. How did you end up in the room where you found this particular card, if you know.

A. It was an area that hadn’t been searched yet.

Q. And which -- which area was that.

A. In the master bathroom.

Q. And did someone tell you it hadn’t been searched yet.

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that.

A. I don’t -- I can’t recall.

Q. Okay. Were you armed at the time.

A. Yes.

Q. Were the 69 people you mentioned all armed.

A. I don’t know.

Q. Okay. Who entered the premises first.

A. I don’t know.

Q. Okay. Who else searched the master bathroom.

A. I know Detective Pierce was there. And I don’t recall the other detectives that were in there.

Q. Was the area where you found this particular card that says “I miss you, Daddy Michael,” was that area videotaped, to your knowledge.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see it being videotaped.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you arrange for it to be videotaped.

A. No.
Q. Are you on that videotape.
A. Not that I’m aware of. I don’t know.
Q. Okay. When you found the card, did you touch it.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you pick it up.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you read it.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you take it out of the envelope.
A. Yes.
Q. Then what did you do with it.
A. I took it to Detective Padilla.
Q. Was it ever videotaped where you found it, to your knowledge.
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Okay. Now, when the team of 69 people got together, you got some instructions about what to do with the media, correct.
A. Not that I can recall.
Q. Do you recall any discussion about media’s going to be at Neverland or watching Neverland during the search.
A. No.
Q. Do you recall any media being there.
A. I believe there were helicopters above.
Q. Do you know who told the media about this search with 69 people at Mr. Jackson’s residence.

A. No.
Q. But you saw copters everywhere.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see people with cameras on the ground.
A. As we were driving in, there was, I believe, one cameraperson.
Q. Did you see cameras when you left.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see media trucks.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Now, when these 69 people went on the property, people who worked at Neverland were not free to leave, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. I mean, at some point they were allowed to leave, but for a certain period of time, none of you would allow them to leave the premises, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And to your knowledge, your department issued a press release that day, correct.

A. I don’t recall that.

Q. You were unaware that your department issued a press release announcing this big search of Mr. Jackson’s home.

A. I don’t recall specifics on who arranged that.

Q. Do you know if any fingerprint testing has ever been done on this card that has the words “I miss you, Daddy Michael”.

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you arrange for anything like that.

A. No.

Q. Would it have been your responsibility to do that.

A. No. I believe it would have been possibly forensics.

Q. Were you wearing gloves when you touched the card.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. How many people were in the master bathroom with you when you searched.

A. I don’t recall.

Q. Was it you alone.

A. No.

Q. Was it more than three.

A. I don’t recall.

Q. Okay. Is there any other area of the main house that you searched on that day.

A. Yes.

Q. Where else did you search.

A. I believe Mr. Jackson’s daughter’s room.

Q. Okay. Did you search that room alone.

A. No.
Q. Were you with other people when you searched that room.

A. Yes.
Q. How many, if you know.
A. I don’t recall.
Q. Now, you indicated you reviewed the operations plan, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And you read it before the group of 69 people met, right.
A. Yes.
Q. To your knowledge, everybody else had a copy of that operations plan, right.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. What did you see in the dresser, other than the card, if you remember.
A. I don’t recall specifics.
Q. Now, when you looked at this operations plan, you were informed that a prior investigation into Mr. Jackson had been terminated, right.
MR. SNEDDON: Object. It calls for hearsay, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: It was your understanding that this search with 69 people grew out of an attorney calling Santa Barbara --
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object. It’s beyond the scope of direct.
THE COURT: Sustained. Sustained. It’s outside the scope.

MR. MESEREAU: Last question.
Q. Your property report says you retrieved other greeting cards, correct.
A. That’s not correct.
Q. Is that not correct.
A. That’s not correct.
Q. Okay. It was only one greeting card.

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions, Your Honor.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you. No further questions.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: Let’s try O’Grady this time. Detective. Did you walk off with the bag.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I did. Sorry about that.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you.

THE COURT: Come forward. When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

SHAWN O’GRADY

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: It’s Shawn O’Grady. S-h-a-w-n. O, apostrophe, G-r-a-d-y.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Deputy O’Grady, you’re employed by the sheriff’s department, correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. How long have you been with the sheriff’s department.

A. Since 1997.

Q. And were you assigned to participate in the execution of a search warrant on November the 18th of 2003.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And that was at Neverland Valley Ranch.

A. That’s correct.

Q. And in connection with the execution of that search warrant, did you perform any responsibility about searching.

A. Yes, I did.
Q. And where were you assigned to search.
A. I was assigned to search the bedroom, the bathroom area of Michael Jackson’s room.
Q. As a result of your looking in the area you’ve described to the jury, did you seize something.

A. Yes, I did.
Q. And what did you seize.
A. I seized a book with sexually explicit material in it.
Q. And where was that book located the first time that you saw it.
A. It was on the border of his bathtub.
Q. I’m going to show you an exhibit that’s in evidence as People’s Exhibit 62.
Do you recognize that photograph.
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Is that the area you searched.
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Do you see in that photograph the location of the item that you seized.
A. Yes, I do.
Q. And does that photograph depict the location of that item at the time you first saw it.
A. Yes, it does.
Q. Would you please circle and put your initials. And I’m going to ask you to put the number “588” by it.
Thank you. Your Honor, at this time I have an item, it’s a brown bag with a “#307” in black in the upper right-hand corner, and it’s marked as People’s 588 for identification purposes. I’d like the bag and its contents marked as Exhibit 588.

THE COURT: All right. That’s 588.
MR. SNEDDON: Go ahead, or give time to counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: We're okay. We're okay.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. Good. The next item I'd like to have marked for identification purposes is a one-page photograph marked as People's Exhibit No. 711 for identification purposes.

Q. All right. I'm going to ask you some questions.

I direct your attention, first of all, to the bag that's in front of you that's been marked as People's 588 for identification purposes, all right.

Would you look at the contents of the bag, please.

Yeah, just --

Now, you've taken out of that bag a book, correct.

A. That's correct.

Q. Do you recognize that book.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Is that the item you seized on November 11th.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. At the location depicted in the photograph.

A. That's correct.

Q. After you took that item into your custody and care, what did you do with it then.

A. Took it to where we were doing the -- or, actually, I went to Lieutenant Klapakis and asked him if this is something that he wanted seized.

Q. Okay. And after that conversation, what did you do.

A. He said it was, and we took it over where we were bagging the evidence up.

Q. And what was -- was that where Detective Padilla was.

A. That is correct.

Q. Is that book in the same condition as it was on the day that you seized it.

A. It appears to be, yeah.

Q. And with regard to the exhibit that's in front of you, 711, do you see that.

A. Yes.

Q. Does 711 accurately depict the front cover of that book.

A. Yes, it does.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’d move that 588 and 711 be admitted into evidence.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: They’re admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And the exhibit that’s on the overhead there is Exhibit 711, correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. And that’s the one that you said accurately depicts the front cover of the book that you have in front of you, which is 588, correct.

A. Yes, that’s correct.

Q. All right. Thank you.

I have no further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Are you going to want the Elmo on.

MR. MESEREAU: No, Your Honor. That’s okay. But I would like to see the item of evidence.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Mr. O’Grady, you seized a book titled “Bidgood,” and the name is “Taschen” at the bottom; is that correct.

A. Yes, that’s correct.

Q. And do you know where that book came from.

A. No.

Q. Do you know that Mr. Taschen is a German photographer who was going to photograph the Jackson family.

A. I have no idea, no.

Q. Are you aware that Mr. Taschen sent this to Mr. Jackson.

A. No, I do not.

Q. And that’s Peter Pan on the cover, correct.

A. I don’t know. It looks like a person playing a pan flute. Could be like a mythological person or something.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions.

MR. SNEDDON: Jeff Ellis.
THE COURT: Do you have any other questions.
MR. SNEDDON: No, I’m sorry. No further questions.
THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.
MR. SNEDDON: I’ll take those out of the way for you.
THE COURT: Remain standing. Face the clerk, please. Raise your right hand.

JEFFERY ELLIS
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.
THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: My name is Jeffery Ellis. J-e-f-f-e-r-y. Ellis, E-l-l-i-s.
THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SNEDDON:
Q. Mr. Ellis, you’re employed by me.
A. That’s correct. By the District Attorney’s Office.
Q. And how long have you been a detective/ investigator with the Santa Barbara District Attorney’s Office.

A. For four years.
Q. And prior to that, did you have any law enforcement experience.
A. I did. I was a police officer in Lompoc for nine years.
Q. Now, on November the 18th of 2003, you participated in the execution of a search warrant at Neverland Valley Ranch, correct.
A. I did.
Q. And during the course of your assignment there, were you involved in doing some searching.

A. I did.

Q. And during the time that you were searching, did you seize an item.

A. I did.

Q. And do you recall where that item was that you seized.

A. It was in the lower -- what I would describe as the lower portion of the bedroom, Michael Jackson’s bedroom, the downstairs.

Q. And where downstairs.

A. Near the fireplace.

Q. And was it on -- sitting on something, or on the floor, or do you recall.

A. It was in a bag, a B. Dalton book bag on the floor, as I recall.

Q. And then when you seized that item, what did you do with it.

A. I gave it to the deputy that was logging in evidence.

Q. Would that be Detective Padilla.

A. Yes, Detective Padilla.

Q. All right.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’ve shown counsel the two exhibits I would like to have marked. The first one is a brown paper bag that contains the number “#313” at the top. And it has an evidence tag number 589 for identification purposes. And a photograph, one-page photograph that we’ve had marked as People’s 710 for identification purposes.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection, Your Honor.

MR. SNEDDON: Well, let me get there first.

MR. MESEREAU: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: I appreciate the cooperation, but....

Q. All right. Detective Ellis, first of all, why don’t you take a look at the book, the Exhibit 589. You’re removing the book from the bag, correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. Do you recognize that book.

A. I do.
Q. And was that the book that you seized from Mr. Jackson’s downstairs bedroom area.
A. That appears to be the same book.

Q. Now, with regard to the exhibit, is it in the same condition as it was at the time you seized it.
A. It appears to be.
Q. All right. And with regard to the Exhibit 710 the photograph, do you see that.
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Does that photograph accurately depict the front page of the Exhibit 589.
A. It does.
Q. All right. Thank you. Why don’t you hand me just that.
Your Honor, now I’m going to move to admit it into evidence.
MR. MESEREAU: No objection.
THE COURT: Both items.
MR. SNEDDON: Please, Your Honor. 589 and 710.
THE COURT: They’re admitted.
MR. SNEDDON: And we’re going to display the Item 710 on the Elmo, Your Honor.
Q. Detective Ellis, that’s the item that you seized in the bag on the floor.
A. It is.
Q. That’s the front cover of it.
A. The front cover, yes.
MR. SNEDDON: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s time for our break.
(Recess taken.)
THE COURT: Counsel.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Is it detective.

A. It’s investigator.

Q. Investigator, okay. Okay.

Investigator, referring you to Item 313 --

A. Okay.

Q. -- which was just in front of you.

A. Yes.

Q. Whether you like this kind of material or not, this is not illegal, is it.

A. Not as far as I know.

Q. Okay. In fact, you can get material like this on amazon.com, correct.

A. I believe you can.

Q. Okay. Do you know if this was ever tested for fingerprints.

A. I don’t know that.

Q. Okay. You seized it, though, right.

A. I seized it, yes.

Q. Did you have gloves on.

A. I had gloves on during the search, yes.

Q. Who did you give this to.

A. Detective Padilla.

Q. Okay. Did he have gloves on, to your knowledge.

A. I really don’t remember.

Q. Do you know if anybody ever suggested this book be fingerprinted.

A. No, I wouldn’t know that.

Q. I guess now that I’ve touched it, my prints are on it, right.

A. That’s correct.

Q. What is the procedure for having something like this fingerprinted.

A. I really wouldn’t know. That’s kind of beyond the scope of my involvement in the case.

Q. So you typically see something you want to seize, you transport it to who you think is next in the chain to receive it, right.

A. Well, in this case that’s correct.

Q. Okay. And why were you giving it to this person.

A. To Detective Padilla.

Q. Yes.

A. Because he was the person that was designated as being in charge of logging and packaging the evidence that was seized.

Q. Did you look and see what Detective Padilla did with it.

A. I saw him put it in a bag.

Q. Was that the last time you saw it until today.

A. No. Until Tuesday.

Q. Okay. Okay. But you had no responsibility at all to ensure or request fingerprint testing.

A. No. That was beyond the scope of my involvement.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: No questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may step down.

MR. SNEDDON: Conn Abel.

Would you have Conn come down.

MR. ELLIS: Yes, I will.

THE COURT: Please face the clerk and raise your right hand.

CONN ABEL

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Conn Abel, A-b-e-l.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Hi, Mr. Abel. You’re employed by the sheriff’s department, correct.

A. Yes, I am.

Q. You’re going to have to lean into that microphone here.

A. Yes.

Q. We’re all having the same problem here. How long have you been a deputy sheriff.

A. 30 years.

Q. In the course of your experience as a deputy sheriff, how long have you been a detective.

A. I was a detective for eight years, and then I supervised a detective -- narcotics detectives for approximately two years.

Q. How long were you assigned to narcotics.

A. Eight years.

Q. Now, going back to November 18th of 2003, were you involved in the execution of a search warrant at Neverland Valley Ranch.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And were you assigned certain responsibilities in connection with that search.

A. Yes.

Q. And was one of the areas you were assigned to search an area known as the arcade.

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And could you describe just basically to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what the arcade looked like, as you recall.

A. The bottom floor was a multitude of just about every arcade game that you could possibly think of, a photo booth.

The back of the arcade towards what I call the north area of the arcade, was a storage room.

Outside the back door, there was some showers, dressing rooms.

Upstairs in the arcade were a couple more games. I believe there were a couple more games upstairs.

And then as you walked through the door up -- which I believe was like the north door of the upstairs, there was a library.

Q. Is there a room that is called a cellar.

A. Yes, there is.

Q. And did you go down into the cellar --

A. Yes, I did.

Q. -- as part of your responsibilities.

A. Yes.

Q. And in the cellar, can you tell us whether or not you saw any alcoholic beverages down there.

A. Yes, there were.

Q. Would you tell the jury what you saw and where you saw it.

A. On a wall in the back of the -- what I call the kitchen area, as you go down into the cellar, you would then make a right turn and go into the main cellar area.

If you continued going right, you would then go around another corner, and there was an entryway into a little kitchen area. And in that kitchen area there were bottles of wine on the wall, red and white wine.

In a storage cabinet, there were just a multitude of different types of liquor. Vodka, whiskey, liqueurs. And then there were open bottles of wine and liqueurs in the refrigerator.

Q. Do you remember the name of any of the vodkas you saw there.

A. I do remember Smirnoff, Skyy, Grey Goose. I think there was another one that was listed in the report, Chopin. Maybe Chopin.

Q. Don’t look at me. I don’t drink that stuff.

A. I remember in the report, it said Chopin.

And I remember Skyy, Grey Goose, Smirnoff would be for sure.

Q. Okay. Now, during the time that you were in the cellar, did you seize any items of literature -- or books.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And let me show you a couple of exhibits, if I can.

Well, do you remember the number of books that you took. Let me do it another way. Let me do it another way.

All right. Your Honor, for the record, I've handed down -- and they've had a chance to examine it. The first number is 581 for identification purposes. It's a clear plastic bag that has inside of it a brown bag with the numbers "#505" on it, and it appears to contain several books.

Item 582 is another brown bag with "#508" at the top right-hand corner. It's a brown bag that contains a book.

And the last item, Your Honor, is Item 583, with a black number "#509" in the upper right-hand corner.

All right. Detective Abel, with regard to -- let's start with the first one, if we can, which is 581. Do you see that bag.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And with regard to the brown bag that's inside it, it has several books, correct.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Would you remove the books and examine them for a moment, if you would.

All right. With regard to the three books that you took out of the item marked as 581 for identification purposes, do you recognize those three books.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Could you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury where those books were located the first time that you saw them.

A. The books were located -- as I mentioned before, you went into the library, and you continued to the right into the main area. I'm sorry, of the cellar. You continue into the right, and then straight ahead to the right there would have been a wine rack on the wall, which did not have wine in it. Kind of in the left lower corner of that wine rack that was on the wall, these books were sitting in the wine rack.

Q. You mentioned before there was a wine rack with wine in it. Where was that located in relationship to this one where the books were found.
A. That would have been in the kitchen area. That would have been continuing on to the right around the corner and into the kitchen area.
Q. So this is in the larger area.
A. This is in the main -- the main cellar area.
Q. Are those books in the same condition that they were on the day that you seized them.
A. They appear to be, yes.
Q. And when you obtained those books and decided to seize those books, what did you do with them.
A. I gave those -- these books -- I instructed Detective Cooley to retain those books as evidence.
Q. And by "these books," do you mean the ones that were inside the bag marked "581".

A. Yes, sir. There are three books total.
Q. Correct.
A. Yes.
Q. That you gave to Detective Cooley.
A. Yes.
Q. That were in 581.
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: Move they be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. MESEREAU: No objection.
THE COURT: All right. They're admitted. That's 581, 582 and 583.
MR. SNEDDON: Would you put those back in the bag right now.
THE COURT: No, those are -- just 581. Those are all books within 581.
MR. SNEDDON: Yes, sir.
THE COURT: Okay.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, let's turn our attention to 582, if we can.
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would you examine the contents of 582, please. All right. Do you recognize the book that you took out of the bag marked as 582 for identification purposes.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And where was that book located the first time that you saw it.

A. It was in a cardboard box that was located in the upstairs library.

Q. So we're out of the cellar now; is that correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And we're on the second floor of the arcade.

A. Yes.

Q. And there's a library up there.

A. Yes.

Q. And this was located where in relationship to the actual library books.

A. If I could explain. As you entered into the library, there were rows and racks of built library racks where books would fit in them. However, in the room, it was jam-packed full of bags and boxes that were stacked throughout the library also. This happened to be in a cardboard box that was stacked in the library.

Q. Okay. And after you determined to take the item marked as 582, who did you give that item to, if anyone.

A. Detective Cooley again.

Q. With the same process.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And does that book appear to be in the same condition it was at the time that you seized it on November the 18th of 2003.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, move it be admitted into evidence.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
MR. MESEREAU: I'll say no further objection.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, lastly, let's go to the item that's marked as Exhibit 583 for identification purposes. Do you recognize that book.
A. Yes, I do.
Q. And where was the item -- the book that you've taken out of 583, where was that located the first time that you saw it.
A. In a box in the library, a cardboard box within the library.
Q. Do you know whether or not it was in the same kind of cardboard box as the other exhibit or in a different one.
A. I seem to recall it was together, but I can't recall exactly for sure if they were in the same box or if they were in a box -- it was in a box right next to that one.
Q. Okay. Fair enough.
And is it in the same condition that it was at the time you first saw it.

A. Yes.
Q. And did you follow the same process with regard to giving that to Deputy Cooley.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. All right. Why don't you put that back in there, if we could.
And, Your Honor, I would move it be admitted into evidence.
MR. MESEREAU: No objection. No further objection.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
You don't have to say that. I understand the other hearing you reserved those objections.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, for the record, I want to indicate that the first item I showed counsel was a brown paper bag with a figure "#1001" and “#1001,” capital “A” in the upper right-hand corner.

And within that brown bag, there are two -- the brown bag, the items inside are marked for identification purposes separately, but I think I probably should put a separate one on the brown bag itself just for purposes of housekeeping.

Is that the recommendation of the clerk and the Court.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Thank you.

So the record will be complete then, Your Honor, the brown bag itself is going to be marked as 714 for identification purposes. And the plastic bag inside of 714 that contains a brown bag has been marked as 584. And the second clear plastic bag which contains a white binder is 585. So 584 and 585 are inside of the 714.

The second item is another brown bag, Your Honor, that has “#1002” and “#1002,” capital “A,” and I’m affixing the evidence stamp as Evidence Stamp No. 716 for identification purposes.

And these items I’ve shown to counsel. And they contain items that are marked for identification purposes as 586, which is a clear plastic bag containing a brown bag. And the second item is 587, which contains a clear plastic bag with a white binder with the “Item 1002” on the front of it.

And then lastly, Your Honor, I have shown counsel two photographs. The first one is marked as People’s 713 for identification purposes. And the second one is Exhibit No. 715 for identification purposes.

Q. All right. Detective Abel, let me ask you this: In addition to the areas that you’ve described to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury that you searched that day, was there another area that you were assigned to search.

A. Yes, there was.
Q. And what area was that.
A. That was what is referred to as the museum and/or Mr. Jackson’s office area.
Q. And in that particular office area, were there some -- were there some items that you seized.
A. Yes.
Q. And with regard to the exhibits that are in front of you that are marked as -- I’m sorry, the first brown bag is what, seven --
A. 716.
Q. 7 -- no, on the tag. The evidence tag. The manila one right where your hand is.
A. It says Exhibit 716.
Q. Oh, okay. And the second one.
A. 714.
Q. Okay. Now, with regard to those two exhibits, 716 and 714, where within the office were they found.
A. They were in a rest room area of the office. And as you entered the rest room, the toilet area would have been to the right. To the left was a sink/cabinet area.
And the magazines, if you opened up the middle drawers -- doors of the cabinet, they were on a flat shelf underneath that cabinet.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I have shown counsel two photographs that have been marked previously for identification purposes as 105 and 106 for identification purposes.

Q. Detective, with regard to the photographs, People’s Exhibit 105, do you recognize what’s depicted in that photograph.
A. Yes.
Q. Is that an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.
A. Yes.
Q. With regard to 106, is that an accurate depiction of what it purports to represent.
A. Yes.

Q. With regard to --

Your Honor, I move they be admitted into evidence.

THE COURT: They're admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Now, if we can just have --

I'll get them from you.

Your Honor, I'm going to use the Elmo for the next few minutes.

Now, that is Exhibit 105. Do you recognize that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Could you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what that photograph depicts.

A. It's the cabinet that would be on the left-hand side as you walk in, and that would be the right-hand side of that sink/cabinet area as you looked at it and you opened it up.

Q. And with regard to the photograph, or the magazine depicted in that photograph, is that one of the magazines that you took from that area.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know whether that would be the item contained in 716 or 714.

A. I'd have to look real quick.

Q. Why don't you do that for us, please. It should have a separate exhibit number on it, so feel free to pull those out, because I'm going to ask you some more questions.

A. It would be the one that was in Exhibit 714.

Q. And it has a separate identification number that's on the brown bag in front -- I'm sorry. In the plastic bag you just pulled out, what's the number on that.

A. 585.

Q. All right. The white binder, 585, contains the magazine depicted in the photograph, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, do you see the photograph that we've placed on the board, which is 106, I believe.

A. Yes. Yes, I do.

Q. And what is that.

A. That was the left-hand side of the cabinet that would -- with a door on it that you could open up.

Q. And does that photograph depict the location of the item that you seized.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. And the item itself.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, when you seize -- by the way, we should tie up a loose end here.

With regard to the photograph, 106, and the magazine depicted in that photograph, the exhibit -- which one of the large brown bags did that come out of. That would be 716.

A. That’s the one that’s up there now.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. 716.

Q. All right. Would you please take those exhibits out.

And you’re removing the plastic sleeve from the white binder. I can’t even talk.

A. That is marked 587.

Q. 587.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Now, please look at the first page of that, if you would. Do you recognize that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And is that the magazine that you seized on November 18th.

A. It’s in a little different condition, but, yes.

Q. It wasn’t all put in a binder at that time.

A. That’s correct.

Q. It’s the way it was depicted in the photograph.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, you have -- and why don’t you leave those out for just a second. There's two additional photographs that I presented to you up there.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And with regard to -- what are the numbers of those photographs.

A. 713.

Q. Okay.

A. And 715.

Q. All right. Let's talk about 713. Does 713 accurately depict the front cover of the magazine you took out of the Exhibit 716.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. It's an accurate depiction of that.

A. Appears to be, yes.

Q. And then let's go to 715. That photograph, can you compare that to the front page of the exhibit that came out of seven -- 714. Or just give me the exhibit number. That's fine.

A. It came out of 585. The 715, which is marked, which is the paper you gave me, is an accurate depiction of the front page of the magazine that I took from that cabinet.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. So, Your Honor, I'd move that 713 and 715 be admitted into evidence.

THE COURT: They're admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, just a housekeeping matter. I did move 105 and 106 in evidence.

THE CLERK: (Nods head up and down.)

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. All right. I'm going to place 713 on the board, on the Elmo.

All right. That's the photograph that you identified as being a depiction of the front cover of the item you seized; is that correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. And the next exhibit.

That one is marked as 715, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is that the photograph that you identified as being an accurate depiction of the front cover of that magazine that you took.

A. Yes, it is.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. I think we can have the lights now, Your Honor.

Q. Actually, I guess I should probably show those books. Might as well do that and get that over with, and then I have only one more question to ask. Why don't you hand me those.

All right. We're going to just ask you to -- from the three books that are in five -- it's an oversized book, but is that the title of the book that you seized.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Do you remember why you seized it.

A. It depicted male and female nudes. Some, if not -- I'm not sure how many, but it would appear that they were adolescent or young in appearance.

Q. Okay. And the second book. Doesn't have a title. But do you remember that book.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. I'm sorry, I guess it does on the -- it's called "Drew and Jimmy." Do you recall that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. With regard to that book, do you recall why you took that book.

A. I recall that it depicted males that were either nude and/or semi-nude.

Q. And the last book is called "Room to Play." Do you recall why you seized that book.

A. Because it depicted male and/or female young-appearing individuals that were nude and/or semi-nude.

Q. The next one I'm going to show you is from 582. It's in evidence. Do you recall that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And the reason that you took that.

A. It depicted males and/or females that looked and/or appeared to be youthful, nude and/or semi-nude.

Q. Now, with regard to -- do you see the front part of the face on this particular exhibit.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. 582.

A. Yes.

Q. Was that the condition of the book at the time that you seized it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then the last one that's in People's 583, which is called Cronos.

A. Yes.

Q. For the court reporter, that's C-r-o-n-o-s.
And do you recognize that item.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And why did you take that.

A. It has a multitude of pictures in it showing photographs of individuals from a youthful age to an older age, nude and semi-nude.

Q. All right. Thank you.
All right. I believe we can have the lights back on, Your Honor.

MR. MESEREAU: I thought you were through.

MR. SNEDDON: No, almost.
All right. The last item that I have with this witness is a large plastic case that we have had marked -- and I've shown it to counsel -- we've had marked as 717 for identification purposes, and has on the front of it a white sheet of paper with the Item No. 1009 for tracking purposes.

Q. Now, Detective Abel, I've handed you the Exhibit 717, the black case.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with that.

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And where was that item the first time that you saw it.

A. It was in what I'd describe as a closet area, closet/storage area of the main -- or Mr. Jackson's museum or office.

Q. And with regard to that particular item, was it open or closed at the time that you took it. I'm sorry, I want to rephrase that. Was it open or closed at the time you first saw it.

A. Closed.

Q. And did you open it up.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And would you describe to the ladies and gentlemen -- first of all, let me go back, just to do a little foundation here.

You told the ladies and gentlemen of the jury that you worked narcotics for a while; is that correct.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Quite a while, actually.

A. Yes.

Q. And in the course of working narcotics, did you become familiar with surveillance equipment.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you become familiar with equipment that is used to monitor telephone calls.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And with regard to the Exhibit 717 that you found in Mr. Jackson's closet in Mr. Jackson's office, with regard to that particular exhibit, when you opened it up, did you recognize what was inside.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what was inside.

A. There was a large tape-recorder capable of accepting multiple headsets. There's wire packages in there. There's a suction cup that would be utilized to monitor phone calls. There's wires that would plug into it that have adapters that go into phone receptors. There's extendable -- not "extendable." There's small little, what we'd call, to a degree, pinpoint, pinhole-type microphones that are in there that have adapters or have the fittings on it that fit into that type of recorder.

So in my opinion, it was used to monitor activity, conversations on the phone and/or off the phone.

Q. Now, with regard to the exhibit itself, when you opened it up, were there any written materials inside.
A. Yes, there were.
Q. What were they.
A. There's a business card for a private investigator inside of it. There are price lists for the itemized items. There are detailed instructions on how to monitor and video-surveil a room. There's detailed instructions on how to operate and tape phone calls.
Q. Were the instructions the kind that were preprinted or were they in some handwritten form; do you recall.
A. There's some of both in there.
Q. Some of both.
A. Some of both.
Q. Okay. Now, with regard to the Item 717, after you seized it and took it into your possession, what did you do with it.
A. I gave it to Detective Cooley to package as evidence.
Q. And does it appear to be in the same condition now as it was when you seized it.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And with regard to the contents of it, I asked you during your three days of waiting here to open it up and inspect the items inside, correct.

A. Yes, you did.
Q. And those items are in the same condition as when you turned it over to Deputy Cooley.
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, move 717 be admitted into evidence.
MR. MESEREAU: Relevancy.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Detective, in your experience, and based upon your training and your years as a narcotics officer, could you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury whether or not it is legal for someone to listen in to or monitor another person’s telephone call.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; no foundation.

THE COURT: It calls for a legal conclusion. I’ll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Are you familiar with the existence of laws that proscribe the conduct of listening in to other people’s telephone calls.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you have to learn those in connection with your responsibilities as a narcotics officer and as a sheriff, deputy sheriff.

A. Yes, sir.

MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Cross-examine.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. With respect to that equipment you just described --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- did you ever determine if it had ever been used.

A. It appears to have been, yes.

Q. Why do you say that. Did you test it.

A. I did not test it, no.

Q. Then how do you know it’s been used.

A. A lot of the wiring indeed has been re-manipulated. It doesn’t appear to be new condition. It appears to be scratched, appears to be used. Appears to be in an older condition.

Q. You didn’t test to see if it’s ever been used, did you.

A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you know where that came from, that equipment.

A. Came from the office area in Mr. Jackson's office.
Q. Do you know where it was purchased.
A. I do not.
Q. Do you know if it was lawfully purchased.

A. I would only assume no.
Q. You can buy that equipment, can't you.
A. Law enforcement can, I know.
Q. You don't really know if you can buy that lawfully or not, do you.
A. Possibly if I went to the appropriate store I could maybe get some of that stuff.
Q. A citizen of the United States can go to a store and buy that stuff, can't they.
A. I -- I'm not sure about the microphones. No, sir, I don't know about that.
Q. So what you're saying is you don't know, right.
A. About --
Q. Whether an ordinary citizen can lawfully purchase that equipment or not, right.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, object as argumentative.
THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: You could say that I guess I really don't know for sure.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And you don't know how that equipment ever got to Neverland, do you.
A. No, sir.
Q. You don't know if it was given to Mr. Jackson or purchased, right.
A. There's prices in there, so I could only assume that it was purchased.

Q. Well, if someone gave it to Mr. Jackson, they'd have probably purchased it first, wouldn't they.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object. Assumes facts -- calls for a conclusion.

Speculation.

THE COURT: It's argumentative. Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. You don't know where that originated, do you.

MR. SNEDDON: Object; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: If you want -- if you wanted me to look inside there, there's a company in there, and I can tell you the name of the company.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Even if you knew the name of the company, you wouldn't know how that got to Neverland, would you.

A. No, sir. But you asked me if I knew where it was originated.

Q. That equipment appeared to be associated with a private investigator, true.

A. I -- I didn't seize it. And when I opened it up and looked at it, I didn't seize it for that purpose. And I didn't know at the time it was associated with a private investigator, no, sir.

Q. I'm not asking what the purpose was in seizing it. I'm just asking you if -- from what you saw when you looked at that equipment, did it appear it could be associated with a private investigator.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object again. It calls for a conclusion and speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: At the time that I seized it, I did not know that it was associated with a private investigator, no, sir.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: My question was different. My question was, based on what you saw when you examined that equipment, did you think you had reason to believe it was associated with a private investigator. Yes or no.

A. No.

Q. What about the card you just described for the jury. Tell them what was on the card, please.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, there are two questions.

THE WITNESS: You asked me two questions, sir.

MR. MESEREAU: I did, and I’m sorry. I’ll withdraw it, Your Honor.

Q. Please tell the jury what was on that card that you found with the equipment.

A. Do you want me to open it up and look at it. I can tell you exactly what’s on it.

Q. Sure.

A. The exact wording on the card is “General, Special and Electronic Investigations. California License P19356. James A. Lupori, Private Investigator, P.O. Box 4250, Culver City, California 90231. Telephone number (310)390-8384.” And “Fax, (310)397-9563.”

Q. That was in the material. Is that where you found the card.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And for the jury’s benefit, the card mentions a number on it. And I don’t mean the phone number. It mentions a -- what really appears to be a license number, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For a licensed investigator, correct.

A. Could be, yes.

Q. Could be. What did you think it was.

A. There’s a license on there. But whether it’s actually a license number for that individual or not, I don’t know, because I didn’t investigate that.

Q. Well, putting an investigation aside, you, as an investigating officer, look at a card like that. It gives a name. It mentions investigations. It gives a number.

Did it ever occur to you that might be a license number for a California licensed investigator.

A. Could be.
Q. Did it ever occur to you that it might be.
A. It occurred to me that it couldn’t be also.
Q. Okay. All right. So basically you didn’t care.
A. No, I did care. I just don’t know whether P19356 is actually a license number that would be associated with a private investigator, and/or this individual, sir. That’s what I’m trying to say.
Q. Did you ever check out whether the name on the card and the phone number worked.
A. No, sir.
Q. Okay. Did you think that was part of the scope of your responsibilities.
A. No, sir.
Q. Okay. Did you prefer to just avoid that issue.
MR. SNEDDON: Object as argumentative, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever ask to have anybody test the equipment at any stage of this investigation.
A. No, sir.
Q. Based upon what you knew of Neverland Ranch, did it ever occur to you that security might be a concern to Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes.
Q. Now, let me ask you this: If you’re in your house, and you have a phone system, and you pick up your phone and somebody -- you’re upstairs and somebody downstairs is speaking on the phone and you listen, have you committed a crime.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object. Calls for a legal conclusion. That’s --
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Are there any other documents in that case.
A. Yes, there are.
Q. Would you please tell the jury what those documents are.

A. Sure.

The first document has handwritten, “Video Briefcase Surveillance System with Audio.” It says, “Video Briefcase.” It has a description of what would be in a video briefcase. It has handwritten, “$4,995,” tax, UPS, a total of $5,443.59, and the word “Total,” and that is on one sheet.

The next sheet looks to be either off a computer and/or a typewriter. It is printed instructions for voice-operated telephone recording, professional ten-hour recorder. It has Items 1 through 6 of how to, I believe, operate that type of system.

The next one is “Equipment For Law 2701 Enforcement Agencies, Professional UHF Transmitters and Receivers, Crystal Controlled.” It has a multitude of -- one, two, three, four, five, six, seven -- seven separate types of wireless transmitters, and a list of optional equipment that could be purchased.

And then it says “Other Equipment Systems for Law Enforcement and Export.” And it talks about vehicle tracking, video transmitters, specialized video and optical systems, thermal imaging, et cetera.

Q. Let me ask you this: Do any of those documents appear to relate to a security system.

A. No, sir.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Sir, I’m showing you one of the documents. It says, “Remote Room Audio Monitor.” Do you see that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. It talks about a phone jack, it talks about an answer relay, it talks about a microphone, correct.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. It says, “Call answer relay from any telephone anywhere in the world.” Do you see that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. You also see another -- what appears to be a drawing, correct.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Does it say on it “Video Surveillance System with Audio”.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Does it talk about how to set a video monitor with three screens.

A. Part of it, yes, sir.

Q. Does it talk about an infrared light source for a target area for night illumination.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it refer to a video monitor with a nine-inch screen.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it refer to an infrared -- excuse me. Does it refer to a miniature camera with a transmitter.

A. It does, yes.

Q. Does it talk about a clock video camera.

A. Let me -- talks about that. Smoke alarm, et cetera, cameras.

Q. Are you telling the jury it never occurred to you that might relate to a security system, Officer.

A. I’m not sure that it -- in totality, no, it --

Q. So you think that had nothing to do with security at Neverland. Is that what you’re telling the jury under oath.

A. I don’t know what to tell you. It looks like -- I mean, this document here, telephone taping system. I don’t know what to tell you, except I know that that doesn’t relate to security. That relates to the items that are in here for taping telephone calls.

Q. The items you just agreed that are described on that document do not relate to a possible security system at Neverland.

A. I guess you could say -- I could say yes, it could.

Q. Okay. You never checked that out, correct.

A. No, sir. It wasn’t -- it was not in the rooms that I was associated with.

Q. Okay. Did you ever go to any security personnel at Neverland, show it to them and say, “Have you seen this before. Do you know why it’s here.”

A. No, I did not.

Q. Okay. Do you know if anybody ever did.

A. I do not know.

Q. Now, you certainly know that Neverland is a rather large area, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have a main gate with security personnel when you enter, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. It’s about a 2800-acre ranch, true.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have got security personnel working throughout Neverland, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see any surveillance-type equipment at Neverland while you were there.

A. I don’t recall seeing surveillance equipment, sir.

Q. Now, obviously you knew when you went there that Michael Jackson is one of the world’s most famous entertainers, right.

A. Sure.

Q. And you knew that he routinely travels with security personnel to protect him, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And did it ever occur to you that security might be a real concern at Neverland.

A. Could be.

Q. Could be.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you’re not sure.

A. Well, he has a lot of people going there. I don’t know exactly what kind of security he may have. He has a multitude of people in and out of there on a regular basis, so I don’t know what kind of security he may have established.

Q. Did you ever sit down with any of the government prosecutors and discuss that equipment.

A. No.

Q. Did you ever talk to Mr. Sneddon about what you were going to say today when you took the witness stand.

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you just take the stand without ever discussing your testimony at all with him.

A. I don’t think I discussed with him what I was going to testify to, no, sir.

Q. Okay. When you found that equipment, what is the first thing you did with it.

A. I looked at it, and gave it to the officer to book as evidence.

Q. Okay. Which officer was that.

A. That was Detective Cooley.

Q. Do you know if the equipment was ever fingerprinted.

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Did you ever request that it be fingerprinted.

A. I was not in that part of the investigation.

Q. Have you ever learned at any point whether or not it was fingerprinted.

A. I don’t know.

Q. Okay. Now, when you were at Neverland, did you investigate the kinds of security systems in place at Neverland.

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not, for example, there are cameras that might indicate whether or not someone is entering or leaving.

A. I do not know that.

Q. Do you know whether or not there are cameras that might indicate whether or not someone's entering or leaving the main residence.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to object. He's already said he didn't do anything. Lack of foundation.

I object. Immaterial.

THE COURT: I'm going home.

(Laughter.)

See you Monday.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:30 p.m.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good morning.
MR. SNEDDON: Good morning.
MR. MESEREAU: Good morning.
THE COURT: All right. The first item on the calendar is the scheduling of a motion for admission of evidence of defendant’s alleged prior sexual offenses. This was put on the calendar because the District Attorney has asked that the hearing be sooner than later, I guess.
MR. SNEDDON: That’s correct, Your Honor. We placed the motion on, in light of the Court’s earlier decision, which we wholeheartedly agreed in, that we should have testimony before the jury establishing the offenses that were committed by the victims themselves -- on the victims themselves prior to the time of the hearing. And we believe that we have complied with what the Court wished.

And I think the Court gave a perfect example of your experience of what happened to you before where promises were made and promises weren't kept.

I believe that we have at this point established sufficient information before this Court and before this jury to now go forward with the 1108 hearing. We would indicate to the Court that this would be the appropriate time.

I'm not suggesting that the Court -- we recess the trial at this moment. I want to make that clear. And I think I did in my moving papers. That we intend to move forward with probably evidence through -- my guess is, if not through Thursday, probably into Friday of next week, based on the lineup that we have. We'll finish those parts of the case that are relevant to the allegations set forth against Mr. Jackson in all counts except for Count 1.

At that point, we will then be transitioning into that part of the case that deals with the conspiracy count. It seems to me that it is not only right and proper, but logical for the jury that this would be the appropriate time for us to be able to put on the 1108 evidence insofar as it relates and bears on the testimony of the credibility and the actions of the defendant in this case. And so we would request that at that point in time, that we then take up the 1108 hearings.

So unless the Court has any further questions, that's why we filed the motion now. I wanted to give the Court sufficient heads-up about it for scheduling for the jury, as well as the fact that we'll need to bring people in from out of county, and out of state in some instances, so we need some lead time for that. And clearly that whatever decision the Court makes, we would have enough lead time for that. If we started next Friday, we could begin, and we'd be ready to begin.

And if it was the following Monday -- but you get the picture. It's at the point where we finish most of the testimony relevant to the charges against Mr. Jackson on the molestation.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: Do you have any other questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I do, but I want to hear from the other side first, and then I'll ask my questions.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Good morning.

THE COURT: Good morning.

MR. SANGER: The timing of the motion, we want to have adequate time to have the motion heard and be prepared for it. I don't concede at this point, by any means, that there's been a showing sufficient for the Court to go ahead and make a ruling right now. And if the Court were to make a ruling right now, I think it would be to deny the 1108.

But having said all of that, the People I think are saying that they feel that they're going to be in their strongest position to make their 1108 motion by the end of next week, and I don't see any reason why we can't schedule a date to do that.

We have two issues: One is whether or not they have presented sufficient credible evidence of the sexual offense crimes. And then the second issue, which would be taken up in the actual motion, would be what kind of evidence would come in, and whether or not the kind of evidence that's proffered is going to be -- is going to have sufficient probative value to outweigh the prejudicial effect and consumption of time, and so on.

Having said that, if that's the Court's understanding, I think we're talking about just picking a date now. And I don't see any problem with picking a date -- you know, a week from Monday, for instance, would seem to be a good time.

Do you think so.

MR. MESEREAU: (Nods head up and down.)

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. Here's my question to both sides. Mr. Mesereau got me thinking about this from a request that he made earlier.

And the issue -- I guess the question is, should the Court hear the evidence outside the presence of the jury, or should I just hear arguments on the evidence, as represented to the Court that it will be, as to whether or not the 1108 evidence should come in.

And the thing that got me thinking about it was that Mr. Mesereau had suggested that they be allowed to put on testimony to attack, as I understood what he was saying, the credibility of the witnesses that would be called under the 1108, so that the Court could make a determination, I think, based on credibility, as to whether or not the Court would allow the witnesses to be called.

And that was a unique suggestion to me, because I've had a lot of hearings under Evidence Code 401, 402, 403, preliminary fact, and I don't recall that -- I laugh because there's a lot of things I don't recall, but I don't recall ever having that evidence put in at a 402 hearing.

So, having that dilemma and working on it, one of the cases that we found was Vorse v. Sarasy, S-a-r-a-s-y, "Vorse" being V-o-r-s-e, 53 Cal.App.4th 998. It's a 1997 case. And it suggests that the Court is not to make credibility issue determinations. That -- you know, that my taking of evidence may not be proper on either side on this issue. It may be just that I am to decide whether or not it's admissible with an analysis of what you're offering, whether that would, in fact, be 1108, and then make the weighing under 352 for all the reasons that 352 has the Court make those -- weighing those issues.

It's interesting that the Vorse case cites another case, People v. Jackson. No relationship. But you can pick that citation out of the Vorse case.

So I'm willing to let either of you respond to that at this time.

MR. SANGER: I would like to, although Mr. Sneddon's standing at the podium.

MR. SNEDDON: It's our motion, that's why. I figured you'd want to. No, after me.

MR. SANGER: Oh, after you. Okay. Well, as they say, "After you."

THE COURT: After you. After you.

MR. SNEDDON: Abbott and Costello. I hope we're not that bad.

Judge, I think the simple answer to this is the Evidence Code provides your discretion to do it either way you feel comfortable with it.

I think that the issue on the credibility -- let me make sure I'm talking about precisely what the Court asked. In terms of whether you wanted to have a 403 hearing outside the presence of the jury that did not involve the issues of credibility - okay. --

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SNEDDON: -- or whether you wanted to do it on the offers of proof, I believe that the Evidence Code clearly provides that you have the discretion to do that whichever way you want to do it. So, that's your decision, and....

But with regard to the credibility issue, I believe we cited the Jackson case to you in earlier motions. We were aware of that. And not only in connection with the 1108 hearing, but in connection with some of the other pre-trial hearings that involved witnesses' statements, that we brought that case to the Court's attention. If not that one, certainly there's another one that we did.

So we were certainly aware of the fact that we believe that the credibility issues are those for the ultimate trier of fact, which is the jury.

So I would say to the Court that we are prepared to accommodate the Court in either way in which you would like to do it. Obviously the most efficient would be for you simply -- and with the ability of the defense to file, as you suggested to Mr. Mesereau I think a couple of days ago, their pro-offered -- although I don't know, since you can't weigh the credibility, what effect that could have on you. But in any case, we're prepared to do it either way that the Court wants.

And I frankly think that, given the way that this case is going, that probably the best case is simply to put these people on. And we'll put them on on direct and they put them on on cross and we keep the trial moving in front of the jury. But, of course, as always, we'll do what the Court suggests.

That would be my recommendation.

And I do not believe the credibility issues, as you cited the case, are something that is really an issue in the 403 hearing.

THE COURT: All right. Counsel. Mr. Sanger.

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir.

The case law that I'm familiar with -- and I won't claim to be specifically familiar with the Vorse case without looking it up.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: But just in general, it is true that the Court's ruling on a 402-, 403-type hearing for any kind of a determination, and under 1108 as well, is whether or not - there is a threshold - the threshold has been met. And the threshold doesn't involve the determination of credibility in the sense that the Court is saying, "Well, you know, I just don't really believe these witnesses, so I'm not going to let the jury hear it," and usurping the jury's function, the ultimate function. But there still is a threshold level where credibility is one of the issues that the Court is taking into account, and the Court's taking it into account under 352.

For instance, let's take an example, just a hypothetical example. Let's assume that one of the witnesses, a key witness that's proffered by the prosecution under 1108, is a witness who is going to say that she saw various things that were circumstantial evidence of some kind of activity, and that's their main witness. Let's just assume this. I don't want to argue about the facts of this case, but let's assume that that's the case. And it turns out that that witness made several prior inconsistent statements on television and eventually in a sworn deposition.

It's not so much a weighing of credibility. It's not usurping the function of the jury to hear that evidence. But I think the Court would want to hear that evidence, because under the three prongs of 352, number one, you're looking to see whether or not the evidence is so inflammatory that it's going to be prejudicial to the defendant such that the probative value is outweighed by the prejudicial effect.

Well, you have to figure out what the probative value is going to be before you can determine whether the prejudicial effect is going to outweigh it.

And so therefore, you have to say, "Well, look, we've got a witness," for instance, "who made a number of prior inconsistent statements on television, for money, and eventually under an oath in a deposition, and now this witness is being offered up." The prejudicial effect of just having this person come and say things may, in fact, be quite substantial in the Court's mind when it's heard the evidence.

And on the other hand, the probative value the Court would have to find is probably fairly minimal, given the scenario I just gave.

It would also go to the question the Court has to address, the second problem, which is undue consumption of time. Are we going to have a hearing about this witness. And taking one of the witnesses, again, hypothetically, are we going to have a hearing that necessarily involves allowing the defense to fully -- to fully defend it.

As the Court knows, and we've cited cases in our main pleadings on this, that we're entitled, and not only entitled, but we're required, it's ineffective assistance of counsel to fail to do a full of defense of 1108 evidence --

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SANGER: -- as if it were an independent case.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SANGER: So we're not only entitled to, but we're obligated to. We're going to have to bring in all of those statements on television, for money, and before a deposition.

And I'm saying that in a concise fashion, but Your Honor knows that's going to take time to bring all that out. So I think the Court has to consider that.

And then the third prong of 352 is confusion to the jury -- or, I'm sorry, is undue consumption of time. I may have gotten those two confused, but thereby illustrating my point, I suppose.

And so to take more time to further illustrate my point, you have confusion of the jury and you have undue consumption of time. And both of those -- without restating the point, both of those are determined only after the Court has a full opportunity to figure out what the heck is going to go on in front of the jury.

All right. So I think all three prongs -- it's not a matter the Court usurps the function of the jury by determining credibility. It's a threshold call, like many things are, and particularly things under 352. The Court has to determine how this is going to play out in front of the jury.

So you're not per se determining credibility, but you are saying, look, the credibility is going to be attacked substantially, let us say, after the Court hears the evidence, and therefore the prejudicial effect is going to be great, but there’s a little probative value; therefore, there’s an undue consumption of time; and therefore, there’s the potential for confusing the jury.

So I do think that we should be able to present to the Court concisely, but I think with some live testimony, as needed from both sides, the evidence that the jury is going to see. And I think that just submitting it on paper would not adequately address the issue, particularly in a criminal case with the constitutional rights that are involved.

Does that answer the Court’s question.

THE COURT: Yes. Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, could I address one other aspect of this motion that we haven’t discussed.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: I will do it just briefly.

But I wanted to remind the Court that as part of this 1101 -- or 1108/1101 motion, that we had filed an earlier motion with regard to the admissibility of the civil settlements, so we had deferred that until this hearing process also. So I wanted to just make sure that the Court did that.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: And I think that’s part of this process. And also, you know, the guidelines with regard to what can and won’t be asked I think is important. And there will be two separate -- I believe with two witnesses, probably two separate civil suits involved, and so I wanted to alert you to that also.

THE COURT: Thank you. Those will be set at the same time.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: If I don't say it, I intended to have those heard at the same time as this motion.

MR. SNEDDON: I don't know if you wanted me to address anything Mr. Sanger said. If you do, I'll answer the question. Otherwise, I'll just submit it to the Court.

THE COURT: No, you don't need to.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you.

THE COURT: Without ruling on that, because I'm not quite ready -- I haven't quite made up my mind. But rather than spend the time now thinking about it, let's hear some argument on the other issues.

Let's see, the objection to calling the grand jury witness.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, we've briefed the matter and so I don't want to go over --

THE COURT: Yes, I read that again this morning.

MR. SANGER: -- each one of the points.

But what I did want to do is briefly augment it with reference to the grand jury transcript. And we did cite the transcript in our papers in an effort to keep things short. You know, we didn't quote things at length and make a big deal out of it. We tried to follow the concept that this was a brief and, for a change, make it brief.

THE COURT: I appreciate that.

MR. SANGER: Okay. But looking at the actual transcripts of the grand jury, our position, as you know, is that if it's not in the transcript, that's too bad. The People are there to make their record and they know how to make a record. And we're not there. There's nobody there to object. If they wanted to have somebody put on gloves and look at things, they could say, "We're putting on gloves," and so on.

And, in fact, as the record shows, when you look at the actual transcript of the grand jury, and you look at the testimony of Timothy Sutcliffe, he talks about having gloves on. There's a question as to whether or not he had gloves on, and he had gloves on at one point when he was handling some moldy -- what appeared to be moldy schoolbooks. When it comes to the end of the -- of his testimony, and you look at page 1245 -- and I have a clean copy. I'm sure the Court has the whole transcript, but I have a clean copy, if it would help.

THE COURT: They're here. 1245.

MR. SANGER: 1245.

THE COURT: What volume would that be.

MR. SANGER: That's a good question. I'm sorry, Your Honor, I just have the excerpt here.

THE COURT: I can find it. That's all right.

MR. SANGER: OKAY.

THE COURT: Volume 5, I think. 1245 did you say.

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir, 1245.

THE COURT: Yes. Okay.

MR. SANGER: Okay. I just realized I didn't turn my cell phone off, so I'm going to do that real quick. It didn't ring, but --

THE COURT: I've done that. It's been embarrassing. I've been sitting in court and my cell phone has gone off, and I have to act like, "Whose cell phone is that."

MR. SANGER: "Get that cell phone."

MR. MESEREAU: Must be Mr. Sneddon, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. SANGER: If you look at 1245, this is sort of our smoking gun conversation here. And I know that the prosecution has some other version of it. But starting at line 14 -- does the Court have that in front of you.

THE COURT: Yes, I do.

MR. SANGER: Since you have it in front of you, I'll just paraphrase and quote from the relevant source. But it's a grand juror who asked about the black suitcase, which was Item 317. And it was admitted in evidence here as some other exhibit number, which I don't remember right now, but the black briefcase. And it had all the materials inside. And the picture, you recall, had the magazine on the top that had a date later than the relevant time period.

And Mr. Auchincloss asked a question that the grand juror had proposed and said, "Did some -- a forensic examination of some pornography in this case" -- I'm sorry, "You did some -- a forensic examination of some pornography in this case, correct."

He says, "Correct."

Now the question is, "Did you find any -- did you find any fingerprints on that pornography, usable fingerprints."

Now, that's not a question asked by a District Attorney who knows that there was no fingerprint analysis done. That's a question of a District Attorney who is asking a witness, "Well, did you find any fingerprints, usable fingerprints.

And the answer is, "Well, we're doing all this stuff" - I'm paraphrasing - "We used an ALS," alternate light source. They did a fluorescent check to see if there was any stains, and then they could do DNA, and they found no stains and no DNA.

So the question is, "So they haven't been examined for fingerprints."

"A. No, not at this time."

And then they go on to explain the alternative light source thing.

Now, at the end of the grand jury proceeding, there is a -- when the jurors are about to deliberate, there's a part of the transcript where they show Detective, I believe it was Zelis, has been instructed to wear gloves, and, "You're not to deliberate while he's in there, but he's going to take these things out and show them to you." Okay.

So by the end of the grand jury, clearly someone's wearing gloves and showing the grand jurors.

Now, that doesn't -- and I'll represent to the Court, we have a witness from the clerk's office who says that after the grand jury returned the exhibits, they went through without gloves and they were tabulating and making sure all the pages were there, and they didn't know there was a problem.

But, aside from that, the most important thing here is that if you then go back to page 421 -- and I'm guessing that would be in Volume 2.

Okay.

THE COURT: Uh-huh.

MR. SANGER: I'm sorry, I'll get the volume number next time I quote the transcript.

But if you go to 421, starting at line 23 -- I'm sorry, line 25, you have the questioner, one of the district attorneys saying, "Now, I want you to -- I broke -- we're going to break the seal on this exhibit."

And they're talking at this point about the black briefcase.

"I'm going to ask you to look very briefly, young man, at the stuff that's in there. All right. Take a look at the stuff.

"Now, there's some magazines, correct.

"Yes.

"Then there's some sheets that are individual and not in magazines as if they've been torn out, correct.

"Yes.

"Now, can you tell me whether or not that was the kind of materials that was in the suitcase that was shown to you.

"A. Yes, that was the kind of materials.

"Q. Does that look like some of the stuff that was shown to you.

"Yes."

And it goes on beyond that.

The point is, if -- realistically, if this was a point in the proceedings where somebody was wearing gloves and saying, “Don’t touch it, I’m going to show it to you,” that would be on the record.

What’s on the record is, “We’re breaking the seal. We’re opening it. Now, young man, look at this.”

And as you saw from the exhibit, the photograph, the way it was seized and the way it was sealed, all these things are stacked up. So the only way to see if there’s other magazines and to see if there’s separate pages is for somebody to look through them, for a person to look through them. There’s no evidence that the District Attorney is looking through them. There’s no evidence anybody put on gloves.

And so the clear record on this appears to be that the District Attorney at that time, remembering this occurred on 3-30, and the Sutcliffe occurred on 4-8. In other words, it wasn’t until 4-8, it appears, that somebody said, “You mean you didn’t even look for fingerprints. We knew you didn’t get any usable prints, but you didn’t look for them.” And then they go in and make a big deal about gloves in the deliberations.

So on 3-30, when they’re showing it to Gavin Arvizo, it looks, to me, from the record, pretty clearly that nobody was wearing gloves, and there was no effort to do anything to avoid contaminating this evidence by the fingerprints of Gavin Arvizo.

Okay. So, having said that, that’s our position.

Now, does that give the District Attorney the right to call a grand juror. And we take the position, no, because the code says you can only call them with regard to testimony. And as we pointed out, that’s pretty much obsolete these days because the recent case law -- I cited Cummiskey, but I believe there’s other ones, like Moucharaub also talked about it. The courts have said we’re entitled to a full transcript of the testimony, so it should pretty much negate the need to call in a grand juror. There may be other ways to do it. A District Attorney could take the stand and say what he wants to say.

But we have the further problem that we were given the name of the foreperson of the grand jury for the first time two days ago. No address, no phone number.

The prosecutor had a proceeding in which they had full access to these people. They know all their names. We’ve never been allowed to know their names. There was an objection when we asked to get their names. The Court ordered that numbers be used instead of names. That was done in the transcripts. They come up and say, “Well, here, we have a name. No statement. Except we’re going to tell you this witness is going to come and say we did everything

Furthermore, there were 18 other grand jurors there. We’ve never been given their names. We have no ability to interview them. So we have that major problem with calling grand jurors.

And do we really think it’s appropriate to disclose all the names of all the grand jurors and have them all interviewed with regard to whether there were gloves or not, or whatever, about something in the middle of the process.

And that leads me backwards to the first point I made - or the first or second in writing - and I’ll conclude with this - is that this whole thing, even if the Court were to say, “Well, okay, we’ll even the playing field. We’ll give you all the names and addresses and phone numbers. You can have your investigators go talk to all of them, and then you all can call in competing grand jurors,” okay.

Even if we did that, and even if that survived a 352 analysis on consumption of time and undue confusion to the jury, the prejudicial effect of bringing in people from a body that made a determination -- a quasi-judicial determination under California law and an administrative determination under U.S. Supreme Court precedent, in other words, part of the prosecution, if that -- if they’re allowed to do that, that is going be extremely prejudicial, because you’ve got jurors who are trying to hear the case. They’re now listening to a juror who has a vested interest in upholding the process that they went through, the best they could as laypeople, to return an Indictment. That kind of evidence to this jury is going to be -- is going to be very prejudicial.

THE COURT: You know, the interesting thing in your argument, though, is that, through excellent cross-examining skills, you, the defense, have put into issue whether or not the children touched the magazines during the grand jury proceeding.

So at this point, the state of the evidence is most favorable to you that the inference is strong that they must have touched those magazines.

Now, having skillfully done that -- and this is not meant to be anything but a compliment.

MR. SANGER: I’m always worried when I get complimented by the Court.

THE COURT: Yeah, I can see you starting to worry. No, I really mean that. Credit where credit’s due.

But then you say, having skillfully raised this inference, “The District Attorney should be barred from rebutting that, and that’s it.” And that’s -- that’s what I find interesting about your argument, is that.

Now, let me ask you a question.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

THE COURT: You don’t have to defend your excellent skills at getting to this position.

MR. SANGER: I do have an answer to that, but --

THE COURT: You have an answer to that.

And I would say, if you had been doing the grand jury, I think that that would have been covered, but the transcript would have been 4600 pages instead of 1800, which I found overwhelming.

MR. SANGER: The trial would be shorter.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: I doubt that.

What was I saying. How can I lose it like that.

MR. SANGER: Could I respond a little bit.

And I’m sure that will cause the Court to remember.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: I appreciate what the Court said and -- but I think the --

THE COURT: Oh, I know. I know what I was going to say.

MR. SANGER: I knew if I started talking, that would help.

THE COURT: You did it. You helped me.

There’s a couple of possibilities that I see here. One is that you’re only asking -- as well as you did, you know, it’s just an inference that they touched. There is no evidence that they touched. We don’t know if they touched or didn’t touch at this point. But the inference is strong by your examination, the defense examination, that they did.

There’s a couple of ways we could handle that. One is you could stipulate that they didn’t touch it. That would get rid of any prejudice of calling a grand juror, foreperson of the grand jury to -- and any resulting prejudice.

You know, I can see from the look on your face, that’s not going to happen.

MR. SANGER: Right.

THE COURT: But -- is that right.

MR. SANGER: That’s correct.

THE COURT: You’re not willing to stipulate to that.

MR. SANGER: We actually believe he touched it. I honestly believe that, for what it’s worth.

THE COURT: That being the case, the question then becomes, you know, what is a fair way, if there are witnesses in -- that saw this.

And one of the things that we could do would be to call that witness, but not identify them as a grand juror or foreperson of the grand jury, but simply say they were in the grand jury room and they observed whatever they observed, so that you don’t have the prejudice that you’re so much afraid of, you know, this formidable person being called.

What do you think of that.

MR. SANGER: Well, I think there’s yet another possibility. So in answer to the Court’s question what I think about that, I think this: Another possibility is there are other people in the grand jury room: The prosecution; I believe there was a police officer there, or a sheriff there most of the time.

Did I just hear somebody say no, there wasn’t. I don’t want to waste time talking about it if there wasn’t a police officer in the room at that time.

But that would be a possibility. Certainly the District Attorney, whoever -- whichever one or two or three were there at the time, could testify. I would assume if they’re taking the position that something else happened, we’re going to hear that.

The third possibility is to allow us to have the names and addresses of all the grand jurors. It seems clear -- and the reason I say this -- well, there’s the obvious reason, but there’s a more subtle reason as well.

It seems clear from the transcript of the grand jury that there was -- there were several grand jurors who asked a lot of questions. There was one grand juror, for instance, who was particularly interested in this fingerprint issue. I don’t know who it is, because we only have a number. The prosecution knows who it is, so we’re not on even ground here.

But one way to do this would be to allow us to have the names of the grand jurors so that we can adequately investigate this and see what they all have to say.

In other words, in response to the Court’s question, I certainly wouldn’t want to stipulate the foreperson can just come up here and not be identified and say, “I was in the room when I saw this,” because that’s just the problem. The foreperson has -- and I don’t mean to fault him or her.

THE COURT: I think you made a very good point; that other people may have seen something the foreperson didn’t, or -- you know, it’s a good point.

MR. SANGER: But my first position on this, again, is that the government should be, in a way, bound by the transcript, because they’re the ones that are making it. That’s what the Supreme Court has been saying over the last few years. Last, you know, 25, 30 years, it’s been increasingly adamant about the fact that there’s -- there’s a record before the grand jury. The prosecution is the only side in there. They’re the only lawyers in there. They have the obligation to make sure that that transcript is complete so it can be reviewed.

And if we’re going to have a grand jury process where things can be done in secret, where the defense can’t be there, the accused isn’t there, there’s -- there’s not a Judge, if we’re going to do this, the only protection is to make sure that the prosecution makes a complete record. So the -- the original position that we’re taking -- I’m going full circle on all this.

THE COURT: No, I understand.

MR. SANGER: -- is that when you look at it, the transcript is the transcript. And the inference from the transcript, as I just read it to the Court, is an inference, and the jury should be allowed to hear this testimony or have this read to them. They can consider that along with what other evidence has been put on to determine whether or not the chain of custody on this material was such that when fingerprint analysis was later done after it was released and they allegedly find a fingerprint of Gavin Arvizo, that the jury can say, “Yeah, we’re sure that fingerprint came from February or March of 2003.”

THE COURT: I guess I have -- you have an advantage that I don’t have, too. And maybe you can help me. I haven’t heard the evidence on the fingerprint on the magazine or more than one magazine. I don’t know. You know, I know from points and authorities something, but I don’t know the picture. I don’t know if there’s a palm print or a --

MR. SANGER: There’s a fingerprint.

THE COURT: Just one fingerprint.

MR. SANGER: Well, here’s the problem right now. And before we discuss this and go into too much detail, I’m always conscious that whatever we’re going to say is just going to be in the press.

THE COURT: You can be circumspect. You don’t even have to answer that. I was just going to say that I don’t know that information.

MR. SANGER: Let me tell the Court this in general terms, is that we don’t know that information either, because there have been reports that were given to us showing that there was a fingerprint. Well, showing that there was, in this context, a fingerprint, one fingerprint that we’re concerned about.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: There were others that were determined not to have sufficient data to make -- make a positive identification. There are others where they’re absolutely negative. They were excluded. Okay.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: What has happened very recently, in the last couple, three weeks, is we've gotten reports that there have been a meeting of various fingerprint people who have now decided that some of these determinations should be changed.

And they go both ways. They go -- they go -- in the sense that they had a fingerprint they positively identified, they're saying, "No, we don't think we can say that." And then they said, "We've found some others that we said were not conclusive and now we think are conclusive." So we're in flux on this.

But the essence of it is that, if this is true, that Gavin Arvizo had a chance to go through these papers so he could see the sheets and he could see the magazines, and he picked them up to do that, if that's true, this would be a very significant piece of evidence with regard -- this inference that we have is very significant with regard to fingerprints that are done later.

And understand, and I'm sure that -- and I don't mean to just offend the government here, but it is --

THE COURT: Do you mean you intend to offend more than just the government.

MR. SANGER: No. Whenever anybody says that, that means we're really going to offend the government.

But -- I really don't want to be rude, but, I mean, the fact is, if you look at any case that you have in the ordinary course of criminal law, when do you have a situation where something is referred for forensic analysis very shortly -- I don't have the exact dates here, but very shortly after it is seized it's sent over for forensic analysis - it was seized November 18th, and I think it was sent for forensic analysis in November - and they do their analysis. They do an alternate light source.

And we will show from -- we started to get into it, and then the officer wasn't clear on what 317 was. But the officer on the stand wrote a report saying, "Please" -- and these were the words: "Please do a fingerprint analysis." And he sent the material back with the reports saying, "Please do a fingerprint analysis." And it sat there until March and April of 2004.

In March of 2004, now, whatever that is, six months after it was seized, it's opened, it's shown to the grand jury, it's booked into evidence, it's handled by the clerk.

And then sometime in the summer of 2004, it is taken out of the grand jury, and then it's sent for fingerprint analysis.

Now, that isn't the way it should have gone.

And I don't know if anybody's going to argue, "This is the way we do things," but I've never seen it. I mean, if there's going to be fingerprints, you take them before you book it into evidence.

THE COURT: Let's let the District Attorney respond.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: After we seized the magazines from Neverland - and there were many, many, many magazines that were seized at that time - there were lengthy discussions about how to handle this, these magazines, and how to process them.

It was exactly the opposite of what Mr. Sanger said, that we were suddenly in the middle of the grand jury hearing and we're embarrassed because somebody thought for the first time to do fingerprinting.

The reality was quite the opposite of that.

The question was, do we proceed with fingerprinting first, or do we proceed with a search for biological evidence.

The problem is, is that the process that you use for either the search for fingerprinting or the search for biological evidence could have the consequence of negating our ability to find the opposite. Whichever you go first with could have the problem of destroying the evidence as to the opposite.

We had a lot of deliberations, a lot of discussions over many weeks, with a number of people, from the Department of Justice as to how to proceed on these issues, and very cautiously proceeded with each individual magazine and each individual page by initially using alternative light sources that would suggest the presence of biological material, either semen or perspiration or some form of human contact with it that would leave biological evidence behind.

There were some cuttings that were then taken, in an effort to minimize the destruction to the magazines, and as a consequence be able to preserve the possibility of finding fingerprints.

The actual fingerprint process didn’t begin until after the grand jury hearings, partly because the evidence was before the grand jury, at least that portion of it. The evidence that was introduced were the magazines only in that one suitcase. It was not as to the balance of the magazines that came through.

There were 19 prints that we were able to identify as belonging to the victims and to -- to Star and to Gavin, and to the defendant. At the moment, I can’t tell you over how many magazines. I don’t have that information right in front of us.

Counsel was wrong, of course. There are no police officers who are in the grand jury room unless they’re giving testimony. The rules are different from a regular court. We’re not entitled to have an investigating officer present.

So when counsel asked Detective Zelis, “Isn’t it true you handed those magazines to Gavin Arvizo." the answer is, he wasn't in the room when Gavin Arvizo was on the witness stand. We're not allowed to do that.

The only time that we had an officer in the room with the evidence was at the time that the jurors were allowed to view the actual magazines. And that was Detective Zelis. And he -- he was the one who handled the magazines and showed them to the jurors. They didn't touch them. And he, of course, wore gloves, as was consistent with his testimony.

During the presentation of evidence of the two boys, yes, we did not put on the record that nobody was going to be touching the magazines, although there's plenty of references to the fact that we were maintaining strict control, specifically at the time that the jury viewed the material. You'll see that in the record, that they weren't allowed to touch the magazines at that time.

We have asked the foreperson of the jury to come forward and testify to this, because she was the person sitting closest to the witness. And she was the person responsible for taking control of the proceedings and making sure that the secretary had each of the items and that they were marked appropriately, that the witness is admonished, and of course she was in the best position to be able to see what was going on.

And she is prepared to come in and testify that the children never touched any of those magazines; that they stayed in the suitcase. And of course if you look to other references to other material being handed witnesses throughout the course of the 12 days that we were in session and the 45-plus witnesses who testified, when they were handed an item, we said so. "I'm now handing you exhibit number so and so."

So it's pretty clear that the descriptives that are being used in the presentation of this suitcase is very different from how we presented other evidence where we really did hand it to them and they were able to take it.

But the question is, are we bound by a transcript as to this particular issue. We’re not talking about legal matters presented before the grand jury. We’re talking about an accusation by the defense that we handed material to a witness, and that that witness then put their fingerprints on it, and that we then presented the fingerprints that we found as having come from Neverland as opposed to from a grand jury.

Now, that’s an accusation that was raised first by the defense, and in his opening statement, Mr. Mesereau, and then by Mr. Sanger specifically in his questioning of Detective Zelis.

“You did hand this magazine to Gavin, didn’t you.”

And he said, “No.”

In fact, he wasn’t even in the room when it was handed. It was not he who presented that information. It was, in fact, Mr. Sneddon who showed the material, and it was in the presence of 19 grand jurors, myself, and Mr. Auchincloss.

We believe that it’s appropriate for that witness to testify. And we believe it’s appropriate for that witness to identify herself as the foreperson, because that is, in fact, the piece of information that makes her the most observant.

It is her responsibility, above and beyond the other 18 members of that grand jury, to be attentive to what’s going on and attentive to protocol and making sure that these exhibits get to the secretary and get marked properly, and get stored appropriately as well.

And I think that extra responsibility on her part, which she took very seriously, which you’ll see if and when she testifies, is the indicia of credibility that is necessary to be able to resolve this issue. It’s an important issue. And we need --

THE COURT: What about the request that you reveal the names of the other grand jurors so that they can see if any of the other grand jurors saw something different.

MR. ZONEN: Well, they are percipient witnesses to this event. And if the Court feels that's appropriate, do it. But our position is it's overkill. That's why she is the foreperson of the grand jury. But again, that's for the Court to resolve.

THE COURT: So you think in this courtroom that the Judge is a better witness of what's happening at the witness stand than the jurors.

MR. ZONEN: I think that -- I would always think that the Judge is a better witness than anybody else in the courtroom as to what's happening in the courtroom.

THE COURT: The reason I raise that is that, you know, I'm looking at -- I'm doing all sorts of things. And I see a lot. I hope I see a lot. But I know at times I don't. I mean, I'm distracted by this or that.

MR. ZONEN: Well, it may be appropriate to do an in-camera examination of other jurors, if the Court feels that's appropriate, rather than reveal all of their identities publicly. That certainly is an option as well.

Ultimately, I think it's the Court's call on this matter. But I don't believe that we should be barred from being able to present evidence to contradict an event that they say took place that didn't take place for which we do have witnesses.

And we are witnesses, for that matter. It's a suggestion for which they have no basis of belief and have no basis of belief now.

THE COURT: Anything else.

MR. ZONEN: No. Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, the -- let's put it this way: It may be a multi-stage process. It seems to me that, for whatever reason, the state of the record is the state of the record because it was handled the way it was handled.

We didn’t have anything to do with that. We made representations based on our analysis of the grand jury transcript, which we made, I believe, early on as part of the 995, and there’s certainly no secret it was made as a part of Mr. Mesereau’s opening statement. There’s no secret that we had a concern about these items being handled in the grand jury. And I think when Mr. Zonen says there’s no good-faith basis, if you read the transcript, I mean, how much more clear could it be.

Now, that’s that part. And I think we’re entitled to go ahead with whatever inference we have.

We strongly disagree with the calling of the foreperson of the grand jury. If the Court is thinking about doing that, we would like to have the opportunity to interview the other witnesses. I think that’s only fair.

Particularly, but -- not limited to, but particularly the person that asks these questions about fingerprints, because obviously he or she was very concerned.

So I think it’s a process that if the Court -- and the Court could say -- or it’s a multi-step process. The Court could say, “I agree, they’re stuck with the record. Let’s move on,” and that would take care of it.

The Court could say, “Well, I may let you call Mr. Sneddon to the stand, and we can cross-examine him about it, and we’ll move on.”

The Court could say, “Well, I’ll let you -- we’ll consider whether or not you can call a grand juror,” which we strongly object to for other reasons, but if the Court were going to go there, then we’d want to have a chance to interview everybody. And then, after we interview everybody, have a chance to come back to the Court before they call a grand juror, because we can see that it’s a very prejudicial, very difficult matter.

I mean, you have people -- I’m sure the Court's been aware that when trial jurors, for instance, are interviewed after a verdict, there's a strong inclination on the part of jurors to argue that what they did was fair. And of course they want to be fair. Most people want to believe that they're fair.

THE COURT: I understand that feeling.

MR. SANGER: Yes. Judges as well, I'm sure.

But with jurors who are laypeople, quite often when they're interviewed, you know, will say, "Well, yes" -- the first thing they'll say, "We were very fair. We evaluated the evidence. We followed the Judge's instruction." Of course, like anybody else, they have a vested interest in what they did.

And I think there's a real danger of putting somebody up here who's a layperson who will have a vested interest.

So, what I'm saying is, if you get past stage one, stage one, we eliminate -- that's it. The record is the record. The inference is an inference. And we can argue it.

Stage two, a witness such as Mr. Sneddon, if he wants to testify he was there, we'll cross-examine him.

Stage three, if you're considering jurors, let us interview first and determine where we are, because we may say, after that, that it is so prejudicial to put anybody on, that we just -- we want to forego that, forego the calling of a grand juror at all.

But we'd like to at least have an opportunity to talk to the others, if the Court's going to get to that level.

Does that make sense.

THE COURT: Yeah, I understand your argument, your approach.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I don't think that the law is at the state that the record is the only evidence of what happened at the grand jury proceeding. I mean, I could picture a situation where the -- somebody challenged the reporter’s transcript of what was said and the Court had to have a hearing as to the accuracy of the transcript. And the Court would have to take testimony from people in the grand jury room of what was said.

That doesn’t happen very often, but it’s -- in my career it happened at least once, that -- you know, and it turned out that the Court ruled that the transcript was not accurate on that point.

So you can’t say that the transcript is the only way that anyone can ever determine what happens in a courtroom or a grand jury room.

The next thing that the Court considers is the -- it’s certainly not fair to allow the District Attorney to choose one grand juror, albeit, the foreperson, and have that person be the only one that testifies.

I don’t think that the Court should be involved in investigating the case. In some countries, that’s what happens. The Judge investigates the case, brings the Indictment, and -- not here. That’s not what we do here. I don’t investigate. So the only time we have in-camera hearings is when there’s issues of privacy or privilege at stake that have to be predetermined before, to determine whether or not they outweigh the other interests.

So I’m not interested in myself conducting an in-camera hearing trying to examine witnesses.

Not only that, you know, I think that that would be your job.

The only thing that I can really see as a fair situation here would be to order that the names of the grand jurors be given to the defense, and with a protective order that they cannot reveal the grand jurors’ names to anyone other than their investigator, who would be bound by the same protective order, and that they be allowed to question those -- or to approach them.

I mean, it's up to the jurors whether they talk to them or not. It's -- it's not ordering people to talk to them, but they need to have that opportunity.

It seems also that I would -- well, I don't think I should make -- I have some other orders that I might make, but I think -- I probably shouldn't make those until we find out where we are after that point.

MR. SANGER: I understand. Could I -- with regard to the protective order, we were given the name of the foreperson by the prosecution two days ago. We weren't given an address, but we did locate the foreperson.

And my understanding is that the foreperson said, "I've" -- "I've talked to the District Attorney, and I'm not going to talk to you," in essence. I don't -- that's not a quote, but that's --

THE COURT: They didn't want to talk to you.

MR. SANGER: They didn't want to talk to us. And they made it clear that they had talked to the District Attorney. So there seems to be some allegiance there, which one can understand for someone being in the room with the District Attorney for however long that was.

THE COURT: You think that causes allegiance.

MR. SANGER: It could cause allegiance or could cause irritation.

THE COURT: But that's the problem that you have with all witnesses. It depends on how things go.

MR. SANGER: I think more so here, simply because -- because you do have this -- you know, there -- as we outlined in the grand jury, we had Lieutenant Klapakis apparently marshaling grand jurors around, and he was a witness. And you had the district attorneys in there. And there was a lot of camaraderie, and -- you know, that happens.

Anyway -- and they came to a conclusion, and they're in the international spotlight for having come to that conclusion, I suppose.

I would just ask in the protective order that -- that perhaps it could be phrased in a way, and perhaps we could submit a proposed order to the Court, a written order, that would allow us -- that would indicate that the Court is specifically authorizing our representative to talk to them about this particular subject matter, the handling of evidence, something general so we don't prejudice the viewpoint. And that they're not -- they're not obligated to talk to anybody, but the Court would appreciate their cooperation with both sides.

And we would like to have an opportunity to -- I don't know how many grand jurors have been interviewed by the prosecution so far. We haven't gotten reports. And I think that we'd be entitled to them, quite frankly.

But if they haven't interviewed grand jurors, to at least give us the first shot at this point so we have a fair chance to really find out what happened. We just want to know what happened.

So I'd request those additions to the protective order. And then depending on what happens, we can come back and address the Court as to what should happen with regard to actually calling witnesses.

THE COURT: Do you want to respond to that. And you can also respond to what I was saying, if you want.

MR. ZONEN: Our response is that -- our preference is that each of the grand jurors be interviewed in the presence of both sides at the same time to avoid needless inconvenience to them and needless intrusion into their time; that there certainly be a protective order that keeps their identity secret and not public; and that there be a restriction on the extent of the examination of the witnesses, and limited only to the issue of whether or not these boys touched the magazines, and not any other issue that may have come up in the 12 days of grand jury testimony.

THE COURT: Yeah, I definitely would put that restriction on. I don’t want the grand jurors examined on any issue other than this issue.

MR. SANGER: Could we though -- could we, say, limit it to, say, handling of evidence. I just worry about telegraphing this particular issue. It’s probably going to be telegraphed in the press anyway. But we really should have an opportunity to just talk in general about handling of evidence, and obviously this is the focus of it.

THE COURT: Well, I think we could, as long as you understand - and you understand - that while the statement is rather broad, that the mission is limited.

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir. Believe me, we have enough to do. We’re not looking for wild goose chases here. We’re trying to focus on this issue, so --

MR. ZONEN: You’re still looking at me. Is there something you wish me to add or answer.

THE COURT: No, I’m just trying to think. It’s a difficult problem.

MR. ZONEN: It is.

THE COURT: I was reflecting, actually, on a statement I made yesterday, I think, that we just had a couple of simple things to look at. I took it back right away, but what was I thinking. Let me -- let me -- I want to sit down with my research team and see if we can ourselves structure an order that will be appropriate as opposed to asking for one from either of you. So I’ll -- let me do that.

MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Then the next item -- is it break time yet. The next item --

MR. SANGER: No, Your Honor, you have three minutes.

THE COURT: I'll use it, too.

Motions to quash subpoena duces tecum on the financial issues.

This is -- this is what I'm going to do here, is I'm going to deny the motion to quash.

Did you have something you wanted to say.

MR. SANGER: I suppose, but Your Honor's already indicated you're going to deny it. I don't want to argue it if that's the ruling.

THE COURT: We've been through this and through this, you know. So what I thought I would do is to deny the motion to quash, limit the period of time. The subpoenas are too broad. We need to address some limitations on the subpoenas. And indicate that I'm not making any ruling on the admissibility of the records at trial, and I'm not releasing them for their experts to examine.

This is not a part of the discovery process. This is a subpoena duces tecum for trial. And -- but I think they should have the records here to the extent that they might be used in trial.

It's like a lot of other records that have been subpoenaed. They are not necessarily admissible records. That would depend on how they come, what the issue is at the time they're asked to be introduced, and what the records are.

But anyway, that's my proposed order on that.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I just make one inquiry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Some of these records will be voluminous. And I'm happy to try and narrow the scope of the request, but there's no way around getting to the issue of the examiner having to see the exhibit and look at it.

THE COURT: See, that's the whole problem here, is that this is not a subpoena for your expert to prepare himself to testify. That is not what a subpoena duces tecum is, and that's not what I'm allowing.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: So I guess I'm asking the Court, what are you proposing in terms of how -- when the expert can look at the documents and --

THE COURT: Absent a stipulation from the other side, you would open the documents here in open court.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It will -- it will obviously be time-consuming.

THE COURT: Well, it may not be, because you'll have to tell me why you want to open them. And they won't be opened so you can spend hours thumbing through them and looking at them. And --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If I -- may I have permission to file some authority for the opening of the documents prior to their examination on the stand.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you.

MR. SANGER: And --

THE COURT: The point is, that the -- you have subpoenaed the records for trial. That's legitimate to subpoena the financial records, because I've already ruled that the -- that under your theory, his general financial statement -- "his," Mr. Jackson's, general financial statement, can be raised as a motive, as you requested. I agree with you, that that's appropriate. And I've ruled that.

I have ruled - if it's not clear, I'll make it clear now - that under 352, I am -- I do not -- I find that the amount of time that would be involved in proving and disproving his true financial worth outweighs the probative value of doing that. And under 352, I'm not going to allow a detail-by-detail examination of Mr. Jackson's finances.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And I do appreciate that, and that's why I submitted Exhibit A with our papers. And that really is the substance of the testimony we're seeking to adduce. One page.

THE COURT: Just so you see maybe what -- both sides see what I'm thinking is, the reason the subpoenas are valid is that his finances are at issue in this general sense.

Let's suppose you have somebody testify -- I think somebody already has said that his finances were at issue; that that was part of the public relations effort that should be taken care of, because people were saying that he had bad finance -- his finances were not in good shape.

But let's say a little further, you had someone testify that, in fact, their belief, you know, based on something legitimate, but not much, that he didn't have good financial standing at the moment, poor cash flow or whatever they say. Then, now, that's all I allow.

See, then let's say that the defense calls their accountant, and then he says, "Well, they're absolutely wrong," you know. "He's worth eight times as much as anyone thought before, and here it is."

Now you've got the records in court, and you say, "Oh, let me look at the records."

Now we have a situation where perhaps looking at the records would be appropriate to cross-examine this accountant.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: So the other way, it doesn't quite work for me, that you call your expert and say, "You think he's in bad financial shape."

And he says "Yes," and he says, "Let me show you all his records," and see if that substantiates what you're saying. We sit here for four days while he goes through them.

No, that's not going to happen.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I understand. Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. Let’s take our break.

(Recess taken.)

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I have one, and just one, it’s a technical question, because -- and I’m not arguing with the Court.

THE COURT: You wouldn’t do that.

MR. SANGER: Not that I -- I’m just not. But a technical request. I’m hearing what the Court has ordered is that the general financial -- I think you said the general financial statement of the defendant can be gone into, or status.

THE COURT: No, a statement of general finances.

MR. SANGER: That’s the Court’s ruling on that issue.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: I’m not sure that we had that on the record. That’s why -- I think we may have discussed that. It may have been on the record, but I just want to make sure on the record we have whatever the Court’s ruling is.

THE COURT: I think that was the ruling, and I reiterated it just before the break.

Were you writing down what I was saying.

THE REPORTER: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: It was on the record.

MR. SANGER: Okay. That’s fine. Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: Might I be heard on one matter, as well, before -- let me offer one alternative solution to another problem.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. ZONEN: With regard to the issues of the grand jurors being individually interviewed by all of us, both sides, I assume there’s 19 grand jurors, but there was a court reporter who was present as well, and presumably she’s a witness to that as well.

We would accept the defense’s suggestion to the alternative resolution, based on your call entirely. This would be your choice entirely. But we would offer as an alternative, if the Court's willing to do so, and we'll accept it, that one of the three prosecutors present would be made available as a witness in this case in lieu of the grand jury.

This is done for purposes of protecting their identity, as we had represented to them we would during the course of those grand jury presentations, and the concern that the Court has about keeping this matter moving. We're talking about 20 potential witnesses.

So we would offer that as an alternative, if that's acceptable to the defense, and if that's acceptable to the Court. And the Court would make the determination as to whether you prefer to do it that way or prefer to proceed by way of interview of each of the 19 grand jurors, and the court reporter as well.

MR. SANGER: May I have just a second.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

MR. SANGER: Okay. I think that -- I understand that the District Attorney is saying they would pick one of the people. I don't know that all three of them were in the room at all times, but they would pick one of the three of them to testify. We've already heard what they're going to testify to.

I think that under the circumstances, particularly in light of the fact that there's that one grand juror that's asking questions about fingerprints, I just have a feeling it would be appropriate for us to interview the rest of the grand jurors and find out what everybody says happened. And we can still decide, when it's all done. We may end up with a stipulation with the prosecution once we've had a chance to investigate. But I think it's gone -- the ball's rolled too far in that regard.

If the record is -- and I’m not arguing with the Court on that. The record is the record. But if we can go behind it, then we should be allowed to talk to the other people in the room.

THE COURT: Well, I would -- you know, I would consider -- this is a difficult problem. It’s not an easy problem. And the grand jury, when they come to serve, you know, expect their identities to be protected and not to be exposed to cross-examination. That’s not something that’s anticipated.

If the prosecution is withdrawing their request to call the grand jury foreperson and intends to try to prove their -- the way that -- that the records were not touched by the child during the proceedings, then the Court would accept that withdrawal of the request to call the grand jury foreperson. I don’t see any particular problem.

Who would be the District Attorney testifying.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, it would probably be Mr. Auchincloss. There were three of us present at the time that the boys testified initially. They were recalled at the end of the proceeding.

Mr. Sneddon at the time was involved in a separate trial in Santa Barbara. He was trying the Harms case at the time. He was not present during the second time.

But we would -- it would be Mr. Auchincloss who would be testifying. He certainly witnessed all the events.

MR. SANGER: And so we’ll have Mr. Auchincloss’s statement and his criminal history records and all that so we can evaluate him as a witness.

I’m saying that to be funny. I’m sure he doesn’t have a criminal history. But we do want to have a statement of the witness, if they call him as a witness.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Is that a sound bite.

MR. SANGER: It was a kind sound bite.

But as far as the statement is concerned, the witnesses -- we're allowed to have -- we are supposed to have the information about the witness and their statement, and that's --

THE COURT: That's true.

MR. SANGER: That's part of discovery. So I'm asking for proper witness discovery, which, you know, would include all those things.

THE COURT: That's fine. That's what he's asking for.

But I just want to make clear that I'm not bargaining with you. If he wants to call the other two district attorneys that were present, that wasn't -- I'm not bargaining with you. You know, you are offering one for one. That wasn't what I was suggesting. I was saying if you want to withdraw the calling of the grand jury foreperson and submit yourself, or that you may, and if he wanted to, you know, talk to the other District Attorney that was present, you know, it's the same problem, isn't it.

But I do think that the correct -- you know, I do appreciate and think the right choice is to not call the foreperson and involve the grand jury in this hearing. So I appreciate that.

So that being the case, I'll vacate the order that I was either going to make or did make about interviewing all the grand jurors, and that won't come into effect unless you -- unless we get back to calling a grand juror.

All right.

MR. SANGER: Could I ask, just -- since the District Attorney actually raised it, the court reporter is under certain statutory obligations of confidentiality as are the grand jurors.

Could the court reporter be relieved from those obligations, to the extent that we could inquire of her of the circumstances in which she recalls the evidence was handled. I mean, we know who she was. Her name is on the -- I won't repeat it, but her name is on the transcripts.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. SANGER: And I don't see why that would be a problem.

THE COURT: Let me consider that.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

THE COURT: I'll need to look at what restrictions they have. You don't think they actually watch what's going on, do you.

MR. SANGER: There's a possibility.

THE COURT: Okay. Let me look at that.

Do you know what code sections. I'll have to find them. What protections they have.

MR. SANGER: I did cite code sections. I just closed it. But I did cite the code section, the general area that talks about grand jury. It's 9-something. Let me just see if I can find it here real quickly.

924.1 is the grand jurors, and it's right around that same area.

THE COURT: It talks about the court reporter.

MR. SANGER: Yeah. Somewhere in that same series of code sections.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you. I'll let you -- I'll look at that this weekend and tell you Monday, and --

MR. SANGER: Okay. Would the Court like me to get the exact code section and send it, or --

THE COURT: I think we can find it.

MR. SANGER: I'm sure.

THE COURT: If it's in this area, don't worry.

MR. SANGER: Yes. Thank you.

THE COURT: If you find it's some other area, some other code or something, I'd appreciate if you'd just --

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: -- phone Carrie or something. Nothing formal.

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir, I will.

THE COURT: Let the other side know.

Then we have -- the next item is the defendant's motion re admissibility of evidence related to George Lopez.

MR. SANGER: Again, we briefed it.

I guess the main point that I want to make orally here before the Court is that in a criminal case, the defendant has the constitutional right to confront and cross-examine. And generally, if you have a good-faith belief that something is true, you're entitled to ask questions on cross-examination to test the recollection and test the credibility of a witness.

And I think that the Court's pre-trial rulings on this were based on information the Court had at the time.

But I think it's very clear at this point that we have a good-faith belief that Gavin Arvizo was involved in this wallet incident with Lopez, with George Lopez. And the prosecution has already raised -- in their own testimony on direct, they raised the issue that there was a falling out with George Lopez.

I think that just stepping back from the fact that this is the Michael Jackson case and that it's George Lopez, who is an actor, ordinarily, fine, we'd be able to say, "We'll just find out what it was about and get to the bottom of it."

And we understand the Court's ruling. We've all tried to abide by it. But it seems to me that at this point there's more than enough evidence to suggest that we should be allowed to vigorously cross-examine and find out.

As you know, from what we have from the various interviews, there is -- there is clearly some incident that involved David Arvizo and George Lopez that apparently involve the wallet and the accusation that the $300 was taken out of Gavin's wallet. So it's Gavin's wallet that Gavin claimed he left there and claimed he had $300 in it, which is -- David claimed he had $300 in it, which is inherently strange to start with.

Secondly, we have information from Louise Palanker that it was Gavin who was brought into it reluctantly by his father to say how much money was in the wallet, and he didn't say, "No, there was no money in the wallet," he said, "Oh, I can't remember, I can't remember," based on her version of things.

That is enough of a good-faith belief that there's something going on here with Gavin specifically that is part of the same pattern that occurs throughout, and we've shown that there's parallel patterns. Once there's a falling-out, there's an accusation, and the accusations often escalate.

What we have at the moment -- you know, as defense lawyers, we have to defend. What we have at the moment is we have the prosecution putting the witness on the stand and saying, "Well, was there a falling out with George Lopez." "Yes, there was," and we can't go into it.

So I think we have a good-faith basis, and they've brought the subject up. Even if they didn't, I think we could go into it, but they certainly brought the subject up. We should be allowed to freely cross-examine and really test the recollection and the credibility of the witnesses in what is a particularly critical area and an area that even the prosecution felt was warranted to bring up to this jury.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, let me -- if I could go back and put this in perspective as to the way I recall this issue coming up.

I recall being part of a discussion with the Court and counsel and the attorney for Mr. Lopez, and I recall that the motion was to quash the subpoena. And as I recall it, the decision that was made ultimately, at the completion of the day, was that the Court indicated that you would not release Mr. Lopez from the subpoena, but that you asked the lawyers specifically to file information to you with regard to the incident involving the wallet, so you would be in a better position to evaluate whether Mr. Lopez would be a witness or whether it would qualify for some motion under 403.

To my -- to my knowledge only - I can only speak for myself - I've never seen anything filed by the lawyer in response to the Court's request as to what I understood was going to be the next step.

And let me tell you, from our perspective, how we feel about it.

Our recollection, and from a review of the transcript of the defense's opening statement, Mr. Mesereau said that it was Janet Arvizo, not David Arvizo, who was involved in this wallet incident.

And the purpose for us asking questions of people who knew about the incident was to show that it was, in fact, David Arvizo and not Janet Arvizo, because the defense had made a representation to this jury that it was Janet Arvizo who was involved in that incident, and she was not, to the best of our knowledge.

So with regard to the good-faith belief, now the defense says it was David, but that wasn't what they said, I believe the transcript will bear out, in the opening statement. And it was for that reason that we asked the questions of the witness that was on the stand.

Putting aside the change in position by the defense, we believe further that the information is that the father, David, tried to induce the child to claim that there was $300 in a wallet, and the child refused to do so and was reluctant to do so.

So, I guess our position is, we would like the Court's order that Mr. Lopez be a witness in this case to stay in effect pending the fact that the lawyer file some kind of declaration or pro-offer proof to the Court, and then at that point either side could make whatever motions that they feel is appropriate in light of the information provided to the Court.

We would not want him released. And it could be very well that we want him to testify, because it was, in fact, David, and not Janet Arvizo, who was involved in this incident, and the son, the victim in this case, was not -- was not buying what the father was trying to get him to do.

So that, in essence, is our position on 2771 this, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: May I respond briefly.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

Here's the question I have: I can't tell from the declaration of Mr. Sanger, or from the attached reports, if Gavin, when he called Mr. and Mrs. Lopez seeking the return of his wallet, claimed at that time that there was several hundred dollars in the wallet. I can't tell if that's your proffered --

MR. SANGER: Here's -- the state of that situation is this, as I understand it: Louise Palanker says that she was advised of this wallet incident because it was a big topic of discussion --

THE COURT: But can you answer my question.

MR. SANGER: Yes. And when she was told about the incident - which is double hearsay, or hearsay at the very least - when she was told, she was told that Gavin made the call, and that later, when David Arvizo tried to get him to stand there in the office and say there was $300, he said, "Well, I can't remember how much was in there."

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Jamie Masada could not remember the incident until he was prompted, and then he remembered it. Then he couldn't remember all of it. So he went through several stages, but through the course of his statement, he eventually says, “Well, I don’t really remember” -- as I recall, he says, “I don’t really remember what Gavin did.”

So we have -- we don’t have a clear understanding, or a witness who is going to clearly say they heard what he said. Hence --

THE COURT: To the Lopezes when he called them.

MR. SANGER: That’s right. Other than Mr. Lopez, Mr. and Mrs. Lopez.

THE COURT: So the statement under your declaration on line 21, 20 and 21 -- are you there.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

THE COURT: “Gavin later called Mr. and Mrs. Lopez seeking return of his wallet. He claimed that it contained several hundred dollars.”

MR. SANGER: That’s my understanding of Louise Palanker’s claim. That’s why we detailed it to show the Court. I mean --

THE COURT: So we don’t know that.

MR. SANGER: We don’t know that for sure, but we’ve got enough. And as I say, there’s a distinction here. And I think I answered the Court’s question.

Okay. There’s a distinction here between what Mr. Sneddon is proposing and what we’re talking about at the moment, I think.

Mr. Blancarte, who’s representing Mr. Lopez, did say he would file a supplemental declaration addressing the wallet issue.

THE COURT: Well, here’s what I recall. And since I’m in the best position to --

MR. SANGER: Yes, evidently.

THE COURT: What I recall is that I overruled the objection to the subpoena and said that Mr. Lopez had to attend. And we agreed we wouldn’t call him until April because of his business schedule.

The attorney for Mr. Lopez then indicated he was going to file a motion to quash the subpoena, which is different than the objection that he filed.

And I told him that if he was going to file a motion to quash the subpoena, I would require a detailed statement from Mr. Lopez as to this wallet incident so I would know what he did or did not have to offer the jury in the way of evidence on the issue.

He has not filed a motion to quash the subpoena, so the subpoena is still in effect. And he's under no duty to file any declaration absent -- only if he files a motion to quash, and that would be in an accompanying declaration.

MR. SANGER: That's absolutely correct, from my point of view, proving that the Court is a very percipient witness on a --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: Now, I was -- in fact, was just shortcutting that, because I didn't want to go through a long explanation, but the Court very concisely did say what happened.

The point of the story is precisely what I was getting at. Whether or not Mr. Lopez is called as a witness is not Mr. Sneddon's issue right now or my issue right now. The issue right now is whether or not we can confront and cross-examine the witnesses with this incident.

THE COURT: I agree.

MR. SANGER: And I think --

THE COURT: And I think you can.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you.

THE COURT: The difference we have is -- and there's been some -- maybe some misunderstanding from the District Attorney, judging from their objections, that on the 403 hearings, when I said that certain things couldn't be proved, I also said that that did not bar cross-examination of certain witnesses on those items, you know. It's -- and that's -- that's what was going on on some of the ones earlier this week where you seemed to be surprised that I was overruling your objection to cross-examination on some of those issues.

So I agree with you, that cross-examination of witnesses that have knowledge of this would not be inappropriate. You know, there's limits on that, of course.

MR. SANGER: Well, I understand. The Court makes rulings as you go along, obviously.
Okay. Thank you. I believe that resolves that issue.
We did have one more matter that we had. It's not on the agenda.
THE COURT: Yes, we'll take that up now. A motion for a mistrial.
MR. SANGER: That's right. And just --
THE COURT: Let me just -- let me rule on the first motion first, because it's connected, in a way.
MR. SANGER: Okay.
THE COURT: And you connected it.
What I'm going to rule on the motion for admission of evidence on the alleged prior sexual offenses under Evidence Code Section 1108 is that we will hear argument on the -- on Monday, the -- what date would that be. Would that be the 28th.
THE CLERK: Yes.
THE COURT: On Monday the 28th.
The way I think I would like to do this is to have -- not to call witnesses unless I get to the point where I want to have a witness.
So I'll have the prosecution make their arguments as to why they believe particular witnesses should be called as to particular items, what they're going to say. And I'll allow the defense to say -- they can do this in advance. I would encourage some written material if you have time to do it, but not requiring it, as to why -- in a particular case, what you would be doing and why you think it would -- should be excluded under 352, and let you argue those things, and then I may or may not ask for a witness in any particular situation. It will depend on how I hear what you have to say, what my opinion is then.

MR. SANGER: And if you were going to request a witness, would it be on a different day, or should we have people lined up outside the courtroom.

THE COURT: Well, let's make it a different day so that we don't have to inconvenience all sorts of people.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

THE COURT: But I'm pretty much of the opinion now, having read the cases on this, that the likelihood of having any witnesses is not great.

MR. ZONEN: It's not what.

MR. SNEDDON: Not great.

THE COURT: Now, on your motion for a mistrial.

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir.

First of all, a motion for mistrial is generally made orally. And it was made orally in this case, just so the record's clear, by Mr. Mesereau when he said, "I have a motion."

THE COURT: He did. I understood what he was saying. And I asked him to wait, and he did. And the record was made timely, if that was an issue at all.

MR. SANGER: I just wanted to -- we have to connect the dots on the record, you know, so I just wanted to make sure we did that.

THE COURT: Yeah. That is your right.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

And I understand that we're not supposed to say the word "mistrial" in front of the jury, and therefore we don't.

THE COURT: That's correct.

MR. SANGER: We filed a memorandum of points and authorities in support of the motion for mistrial this morning, hand-delivered it to the District Attorney.

A mistrial, though, is generally -- a motion for mistrial is generally made orally, and I intend to make this orally. The points and authorities just support what we said. And I'd incorporate the points and authorities in my oral presentation so that I don't have to repeat everything.

Having said that, the basis for the motion for mistrial is that the Court made a ruling, whether the Court intends -- or, I shouldn't say "intends," whether history bears out later that the Court either grants or denies the 1108 motion, the prosecution was under a clear duty not to go into '93, '94 matters.

And what they did, what Mr. Auchincloss did specifically, was not only ask a question that -- to which a witness responded out of the blue, "Oh," and named names. And I'll just avoid saying the names right now, but it's already in the record, and everybody will see it, I'm sure. But, you know, that can happen. You tell your witness there are certain rules, and the witness gets up on the stand and they're nervous, and all of a sudden you ask a question, and they blurt out things that they're not supposed to say.

That's not what happened here. What happened here was that the witness came up with one name, which was Macaulay Culkin, and Mr. Auchincloss, not being satisfied with that, went back directly to the very list of names that he has in his 1108 motion, that he's been asking the Court to be allowed to go into, and the Court said, "No, not until we rule on it." And he asked leading questions. "What about so and so." And then they said, "Yes." "What about the next person." She said, "Yes."

It's in the record and I've cited it. I just don't want to repeat it unless the Court wants me to.

THE COURT: No, based on your written material, I read that record this morning.

MR. SANGER: And when you compare that to the 1108 motion, there's nothing accidental about this.

Now, the issue or the problem that I see here is that, number one, the Court's order has been blatantly disregarded. I'm not saying that from the standpoint of being punitive. I'm just saying, as a practical matter, that's exactly what happened. It couldn't have been any more blatant and it couldn't have been any more intentional. It was clearly done with leading questions. So as I said, there's nothing accidental about this. And it goes right down the list of the people that the prosecution wants to talk about.

If you look -- if you compare the 1108 motion to the transcript, it's exactly what he's doing. He's getting in the information that the Court had said don't get into until we have a chance to do it.

So I think that the only remedy at this point is a mistrial.

Now, the prosecution could argue, "Well, you should grant our 1108 motion anyway, so there will be no harm, no foul," which means they can then put the Court in this difficult position, deliberately violate the Court's order, and then get the benefit of all worlds on this.

That can't be right. There's got to be a sanction. And the only appropriate sanction, reluctantly - I say this reluctantly - is a motion for a mistrial. And I say it reluctantly because I think that when you look at the cases such as Oregon vs. Kennedy, the United States Supreme Court case that we cited, and the People vs. Batts, which is a California case, the case law says that if a mistrial is granted based on prosecutorial misconduct, and it's granted not at the request of the defense, then jeopardy may have attached and the case is over.

On the other hand, we're in that position where we have that choice. Do we stand here and just say, "Well, we're going to take it, because if we request a mistrial and the Court grants it, they can just start all over again and prosecute again."

After considering this, we've decided that our -- the only thing we can do, as a practical matter, is ask for a mistrial as the first remedy. If that's denied, there may be other remedies. But I think we have to -- in good conscience, given what happened, and the blatant nature of the violation, I think we have to request a mistrial.

Now, the prosecution can come back and say, "Oh, well," you know, "what's a little violation of the court order here. I mean, we've spent a lot of time and money, the Court's spent a lot of time and money, look at all these sheriffs are here helping us get to our cars and do things, and the press."

That can't -- that can't be a reason to overlook something that in any other case would be just an absolutely intolerable violation of a court order.

He went down with leading questions, went down the list of people that the Court has already indicated you can't get into until we -- until we have a hearing on it.

So what do we do. As my former colleague in this case used to say, "We have to do something more than nothing." And I think that that's -- that's precisely what we have to do in this case. And I think the only proper remedy is to grant a mistrial.

None of us, believe me, wants to sit here and start this case over again. But what -- you can't unring the bell. They've gotten into specific names and specific allegations that they were told not to get into, and here we are.

Now, if the Court decides for some reason that a mistrial should not be granted, then we've suggested another possible sanction. But only if the Court denies that motion for a mistrial.

We've also indicated that we believe, and I'm saying it up front and I've said it in the papers, that this -- even though we have requested a mistrial, this still may come within the exception under the Kennedy vs. Oregon or the People vs. Batts cases, in that this appears to be such deliberate misconduct, where the very names are read in leading questions that are in the motion, that it -- it would be viewed as a case in which jeopardy is attached and mistrial is deliberately caused, and there may not be a retrial.

But whether that's the case or not, those consequences are not for the Court to weigh at this point. The Court has to weigh whether or not there was just a blatant disregard of the Court's order, and if, based on that violation, a mistrial should be granted.

And we respectfully submit that that is the proper remedy. And then, as I say, if the Court disagrees and doesn't grant a mistrial, then we've suggested, among other things, as a sanction, the 1108 motion should just be summarily denied, the People's motion on that, because that would -- that would at least be a sanction to deal with this.

The Court could then issue an admonition that these -- that, "The reference to people prior to the 2003 time period will be stricken. You're not to regard them," and we could go from there.

Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Counsel.

MR. SNEDDON: My first comment is that Mr. Sanger points out one of the anomalies of the law that we face when we try criminal cases, and that is when there's an allegation that someone on the prosecution side steps over the boundary, all of a sudden the defense can get up and make mistrials and characterize it in a certain fashion.

But on the other hand, when we sit here and watch defense counsel continuously step over the boundaries and get admonished as violating the Court’s 403 rules, the prosecution’s basically at the mercy of the Court, because the law does not allow us to make any kind of motion to rein in or bring under control somebody who just consistently violates the Court’s orders.

Having said that, two wrongs never make a right, so I’d like to address the correctness of why we believe that this motion should be denied, there should be no sanctions, and why the Court should ignore this, in the sense that it was not deliberate and not intentional.

First of all, the Court’s 1108 motion dealt with specific allegations of misconduct on the part of the defendant involving other young boys. There was no attempt to elicit that information from these witnesses. There was no intent to infer that there was any improper conduct on the part of Mr. Jackson with the individuals. The questions were directed totally at the witness with regard to who were people who came to the ranch and visited Mr. Jackson on certain occasions.

And frankly, given the Court’s ruling on staying away from the 1108 areas of misconduct, I can’t see how, frankly, it comes within the purview of just simply asking whether these were individuals who came to the ranch during a particular point in time involving the period of time in which this person was an employee at the ranch.

In fact, the Court sustained some objections, but most of the objections you sustained were on the basis of foundation. And it was at that point when Mr. Auchincloss went back and went through them serially, individually, you did not overrule -- in fact, you overruled objections on the part of the defense as to some of those questions.

Now, I think it’s pretty hard to stretch that kind of questions and those kind of answers in the kind of context that they were presented as being prosecutorial, deliberate misconduct on the part of somebody, when it was clear that there was nothing inferred with regard to the conduct of these people at the time, and the conduct of the defendant in relationship to these people.

And so I just submit to the Court that, given the whole series of questions and answers and the sustaining of objections, that there was nothing really improper that happened in the first place; that this is part of the give and take at trial. And some of the boundaries, I think the Court would probably -- you won’t take judicial notice of it, but the Court has tried to guide us generally through some of these landmines in this case, and it’s not altogether sometimes clear just how far one can go and one can’t go. And I think that’s been a problem on both sides of this case.

But to say that something is deliberate and something rises to the magnitude of some kind of a mistrial declaration in this particular case, I think is a very, very big stretch in light of what happened in the total context of this trial and in the total context of the examination of this witness, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Any rebuttal.

MR. SANGER: Yes. First of all, I’d feel a lot more comfortable, rather than bringing up other things and then saying two rights don’t make a wrong, if we just address the issue. And also, I’d feel a lot more comfortable if the prosecution indicated that they were wrong.

However, what’s happened here is we’re saying there was no intent to infer. And as we cited in our papers on page two, and including the footnote on page two, that it was Mr. Auchincloss, not Miss Fournier, who said things like “special relationship” and “special friends.” It was Mr.

Auchincloss who was trying to make this relevant to his 1108 motion. It was Mr. Auchincloss who brought out the ages of the children. It was Mr. Auchincloss who asked questions only about boys and not about girls.

He chose to do that, why. Not because it was a random discussion of Miss Fournier and what she’d been doing on the ranch for 10 or 12 years. This is directed specifically to the inference. And Mr. Sneddon just got up and said there was no intention of bringing out. You know, I’m just taken aback by that. Of course there was an intention to infer something by this testimony. I can’t believe we’re in the same courtroom.

And if you look at that, when Mr. Auchincloss goes on about special relationships, special friend, ages, boys, he’s clearly tying it in to his 1108 argument. And if he wasn’t doing that, the relevance objections would have been sustained, I’m sure.

It was -- it was offered as relevant evidence. It wasn’t offered for some background of Miss Fournier. And the Court ruled earlier that that evidence would not be admissible until the Court had a hearing on it.

So, you know, it clearly was improper, and it clearly was for a purpose. I just can’t believe I heard to the contrary.

The question is, you know, what does the Court do about it. And in saying that somebody on the defense team overstepped boundaries from time to time makes this right, it just doesn’t. And the defendant does have a constitutional right to a fair trial and to have the Court -- the Court’s orders followed by the prosecution.

This is a bell that cannot be unrung. And I just think under the circumstances, there’s no choice but to grant a mistrial. As, you know, remarkable as that might seem to the public or somebody else, the fact is, as lawyers and as a Judge, we all know that there are legal rules.

These legal rules, in this case that the prosecution follow the court orders, were not followed, and the consequence of those breaches of legal rules is that the Court has to declare a mistrial, and I believe that that’s the appropriate remedy.

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, I promise it will be less than a minute, but I wrote something down that I didn’t tell you that I think is relevant to this issue.

THE COURT: No, we have --

MR. SNEDDON: All right.

THE COURT: We have opening, response and reply.

Well, let me tell you how I was looking at it when I was making the rulings, which is there was some evidence by the District Attorney where -- from which he would like to prove or have the jury infer that when children go to Michael Jackson’s ranch, that they are unsupervised, they become wild and crazy kids, you know. There was a lot of -- the inference they wanted to be drawn, I think, was that that is a situation that Mr. Jackson wanted; that he didn’t supervise them; he wanted them to become uncontrolled children.

Then Mr. Mesereau, in cross-examination, spent a good deal of time trying to establish -- that’s not a good word, “trying.” I should say working to establishing that, in fact, many truckloads, busloads -- not “truckloads,” busloads of children, carloads of children, appeared at the ranch when he was there, and -- when Michael Jackson was there, and when Michael Jackson wasn’t there. And there was an ongoing entertainment of children, and that -- excuse me, that the children acted as children do when they’re taken to any amusement park. And that, in fact, Mr. Jackson wasn’t there a lot, and wasn’t out watching them a lot and really didn’t have much contact at all with all of these children who took advantage of the rides and zoo and everything.

And then the District Attorney came back and, in my acceptance of that evidence at that time, was to try to reestablish or to establish the contact that Mr. Jackson did have with the children. And that, in fact, there were certain children that he had a great deal of contact with, and that this was the balancing of the evidence that I was watching from this position.

And so when the District Attorney asked if there weren’t certain children that he had established good, strong relationships with - and she confirmed, the witness confirmed that that was a fact, and started naming them - I didn’t feel that that violated the 1108 order. I didn’t see -- from my standpoint, I didn’t see that it was either harmful or helpful to either the defense or the prosecution.

I mean, some of the children that were named were relatives of Mr. Jackson. And I did specifically limit that testimony to that area purposefully. And I thought the District Attorney recognized it when he said he intended to go no further than that, and I said I would hold him to it.

And then when the -- when he did mention Jordie Chandler, he said -- he was the one that raised it, not the witness.

“How about Jordie Chandler.”

And she said, “Yes.”

And Mr. Mesereau said, “Your Honor, I’m going to object based on the Court’s ruling on 1108.

“The Court: Sustained.

And Mr. Mesereau said, “Move to strike.”

And the Court struck the testimony.

And it was after that, of course, that Mr. Mesereau moved for a mistrial. But I felt that that cured the situation.

And one has to keep in mind that this isn't the first that the jury's heard that name. And even one of the questionnaires for service of jury was to ask the jurors what they knew about the alleged 1993 -- or the 1993 alleged incident. And it's come up -- 1993 has been mentioned by other witnesses. So it's not like this is the first, nor will it probably be the last time, it's mentioned.

So I'll deny the motion for a mistrial and any request for sanctions.

Let's see. Is there anything else before me.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, may I ask a question about the procedure on the 28th, in terms of what the expectations are, us moving forward with our case. And then I have one minor thing that I'd like to discuss.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Before you change the subject, though, could I just ask one clarification question on that ruling.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Just so we don't have a problem -- I mean, the Court is going to rule however it's going to rule.

THE COURT: The Court ruled however it did rule.

MR. SANGER: That's true. I'm speaking about prospectively on other -- if this comes up again. It would be our position that mentioning the names of children who are in the 1108 motion, whether they're there because -- well, for whatever reason, mentioning those names from '93, '94, or prior to that should not occur, it would be our position, unless counsel approaches and asks for permission. Because I still believe that that comes within the 1108.

I understand what Your Honor said. I'm not arguing with the ruling. But prospectively, until the Court rules on the 1108, that would be my belief and understanding. And I'd ask if we could follow that procedure; that if there is an intention to do something like that, that we have an opportunity to be heard on it.

THE COURT: I think that's only fair. There could be other situations where that testimony is admissible before we get to 1108. It's not admissible under 1108 or -- so it would have to be some limited purpose. But to prevent the need for further hearings like this, I think you should advise them if you're going to go through that list --

MR. SNEDDON: Okay.

THE COURT: -- before then.

MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, on the 28th, when you said we were going to have argument, should we anticipate that that will take the day, and we shouldn't be required to have witnesses standing by. I don't even mean in connection with the 1108. I mean just --

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. SNEDDON: -- to carry on that day. Do you envision that would take the whole day or part of the morning. I just want to get direction so --

THE COURT: Well, how long do you think your argument will take.

MR. SNEDDON: Depends on whether it's -- who's arguing it. But -- and depends on how much leeway the Court gives.

THE COURT: How much --

MR. SNEDDON: Based on our experience, I would expect it would probably take a couple of hours, I guess.

THE COURT: I think at least. What do you think. Who's arguing that here.

MR. SANGER: I believe I am, Your Honor.

I would say it's liable to take a couple hours. We could intend to take an hour, but we'll probably take a couple by the time we're through

THE COURT: So are we talking two hours. Are you each saying two hours total, or are you saying two hours --

MR. SNEDDON: I would --

THE COURT: -- each.

MR. SNEDDON: No, I would anticipate that I would be able to address the Court's concerns in my opening remarks. And since it's our motion, we carry the pail on this one, that probably I could do that in a half hour easily, because you already have our declarations.

THE COURT: I already have your written declarations.

MR. SNEDDON: So I'll just highlight things and we'll go from there. So I would expect that mine -- my opening would take less than a half hour.

MR. SANGER: And by the time I get through going back and forth, I think total, the whole thing will probably take a couple hours. And we'll probably have a break, so --

THE COURT: So if we had the jury come in on Monday at 11:30 and did the 11:30 to 2:30, that would work.

MR. SANGER: I think that would be fine. If the Court needed more time, we could do the jury and take more time on another day.

MR. SNEDDON: So 11:30.

THE COURT: So we'll -- we're going to argue -- the arguments will start at 8:30.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: But you'll need to have witnesses commencing at 11:30.

MR. SNEDDON: Is it the Court's intention to rule that day.

THE COURT: Unless -- yes, unless I need to call a witness.

MR. SNEDDON: Okay. So if the Court rules in our favor on one or more witnesses, we could go ahead and put them on right away, then.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: All right.

The second thing is kind of a personal thing, and it involves the Court also. You indicated we would not be in session Tuesday afternoon, and the reason is the dedication at the Juvenile Hall. And I know they're dedicating it to Sue Gionfriddo, who is a close personal friend of mine, and we've been colleagues for over 30 years together, and I was very close to her and her deceased husband.

I had intended to attend that service, but then you invited all the jury, and I'm a little squeally about going over there, because I don't want to run into a juror, and I don't want to get accused of any improper conduct. So I guess what I'm asking the Court is --

THE COURT: I would expect you to attend, and I don't expect any of the jurors to attend. Did you notice the laughter when I --

MR. SNEDDON: I know, Judge. But I just want to make sure that I've addressed -- I've consulted with you about that.

THE COURT: I'll address that with them Monday and tell them I really don't expect them to attend. I think they're in tune with my humor.

MR. SNEDDON: I don't want to get accused of showing up if you said they were going to be there, or something like that.

THE COURT: No, I understand. I think everybody -- Mr. Sanger might even want to be there.

MR. SANGER: I was going to say, Sue Gionfriddo has been a good friend of mine for a long time, too, and I intend to attend. And I assume if we saw a juror, we would go in a different direction.

THE COURT: Yes. I'd require them to wear their badges if they went. I don't think they're going to go. They're really looking forward to the break.

MR. SNEDDON: Last thing: Do we have an update on the computer. We're in the middle of trial here. We'd like to get some of that information.

Are we done with at least one of the computers with regard to the --

THE COURT: I'll have to defer to Jed.

MR. BEEBE: The last word I heard was that the -- that there was -- that the disk, based on the new list, was in the mail yesterday. And so as soon as the special master makes a ruling, that material will be available.

MR. SNEDDON: It's -- can I ask a clarifying question.

My understanding was that the Brad Miller computer was completed and that the scoping down of the inquiries was on the Evvy Tavasci computers. Am I mistaken about that.

MR. BEEBE: It's the other way around.

MR. SNEDDON: The other way around.

MR. BEEBE: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Oh, but -- the Evvy Tavasci is completed, but Brad Miller's is the one that we're re-evaluating.

MR. BEEBE: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: I'm sorry, Your Honor, I was trying to get to the point.

THE COURT: Go ahead and address him. He knows. Go ahead.

MR. SNEDDON: Is it -- have the Evvy Tavasci materials been given to the special master.

MR. BEEBE: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: And then the next process is it goes to the Judge. Judge Melville will make a ruling from there.

MR. BEEBE: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: I'm just trying to get an update, Judge.

THE COURT: I agree.
MR. SNEDDON: We’re in the middle of trial and --
THE COURT: It’s just something that I’m as -- didn’t know any more than you did. So we both now know where it is.
MR. SNEDDON: Perfect. Thank you very much. Thank you for your indulgence.
THE COURT: All right. Is there anything else.
MR. SANGER: I don’t think so, Your Honor. Thank you.
THE COURT: All right. Court’s in recess. Have a good weekend.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.
MR. ZONEN: You too.

MR. MESEREAU: Have a good weekend, Your Honor.

PLAINTIFF’S WITNESSES DIRECT CROSS REDIRECT RECROSS

ABEL, Conn 2804-M (cont’d)

Santa Maria, California
Monday, March 21, 2005
9:13 a.m.

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone.
THE JURY: (In unison) Good morning.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Good morning.
THE COURT: Let's see, who was questioning.
MR. MESEREAU: I was, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Go ahead.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

CONN ABEL
Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Good morning.
When we left off Friday, we were talking about the -- what appeared to be security-related equipment that you had found at Neverland, right.
A. Yes, sir, on Thursday.
Q. Oh, Thursday. That's right. Pardon me.

And you indicated that you had not personally tested the equipment, right.
A. That's correct.
Q. Have you tested it since we last spoke.
A. No, sir.
Q. And you may recall finding an investigate -- what appeared to be an investigator's card with the equipment, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you made any further efforts since last Thursday to investigate whether or not that investigator exists.

A. I have not, no.

Q. Okay. Have you discussed Thursday's testimony with anyone in the last three days.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Who did you discuss it with.

A. The -- Mr. Sneddon and the district attorneys involved in this case.

Q. And when did you do that.

A. This morning.

Q. Okay. Where did that happen.

A. In the office upstairs at the District Attorney's Office.

Q. And what time did you meet with the prosecutors this morning.

A. I believe I was there at approximately ten minutes to 8:00.

Q. And how long did the meeting last.

A. Five minutes, maybe.

Q. And what prosecutors were present.

A. I believe they all were.

Q. So that would be Mr. Sneddon, Mr. Zonen, and Mr. Auchincloss.

A. Yes.

Q. Anyone else.

A. I believe Mr. Robel was also there.

Q. And you're telling the jury you discussed your testimony last week for five minutes.

A. Somewhere in that area, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Who initiated the discussion.

A. I believe Mr. Sneddon did.

Q. And was the purpose of your meeting with him, as far as you knew, to discuss your testimony.

A. I -- yes.

Q. How did you know the purpose was to discuss your testimony.

A. I believe there was a question to ask -- that I was asked as to what I had said on the stand.

Q. And who raised that issue.

A. Mr. Sneddon.

Q. And what did he say to you.

A. He asked me, in reference to the security equipment that you had mentioned was involved in security, if I, in fact, believed it was involved in security.

Q. So Mr. Sneddon asked you that or told you that.

A. He asked me that.

Q. Okay. And do you recall on Thursday, you said that you really didn't know if it was involved in security, correct.

A. Well, I think I said at one point that it could not be.

Q. You said you didn't know, right.

A. I don't recall saying that I didn't know.

Q. Well, do you remember you said, look, words to the effect, you hadn't tested it, you didn't know if you could purchase it freely, and you didn't know if it was used by an investigator, correct. Do you remember saying words to that effect.

A. I don't believe it was exactly phrased in that manner, no.

Q. I'm not suggesting it was exactly phrased. But you said words to that effect on Thursday, under oath, to the jury, true.

A. Possibly. I don't recall that.

Q. Okay. You indicated you found the equipment and then turned it over to someone, true.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know if that equipment was ever fingerprinted.

A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. Did you ask -- excuse me, you say you know it was not fingerprinted.

A. No, I do not know if it was fingerprinted.

It does not appear that it was fingerprinted.

Q. Okay. Who told you that the prosecutors wanted to discuss that equipment with you before you testified today.

A. I don't believe anybody did.

Q. Well, that was the purpose of this morning's meeting, right.

A. It was not -- it was not a meeting, sir. I arrived early, just to be there for testimony today.

Q. Didn't you just tell the jury you had a meeting for about five minutes with three prosecutors and the issue of that security equipment arose, true.

A. Do you want me to explain it.

Q. No, I'd like you to answer my question, please.

A. We did have a meeting, yes.

Q. To talk about what you said about the security equipment, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Who spoke at the meeting besides you and Mr. Sneddon.

A. Mr. Zonen and Mr. Auchincloss.

Q. Did they talk about the security equipment.

A. I believe they did.

Q. Did they tell you anything about that security equipment.

A. No, sir.

Q. So they discussed it but they didn't tell you anything about it, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Did they just ask you questions.

A. I don't recall exactly what the content was. I know there was a discussion about what was in the case, and I explained what was in the case.

Q. Are you suggesting that neither Mr. Sneddon, Mr. Auchincloss or Mr. Zonen told you anything about that equipment in this morning's meeting, which took place approximately, I think, an hour and 20 minutes ago.

A. I don't believe anybody told me anything about it.

Q. Did you tell them anything about it.

A. Yes.

Q. What did you tell them about it.

A. I explained to them what was in the case, and I explained to them what I believed that equipment was utilized for.

Q. Did you tell them anything that contradicted your testimony last week.

A. I don’t believe so.

Q. Was everything you said to them consistent with your testimony last week.

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Did you have any discussions by telephone with any of them since you testified last Thursday.

A. No, sir.

Q. Correct me if I’m wrong, but you remember events from November of 2003 but don’t remember events from an hour and 20 minutes ago when you met with the prosecutors, right.

MR. SNEDDON: Object as argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Is your memory better about November of 2003 than it is about the meeting this morning.

MR. SNEDDON: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember on Thursday you looked at some documents that were with that security equipment.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And remember you began to recite for the jury on the record what was in those documents.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember there was some -- what looked to be a schematic dealing with what appeared to be an outline for a security system. Do you remember that.

A. It was for equipment, yes, sir.

Q. You didn’t really answer my question, did you.

A. No, you kept saying “security equipment,” and I think I referred that it could not be security equipment.

Q. Okay. It referred to videos and cameras, correct.

A. Covert cameras, yes, sir.

Q. It had various, what appeared to be either communication lines or transmission lines going between cameras, videos, et cetera, didn’t it.

A. Talked about clock cameras. Talked about fire alarm cameras.

Q. Right. And you don’t think blocked cameras or secret cameras are consistent with having an internal security system.

A. No.

Q. So you think internal security systems never have hidden cameras.

A. No.

Q. Did I hear that correctly, internal security systems never have hidden cameras.

A. Sir, I’ve never seen one.

Q. Never seen a hidden camera in an internal security system in a residence; is that correct.

A. I have never personally seen a hidden camera in a security system at a residence, no, sir, I have not.

Q. Okay. Are you aware that they exist.

A. No.

Q. Okay. So the idea that someone in their residence might have a security system with a camera they don’t want anyone to see is something you’re not aware of, right.

A. Sir, the only thing I can tell you is that most -- every security system that I have observed where there was a camera, it was visible.

Q. Have you seen any of those television shows where parents will suspect a babysitter as doing something to their child, so they’ll have a hidden video somewhere to see what’s happening when they’re not home. Ever seen that.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Do you think that hidden video relates to a concern for security with a child.

A. In that respect, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. But after last Thursday you did no investigation at all into anything related to that piece of evidence we discussed on Thursday, right.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. Did you check the cameras that existed in the main house at Neverland.

A. Sir, I never saw any cameras in the main house at Neverland.

Q. Okay. Did you look for them.

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it one of your responsibilities to look for cameras like that.

A. Well, I guess I could back up on that and say that when I was in the office area and when I was in the arcade area, cellar, et cetera, I did look around to see if there was cameras, but I did not observe any.

Q. Did you ever observe any hidden cameras that someone might install to see if, say, employees are stealing.

A. I have not personally seen that, no, sir.

Q. Are you aware of anything like that ever existing.

A. I’m sure it exists. I’ve just never seen one.

Q. Okay. And never really heard of one existing, right.

A. I’ve heard of them existing, yes, sir.

Q. You did undercover narcotics work for many years, didn’t you.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many years did you do undercover narcotics work.

A. I would say a total of approximately ten years, sir.

Q. In your ten years doing undercover narcotics work, you never came across a situation where it appeared that people you were investigating were using hidden cameras to see who might be approaching a particular location.

A. I don’t recall seeing or coming across hidden cameras. I recall seeing cameras on the outside of buildings and cameras on top of computers, et cetera, that would be looking outside to see if somebody was approaching, yes, sir.

Q. And in your estimation, were they part of what you’d call a security system.

A. I’d say that was security, sir.

Q. Are you aware of any department stores that have hidden cameras to see what people are doing with merchandise.

A. I believe most cameras that I’ve seen are pretty visible. I don’t recall seeing any hidden cameras involved in that.

Q. Never heard of that happening.

A. I can’t say I never heard of it. But I don’t recall specifically knowing that.

Q. Have you heard of it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Are you aware of any cameras that are sometimes hidden within clocks, someone can find out what went on at a particular area when they were not there.

A. No, sir.

Q. Never heard of that.

A. Only in that diagram you showed me.

Q. First time it ever entered your mind that there may be a camera hidden inside a clock as part of a security system.

A. That’s the first time I had ever been aware of that, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Are you an expert on security systems.

A. No, I’m not.

Q. Okay. Now, you went into an area that you described as the library at Neverland, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And please tell the jury what you saw in that library area.

A. Well, there were rows like you would see in a library that had books stacked upright in them. There were boxes, numerous boxes, stacked throughout the library. There was a -- in the back area there was a little sitting area, had a chair, lamp, et cetera. Like I said, there was books and boxes cluttered throughout the entire library area.

Q. How many books do you think you saw in that library area.

A. Numerous. I mean, lots of books.

Q. There were books all over the place, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how big an area do you recall that library being.

A. I would only estimate that it may be 25 foot by 25 foot, thereabouts.

Q. There are thousands of books in that residence, aren’t there.

MR. SNEDDON: Excuse me, Your Honor. I’ll object to the question. “Residence” versus what he’s talking about, another area. Assumes a fact that he was ever in the residence.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: That’s my objection.

THE COURT: Foundation. Go ahead.

MR. MESEREAU: I can ask him that question. Sure, Your Honor.

Q. Were you ever in the main residence at Neverland.

A. No, sir.

Q. Never walked in once.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. Would it be, in your opinion, safe to say that there are thousands of books in that library area.

A. Several hundred, yes.

Q. More than that, right.

A. I -- I don’t recall right offhand. It was a lot of books in there. I couldn’t tell you if it was several hundred or thousands.

Q. Did you count them.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. You also said there were boxes of books around, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you also say there were bags of books around.

A. There were paper bags that had items in it. I don’t recall if they contained books or not. There was also records, records in boxes. I don’t recall what was in the bags especially, sir.

Q. And did you go through all the books that you saw in the library area.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you at least try to get a look at the titles of all those books.

A. Not all of them, sir.

Q. Did you see a lot of books that referred to art.

A. I don’t -- I don’t remember seeing specific topics of what all of the books would equate to. I mean, there was books on virtually everything in there.

Q. And there are a lot of books on photography, correct.

A. As I say, I don’t recall specific art, photography, or exact titles, no, sir.

Q. But you said -- you told the jury, I think, that every subject imaginable was there, right.

A. I guess that was just a summation on my part. There was books from -- there was numerous books on a lot of different titles.

Q. And did you see books on history.

A. I can’t tell you exactly that I did. I couldn’t tell you that I didn’t either.

Q. Did you see books on theater.

A. That would be the same answer. I mean, I saw a lot of books. But I don’t remember exactly what they all were titled or referred to.

Q. Did you see books on painting.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object as asked and answered. It’s obvious there is no foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I don’t specifically remember books on painting. But as I said, I could not tell you that there wasn’t books in there on painting.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you saw these boxes filled with books, what did you do with those boxes.

A. Well, for most -- as much time as we had, we went through as many books as absolutely possible. But we could not have gone through all of the books that were in that library area.

Q. Did you see a lot of bookcases.

A. Case -- I don’t know exactly what you mean by “cases,” sir.

Q. Well, let me explain. Did you see items of furniture that had shelves of books in those items of furniture.

A. That’s what I was referring to when I first said there was rows of books scattered throughout the library. And I would estimate there was six, if not more, rows of books.

Q. Okay. And you didn’t go through each row, correct.

A. There were three of us searching. Three of us kind of divided up the room. As the supervisor, myself, I went through pretty much each row. I looked at kind of some of the books. I looked at some of the boxes that had books in them. I went through some of the boxes, but I don’t recall that I saw every title of every book in that library. It would have been be virtually impossible. There was just boxes -- I could not have opened all the boxes myself and personally look at them.

Q. To your knowledge, did somebody open all the boxes.

A. Yes.

Q. Were there specific instructions that those who were searching the library were to open boxes if they saw any.

A. I believe I told them, other investigators that were there, to make sure they looked through the boxes, open them and look through the boxes.

Q. Were some of those boxes unopened, as far as you know.

A. I -- I personally believe they had all been opened and looked at. Whether the investigators reclosed the boxes or not, I don’t know. The boxes that I opened and looked at, I left open.

Q. Okay. But there are boxes that you actually opened, true.

A. Yes.

Q. There are boxes that appeared to have not been opened before, correct.

A. Before I arrived.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And did you note down where those unopened boxes appeared to have come from.

A. No.

Q. Did you notice that a lot of boxes appeared to be sent from foreign countries.

A. I did not notice that.

Q. Okay. Did you ever make any attempt to note where they appeared to come from, on any report.

A. No, sir.

Q. When you opened unopened boxes and looked through them, did you go through every book in those unopened boxes.

A. I can’t say that I went through each book in every box that I opened.

Q. Okay. And if you saw a book you wanted to retrieve, you just took it out of the box, right.

A. I wouldn’t phrase it that way.

Q. Let’s take, for example, an unopened box that you found in the library.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. You grab the box, right.
A. Yes.
Q. You look at it, right.
A. Yes.
Q. Doesn’t appear to be opened by anybody, right. Right.
A. Now, when you say “unopened,” when I talk “unopened,” I mean that the lid was closed. I’m not saying that those boxes were sealed.
Q. Were any of the boxes sealed that you saw in the library.
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Okay. Do you recall ever opening an unsealed box. Pardon me. Let me rephrase that. Do you recall ever opening a sealed box.
A. No, sir, I do not. Most of the ones that I opened had -- the flaps were closed. They were overlaid, and I had to just open up the cardboard top on them.
Q. And you were the supervisor of this operation, correct.
A. Not of the operation, sir. Just of the library when I was there.
Q. Let me rephrase that. You were the supervisor of the search in the library, true.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you give instructions to the people who were working with you what they should do if they found a box that was sealed.

A. Yes.
Q. What were your instructions, if anyone working under you found a box that was sealed.
A. To open it.
Q. And how were they supposed to open it.
A. However they could get the lid open. I don't recall. Like I say, I don't recall seeing one that was sealed that had to be opened. I don't know whether there was tape on it. I don't know how they had to open it.

Q. Okay. But you saw boxes stacked, correct.
A. There were boxes stacked everywhere.
Q. Okay. How many boxes do you think you saw stacked, if you can estimate.
A. Rough, 50.
Q. Fifty boxes stacked in the library.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Would you -- would it be accurate to describe that library as messy.
A. Yes.
Q. And did the boxes appear to be stacked in any order.
A. No.
Q. They just seemed to be everywhere, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And you mentioned bags had books in them, right.

A. Yes.
Q. And typically where were the bags that you found.
A. Scattered throughout the library, in with the boxes, et cetera, up against the corners, on top of the boxes.
Q. Did you ever see any writing on the bags.
A. No, sir.
Q. Ever see any addresses on the bags.
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you find books that you retrieved in any of those bags.
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you find books you retrieved in any of the boxes.
A. Yes.
Q. Approximately how many of the books that you retrieved did you find in those boxes.
A. I believe there were two removed that I found, and that they were both in boxes.

Q. Now, you don’t know when these books were obtained, right.

A. By myself.

Q. By Mr. Jackson or anyone working for him, right.

A. No, I do not.

Q. You don’t know who placed those boxes in the library area, correct.

A. I do not.

Q. You don’t know if Mr. Jackson did it or someone working under him, right.

A. I do not.

Q. And you certainly don’t know whether Mr. Jackson permanently ever looked at all these books you retrieved, right.

A. I do not.

Q. And you certainly are not a witness to any child ever looking at them, correct.

A. No, sir.

Q. And you didn’t ask that any of them be fingerprinted, right.

A. I did not.

Q. And again, the dates you found these boxes was when.

A. I believe we were there November 18th.

Q. Okay. Were you only there for the search that day.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Have you ever been back since.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. And as the person who was supervising the search of the library, was there a point person you were supposed to hand any books you retrieved to.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that.

A. That was Detective Cooley.

Q. Was he the only one that books you retrieved were handed to.

A. Well, I will clarify that -- what happened. Stuff was not arbitrarily handed to Mr. Cooley. When it was located, it was photographed, and then I instructed Mr. Cooley to obtain that item, the book, and take it as evidence.

Q. Okay. The books you retrieved did not appear to be illegally obtained, correct.

A. No, they did not.

Q. Okay. And you don’t know as you sit here today whether the books you retrieved were either purchased or were mailed as gifts, correct.

A. I don’t know.

Q. Okay. And if they were purchased, you don’t know who purchased them, correct.

A. No, I do not.

Q. And you don’t have any idea who even looked at them, if anyone did, right.

A. The day that we were there or before.

Q. Before you got there.

A. I don’t know.

Q. Okay. Were any of the books you retrieved in boxes that appeared to be under other boxes.

A. That part I don’t recall.

Q. Okay. You don’t know one way or the other.

A. I don’t know one way or another.

Q. Okay. So you don’t know if the books you retrieved that were in boxes were all found on boxes that were stacked on top or in the middle or on the bottom of the stack, right.

A. I could not tell you that, sir, no.

Q. And no effort was ever made to identify the actual location where any of these books were found, other than in the library, correct.

A. Just in the library, sir.

Q. Now, please tell the jury where the library is in relation to the main residence.

A. I’d say that the -- the arcade building, in my opinion, is north of the main residence. You walk -- you would have -- from what I recall, the main residence, you would come out what I would say the back area into a little garden area. There's walkways, and then you would go north to the arcade.

You would enter the arcade. If you went straight ahead and through the door to the arcade, there was a stairway that went to the second floor. And then the library was on -- I believe, from what I recall, on the north wall of that second story.

Q. And how far away would you estimate is the library area from the main residence.

A. I would just -- an estimate -- I'm not real sure. Maybe 50 yards, 60 yards from the main residence.

Q. And to get into the library, do you go through any area that appears to be secured.

A. I don't know exactly what you're talking about in regards to that. I don't know what you mean by that.

Q. Let's say you want to walk into the building where the library is located. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. To your knowledge, can anyone walk into that building or do you need a code.

A. That part I don't recall.

Q. How did you get in.

A. The door -- there's a doorway. And that door was unlocked.

Q. Okay. Did you see a lock on the door.

A. It was a doorknob. But I don't recall that it had a lock on it. It was like a regular house doorknob.

Q. Did you see any cameras anywhere that might detect anyone walking in the building.

A. Cameras I did not observe, no, sir.

Q. Did you search any area other than that building at Neverland.

A. Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Counsel. We're going to take our break right now.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: You may proceed.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.
Q. Before the search, there was a meeting that took place of all of those involved in the search, correct.
A. Yes, there was.
Q. And you were all handed a memorandum which described some of the details of what was going to happen in the search, correct.
A. I can’t say that I remember a memorandum, sir.
Q. It was called an operations plan, was it not.
A. There was an operations plan, yes, sir.
Q. And it was a printed operations plan that was distributed to people like yourself, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall Michael Jackson being on the property when that search began.

A. That I have no idea about, sir.

Q. You never saw him, right.

A. No, sir.

Q. And you certainly never saw Michael Jackson around any of the equipment that you seized, correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Object as asked and answered, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I don’t remember.

Go ahead. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I don’t recall seeing Mr. Jackson on that day at all, sir.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. So as you sit here today, you don’t know if Michael Jackson even knew if the equipment you seized was even on the property, correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Calls for speculation, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you want it read back.

THE WITNESS: No, sir.

It would be my opinion that he knew that that was there.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Oh, really. Let’s explore that a little bit. It’s your opinion that Michael Jackson had seen the equipment you seized.

A. Are you talking books, or the equipment that was used to monitor phone calls, sir.

Q. The equipment that appeared to be capable of monitoring phone calls. Tell us, tell the jury, when you ever saw Michael Jackson looking at that equipment.

A. I -- I can’t say that I ever saw him looking at it. It was in his office, sir.

Q. And tell the jury if you ever found his fingerprints on that equipment.

A. I did not have the equipment fingerprinted, sir.

Q. And Mr. Jackson wasn't there that day, was he.

A. No, he was not.

Q. Tell the jury how many security personnel work at Neverland.

A. That I don't know, sir.

Q. You were told security is heavy at Neverland, correct.

A. I was told that there was heavy security, yes.

Q. Okay. And by "heavy security," what did you mean. What do you think it meant.

A. That there could have been several security personnel on scene, on the ranch.

Q. How many did you see.

A. I didn't see any.

Q. Didn't see any at all.

A. No, sir.

Q. Even from the time you went into Neverland.

A. I did not see anybody from security, sir.

Q. From Neverland security, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see a security shed as you entered.

A. At the gate -- at the gate, as you enter onto the property, yes, sir, there is a security gate with a security shed. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. All right. Have you ever seen Mr. Jackson in that office area.

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how often Mr. Jackson is even in that office area on a typical day.

A. No, I do not.

Q. Okay. Is there any reason why you never called the name on that card that was found with the equipment.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What's the reason.

A. That was not my responsibility. It was not part of my investigation.

Q. Okay. Okay. Do you know whether or not that card suggested that somebody came over with a proposal on what they could do with that equipment.

A. I neverg28374. Considered that, no, sir.

Q. Okay. Do you know whether or not Mr. Jackson’s even an expert on security systems.

A. I do not know.

Q. Okay. Let’s get back to the library. You said the door was unlocked, true.

A. No, sir.

Q. What did you say.

A. You never asked me that.

Q. I never asked you if there was any security system to get into the library.

A. I don’t believe you asked me that, sir.

Q. Okay. I’ll ask it now.

A. The door was locked.

Q. The door was locked.

A. Into the library, yes, sir.

Q. How was it unlocked, so you could get in.

A. Somebody from the ranch was escorted -- I believe was escorted on, and the door was opened.

Q. Did you watch them unlock the door.

A. No, I did not.

Q. So it was unlocked when you showed up to do the search, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, you went into the arcade area, correct.

A. The library is a portion of the arcade, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. How did you get into the arcade.

A. The front door -- that door I was talking about was the front door into the arcade. That was unlocked.

Q. Okay. Was it unlocked when you showed up to the door to go in for the search.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As you walk through the arcade area, did you find that every door you wanted to go through was unlocked.

A. No, I did not find that.

Q. Did you find that there was some locks that had to be unlocked.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you asked for a locksmith, didn't you.

A. I did not, no, sir.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you a police report that says you need a locksmith in the arcade.

A. It might, but I don't recall that we needed a locksmith.

Q. Might it refresh your recollection to show you the report.

A. Sure.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE WITNESS: I still don't recall that we needed a locksmith, but I'll look at the report.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

A. It does say, "Sergeant Abel needs a locksmith in the arcade," and that was at 1200 hours. And I believe I remember what that was in reference to now.

Q. Okay. So you've seen the report, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection about your needing a locksmith in the arcade.

A. Yes.

Q. And what did that refer to.

A. There was a locked box on the back of a door in the security -- not in a security -- there was -- if you went through the arcade, there was a storage area in the back of the arcade. And on the back of the door of that door to the storage area, there was a metal security box that I asked for a locksmith to come and open.

Q. Okay. You went into the wine cellar, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. How did you get down there.

A. There was a large jukebox-type arcade machine in the way. We moved that jukebox out of the way, went down the stairs to the bottom door where you would enter the cellar.

Q. Did you have to unlock the door in the wine cellar to get in.

A. I didn’t. But it needed to be unlocked. It was locked.

Q. Okay. Do you know who unlocked it.

A. Somebody from the ranch, I believe.

Q. Okay. And as you testified, you found alcoholic beverages in the wine cellar, true.

A. In the kitchen area of the wine cellar, yes.

Q. Okay. Is that the only area you found alcoholic beverages.

A. No, sir.

Q. Where else did you find alcoholic beverages.

A. There was alcoholic beverages in the library.

Q. Okay. What did you find -- excuse me, what alcoholic beverages did you find in the library.

A. There was a small bottle of -- I forget what name of the type of vodka that was on one of the racks that was open, and there was a small amount left in it.

Q. Okay. What did you do with that bottle.

A. I asked Detective Cooley to examine the bottle and see if it should be retained as evidence, and I left it at that point.

Q. Do you know if it ever was retained as evidence.

A. It was not.

Q. Okay. Do you know why.

A. I don’t know why.

Q. Do you know if anybody ever tried to fingerprint the bottle.

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know if anybody tried to fingerprint any of the bottles that you found.

A. I do not recall that anybody tried to fingerprint any of the bottles, no, sir.

Q. And did you ever request anybody try to fingerprint any bottles that you located.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. You talked about going into an area called a museum, right.

A. I believe I said it was a museum/office where Mr. Jackson -- it was a combination. I'm not sure exactly what it was called. It was called --

Q. What made you --

A. That night we called it both the office and the museum, and then it referred to the office.

Q. What made you refer to that area as a museum.

A. It had statuettes, figures. It had a lot of memorabilia in -- as you walked through a door, there was an open area -- not an open area. It was an area where there was a lot of statues, memorabilia, et cetera, in that area. And then it entered into a hallway and back to what appeared to be an office area.

Q. And how big an area was the museum.

A. Just a rough estimate was 20 foot by 20 foot, maybe.

Q. And you're calling the museum the office; is that true.

A. Yes.

Q. And it goes without saying, when you told the jury "his office," you were also telling the jury "his museum," correct.

A. I think I said that, but, yes.

Q. Okay. You used the words interchangeably, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. If you call it an office, is it a pretty big office.

A. The office area that I recall that was on the back of the museum was a pretty big office area, yes, sir.

Q. And when you refer to statues, are you talking about big statues.

A. They were life -- life-sized. Lifelike, life-sized, yes.

Q. And lots of them, right.

A. You know, there was quite a few. Looking through there, you had to walk around them and be careful that you didn’t knock them over. So there was some in there, yes, sir.

Q. You don’t know if other individuals besides Mr. Jackson entered or used that area, true.

A. I don’t know.

Q. Okay. And nobody ever checked to find out, correct, to your knowledge.

A. That would have been another part of the investigation. I had no part in that.

Q. Okay. Okay. Did you videotape the areas you searched.

A. I personally did not, but I had them videotaped.

Q. Okay. Did you have the items you seized videotaped.

A. I’m not sure if those items were exactly what you call videotaped. There was a videotaping of the premises that were searched prior to the search and after the search. During the search, the items that were received were photographed.

Q. Okay. Now, in the area that you called the museum and the office, you saw various televisions, correct.

A. There were -- I’m not sure if you would classify them exactly as televisions, but there were large television-type screens, plasma-type television screens. There was several of them, yes, sir.

Q. You can see them actually from outside the building, can’t you.

A. That part I don’t know.

Q. Okay. Where did you first see them.

A. In that -- what I call Mr. Jackson’s office area.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. All right. No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Redirect.

MR. SNEDDON: Yes.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Detective Abel, you’ve been asked a lot of questions by Mr. Mesereau about camera security equipment. I want you to take a look again at People’s 717. All right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The equipment that’s in that particular case, does it relate to cameras or does it relate to telephone monitoring equipment.

A. The majority of the equipment that’s in there refers to or is associated with telephone monitoring equipment.

Q. Okay. And I’m not talking about the paperwork. I’m talking about the actual equipment itself.

A. There is one small cigarette lighter that has also a camera in it that is also in a package inside there.

Q. Okay. So except for that small little camera inside of a -- what did you call it, a cigarette lighter.

A. It’s a camera disguised as a cigarette lighter.

Q. Other than that, everything else in there deals with telephonic monitoring; is that correct.

A. Telephonic and remote, covert microphones to monitor conversations, yes.

Q. Now, with regard to the telephone monitoring system itself, are you familiar with whether some of that equipment can be voice-activated.

A. Yes, it can.

Q. Tell the jury what it means to voice-activate a telephonic monitoring system.

A. It would mean that the tape-recorder that is inside the case would -- it could be set to run continuously or to only run when there is voice conversation. Voice-activated.

Q. Now, you indicated I think in your testimony both to Mr. Mesereau and before, there are items in there called alligator clips; is that correct.

A. Yes, there are.

Q. Now, with regard to the monitoring or the taping of telephone conversations, how does an alligator clip work. Where is it -- what is it affixed to.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

MR. MESEREAU: I think he said he's not an expert, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Are you asking him about generally or about this equipment.

MR. SNEDDON: This equipment, Your Honor. And particularly telephonic. Not security systems in general, which is what I think Mr. Mesereau asked.

THE COURT: All right. I'll allow the question as to this piece of equipment.

THE WITNESS: Are you asking me what the alligator clips are attached to now or what they could be.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Well, they're not attached to anything in there right now, are they.

A. They're attached -- well, the clips themselves are not. The other end of them is.

Q. What are they attached to.

A. Looks like it's a four-pronged device that I associate with a telephone that has four prongs on it --

Q. I'll tell you what, let's stop right there. Open up the case and show us what you mean. It's probably easier than to have you do it with your fingers.

A. There's a plastic bag, Ziploc plastic bag inside the case, with some batteries, different-sized batteries. There's an electrical plug device.

And then there's a phone cord that would attach to a phone receptacle. And this just pops off, but it was on here. And it has alligator clips on there.

And then these two were not attached to anything. These are alligator clips inside that open up.

Q. And how do the alligator clips work in connection with the taping of conversation or monitoring.

THE COURT: All right. Your objection was that he's not qualified to --

MR. MESEREAU: That's correct, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. I'll sustain that objection.

MR. SNEDDON: I was just laying the foundation.

Q. In your -- in your role as a narcotics investigator, were you trained with regard to electronic surveillance.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in particular with regard to telephonic surveillance, telephonic monitoring.

A. Yes, sir. I was instructed by the Department of Justice, State of California, on wiretap investigations.

Q. And how many such investigations have you done.

A. I've been associated with three of those type investigations.

Q. And this is where individuals who are suspects of criminal activity had their individual telephone calls monitored.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Based upon your training and your experience, can you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury, in your opinion, how are those alligator clips used to monitor or tape telephone conversations.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: The alligator clips on the bottom end could be utilized in what you call a phone junction box to clip onto the connections for the telephone.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And to your knowledge, is that activity legal in California.
A. No, it is not.
Q. All right. I just have one last question.
Mr. Mesereau asked you why you think that Mr. Jackson knew that that equipment was -- that he knew about that equipment. And you answered you thought he did. What was the basis of your opinion.
A. Um --
MR. MESEREAU: It's been asked and answered, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: It was in his office with -- where the majority of items that I believed belonged to him were.
There were allegations that the family involved was concerned that their phone calls while they were at Neverland Ranch were being monitored.
MR. SNEDDON: All right. Nothing further,

Your Honor.
THE COURT: Recross.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Jackson has ever had concerns that his children might be threatened or kidnapped at Neverland.

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know anything about threats by anybody around the world to ever do that to Mr. Jackson or his children.

A. I can’t say personally I know about that, no.

Q. When you went into Neverland to search, did you have any understanding of any security measures Mr. Jackson has ever used to protect he or his family.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object as beyond the scope of redirect. My redirect -- well, I won’t --

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, you just told the jury about alligator clips, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you discuss alligator clips with Prosecutor Sneddon, Prosecutor Zonen and Prosecutor Auchincloss at your meeting this morning.

A. Yes.

Q. Why didn’t you tell that to the jury when I was asking you questions.

A. When. Today, or yesterday -- or Thursday.

Q. Today. Remember I asked you about the meeting you had, and you started off by saying it was only five minutes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Remember I asked you what was discussed.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn’t you tell the jury you discussed alligator clips with these prosecutors for the government.

A. Well, I think you asked me if there was questions and a discussion, and I think what I was referring to was a discussion we had back and forth. I discussed with -- earlier today, I indicated to them that there was that device in the case. There was no question that they asked me about it. I just indicated that it was in there.

Q. When you had your meeting this morning with the three prosecutors for the government, did you discuss the camera inside the lighter.
A. No, I did not.
Q. What else did you talk to them about in this five-minute meeting.
A. I don’t recall that we discussed much more than what I have explained.

Q. Did you just suddenly remember it.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object as argumentative.
MR. MESEREAU: I’ll withdraw the question.
Q. Do you consider yourself an expert on how this particular piece of equipment is utilized.
A. I would say that I’m familiar with it, but I’m not an expert on it, no, sir.
Q. Have you ever used this equipment yourself.
A. This equipment.
Q. Yes.
A. No, I have not.
Q. Have you ever repaired equipment like that yourself.
A. No, I have not.
Q. Have you ever installed equipment like that yourself.
A. No, sir.
Q. Now, last Thursday, you weren’t sure whether that equipment could be purchased lawfully by any citizen. Remember that.
A. Yes.
Q. Have you done any research on that area since last Thursday.
A. Yes.
Q. Why didn’t you say that this morning when I asked you if you’d investigated any further what you talked about last Thursday.

A. It was an Internet search. And I should have said it, but I didn’t, yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. May I approach, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.
May the record reflect that I’m looking at the documents that are contained in this -- with this piece of equipment that were discussed last Thursday.
THE COURT: All right.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.
Q. Since you testified last Thursday, have you reviewed the documents that were found with this equipment.
A. No, sir. They’ve been in this case.
Q. Did you review them this morning.
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you discuss them with the prosecutors this morning.
A. I believe we just discussed the -- I believe I explained to them what I thought that the diagram was referring to, that you have in your hand there, regarding the cameras in the clocks and the cameras in the smoke alarm, et cetera.
Q. You talked to the prosecutors about that this morning.
A. I think I may have mentioned it.

Q. And did you discuss the document that’s titled “Video Surveillance System with Audio”.
A. I believe I mentioned it, yes.
Q. To the prosecutors this morning at the meeting.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you mention to them the reference to “clock video camera”.
A. I believe I mentioned that the -- there was -- that the diagram had and mentioned the clock, the small alarm, and the reference to infrared.
Q. Did you think this all related solely to a telephone monitoring system.
A. I didn’t believe that related to a telephone monitoring system.

Q. What do you think it relates to.

A. A covert surveillance system used to videotape, would be any room that it would be set up in.

Q. It talks about miniature cameras in that document, correct.

A. I'd have to look at it again. I don't know for sure.

Q. It talks about transmitters, correct.

MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to object as beyond the scope of direct -- redirect.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Right.

A. Ask me that again.

Q. Let me rephrase the question. I withdraw that.

Did you and Prosecutor Sneddon meet this morning and discuss that -- discuss your testimony at all.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you discuss what you were going to say this morning in response to Prosecutor Sneddon's questions.

A. No.

Q. Did you discuss this idea that you were going to limit your answers to, for lack of a better word, a telephone monitoring system.

A. There was no discussion about that at all, sir.

Q. Okay. And when did you last look at these documents that you found with that piece of evidence.

A. It would have been last Thursday during the testimony.

Q. Are you telling the jury that, based upon your background, training and expertise, that piece of equipment only relates to a telephone monitoring system.

A. Yes.

Q. Are you telling the jury that it doesn't have any relationship whatsoever to a video surveillance system.

A. Not the equipment in here, sir.
Q. Have you ever used equipment like that.
A. Yes, I have.
Q. When did you last use it.
A. It would have been several years ago, but I have used it.
Q. When you found that equipment with an investigator's card and with documents that appeared to scheme out a video-monitoring system and an audio-monitoring system, did it ever occur to you that someone may have been discussing different types of surveillance systems with respect to that equipment.
A. I -- I never believed that, no.
Q. Did you see the document that said "Video Briefcase Surveillance System with Audio". Did you see that.
A. Yes.
Q. What do you think that refers to.
A. I'd have -- just by the wording, it would be that somebody could utilize the equipment in that briefcase to covertly tape-record and/or monitor conversations.
Q. When you saw the schematic that says "Video Surveillance System," did it occur to you somebody may have been making a proposal for a video surveillance system.

A. That was not a consideration that I had, no, sir.
Q. When you saw another document that's entitled "Remote Room Audio Monitor" with prices and with schematics, did it ever occur to you that somebody may have been making some proposals for a room audio-monitoring system.
A. You keep mentioning the word "proposal," but

I never considered that that was a proposal, sir.

Q. When you saw a document that gave a price list for “Portable Electronic Surveillance Countermeasures Kit,” did it ever occur to you that somebody might be making a proposal for the purchase of a Portable Electronic Surveillance Countermeasures Kit.

A. As you say, “proposal,” I never considered that, no, sir.

Q. So just putting two and two together, an investigator’s card, a piece of evidence like that, and all of this material dealing with various surveillance systems, it never even entered your mind that somebody might have been trying to present or sell surveillance systems.

A. No, it was my opinion that this equipment had been purchased possibly from Mr. Lupori by Mr. Jackson and retained and possessed by Mr. Jackson to utilize.

Q. Ever see a purchase receipt.

A. I can’t say that there’s a purchase receipt, but there are figures and there is what appears to be a copy of a receipt, a tape -- or a register-type receipt on there.

Q. Okay. Did you see also register receipts for a Portable Electronic Surveillance Countermeasures Kit.

A. You’d have to show me all that again. I’d have to look at it.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had a chance to look at that document.

A. Yes.

Q. Does it appear to have a price list on it.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Does it appear to have a typed receipt on it.

A. Yes.

Q. Does it say at the top “Portable Electronic Surveillance Countermeasures Kit”.

A. Yes.

Q. Are you saying, after looking at that document, it didn’t occur to you that maybe somebody was purchasing a security system at Neverland.

A. I never considered it to be a security system.

Q. Well, why would you look at a document that says “Telephonic Taping System” with a receipt, and tell the jury you thought that was being purchased, and at the same time look at a separate document that says “Portable Electronic Surveillance Countermeasures Kit,” which also has a receipt, and not tell the jury you had the same reaction; somebody was buying security system equipment, true.

A. They were buying -- that would have been for countermeasures to make sure that they weren’t being covertly monitored.

The other one goes along with purchasing for covert monitoring and/or tape-recording.

Q. What about the Video Briefcase Surveillance System. That’s got figures on it also, doesn’t it, that document.

A. Yeah, I would have to look at it again. I don’t know for sure.

Q. Sir, the bottom line is, you just saw what you wanted to see, right.

MR. SNEDDON: Object as argumentative, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

Can I just return these documents to the exhibit.

THE COURT: Yes, you may.

Anything further from you.

MR. SNEDDON: No. No.

THE COURT: All right. You may step down.

Secure that exhibit first, please.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir. The document just --

THE COURT: Yeah. Do you want to give him the documents so he can put them in.

MR. SNEDDON: Yeah.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. ZONEN: Call Dr. Anthony Urquiza to the stand, please.

THE COURT: Come to the front of the courtroom, please. When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk here. And raise your right hand.

ANTHONY JOSEPH URQUIZA

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Anthony Joseph Urquiza. The last name is spelled U-r-q-u-i-z-a.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Dr. Urquiza, all of the witnesses have so far been admonished that you have to stay as close as possible to that microphone or you won’t be heard throughout the courtroom.

A. All right.

Q. What is your current occupation.

A. I have a couple of titles. I am a psychologist licensed in the State of California. I am Director of Mental Health Services at the Care Center, which is a child abuse treatment program, child physical abuse, sexual abuse treatment program in Sacramento, California. And I am Associate Professor in the Department of Pediatrics at the University of California Davis Medical Center.

Q. Are you on the faculty.

A. I am on the faculty, yes.

Q. Tell us about the Care Center. What is that.

A. The Care Center is a medical and mental health treatment agency which provides services -- trying to remember to do the microphone -- which provides services specifically for children and families in which there has been some type of abuse, either physical abuse, sexual abuse, or neglect. We provide services, at least on the mental health side, to about 400 children and families in any given week.

Q. Is the clinic in association with the University of California.

A. It is part of the University of California, yes.

Q. And located where.

A. In Sacramento.

Q. Doctor, what are your qualifications to hold that position.

A. As I said earlier, I'm licensed in the State of California. I am a psychologist. And I have three degrees that I have earned to enable me to identify myself as a psychologist.

Q. What are those degrees.

A. I have an undergraduate degree in child development. I have a master's degree in clinical psychology, and a doctorate, or a Ph.D., in clinical psychology.

Q. How long have you held the position you currently hold.

A. I started in January of 1990. So 15 years, approximately.

Q. And how long have you been a psychologist.

A. About 1988. It was around 1988. I don't remember the exact year.

Q. And how long have you been working in the child care field, particularly mental -- care for children with some form of disability or children who have been abused.

A. Well, that’s two parts. The disability part actually goes back to the mid ‘70s. I started working with children in the mid ‘70s. But I made a decision to work and to focus my career specifically on the issue of child abuse or child maltreatment somewhere around 1982, 1983. And then I entered graduate school in 1983.

Q. If you can, tell the jury your history, beginning with that period of time back in the ‘70s when you first started working in this field, and give us a brief summary of your career from that time.

A. Sure. For a long time I’ve worked in the area -- or with children. Again, going back to about 1973.

Around 1979, I took a position at Children’s Hospital in Seattle on their in-patient psych unit where children with significant and serious mental health problems were admitted to that hospital for diagnosis and treatment.

I realized there that one of the big common denominators of kids who had serious mental health problems was this history of maltreatment in their childhood or in their lives.

And so around that time, in -- roughly from about 1980 to ‘83, I decided that that was going to be a career goal for me, and so I applied for it and entered graduate school at the University of Washington.

It’s -- the program that I was in was a combination of a clinical program where they teach you to be a therapist or an evaluator; a research program, where they teach you to do the research in a particular area, and my research was in child abuse; and teacher or faculty somewhere.

And so I graduated around 1988. I had a brief teaching position in the Department of Family Studies at San Diego State University.

And then in 1990, I assumed the position of being responsible for all of the mental health services at the Care Center, which again is within the Department of Pediatrics at UC Davis Medical Center and have held that position since 1990 to current.

Those three things, research, teaching and clinical practice, I have been doing continuously, actually since I started entering graduate school, although the treatment of children I stopped a couple of years ago. The reason being was that in order to see treatment of -- children in treatment, you need to be able to make a regular appointment with them every Thursday at four o’clock, and my schedule really prevented me from doing that. I didn’t think it was fair to the children that I was providing services to.

But I continued to evaluate children, and probably over the course of my career have seen several thousand children in therapy or in evaluation.

Q. Now, your current position is director of this clinic; is that correct.

A. Director of mental health services, yes.

Q. What does that mean. What do you do.

A. Well, a portion of my job is administration. A portion of my job is research. But the bulk of my responsibilities are overseeing the mental health services, which is psychological treatment or evaluation of my staff. And the staff is about 45 or 50 people that I’m responsible for.

And so sometimes I provide direct services. Again, no longer therapy, but I continue to evaluate children and families. Sometimes I provide direct supervision; that is, I have some staff people who are seeing clients, and my job is to supervise them.

And then a portion of my responsibility is to supervise my supervisors. So it’s sort of a second level where I supervise about six of my staff who then provide supervision for direct front-line service.

Q. Doctor, you tell us you also do research and have continued to do research. What does that mean.

A. One of the -- and I can answer that specific to my field, which is child abuse and family violence.

One of the things that we have been trying to do is to move knowledge forward with some empirical or research foundation. And so typically it means undergoing a methodological process where we acquire data, we analyze those data, and we make some determination or interpretation of the data.

Then the last part of it is we write the results up and submit it for publication in a book or a journal.

Q. And have you done publications in the course of your academic career.

A. I do. I have.

Q. Can you give us a sense of what that involves and how many publications, the nature or the type.

A. I don't know exactly how many. I'd say 35 to 45 publications, at least. That's an estimate. I don't keep track of that. And they're all -- or mostly on issues of child abuse. Some of the areas -- well, there's been an overriding theme to the research that I do.

One of the things that happens with a child who's been abused is that it has a disruption in their capacity to have positive and healthy relationships as they grow older.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

MR. ZONEN: It's about the nature of the publications.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Can you tell us if there is a common theme to the publications that you have written.

A. Yes.

Q. And what is that.

A. This issue of relationships, which is fundamental to healthy development in children, is disrupted when children are physically or sexually abused or neglected. And so that has been the common theme: In what way does sexual abuse or physical abuse or neglect impacted -- or impact their developing capacity to have satisfactory relationships in adolescence, peer relationships, even into adulthood in being able to have satisfactory marital relationships. That has been a consistent theme.

I've also been interested in methodological issues, how to conduct good research related to child abuse.

And I've also been very interested in ethnic minority issues as they apply to different types of child mental treatment.

Q. You teach as well, do you.

A. I do, yes.

Q. And where.

A. Within the Department of Pediatrics and usually within the Care Center. But I think teaching encompasses more than -- I should back up a little bit.

I don't teach in a classroom setting. I used to when I was at San Diego State.

I now teach people to be psychologists or social workers, to be professionals. And so I teach in the capacity of supervision, seminars, training.

I also teach in workshops, in conferences that are beyond the medical center and throughout the United States and sometimes even internationally.

Q. And do you deliver papers in conjunction with those lectures.

A. I do, yes.

Q. And what types of papers are we talking about.

A. Pretty much the same as the research publications: The effects of abuse on children, the impact abuse has on developing relationships.

Again, issues of methodology, as well as the impact of abuse on people of color.

Q. I think that you had said earlier that you have seen perhaps a thousand children or more in the course of your career.

A. Who have been abused.

Q. Yes.

A. Probably -- certainly more than a thousand children who have been abused. Several thousands who have been either physically abused, sexually abused or neglected during the course of my life that I have provided service to. That would be much larger when you incorporate people that I supervise. But for direct service, certainly a few thousand people.

Q. What percentage of them, in your opinion, are victims of child sexual abuse.

A. That I have seen.

Q. Yes.

A. I'd say at least a third. I mean, I'd say -- again, I don't keep numbers as to how many, but I'd estimate maybe a thousand children, or at least a thousand children that I have provided service to, either therapy or evaluation, during the course of my career.

Q. All right. You've been at the University of California and it's at Davis; is that correct.

A. Well, it's University of California Davis Medical Center. The medical center itself, the teaching classrooms where you go to learn to be a doctor, is in Davis. But the medical center where you actually practice is in Sacramento.

Q. And you've taught at other universities or state colleges prior to that.

A. As I said earlier, I've taught at San Diego State University. And I taught at the University of Washington as a graduate student.

Q. And how long have you been in association with the University of California at this point.

A. About 15 years.

Q. Doctor, have you ever been appointed by the Court to be an expert in any type of court matter.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever testified in conjunction with those appointments.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. What types of appointments do you receive and have you received by the Court over the years.

A. In juvenile court I have been appointed usually through court order by a Judge to evaluate some aspect of a case that’s in the child welfare system. Child welfare being children who are either part of the foster care system or entry into or exiting the child welfare system.

So I’m appointed by the Court, and then usually asked to do an evaluation to answer a question that the Court may need, and then afterwards to testify about that case in court.

Q. What types of cases would you typically be appointed to. What types of issues do you address.

A. Issues of parental competency, issues of placement for a child who’s been abused. Issues of adoption, graduation out of foster care system.

Certainly issues related to how to manage a child who has some type of severe psychopathology that is difficult to address.

Q. Have you ever been retained by either the prosecution or the defense in criminal proceedings dealing with allegations of child sexual abuse.

A. I have, yes.

Q. Can you give us a sense of how many times you’ve been retained by either side.

A. Again, an estimate would be about 85 times for a criminal matter.

Q. All right. Can you tell us what percentage of that you’re retained by the prosecution, what percentage by the defense.

A. Most of that has been for the prosecution.

Probably be about four or five times that I have been -- that I've actually testified for the defense. Although I'm contacted by the defense, probably only four or five times that I have actually gone to court and testified for the defense.

Q. All right. When you're testifying on behalf of the prosecution, do you ever address the issue of Child Sexual Assault Accommodation Syndrome.

A. Yes.

Q. And have you been asked to do that on this occasion here today.

A. That's my understanding, yes.

Q. Tell us, what is Child Sexual Assault Accommodation Syndrome.

A. Sure. That syndrome is really a phrase that's the title of an article or coined in an article by a man by the name of Roland Summit, who is a psychiatrist I believe at the University of Southern California. It was published quite some time ago, in 1983, in their Journal of Child Abuse and Neglect.

The reason he wrote this article was specifically for therapists who would be treating children who are sexually abused to dispel any misperceptions or myths that they had, so they would be better able to understand what really happened with children who are sexually abused and then to be able to treat them better.

The Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome has five parts or components. I'll just identify them. They are a sense of secrecy, helplessness, delayed -- I'm sorry, entrapment and accommodation, delayed and unconvincing disclosure, and then the last one is retraction.

Q. Tell us what the first one means, secrecy.

A. In order to understand the concept of secrecy, actually in order to understand how children respond to being sexually abused, it's important to understand the context in which abuse occurs, and the context is a relationship between a perpetrator and a victim.

One of the misperceptions that occurs or myths that occur with sexual abuse is that children are sexually abused by somebody who they don’t know. That’s just not the case. Most children -- by far, most children are sexually abused by somebody with whom they have an ongoing relationship, not a stranger.

That’s important because it sets up the dynamics for this issue of secrecy. Children tell us, and the research supports, that there is usually some type of mandate imposed upon the child to keep them quiet about the abuse; hence, the term “secrecy.”

This mandate can be something like a threat, threat of physical aggression or threat of coercion of some type. It can also be special attention, special favors, bribes. And it can also be misinformation or informing the child of the bad consequences that would occur should they disclose all part of this mandate or this coercion meant to keep kids quiet so they don’t disclose. What Dr. Summit said, that that is a part of this idea called secrecy.

Q. Explain to us how special attention or favors somehow translates to secrecy.

A. With sexual abuse, you don’t have to physically assault a child to molest them. In fact, that happens fairly infrequently. Coercion and manipulation is probably a much more effective strategy.

And what kids tell us happens is that a relationship is established between them and the perpetrator. It may be a very positive, fun, enjoyable relationship, in which the child is put in a position where they like, or in some cases, especially in an interfamilial situation, an incest situation, they may actually love the perpetrator.

And then that is supported by things like special attention, favors, doing special things or activities with the child, all aimed at creating an environment where the child will feel very positively, very warmly, very affectionately toward the perpetrator.

Q. Helplessness, the second one, what does that mean.

A. Helplessness -- it’s easier to start with the misperception.

Q. Yes, please.

A. The misperception is if you’re a child and you’re sexually abused, you’re being sexually abused, that you will be able to fend off the perpetrator. You’ll be able to do something to protect yourself so that you won’t be abused. And that just doesn’t happen. We are not -- the research actually shows quite clearly when children are presented with a perpetrator who is bigger, stronger, more worldly, has more resources, that they are not able to fend off and protect themself, and the phrase that I usually use is “to ensure their own sexual safety.” They’re not able to keep themself from being sexually abused.

Q. Do children understand a need to do that.

A. I’m not sure I understand your question.

Q. Well, you said that they’re not equipped to do that. Does that mean that they understand at the time that they actually need to do that.

A. To protect themselves.

Q. Yes.

A. Well, depending upon the age, they may not fully appreciate the inappropriateness of the sexual activity between them and the perpetrator. Or they may be vulnerable to distortions, or lies, or miscommunication, or maybe misinformation on the part of the perpetrator; that this is okay, or this behavior is okay within the context like, “You and I can do this, but we’re not supposed to tell anybody else,” giving the child the impression that, you know, “I can’t tell anybody, but maybe this is not such a bad thing."

Q. Number three, I think you said entrapment accommodation. Tell us what that means, please.

A. It's two parts. The -- and it's two parts because in the entrapment part, if you're a child who's being sexually abused, and you can't tell anybody about it, that's the secrecy. And you can't do anything about it to stop yourself from being victimized, that's the helplessness sense. And then you're stuck. You're trapped. Dr. Summit uses maybe a fancier word of "entrapment."

And the reason why that's two parts is, if you're in that situation and you can't do anything about it, then what do you do. Hence, the word "accommodation."

I think an easier word than "accommodation" is "coping." Kids learn to cope with the experience of being sexually abused because they have no other alternative. They have to learn how to manage the feelings that they have about their victimization, and those feelings can be really difficult. Those include shame and embarrassment, humiliation. Sometimes they will be traumatized. All of those are very difficult to manage, and that's part of what the accommodation process does is enable the child to manage a difficult situation that may be unbearable at times.

Q. Delayed unconvincing disclosure. What does that mean.

A. Again, that's one that has two parts to it.

Q. Yes.

A. The misperception is a good place to start. The common belief is if you're a child and you're being abused, then you will immediately -- as soon as it happens, you'll immediately go tell your mom, or your dad, your teacher, your best friend, someone. And that really doesn't happen very often, and that's why it's the misperception.

It is common that children have a delay and often a significant delay in disclosure from the first time of abuse to when they're eventually able to disclose. There are now actually several studies that have looked at this issue of delayed disclosure. And one that I often cite is by Diana Elliott and John Briere, which found that from the time of the first incident of abuse to when the child discloses, that about three-quarters of them had failed to disclose within the first 12 months.

Q. Excuse me, 12 months.

A. 12 months.

Q. Thank you.

A. So most kids don't disclose right away.

What that means is that clearly there's a delay in disclosure.

What I think that also means is, whatever that mandate or coercion that was imposed on the child, that secrecy part, must have been pretty strong if it keeps most kids quiet for at least a year.

Now, there's also a fair amount of research that would suggest that somewhere between 30 and 50 percent of children fail to disclose in their childhood; that is, they may keep the secret of their victimization quiet until their adulthood, which again supports this notion that there's a significant delay in disclosure.

Q. What are the issues that a child deals with in determining whether or not to disclose that they've been a victim of child sexual abuse. What do they wrestle with, kids.

A. Well, I'll start by telling you that I often tell kids when I'm in therapy with them that it was a courageous thing for them to do, because they are overcoming a lot of issues. They may be overcoming threats. They may be overcoming a sense that they're going to get in trouble if they disclose. Lots of times kids feel like they're not going to be believed. They'll disclose to somebody and, you know, they'll get blamed for what happened.

For a lot of children, especially males, there is this issue of stigma attached to homosexuality. That is, most perpetrators are male. And so for a male victim, not only do they have all of these other issues about being afraid to disclose, but if they disclose, the people will think that they're gay, that they're homo. I mean, those are the kinds of things that are teased or ridiculed by adolescents or peers. And so it becomes a very difficult thing.

In addition to that, it matters who they disclose to. It's a hard thing to talk about. I mean, we can sort of think about it as adults retrospectively, but I think it's more important to try to think about it in the frame of a child. It's a really hard thing to tell somebody something that may be humiliating or embarrassing and traumatizing, especially if it would involve penises and vagina and oral copulation and sodomy.

Those types of things are incredibly difficult, and so kids have to overcome a lot of barriers to be able to say that to somebody, and they often pick on somebody that they feel will be supportive of their disclosure when they initially start to make disclosures, somebody that they feel that they can trust.

Q. What situation would pose the greatest likelihood of a disclosure. What's the combination of factors that would most encourage a disclosure.

A. A child -- that would promote a disclosure.

Q. Yes.

A. A child who is disclosing to somebody who they felt, with some confidence, would be attentive, caring, responsive. Wouldn't be blameful, wouldn't say, "Well, okay, you had it coming"; or "This is all your fault"; perhaps somebody who would be believing of the position that they're taking by disclosing.

It can be a lot of different types of people, but generally it would be somebody who the child had some trust or confidence in.

Q. All right. Are kids concerned about whether they would be believed. Is that one of the issues that they deal with.

A. Very much so, yes.

Q. Now, would you expect that a child who does disclose having been a victim of sexual abuse, that that child would disclose to their closest relative.

A. If they perceive that closest relative to be somebody that they had confidence in, that -- that would be, you know, somebody that they felt would be positively responsive to them.

Q. Do you have a sense of how many children actually do disclose to parents as opposed to other persons; friends, teachers, therapists.

A. Well, that's one of the tough issues. As a researcher, if we were able to have a better understanding of the process of disclosure, we'd be able to facilitate those kids who have been sexually abused to be able to disclose more frequently.

The problem is, there are lots of different people who children could disclose to. I mean, sometimes it's a mom. Sometimes it's a dad. Tends infrequently to be dads. Many times it may be a best friend, or a counselor, a therapist. It could be a lot of different people. That's why I say that the common denominator tends to be somebody that the child has some confidence in that they would be trusted -- trustworthy and supportive of their disclosure.

Q. Are kids at all concerned about the reaction of the person who would be the recipient of this disclosure; in other words, how they would take it, how they would handle it.

A. Certainly.

Q. Is that a factor that may be different with a parent than it would be for, say, a mental health professional.

A. It could. I mean, usually kids are not particularly concerned -- as a mental health professional, they’re not concerned with how I receive information. Whereas they may be concerned with how a mother or a father, big sister, big brother may receive that information.

Q. How about a child who is -- we’ve dealt a little bit with the child who voluntarily comes forward on their own, his or her own. How about a child that is confronted by an allegation of having been a victim of sexual abuse. What are the issues that a child deals with.

In other words, it’s not a voluntary effort by the child to make -- give a communication of an abuse to another person, but, rather, another person directly asking that child. What are the issues that a child deals with when they are asked questions about whether or not they have been abused.

A. Well, in addition to all those other things that I mentioned about how it’s difficult and they have to overcome a lot of the barriers about shame, humiliation, feeling they can get blamed for it or be responsible, in addition to all those, there may well be a natural process by which kids are able to disclose being sexually abused. And if somebody were to just come up and say, you know, “Were you sexually abused.” they may not be able to make that disclosure because they weren’t at that place where they could make it yet. Maybe two years, five years from now, they may be able to do it.

Also, it goes back to this issue of confidence. If they felt like the person who was asking them about their sexual abuse was supportive and attentive and believable and helpful to them, they may be able to make that disclosure.

If they felt like they could get in trouble, that they could be leading into an accusation, if it could be somebody who could get them in trouble for what they said, that would be a tough thing to do.

Q. What is the importance of proper qualifications by the person making the inquiry. In other words, is there such a thing as proper qualifications for a person inquiring of a child as to whether or not that child has been abused.

A. Well, there are. In California we have what we call Multi-Disciplinary Interview Centers, MDICs. There are places where children who have been alleged to have been abused go to be interviewed, and in California there is a rather extended training program to be evidentiary interviewers. Aside from some of the evidentiary issues, there's a lot of effort trying to make these people be supportive, to be the kinds of people who are easy in developing rapport, who kids like, are friendly, are comfortable. So the notion is if you can create that type of supportive, caring, attentive person, you can overcome some of the barriers that kids may have who don't want to disclose. So that really speaks to the issue of having people who are trained and skilled be able to ask questions or ask deep questions about whether a child has been abused or not.

Q. Doctor, does it make a difference, in your opinion, the gender of the child in terms of the ease with which they can give a disclosure of sexual abuse.

A. Yes.

Q. In what way. Explain that to us.

A. It goes back a little bit to what I said earlier. The basic issue is I think it's more difficult for males to disclose than it is for females. Because on top of all of the traditional difficulties, the basic barriers that I described, since most perpetrators are male, and if you happen to have a male victim, you also have the stigma or the potential exposure to ridicule and embarrassment because you'll be identified as gay or homosexual. I mean, those things get tagged onto a child. And particularly at certain ages, that could be very difficult to cope with.

Q. What kinds of ages.

A. Developmentally, a lot of early adolescents, males and females, go through a period where it’s difficult to clearly sort through their sexual orientation, the sexual feelings, sexual desires. I mean, most of us, as early adolescents, recall the sense of the early sexual feelings that we have.

Q. Early adolescence is about what age.

A. Starting probably around 10 or 11, going up through, I’d say, 13, 14, 15 years of age, varying. But to probably be more specific, you know, 11 to 14, where you start having sexual feelings, you start having rather focused attention on the opposite or sometimes same sex about having sexual relationships.

And it’s also a time of a lot of confusion, a lot of confusion about your sexual orientation, sexual identity. And so to be sexually abused, and then have this issue of whether you are homosexual or not added into a difficult or confusing adolescent time can be very difficult if you’re looking at trying to get a child to disclose sexual victimization.

Q. But a child as young as 11 actually understands the consequences of being stigmatized as gay or homosexual.

A. Oh, certainly. I’ve seen a lot of kids, much younger than 11, who would tease each other about being gay because of clothes that they wear, because of, you know, a haircut or hairstyles, or because of behaviors that they were doing, maybe a boy walks too effeminately, and they would be teased about being gay. Even younger than 11.

Q. Okay. Doctor, when a child does disclose for the first time, is it your experience, your expectation that that child would disclose each and every fact and piece of information about the molestation in its entirety on the first disclosure.

A. No.

Q. Explain that to us, please.

A. No.

I have to remember this microphone thing.

Q. Yeah. We all have to do that.

A. No. It’s actually quite uncommon that a child would make a disclosure and fully and clearly articulate everything that happened in their sexual victimization experience and be able to do that with detail. That doesn’t happen very often.

Q. What are the issues that impact a child. I mean, what happens to a child who’s giving a disclosure for the first time.

A. Well, what we’re talking about with regard to the Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome, what we’re talking about is that fourth part, because it was delayed and unconvincing disclosure.

The unconvincing disclosure is rather than thinking of the disclosure of sexual abuse as an event, or as an act, it’s better to think of it as a process. That is, it’s the process of overcoming a lot of those barriers and fears about what would happen when they disclosed.

And the research supports the notion that kids often will -- when they finally get around to being able to make a disclosure, will make a statement, and it may be a relatively vague statement. “He touched me in a weird way.” Or, “He touched me and it made me feel uncomfortable,” something like that.

If the response had been, as I suggested earlier, supportive, then they may feel more able to talk more about what happened and continuing on. As time goes on, if they feel more and more supported in being able to talk about it without fear of retribution, without fear that they’re going to get blamed, without fear that any sigma might get attached to them, all of those fears that they have might start to get -- to fall away. Then they’re eventually able to provide a more complete disclosure.

The difficulty is, if you have one, two, three, four, five disclosures, multiple disclosures, and they’re not exactly the same, and they often -- the research shows us that they’re often not the same, then it looks unconvincing, which is why Dr. Summit wrote, 20-some years ago, that kids who are sexually abused go through this process of a disclosure rather than an event.

Q. And referred to it specifically as a process; is that correct.

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Is that your experience in dealing with the thousand or more children that you’ve dealt with over the years or that number that have been sexually abused.

A. Well, it is my experience. But I think more important, that’s what’s supported by the research. I mean, my experience, and granted, I have seen a lot of children who have been sexually abused, but it is better to rely upon what the research has to say rather than just a single person.

Q. In the course of your dealing with children who have disclosed and the research that you have conducted, is the demeanor of the child at the time of the disclosure something that’s interesting to you or relevant to the question of sexual abuse.

A. You didn’t ask me any questions about it, but what that goes to is this issue of accommodation --

Q. Yes.

A. -- past the process of coping with being sexually abused and, again, I’ll remind you that the feelings are one of being afraid, embarrassed, humiliated. These are not things that are easy to deal with for a child.

One of the things that kids have to do, if they’re being sexually abused, especially if it happens more than once, is they have to learn how to manage or shut down those feelings. They have to learn how to in some way separate themself out.

So what happens, and it often happens in therapy, when kids come in and they talk about being abused, they may talk about it in a matter-of-fact way, devoid of feelings. They may come in and, “Well, he put his penis in there. He moved it in and out. He put his hand here,” and it sounds almost cold or clinical.

What it really is, is the child’s relaying what they saw, what happened to them, separate from the feelings that they have.

Q. Doctor, a child who’s been a victim of sexual abuse, would it be your expectation that each time the child is interviewed, assuming a succession of interviews or even testimonies, would it be your expectation that child would be perfectly consistent about all of the detail each and every time.

A. The research supports that they are not likely to be consistent. Part of that is just this issue of it’s a process in which they feel more comfortable disclosing so they may give more information.

Part of it also is there’s some areas in which kids are not attentive to. For example, children don’t usually wear watches, and so if you were to ask a child, you know, “Did it happen at 2:30 or 3:30 in the afternoon. Did it last 35 minutes or 55 minutes.” their orientation to time is different than that of an adult, so they may not be accurate on issues of time.

“Did it happen on December 13th or December 14th.” They don’t operate, as some adults do, with calendars that sort of make us guide that, so they may not be exactly accurate. So some of these intangible kinds of things they make mistakes on.

Usually the things that they see, they’re pretty good at being able to accurately describe. And there’s a caveat here, which is after about four or five years of age, kids are very good at being able to describe what they see and recall and provide that information.

Q. Doctor, let me ask you a couple questions about victims of sexual abuse and their relationship with the offenders. Is it possible for a child to actually have a sincere love and affection for the person who is molesting them.

A. Certainly.

Q. Explain how that would be.

A. Well, actually it’s not only possible, in some situations it often happens. Going back to this basic issue, even as a part of this sense of secrecy, a relationship is developed between the perpetrator and the victim. And as a part of that relationship, in many instances the child likes this person. It’s really difficult to just walk up to somebody and start fondling or molesting them. Usually, as I said earlier, sexual abuse happens in the context, and the context is that relationship.

So from the perspective of the child, “I like this person, I enjoy doing things with them, they’re fun, I like that they like me, I want people to like me,” and so the sexual activity becomes an unpleasant, disliked part of a relationship that is bigger, that they, in fact, enjoy.

And, for example, in an incest situation, you may have a child who is being sexually abused by a family member. It may comprise a portion of their life that is unpleasant and they don’t like and they feel very bad about it, but the needs that they have as a child, the need for a positive affiliation or positive relationship, affection, the need to have somebody who cares about them, they comprise a much larger sense.

And it is quite common for kids to sustain a relationship that may be abusive, adding in the fact that there’s a secrecy and helplessness they can’t do anything about anyway, because the larger scope is that there’s this relationship that is very important and they have needs as a child that have to be met.

Q. Doctor, you said the “unpleasant” part of the molestation itself. Are there ever occasions where it’s not unpleasant for a child; that a child actually doesn’t view the actual act of molestation with repulsion; that a child might actually find it enjoyable. Does that ever happen.

A. It does, and in my experience, usually in two situations: One is very unusual, with long-term abuse, where the child sort of becomes a part of the relationship or thinks that the relationship that they may have with the perpetrator is more like boyfriend/girlfriend. I’ve had some clients who said, “I don’t want to disclose because he’s my boyfriend,” and they were 11 and the perpetrator was 35. So it was an abusive relationship, but their perception was that it was not.

The other one is with certain situations with sexual abuse with males, particularly with oral copulation. It is confusing -- or I should say, my experience when kids come to therapy, one of the common confusions that they have is, “I didn’t like what happened, it was embarrassing or humiliating, but it felt good, and I don’t know what to do about that.”

And the basic issue is the penis is designed to feel good. It’s designed to, if you stimulate it, to get an erection and to have pleasurable feelings. So in the process of oral copulation, if it’s stimulated, it may well appear to the child -- it may well be a pleasurable feeling. And at the same time, the child has the experience of being embarrassed and humiliated and disgusted by what’s going on. It is an odd situation that I have seen in many instances with boys who have been sexually abused.

Q. Is it unusual that a child, a boy, could actually achieve an orgasm or ejaculate during the course of molestation.

A. Not unusual at all. Again, that’s one of the things that penises were designed for. And you stimulate it enough or in a particular way, if they're old enough, they will have an erection and they may well have -- they may well ejaculate.

Q. Doctor, in cultivating a relationship with a child to the point where the child accommodates acts of molestation, are there materials that can be shown to a child that would tend to accommodate that procedure; in other words, allow a child to be able to be more accepting of what's happening to him.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

MR. ZONEN: This is an expert witness, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Can you ask your question again.

MR. ZONEN: Yes.

Q. Is it possible to use certain types of materials with a child that might lessen that child's sexual inhibitions.

A. Well, as I said earlier, it's a difficult thing to just walk up to a child and stick a hand in their pants and start fondling them. And I don't mean to be crude about it, but that is a good example, because it's likely if you were to do that, that the child would -- would be offended, repulsed, afraid, and difficult then to follow through and molest that child in a more extensive way.

And you don't have to do that. What kids tell us happens is that they have this relationship, it's somebody that they like, somebody that they enjoy, they enjoy spending time with them, and some minor sexual content gets to be a part of the relationship. It may be an off-color joke. It may be a comment about some girl's bottom or breasts that -- who walked by. But it's a minor thing.

And then over time, it may be watching an R-rated movie, and making comments about people who don’t have clothes on in an R-rated movie. Or even more, introducing the issue of pornographic materials, X-rated magazines, or videos, or touching the child.

For example, I had a client once who said that the perpetrator would give them back rubs. And it started with back rubs, and then it gradually, over a period of a couple weeks, progressed to be more and more sexual, where it involves penetration.

The point is that what starts as relatively innocuous sexual content, like an off-color joke, gradually increases, desensitizing the child to sexuality, so that eventually when you engage in a more overt sexual behavior, like putting your hand in their pants and touching somebody’s penis or vagina, then the child is more comfortable, they’re more used to it, and put in this odd situation that, well, okay, you can now get in trouble, because it wasn’t just this, but “Yesterday we were looking at magazines, and we were making these jokes, and looking at these videos.”

Q. What happens to -- we’re now talking about a boy, a young adolescent boy, who is shown porn -- who is shown sexually graphic material with visual images, pictures. How does a young boy react to that.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation and vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Depending upon the age of the child, I mean, we’re really talking about stimulation. As I said earlier, there’s certain ages in adolescence and early adolescence where there’s an increased interest in sexual activity, people of the opposite sex, a lot of confusion, a lot of exploration, a lot of seeking more knowledge, and in some cases experimentation about sexuality. So that could be very exciting, certainly; enticing perhaps.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: A ten-year-old boy, would a ten-year-old boy be old enough to find exciting looking at sexually graphic material.

A. Certainly.
Q. 13-year-old boy.
A. Certainly.
Q. I'd like to ask you some questions about how a child's behavior, a child who has been exposed to sexual molestation, are there ways that their behavior thereafter could change.

A. I'm not sure I understand your question.
Q. Is it uncommon for a child to act out in some fashion, a child who's been sexually abused.
A. That can be very common, yes.
Q. In what ways.
A. Well, I hate to be stereotypical about this, but in fact it's supported by research. The experience of being sexually abused is distressing, has lots of feelings that are difficult. The way in which boys express distrust tend to be externalizing. The way that girls express distrust tend to be internalizing. What those mean, is internalizing tend to be sad, withdrawn, crying, depressed, those types of behaviors. Externalizing behaviors tend to be aggression, acting out, defiance, swearing, name-calling, those kinds of things.
So those are common behaviors that we see with children who experience some type of distress or trauma, and also with sexual abuse.
Q. Are there other types of abuse that could lead to that type of behavior as well.
A. Certainly.
Q. Does it have to be necessarily sexual abuse.
A. No. It can be neglect, but more likely it could be sexual abuse or physical abuse.
Q. And both of which could manifest that kind of behavior in a young, adolescent boy.

A. Certainly, yes.

Q. Would that behavior include such things as talking back to teachers.

A. That would be -- yes, that would be sort of a poor response to authority.

Q. Getting into fights.

A. Getting into fights would be one.

THE COURT: Counsel. It's time for our break.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: You ready.

MR. ZONEN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Proceed.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Dr. Urquizo, what is the psychological impact of a child ultimately disclosing. Does something happen.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Sir, your mike.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Dr. Urquizo, what is the psychological consequence or impact on a child who ultimately discloses to something happening to that child given that disclosure.

A. Well, one of the things that children tell us immediately happens is that there's a sense of relief from disclosing, assuming that the response to that disclosure was supported. But there's a sense of relief.

What there may well be is some degree of benefit on the mental health side. One of the things that happens with sexually abused children who are involved in therapy is the process in part involves talking about what happened or disclosing what's happened. And then also incorporating a lot of the feelings that occurred, as well as changing or modifying a lot of the distortions that the child may have acquired as a result of their victimization.

So this process of just going through the act of disclosure starts that -- starts the process that is parallel to -- it's not therapy, but it is like therapy. It is maybe the first part of that.

And so oftentimes, from the point of disclosure, kids have this sense of relief, and there may be some gain or improvement with regard to mental health symptoms. Especially if it is also responded to, as is often the case, to disclose, and then they usually get some type of mental health treatment. So it’s followed by therapy which is specifically designed to help alleviate some mental health symptoms.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you, Doctor. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor. Good morning.

THE WITNESS: Just barely morning.

MR. MESEREAU: Huh.

THE WITNESS: Just barely morning.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. We’ve never spoken before, right.

A. I don’t believe I have ever spoken with you.

Q. My name is Tom Mesereau and I speak for Mr. Michael Jackson.

A. Okay.

Q. Now, first of all, you’ve indicated the great majority of your expert witness testimony has been for prosecutors, for the government, correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. What percentage of your expert witness testimony would you say has been for the government.

A. Well, actually, the clarification would be of criminal and juvenile court. So of criminal court, you know, four or five times I’ve testified for the defense, and then about 85 times total, so that would be -- you could do the math, but that would be the portion.

Q. So about 90 percent.

A. Roughly.

Q. 90 percent for the prosecution.

A. Correct.

Q. In criminal court, correct.

A. In criminal court.

Q. Now, when you testified in juvenile court, they were prosecutions, correct.

A. No.

Q. What were they.

A. They were part of the juvenile court process where the issue is related to the safety and well-being of a child, through the child welfare system, is placed in foster care, and then there's an 18-month process by which there's unification. So it could be in any aspect of the child welfare system, but it doesn't include any criminal involvement, at least for the part that I do.

Q. So you were not involved in efforts to convict juveniles of crimes.

A. That is correct. I have not been involved in juvenile prosecutions --

Q. And --

A. -- or in juvenile prosecutions through the child welfare system.

Q. When you testified in juvenile court, who hired you.

A. I'm usually paid for either by the county or by the court.

Q. Okay.

A. Sometimes I'm paid for by the parties, but for the most part, it's by the county or the court.

Q. Were prosecutors involved in these juvenile proceedings.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Are you being paid for your services.

A. Yes.

Q. What are you being paid.

A. My rate's 175 an hour.

Q. Okay. Have you been paid any amount of money to date.

A. No.

Q. How much do you expect to be paid.

A. Well, of course, it’s 175 an hour. I don’t know how long my testimony will go.

Q. Okay. How many hours have you put in so far.

A. Oh, about maybe ten hours. That’s just an estimate.

Q. And --

A. Maybe less than that.

Q. Okay. You had meetings or discussions with prosecutors for the government in this case, haven’t you.

A. I’ve had meetings and discussion with Mr. Zonen.

Q. Okay. Anyone else.

A. I’ve been introduced to other people, but I have really not had any substantive discussion with anybody other than Mr. Zonen.

Q. And when were you first contacted by Mr. Zonen.

A. Approximately a month and a half, maybe two months ago.

Q. Have you testified as an expert witness for this prosecuting office before.

A. I have never testified in Santa Barbara County before.

Q. This is the first time.

A. This is the first time I’ve testified in Santa Barbara County.

Q. Now, which District Attorney’s Offices in California have you testified for.

A. I don’t know that I could name all of them, but I could tell you that most of the D.A.’s Offices in Northern California, primarily in Sacramento and surrounding counties. As far south as Kings County, and Tulare County. As far north as Siskiyou County. Occasionally into the Bay Area, San Francisco, San Mateo, Alameda, Napa. Napa’s not quite the Bay Area, but primarily in the Northern California, Central Valley counties.

Actually, with one exception. I testified for the defense in San Diego County.

Q. Okay. Now, you’re a Ph.D. in clinical psychology; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. You’re not a medical doctor, right.

A. That is correct.

Q. And you can’t prescribe medication, right.

A. That is correct.

Q. And you’re not a psychiatrist, right.

A. Correct.

Q. And would you -- would you describe your professional activities as primarily research oriented.

A. No.

Q. How would you describe the primary thrust of your professional activities.

A. The mission of the University of California faculty is really to do three things: To do research, to teach, and to provide clinical service. And I have done all three of those things throughout the course of my career in the UC -- faculty in UC. It changes periodically, you know, from -- sometimes from month to month or from year to year, but I’ve always done all three of those things.

Q. And currently, what would the percentage breakdown of your time be as far as those three things are concerned.

A. Probably -- this is a guess. I don’t mean to be flippant about this, but the numbers may well include more than 100 percent, because my job often includes more than 100 percent. I would say about 50 to 60 percent currently is clinical in some capacity. I’d say about 30 to 40 percent is administrative. I’m sorry, not -- is research related. And then probably about 30 to 40 percent related to teaching in some capacity.

Q. Now, would the clinical activities you’re engaged in involve counseling children.

A. I used to do therapy or counseling. I stopped about three or four years ago.

I had done counseling starting when I entered graduate school in 1983. And then again, about three or so years ago I stopped, and continuously for that time.

But because of the demands of my position and other responsibilities, it was just really difficult for me to make a regularly scheduled appointment every week, which I felt was a requirement if I’m going to make a commitment to doing therapy with a child. So I stopped doing therapy specifically for that reason.

Q. So for the last three or four years, you have not spent much of your time counseling children, correct.

A. Yes, doing therapy. I still have clinical contact with children and families, but not in a therapeutic capacity.

Q. Well, the clinical contact you have is primarily for academic purposes, correct.

A. No.

Q. What is the primary purpose of the clinical work that you’re currently doing.

A. Two things. One is I still am involved in evaluations, so I evaluate children and families. Again, much of that is related to the juvenile court system. And then I supervise cases and do in-take assessments on a regular basis. But it’s just the part about therapy that I dropped out because of the demand for the regular weekly meeting.

Q. And how much of your current work is related to forensic.

A. Forensic, like --

Q. Like you’re doing today.

A. Like testifying --

Q. Yes.

A. -- or --

Q. Forensic preparation, forensic evaluation, forensic testimony.

A. Oh, a small percentage. Certainly less than 5 percent.

Q. And please tell the jury what the word “forensic” means.

A. To my knowledge, being just something that has to do with the courtroom, criminal prosecution. Again, in my field, being the field of psychology, usually mental health, its interaction with some aspect of the court.

Q. Now, you’ve published a lot of papers about various aspects of clinical psychology, correct.

A. Mostly related to child maltreatment.

Q. Okay.

A. It may not always be related to psychology. Some of the things I do are related to child welfare services or social services, not psychology.

Q. You would agree that false claims of sexual abuse are made by children.

A. Certainly.

Q. And none of the papers you’ve published have ever dealt with that subject, correct.

A. Correct. That’s not an area of research that I do.

Q. And you’ve also generated a lot of papers on various aspects of your work that have not been published formally, right.

A. Some. I don’t know that I would say a lot, but I have some manuscripts that are in preparation. Maybe four, five or six that are included on my CV that are not in -- that are not currently in a journal or a book.

Q. And none of those papers have ever dealt with the subject of false claims of sexual abuse by children, right.

A. That’s correct. Again, it’s not an area of research that I do.

Q. There are people in your position, Ph.D.s and clinical psychology, who do specialize in the area of false claims of sexual abuse by children, right.

A. I'm not sure that they specialize in it. There certainly are people who are my colleagues who have done research in the area of false allegations of sexual abuse.

Q. And they've actually published papers on that particular subject, right.

A. There are several publications related to false allegations, yes.

Q. And you're aware that in California there have been some high-profile criminal cases which involved false claims of sexual abuse by children, right.

A. I need more information.

Q. Are you aware of a case in recent years that took place in Bakersfield where children testified they'd been sexually abused, there were convictions, and years later these testifying children came forward and said what they said was false.

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as exceeding the scope of the direct examination and relevancy.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I'm not aware of a case like that.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You've never made any study of that particular case, right.

A. I'm not aware of any case like that.

Q. Have you ever heard of a case called McMartin that took place in Los Angeles County many years ago.

A. I'm aware of the McMartin case.

Q. Are you aware that false claims of sexual abuse were made in that case.

A. I am, although my knowledge of the McMartin case is rather small. I wasn't involved in that case, so I know very little about that case.

Q. Okay. Have you studied -- in the course of obtaining your undergraduate degree, master's or Ph.D., have you actually studied as a subject the area of false claims of sexual abuse by children.

A. Yes. And I have a quick caveat that I would add to that, but absolutely. There are probably about seven, eight, maybe ten research studies related to false allegations.

And the caveat is I am -- a part of the research that I do is specifically on methodology, about how to do research related to sexual abuse and physical abuse, primarily. And the caveat is, it’s very difficult to get good information about false allegations, because what you’re fundamentally researching is something that didn’t happen.

Clearly false allegations happen, but that issue of researching something that didn’t happen is really hard.

Now, of those studies, I’m certainly aware of those studies. I have read most or maybe all of those studies. But anything that I would say -- and actually I would argue that anything that anybody would say related to false allegations should include that caveat, because it is just a difficult area to do research in.

Q. But certainly there’s a wealth of material you can look at if it becomes your main interest as a researcher, correct.

A. I wouldn’t say that there’s a wealth of material. There are, in fact, some studies. Now, when I say “material,” I’m really referring to what the research is in child sexual abuse. A lot of people have written and a lot of attorneys and certainly a lot of defense attorneys have written a lot, maybe a wealth of material about false allegations, and I have not read that. The focus of my reading has been on what research exists with regard to false allegations.

Q. Well, in your clinical work, have you ever made it a point to interview anyone who originally testified to sexual abuse, and later came forward and said, “I lied”.

A. In my experience, there have been, that I know of, two cases where a false allegation was made. Now, that may seem like a rather small number, but most of -- or pretty much all of the children that I see in therapy are children who have already been identified as having been abused, and then they go off to therapy so they would come and see me. I’m usually not involved in the investigation part of the process. So it’s conceivable that a different number of false allegations could happen and I have not been involved in those.

Q. Now, isn’t it true that if you had been testifying for the prosecutors in any of these cases where there were false allegations, you would have testified exactly as you did here today, right.

A. I’m not sure I understand the question.

Q. Let me rephrase it. Maybe I didn’t phrase it properly.

Let’s look at these cases where false allegations of sexual abuse by children were made, okay.

A. Okay.

Q. If you had been called by the prosecution to testify for the prosecution in any of those cases, you would have said exactly what you said here today, right.

A. Do you mean with regard to the Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome.

Q. With regard to everything you’ve testified to today.

A. There may be some minor variations, depending upon time, as we acquire more information, more research. Certainly we know information -- more information now than we did ten years ago. I have testified in cases ten years ago, so there might be some minor variations. I’d argue that generally it would be the same.

Q. And when you talked to Mr. Zonen about your testimony today, you didn’t discuss the subject of false statements of sexual abuse by children, did you.

A. I don’t recall Mr. Zonen asking me questions about false allegations.

Q. Okay. Okay. In the clinical work that you currently do, do any of your colleagues do clinical work in the area of false allegations of sexual abuse by children.

A. I’m not aware of anybody who does clinical work. I am aware of some of my colleagues who do research with regard to false allegations, but not clinical work.

Q. Okay.

A. You never know exactly what clinical work in false allegations would be comprised of.

Q. In your courses that you teach at University of California at Davis, do you ever teach students about the subject of false allegations of sexual abuse by children.

A. Yes.

Q. And have you written anything on that subject.

A. No.

Q. Do you use a case book or a course book that deals with that subject.

A. The simple answer to that question is no, but that may be a little deceptive, because I no longer teach in a classroom setting. I teach in a graduate level. So I teach in the capacity of training people to be therapists, training to be psychologists or social workers, and so there would not be something like a course book for the lectures or the discussions, the lectures that I have related to false allegations.

Q. When you teach about the subject of false claims of sexual abuse by children, do you teach your students some of the reasons you believe children make false claims of sexual abuse.

A. Yes.

Q. And please tell the jury what those reasons are.

A. Sure. Well, and it’s founded on what the research is, not necessarily what my personal opinion is, because it’s the research --

Q. Sure.

A. -- issue with the caveat.

Q. Sure.

A. There are, in fact, a history of research related to false allegations that kids make; that is, false allegations being that they make an allegation that they were sexually abused, but it turns out that they were not sexually abused.

And the difficulty, with the caveat, and I impress so many times, sometimes it’s really difficult to determine whether somebody was abused or not.

The research shows that there are a few dominant reasons why kids would make false allegations. Actually, primarily one reason why a child would make a false allegation, and that would be related to issues with a marital dissolution custody dispute, animosity between a husband and wife who are breaking up.

The notion would be husband and wife break up, husband or wife are angry with the other one, so they make an allegation of sexual abuse because this issue of custody is pending. It’s a problem that is extremely difficult for family court systems who actually have funded some of the research related to false allegations.

I don’t know if that was -- I mean, that was the primary reason why false allegations occur.

Q. There are other reasons, too, correct.

A. There may well be other -- that’s the largest. There could be other reasons. They would tend to be more, maybe, situational or case specific.

Q. If you saw a situation where parents were involved in a very, very acrimonious divorce - okay. - and for the first time in that relationship allegations of serious physical abuse were surfacing, and in the middle of this acrimonious divorce all of a sudden one parent goes to the authorities and says, “My soon-to-be ex-spouse has been molesting a child for years,” would that cause you to pause regarding the accuracy of that allegation.

A. That’s a tough question for me to answer.

The reason being, it’s not my job to make a determination about whether a particular child has been abused or not.

I could argue -- you phrased it that, okay, there’s a late or delayed accusation about sexual abuse, and maybe the parent put the child up to it.

I could similarly argue that circumstances within the family or maybe the relationship between the parent and the child had changed. Maybe the parents had separated and the child felt safer and able to disclose the sexual abuse. It’s difficult to not disclose physical abuse, because if you get hit, you have red marks, you get a black eye. That’s really hard to keep secret. Sexual abuse is a lot different.

So I could make an argument for both sides; that, okay, I should be concerned or that it’s common for kids who have been sexually abused. I think the primary statement that I would make is it’s not my place as a mental health provider to make a determination about whether a child has been abused or not, sexually abused or physically abused or in any other ways.

Q. Excuse me.

And is what you’re saying that your line of work is primarily to do research in these areas as opposed to evaluate; is that correct.

A. Well, evaluate -- almost. Evaluate in the context of mental health problems. I certainly assess and evaluate children or families all the time. But I assess and evaluate regarding whether they have a mental health problem or not, not whether they’ve been abused or not.

Q. Okay. And would it be correct to say to the jury that, as you sit here today, you don’t make a living evaluating whether or not claims of sexual abuse by children are true or not, right.

A. Certainly. I make a living being faculty in the Department of Pediatrics, being a psychologist, conducting research, providing mental health services, teaching. I am not involved in the determination of whether a particular child has been abused or not.

And it’s not my place and I don’t -- actually even further argue it is not the place of a mental health provider to make a determination about whether a particular person was abused or not, or whether a particular person is a perpetrator or not. In the criminal setting, that’s the responsibility of a jury.

Q. Now, you made a comment that parents can put their children up to lying about sexual abuse, correct.

A. I think I made it as a part of an example.

Q. And you would certainly agree that parents can encourage or induce children to make false claims of sexual abuse, correct.

A. Particularly within that context of animosity between parents in issues of custody, which is where most of the writing with regard to false allegations comes. That has been a concern.

Now, I always hate to go to absolutes, so it is possible for a child to be supported in their false allegation by their parent.

Q. If you had a situation where you had a mother and her children, and you had evidence that the mother and her children had, from a psychological standpoint, adopted someone as a parental figure. Maybe there isn’t a formal marriage. Maybe there isn’t a long-term relationship, but --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as compound, Your Honor, and the narrative of the question itself.

MR. MESEREAU: I haven’t finished my hypothetical, Your Honor.

THE COURT: He’s allowed to form a hypothetical. Do you -- do you want the court reporter to read to where you were.

MR. MESEREAU: I can rephrase it. Thanks.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Let me give you a hypothetical question: You’ve got a mother and three children. There is no father figure present. There has been a traumatic divorce of recent vintage. For whatever reason, the mother and her children pick someone and adopt that person as the father figure. And they refer to that person as “daddy,” and they refer to that person as the father of the children and the mother encourages the children to refer to that person in that light.

And suddenly there is a split. The mother, the children sense that the person they’ve adopted as their surrogate father, as their father figure, is bailing out, is getting out of the situation, for whatever reason.

You could imagine, couldn’t you, as a professor of clinical psychology, a situation like that where the mother suddenly induces the children to make false claims of sexual abuse.

A. As you frame that question -- I mean, there’s two parts to my answer. As you frame that question to me, I can imagine it, because you just framed it for me.

Q. Yes.

A. But that would seem to me, in my experience and the research that I know about sexual abuse and even false allegations, to be fairly incredible. The issue being, one, as I said earlier, it’s about custody. And the research, with the caveat about false allegations, is when there is a custody dispute; that is, mom doesn’t want the kids to go over to dad because she's -- or he's maybe sexually abused them, or vice versa, and there is this issue about who has legal right to these children. And that scenario that you just gave me doesn't seem like there would be that issue about who has legal right to it.

And on top of that, the research that we're talking about, just to make sure that we're clear, the prevalence of it, is that the numbers are really pretty small. It's difficult and maybe misleading to say, okay, well, there's these large number of kids who are making false allegations. The studies show that somewhere, at least around 2 to 6 percent of kids who make allegations make allegations that are false or that may be false. So we're looking at a very small number of kids to begin with, and with, what I would argue, doesn't fit into that high percentage group that the research describes.

Q. But, Doctor, you know that in nasty divorces, very often one spouse will induce a child to falsely accuse another spouse. Not just to get custody; to be nasty and to hurt the person. You know that happens every day, doesn't it.

A. That may be your experience, but it's not supported by the research, that kids make false allegations related to being sexually victimized every day, or make a lot. I mean, those are words that you qualified with. The research does not support that.

Q. But you just said you're not an expert in the area of false allegations of sexual abuse by children, didn't you.

A. No, I don't believe I said that.

Q. You just said you don't do any research in that area, correct.

A. That's not an area of research that I do. I do a different area of research.

Q. And you've never published an article about that.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, I ask the witness be allowed to finish his answer in its entirety.

THE COURT: Sustained.

THE WITNESS: But of the research that exists, I have read most or all of the existing research - research, not just writing that somebody did - related to false allegations.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You don’t know anything about the recent Bakersfield case, correct.

A. I --

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object. Assuming facts not in evidence that there is a recent Bakersfield case.

THE COURT: I’ll allow you to answer.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I’m not aware of a case in Bakersfield.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You’re not aware of a case where false allegations of child molestation were made, people were convicted, were incarcerated.

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You never heard of it.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Just a minute. I want to stop for just a second, just because the legal term “hypothetical question” has just arisen in this case. And at the end of the case, I’m going to instruct you on the law concerning the whole entire case, but occasionally because of things that happen during the trial, I’m going to give you instruction to help you deal with the evidence. And that’s the case here, so if you would please listen to this instruction, CALJIC 2.82:

“In examining an expert witness, counsel may ask a hypothetical question. This is a question in which the witness is asked to assume the truth of a set of facts and to give an opinion based on that assumption.

“In permitting this type of question, the Court does not rule and does not necessarily find that all of the assumed facts have been proved. It only determines that those assumed facts are within the possible range of the evidence. It is for you to decide, from all the evidence, whether or not the facts assumed in a hypothetical question have been proved.

"If you should decide that any assumption in the question has not been proved, you are to determine the effect of that failure of proof on the value and weight of the expert opinion based on the assumed facts."

Thank you, Counsel. Sorry for the interruption.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. I want to add a few facts to the hypothetical I gave you. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. Let's assume, hypothetically, the mother and son have been involved in prior litigation where the son, at an early age, testified under oath in support of the mother.

Let's assume that lawyers were retained. The mother and son had experience with lawyers, have experience making allegation of sexual assault and obtaining money in the process.

Let's assume the facts I just told you, about the mother, the son, and siblings, for whatever reason, adopting a new father figure to the point where they're referring to that person as "daddy," and referring to that person to various people as someone who takes care of them, who has adopted their family and become the father figure.

Let's assume that the new so-called "daddy" decides he doesn't want to be around these people, something doesn't seem right, and let's assume there is a falling apart.

Let's also assume the mother and son again go to lawyers. Not the police-lawyers. And let's assume that they are interested again in financial gain.

Given what I've given you in that hypothetical, you can certainly envision the possibility of false claims of sexual abuse, correct.

A. The difficulty that I have with your hypothetical --
Q. Yes.
A. -- is that I perceive my responsibility here is to provide information about what the research has to say about child sexual abuse. And while your hypothetical, your story, is clear, I know of no research that goes to that point. So I don’t think I can answer your question.

Q. Well, you’re not telling the jury that there has been no research on false claims of sexual abuse for purposes of manipulating the legal system and obtaining financial gain, are you.
A. My understanding of the research with regard to false allegations, I don’t recall a single article where the goal of the research literature, where the goal was making a false allegation for financial gain.
Now, perhaps making a false allegation to retain custody of your child, as I mentioned earlier, but I’m not aware of any research related to false allegations for financial gain.
Q. But you’re certainly not suggesting to the jury that false allegations of sexual abuse cannot be made for purposes of financial gain, are you.
A. I’m not making that statement. I’m just --
Q. Okay.
A. -- trying to describe what the research says.
Q. Have you had a lot of experience with allegations of sexual abuse appearing in civil cases as opposed to criminal cases.
A. A couple. But not very many. Maybe two.
Q. Do you know whether or not, if somebody is criminally prosecuted and convicted of molestation, whether or not the alleged victim would automatically win a civil case if they filed one.

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, you’ve indicated that you’re aware of false claims by children of sexual abuse, right.

A. Me specifically, or with regard to the research.

Q. The research.

A. Okay, yes.

Q. And you’re aware that adults can encourage children to make false claims of sexual abuse, correct.

A. Certainly they can encourage. And again, usually that’s within the context of marital dissolution and custody.

Q. I know your point, but that’s -- that’s through the articles and research you’ve read. You aren’t saying it can’t happen in other contexts, are you.

A. I’m not saying that.

Q. And you’re certainly not saying that parents could not encourage children to make false claims of sexual abuse for financial reasons, are you.

A. I’m not making that statement.

Q. Okay. Now, you’d agree that children will sometimes exaggerate claims that they’ve been abused, true.

A. I’m not sure what you mean by “exaggerate.” I know the casual term of “exaggerating,” but you seem to have a more specific one related to sexual abuse.

Q. Well, I mean, you know what the word “exaggeration” means, right.

A. That’s what I mean, in sort of casual terms. But I guess I’m asking if you could be more specific with regards to sexual abuse.

Q. Well, certainly you would agree that children can be touched by someone, and at some point in time exaggerate that touching to be something along the lines of molestation or inappropriate touching when it isn't.

A. Certainly that would be possible.

Q. So what you're saying is there are possibilities of pure falsehood; in other words, a child says sexual abuse happened when they aren't even touched.

And there are possibilities of exaggeration, where a child is touched, but not inappropriately, and then the child comes forward and says, "I was touched inappropriately," correct.

A. Those are two possibilities.

Q. Yes.

A. I don't think I've ever encountered the second possibility, but certainly it's possible.

Q. Well, common sense would tell you that it's certainly possible that a child could be touched appropriately, and at some point come forward and say that touching was either -- either, "I was molested" or "I was touched in an inappropriate way." That makes sense that that could happen, doesn't it.

A. It's possible, yes.

Q. Okay. But in your studies, you've never come across it. Is that what I'm hearing.

A. That description --

Q. Yes.

A. -- about the pattern of exaggerating --

Q. Yes.

A. -- is not pronounced in the literature related to false allegations.

Q. It's not pronounced in the literature, but you're not saying it doesn't happen.

A. I'm not saying it doesn't happen. It's possible.

Q. Let's be honest. If parents are touching their children, and they suddenly go through a nasty divorce, and all of a sudden claims of inappropriate touching happens, they may be exaggerated, right.

A. It's possible that could happen.

Q. And would you agree that in the last, say, 15 years, you've seen a tremendous increase in claims of molestation in divorce cases.

A. I don't know the literature on that. I don't know that I could answer that question.

Q. Okay. Okay. Do you routinely in your work look for research articles on the subject of false claims --

A. Yes.

Q. -- by children.

A. False allegations, yes.

Q. Okay. And are studies in this area being done at your university as we speak.

A. On false allegations.

Q. Yes.

A. No. To my knowledge, and -- the issue of sexual abuse, and the clinical aspects of sexual abuse, they are being done at my agency, because that's what we do within the Department of Pediatrics.

There is another researcher in the Department of Psychology who does developmental research that is related to physical and sexual abuse, but not to the clinical aspects of sexual abuse.

Q. Okay. Now, let me ask you some questions about the way children might react if they truly have been sexually abused. Okay.

Now, the prosecutor asked you some questions about a child becoming aggressive because a child has been sexually abused, right.

A. Yes, I believe he did.

Q. And if you have a situation where a child has been aggressive, say, in school before any allegation of sexual abuse arises, you wouldn't look at that child and say, "I see evidence of sexual abuse because the child's being aggressive," would you.

A. It is difficult to say if any particular symptom, in this case you're using aggressiveness, is directly related to physical abuse or sexual abuse. You can be aggressive for a lot of different types of reasons. It is hard to say, “Okay, you’re aggressive. You’ve been sexually abused.” I would not go there.

Q. And it would complicate your ability to attribute aggressiveness to sexual abuse if you knew that particular child was acting aggressively in school before the alleged abuse, right.

A. It may com- -- I’m sorry, it may complicate it. The issue, as I said earlier is, aggression is -- may well be a reflection of the distress that a victim has, but it could also be something related to another aspect of their life unrelated to being victimized.

Q. For example, if a child had been a chronic discipline problem in school, a child had been constantly called to the carpet for fighting, getting up in the middle of class and singing, disrupting teachers, calling teachers names, being bounced out of every class, ordered to detention and not showing up to detention; if you had factors like that, that would complicate your ability to say that aggressiveness was a function of sexual abuse at a later date, right.

A. Well, I would actually say it the other way around. I would say that sometimes kids who are sexually abused exhibit those kinds of problems. I would be reluctant to say that because you exhibit those kinds of problems, that you therefore have been sexually abused.

Q. Right. Okay. Okay. Wouldn’t you agree that children who actually have been sexually abused tend to react to that abuse in different ways.

A. Certainly.

Q. Some children who have been sexually abused appear severely traumatized, right.

A. Yes. But that’s actually a minority of kids who are severely traumatized by sexual abuse. It is something that some kids go through, but it’s not a frequent occurrence.

Q. Well, some kids would seem to take it in stride better than other kids, right.

A. That’s correct.

Q. Some seem to be very traumatized by it, and some can show remarkable abilities to take it in stride, correct.

A. We call it resilience.

Q. Yes. Some children who have been actually sexually abused will tend to act out their sexual abuse, correct.

A. “Act out” meaning. I mean, I have a sense of what “act out” usually is, but I’m not sure if it’s exactly what you mean.

Q. They will in a very overt, dramatic way, describe it, right.

A. Now, are you talking about the disclosures, or are you talking about the symptom presentation.

Q. I’m talking about both. Some children -- I’m not saying “all.” Some children who actually have been sexually abused will describe what happened to them in a very dramatic descriptive fashion, right.

A. That’s possible, yes.

Q. And some, on the other hand, who have been sexually abused will become very withdrawn, right.

A. Correct. That’s possible.

Q. Some children who have been sexually abused will immediately tell someone about it, true.

A. That is, in fact, possible. Certainly that occurs, as I testified earlier. It occurs in a small minority of cases, but certainly it is possible, and I would guess that it does occur.

Q. And some will never tell anybody about it at all, right.

A. Yes. I didn’t add that to what Mr. Zonen had asked me. I know I said that there are some people who don’t disclose their sexual abuse until they’re adults.

Now, it’s my opinion that there are some people who don’t disclose throughout their entire lifetime, but I don’t have any research, obviously, to be able to point to that.

Q. And again, everything you’re saying comes out of research studies that you’ve looked at, right.

A. Either that I’ve looked at or that I’ve done.

Q. You’re not giving opinions to the jury based upon any of the therapeutic work you’ve done with actual children, true.

A. There may have been a couple of times where I’ve asked -- was asked my opinion about an issue, and I’ve tried to frame it with the statement “in my opinion,” rather than that’s what the research says. And I think I just did that a minute ago with regard to people who don’t disclose throughout their entire lifetime.

Q. Okay. But what I’m trying to get at is this: You’re giving the jury opinions about the subject. You’ve said some children act out their abuse and some become very withdrawn. Some become traumatized and others take it in stride, right.

A. Well, actually, I think it’s -- 2930

Q. What are your opinions based on.

A. I think it’s actually different than that.

My job is to provide information about what the research has to say.

Q. Right.

A. Not to sit here and just provide an opinion about what I’ve seen as a clinician or what I think as a person. To provide what the research has to say.

In those situations where I, in fact, have an opinion that’s not supported by research, I have tried to say, as I gave you an example a minute ago, “in my opinion” related to something.

Now, the other part of your question, it’s my job to educate the jury and, consistent with what Dr. Summit wrote with regard to the Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome, is to dispel myths and misperceptions about sexual abuse.

And so within the context of the Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome, I do exactly the same thing that he wanted to do with therapists, but with a jury. That they have a difficult decision to make, and they should do that based upon what research has to say, and that's what I have tried to present.

For example, if they have the misperception that children are sexually abused by strangers, that some guy will jump out of the bushes and molest children, that's the way it mostly happens, well, that's a misperception. It doesn't usually happen. And I think I've characterized that most children are sexually abused by someone with whom they have an ongoing relationship.

Q. But you're not telling the jury that strangers do not molest children, are you.

A. No, but I am telling them that this is a misperception that strangers are the people we need to look out for with regard to the frequency of perpetrators. Most children are sexually abused by someone with whom they have an ongoing relationship. It could be a stranger, but it is infrequent for them to be sexually abused by a stranger.

Q. Have you ever made a study of how many cases go through the criminal courts in California where children are molested by strangers who are pedophiles. Ever made a study of that.

A. No, but there are a number of studies that have examined the relationship between the perpetrator and the victim, and the number of strangers who molest kids are in single digits. There's different studies, depending on methodology, but it's around the 4 to 6 to 7 percent of children who are sexually abused by a stranger.

Q. But do you know how many of those cases were prosecuted in California last year.

A. No. Couldn't tell you that.

Q. Do you know how many were prosecuted in the last five years.

A. Again, I don’t do research in issues of the court and criminal prosecutions.

Q. What you’re telling the jury is that the vast majority of these cases, looking at it from a research standpoint, are done by -- or involve allegations that someone the child is familiar with did this; is that right.

A. That most children are sexually abused by somebody --

Q. Yes.

A. -- with whom they have an ongoing relationship.

Q. Yes.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Now, you’d agree that some children who have actually been abused have very accurate memories of their being abused, right.

A. I would agree with that. Some children probably do.

Q. And some children have false memories of being abused, correct.

A. I have a hard time with that question. If you --

Q. Let me just ask it again.

A. Well, if you have not been abused, then you don’t have a memory of it.

Q. You could have a false memory of it, true.

A. There is literature which I consider unusual, where certain people have stated that they have a memory of being abused, and it’s a false memory, it turns out. Even more so with the caveat that I have about false allegations, that I would have a significant caveat about the credibility of research related to false allegations -- I forget what -- the phrase that they call it, but allegations that the victim appears to believe that they were abused and they were not. I mean, that is a very unusual aspect of this field.

Q. But it certainly has happened, hasn't it.

A. There are reports that it's happened, yes.

Q. And there are people in your field who are devoting a large percentage of their professional endeavors to studying that particular area, aren't they.

A. I'm not aware of those people.

Q. Well, you're aware of an area dealing with what is called autosuggestion, where children are actually induced by parents, adults, and other influences to conjure up false memories of abuse. You know that's going on today.

A. I'm not familiar with that.

Q. Don't know anything about that field.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Getting back to the issue of children who actually have been sexually abused - okay. - I'm excluding false claims. All right.

Some children who actually have been abused will actually show common symptoms of abuse, correct.

A. There are some, well, common symptoms of distress.

Q. Yes.

A. It is difficult to have common symptoms of abuse because of the diversity of symptom presentation with kids who have been sexually abused, so it's common symptoms of distress.

Q. Well, in your response to the prosecutor's questions, you were identifying certain generic, general ways that actual abuse victims might behave, true.

A. Yes, I think what I had said is, as a stereotype, it's consistent with the stereotype that female victims, who usually are victims who experience some distress resulting from their victimization, tend to be internalizing, and then males externalizing, and try to characterize or define what those two things are as broad types of expression of symptoms that victims go through.

Q. The point I’m making is this: Some children who have actually been sexually abused will act perfectly normal, true.

A. I would -- again, it’s hard for me to go to the issue of absolutes, but certainly there are some kids who act normal and have no apparent external change of behavior that would give you rise to believe that they’ve been sexually abused.

Q. And some children who have actually been sexually abused will not act normal, right.

A. Some kids who have been sexually abused have -- typically have some type of symptom pattern that they present.

Q. And it becomes very difficult when you observe how a child behaves to determine if that child really has been truly sexually abused, true.

A. It’s hard to look at a child and say, “Okay, you’ve been sexually abused.” That would be a difficult thing to do that.

Q. Okay. Nobody can determine with absolute accuracy that a child has been abused because they act in a certain way, right.

A. Again, that would be pretty much the same question that you just asked me a minute ago. It’s difficult to look at the child and say -- you can do it either way. To look at that child and say, “Okay, you’ve been sexually abused,” and/or to look at a child and say, “Okay, you have not been sexually abused.” It’s difficult to have that external ability.

Q. Okay. Now, you’d agree that in your field it almost goes without saying that parents can have a tremendous effect on whether or not their children tell the truth, right.

A. Yes. It should be -- actually, part of my field is also child development. And I would hope that parents have an ability to influence the lives of their children in lots of ways, one of which would include telling the truth.

Q. And if a child is continually exposed to parents who are perpetual liars, that can have an effect to a child’s view of whether lying is acceptable, correct.

A. I would tend to agree with that, yes. I mean, they’re not all cases, but I would tend to agree with the sense that a child may have a value about lying that might be similar to that of their past.

Q. Let me get to the subject of when an actual child victim of sexual abuse tends to disclose what happened to them - okay. - because you talked about when they might or might not disclose it. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. And I’m going to limit my questions to situations where the literature you’ve studied deals with children who have actually been abused. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. I’m not talking about children who lie. I’m talking about the actual, what appear to be victims of real sexual abuse. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. You’d agree that some children will disclose it right away, won’t they.

A. Again, a minority, and perhaps a small minority of children will make immediate disclosures.

Q. But some do for sure, right.

A. It is -- some children do. It is much more common for kids to have a delayed disclosure.

Q. But you aren’t telling the jury that there aren’t situations where children who have been abused have not run to their parents screaming and yelling, “This person just touched me,” right.

A. No, I think what I’m trying to do is to characterize what the research says about all disclosures, and so that means accurately portraying what an immediate -- the frequency of an immediate disclosure would be, and it is a small percentage of kids who do an immediate disclosure. It certainly happens.

Q. Okay.

A. It is much more common for there to be either an extended delay, or a delay going into adulthood. That is, I think, an accurate characterization of this issue of frequency of disclosure.

Q. And you're dealing with generalities that come from the research and study that you've done or reviewed, correct.

A. Generalities I have a difficulty with. I'm reflecting or describing what several studies have reported that are fairly consistent --

Q. Okay.

A. -- about the issue of delayed disclosure.

Q. But certainly you're not suggesting to the jury that every day of the year children don't run to their teachers and say, "So and so just touched me," "so and so just grabbed me," "You know what so and so just did to me." That happens all the time, doesn't it.

A. I'm -- I'm having difficulty -- are you saying that, "They touched you," they're making -- so are you suggesting that it happens all the time that children make false allegations.

Q. It happens quite often, doesn't it.

A. I would agree with that.

Q. You don't think teachers get reports like that often in school.

A. I don't think that there are often or all the time characterizations of false allegations of sexual abuse.

Q. Have you interviewed teachers on that subject.

A. There actually are --

Q. Please answer my question.

A. No.

Q. Have you personally interviewed teachers on that subject, ever.

A. No.
Q. Have you done any research on that subject yourself.
A. I have read research, but I have not specifically done research on that subject.
Q. Okay. Now, I just want to ask you if the statements I'm making are correct or not. Okay.
Some children tell right away, right.
A. Again, within -- I don't mean to be long-winded or redundant here.
Q. I'm just asking you to answer my question.
Is it true that some children --
MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, I'd ask that the witness be allowed to answer the question without interruption of counsel.
MR. MESEREAU: I'll rephrase it, Your Honor.
THE COURT: All right.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Let me ask you to just give a response whether you think this is true or not - okay. - and then if you want to explain it when the prosecutor gets up to get explanations, you can do that.
True or false: Some children will disclose sexual abuse right away.
MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.
THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.
THE WITNESS: That would be true.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Some children will never disclose sexual abuse, right.
A. That is true.
Q. Some children will tell a little bit at one point and then tell more at a later day, true.
A. I would agree with that, yes.
Q. And some children will just make up stories of abuse, right.
A. It is true that there are false allegations that occur.
Q. You made some statements about details when a child makes a revelation about sexual abuse, correct.

A. I did talk about the disclosure and the process of disclosure, yes.

Q. You talked about details sometimes changing when a child repeatedly discloses what has happened, allegedly, to the child, true.

A. I talked about, and I think what I tried to characterize was that there was a process to the disclosure, and some of the barriers that make it difficult for a child to disclose and the way in which kids would disclose being sexually abused.

Q. But changing stories about the details of alleged sexual abuse can also be consistent with lies, true.

A. Lies with regard to.

Q. Sexual abuse.

A. Again, I would agree that that's possible.

Q. In other words, if you see details being added each time a child tells a story about alleged sexual abuse, that might be an indication, as you said, that the child was abused, or it might be an indication that the child is a flat-out liar, right.

A. Well, and I think that's why Dr. Summit included it in the Child Sex Abuse Accommodation Syndrome, because the presentation was, back in 1983, that just because a child wasn't completely perfect, then their disclosure was unconvincing or they weren't telling the truth.

What we have since learned from research since 1983 was that the pattern that is common for kids who have been sexually abused sometimes included mistakes, or errors, or they may goof up on some of the details.

And so I'm not making a statement that, "Okay, you made a mistake, and so -- with regard to the disclosure, and so you are or are not sexually abused."

I'm trying to dispel the misperception that a juror may have related to the way in which a child discloses sexual abuse. Just because they make a mistake doesn't mean it's unconvincing or doesn't mean that they weren’t abused.

Q. And just because they add new details, new stories, new dates, new versions, doesn’t mean they’re not liars either, does it.

A. Right. It could go either way.

Q. Okay. Now, are the studies that you have looked at been studies that are, for lack of a better word, scientifically based.

A. They are research based that are published in peer-reviewed journals.

Q. How does what you’ve been reviewing in your work relate to science, if you can even answer that question.

A. I would argue that scientific research and psychology is a component of science, part of the social sciences. And then within the part of that related to children or child sexual abuse, that we engage scientific methodology to attempt, to the best of our ability, to identify what is best known about this event of sexual abuse or sexually inappropriate behavior between an adult and a child. So we try to gain knowledge related to sexual abuse.

Q. But there certainly is no scientific way to determine if a child has truly been sexually abused or if a child is lying about it, right.

A. I’m not aware of any science strategy or methodology to determine guilt or innocence between a specific perpetrator and a specific victim.

Q. Okay. And I think what you’re telling the jury is nobody can determine that a child has been abused just based on what the child says, right.

A. No, actually, I think somewhat differently. I think what I’m trying to tell the jury is that there’s a difference between what you may have grown up and learned about sexual abuse through reading magazines or watching television or talking to your friends and what research says about sexual abuse. And my job is to provide you with --

MR. MESEREAU: Could I ask the witness be admonished to answer the question.

THE COURT: I think he is answering it. You asked him if he said one thing, and he said no, he said another.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE WITNESS: My job is to provide information about what the research has to say about sexual abuse, and then consistent with Dr. Summit's Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome, to dispel any misperceptions or myths that you have about child sexual abuse so you have perhaps a more solid foundation on which to make a determination in this specific case.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: I may not have asked the question properly. It could have been my mistake. Let me ask it again.

Nobody can determine that a child has been abused just based on what the child says, right.

A. I don't think I've ever been asked that question before. I don't know how to answer that. I mean, I could only say that that would be a difficult thing to do.

Q. Okay.

A. But I don't know how to answer that question.

Q. There's no test you can give a child to determine whether or not that child has been actually sexually abused, is there.

A. I'm not aware of a test to determine whether a particular perpetrator sexually abused a particular victim.

Q. Okay. In terms of reliability of studies - okay. - do you have -- do you have any thoughts on how the research studies you look at would relate to the opinions of actual clinical or therapeutic workers in this field.

In other words, do you believe that the research work you do, where you review the studies that are being published, do you believe this work is more reliable than the opinions of people actually counseling children or administering therapy to children.

A. I earlier made a statement that it’s better to rely upon what the research has to say than in my particular opinion. And I happen to be a person who believes in research and believes in science and it’s part of what I do every day.

And the best example I can give you is I’ve seen a lot of children who have been sexually abused. But the research is founded on much more rigorous, focused and a larger number of kids than even than I have seen.

So somebody who is in, let’s say, private practice doing therapy maybe, over the course of a few years, will have seen 20, 30, 50 children who have been abused, and they take their knowledge from the children that they see. And maybe that is an accurate reflection of the research; maybe it’s not. But they enhance their knowledge by reading the literature, reading scientific journals, reading professional journals about sexual abuse, and then add that to this issue of the clients that come in and the patterns they see in their clients.

Q. But when you look at these research studies, and you tell the jury, “Based upon the research studies I have reviewed in my professional work, I’ll give you these percentages,” the reality is, you haven’t talked to a single one of those alleged victims of sexual abuse that are the subject of the studies, right.

A. Well, with the exception of my studies, the research that I have done, if you exclude those, because, in fact, I have cited research of my own, that is true. A colleague of mine does research in Central Michigan. I have not gone to Central Michigan to talk with the subjects in her studies.

Q. And when you read one of these studies and they say a certain percentage of victims of sexual abuse don’t tell right away and a certain percentage do, the reality is, you don’t even know who the people they’re talking about are, right.

A. I -- well, other than a general description that they provide in a journal article or a piece of research that they do, I don’t know the names of them, and I shouldn’t know the names of them because their involvement in research is protected by confidentiality.

Q. Now, based on what you told the jury in response to the prosecutor’s questions, I’d like to ask you a few questions and ask if they’re true: Claiming you’re abused would be consistent with actual abuse, correct.

A. I’m not sure I understand your question.

Q. Well, if somebody says, “I have been abused,” that would certainly be consistent with someone who actually has been abused, right.

A. I would disagree with that.

Q. You’re trying to say that victims of sexual abuse never come forward and say, “I’ve been abused”.

A. You can be sexually abused and say, “Okay, I have been abused.” And you can be sexually abused, and again, as you pointed out, have a false allegation.

Q. Well, let’s put it this way: Denying you’ve been abused could be consistent with having actually been abused, right.

A. You’re getting me all messed up.

Q. Let me rephrase it. Some people say, “I’ve been abused,” and they have been. Some people deny they’ve been abused, and they have been. Is that what you’re saying.

A. Correct.

Q. By the same token, some people say they’ve been abused, and they haven’t been at all, true.

A. That’s correct. That happens.

Q. And some people who deny they’ve been abused never were abused, right.

A. That would be correct, yes.

Q. Okay. All right. You said something about allegations of sexual abuse changing - okay. - during the course of an alleged victim telling various people about what happened, right.

A. I made mention of that with regard to the aspect -- the fourth aspect of the accommodation syndrome, the unconvincing disclosure, yes.

Q. If a child abuse -- excuse me, let me rephrase that.

If a child is claiming they've been abused, and you notice, during a series of interviews, the dates of the alleged abuse start to change, okay.

A. Okay.

Q. That could be perfectly consistent with a child who's lying, right.

A. That's possible.

Q. If you knew that an alleged child victim had experience in the legal system making claims and getting money from those claims, would that cause you any pause with respect to whether or not the child was telling the truth.

A. I'm -- I don't think that's my area to answer.

Q. How come.

A. Well, what I said earlier. I mean, if you're framing it within the context of false allegations, kids, in fact, do make false allegations. And when they make false allegations, the reasons that I provided earlier were in the context of divorce and issues of custody.

I wasn't aware of -- or I am not aware of an instance where a child has made a false allegation specifically for the purpose of financial gain. It's possible, which is the question you just asked me, but I'm not aware of that. Nor am I aware of any research that's focused on the issue of financial gain and false allegations.

Q. Well, you've done some therapeutic work, you said, earlier in your career, right.

A. Up until about three, four years ago, yes.

Q. And I have to assume, as a human being, when you've interviewed people, you must have been saying to yourself from time to time, "I wonder if I'm being told the truth," right.

A. Occasionally. But not frequently. Most of the time when I get kids for therapy, they've gone through this process where there has already been a determination about whether they're -- they've been abused or not.

And it's not my place to make a determination whether they're abused or not. The focus of my attention is on decreasing mental health symptoms.

Q. Let me ask you this, Doctor: Let's assume you're doing what you just described. Based upon what you know, someone, or maybe more than one person, has made a determination that somebody has been actually abused, okay.

A. Okay.

Q. And they come to you in this therapeutic context, right.

A. Okay.

Q. And you start administering therapy to this alleged victim, right.

A. Yes. Okay.

Q. And in the course of your counseling this alleged victim, it suddenly dawns on you, "I don't believe this person." What do you do.

A. I don't know that I've been in that situation before.

Q. What do you do if it happens.

A. Probably try to address the related mental health issue if it's related to this perception that I have that it's a false allegation. Because my job is not to investigate if there would have been a determination. My job is if the child comes in and they're depressed, or they are anxious, or they're aggressive, is to address the mental health problem, not to investigate whether they've been abused or not.

So if I have that thought or idea or feeling, then my first inclination, I think, would be to relate it to the mental health system, which is, in fact, my responsibility.

Q. Well, your profession has certain ethical requirements you’re supposed to follow, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And as you’ve said earlier, you’re aware of situations where people have come forward years later and said, “That allegation I made as a child was false,” correct.

A. And again, are you talking about within the clients that I have seen, or just generally.

Q. Generally.

A. I’m aware that there are false allegations --

Q. Okay.

A. -- yes.

Q. My question to you is, as a professional, bound by certain ethical rules, if someone comes to you for therapy, and it’s your understanding that some other individuals, whom you may not even know, have made a threshold determination, “We think this child was abused,” okay.

A. Can I interrupt you in the middle of your question. In your prior question when you said “other individuals,” you pointed to these people (indicating).

Q. No, I didn’t mean they had done it. No.

A. And I made the determination there was an adjudication and the client was found -- was identified as being victimized by a jury, because you went like that (indicating).

Q. No, I was not.

A. My mistake, then.

Q. The jury has nothing to do with this issue at the moment.

A. Okay.

Q. What I’m asking you is, as a professional, someone comes to your office for therapy. It is your understanding that certain people in the system out there, whom you may not even know, made a threshold determination that they believed this person was the victim of abuse. You start your counseling sessions. You start talking to the person very intimately about what happened. You ask them about their background. You ask them about parental influence. You ask them how they live their life. You probe into who they are. And at some point a light goes off: “I don’t believe this person. Something’s wrong.”

From an ethical standpoint, what do you do, as a clinical psychologist.

A. It’s an interesting problem, and only because I don’t think I’ve ever encountered a situation like that, and because it really runs up against this issue of confidentiality. What goes on in a therapeutic office is confidential. Clearly there are mandates to report if you reasonably suspect somebody is abused.

But you’re asking me the opposite. And so since I’ve never encountered a situation like that, the first thing I’d do is go read the either state ethics regulations or the ethics related to the American Psychological Association, because I’ve never encountered something like that.

But it would be significant for me to break a client confidentiality, since it’s one of the hallmarks of psychotherapy, so I’m not exactly sure what I would do in that situation.

Q. Have you ever made a study of false claims of sexual abuse directed at celebrities.

A. I’ve never done a study like that, no.

Q. Have you ever read a study about that.

A. I have not.

Q. Have you done any research in the area of false lawsuits being filed against celebrities.

A. That’s not my area of research.

Q. Okay. Now, you made some comments about the percentage of actual abusers being in a relationship of familiarity with the person abused, right.

A. Yes, I think I used the word “acquaintance.”

Q. Okay. And I believe you said that you thought the -- certainly the high percentage of abusers in situations where there’s actual abuse have a familial relationship with the victim, right.

A. An “acquaintance” relationship was the word that I used, yes.

Q. And when you say “acquaintance,” what do you mean.

A. Somebody who has some ongoing relationship, who the child knows. It could be lots of different people. It can be a father, brother, uncle. Guy who lives across the street. Babysitter. You know, it can be lots of different types of people. But it’s somebody who is known to the victim and typically has an ongoing relationship with them.

Q. When you say “ongoing relationship,” what do you mean.

A. At least once, twice, three times. I mean, I think if you are the -- if the perpetrator’s the guy who lives across the street, that would suggest somebody who is seen by the victim on a regular basis. If the person -- if the perpetrator is somebody who lives in the house or is the babysitter, I mean, seen multiple incidents or have multiple times of interaction.

Q. And correct me if I’m wrong on this, but it’s sort of assumed that the alleged perpetrator who has an ongoing relationship with the alleged victim wants a relationship with that alleged victim, true.

A. I mean, I’m pondering this issue of “alleged.” If you get rid of that --

Q. I won’t.

A. That’s where I get a little hung up on your question.

Let’s just go hypothetical. All right.

THE COURT: Wait. Let’s just take a break.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. All right. Okay.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Just to wrap things up -- oops. Just to wrap things up, a couple of more questions: When you talk about familiarity between the person accused of improperly touching a child and the child, are you referring to typically an ongoing relationship between the two.

A. I think that’s what I characterized when I said “acquaintance,” yes.

Q. And by “acquaintance,” you mean a relationship where it appears that the two parties are actively involved with one another at some level.

A. Well, without getting all that complicated about it --

Q. Sure.

A. -- it’s when the perpetrator and the victim know each other, and, you know, the opposite would be a stranger.

And so that’s really what I’m trying to characterize is, most of the time the perpetrator and the victim know each other. And I don’t know if that’s simpler or any more clear or less clear, but that’s what I was trying to characterize. That’s what the research shows with regard to sexual abuse.

Q. If you uncover evidence that the person accused is trying to disassociate him or herself from the alleged victim, that would not be consistent with what you’re talking about, right.

A. Well, again, we got -- I’ll get stuck on your word “alleged.” The Child Sex Abuse Accommodation Syndrome talks about what commonly occurs between a victim in the act of being sexually abused, and so it makes as its presumption that the child has been sexually abused. So the word "alleged" is difficult in that situation.

Q. Well, if, hypothetically speaking, you have a situation where you learn that someone has been very generous to a family in need, took that family into his home, was told the child was dying, gave them all kinds of benefits to help them with this very difficult situation, was told the family was impoverished, and at some point there's evidence that the person now decides, "They're taking advantage of me. I really want to disassociate myself from them. They're causing all kinds of problems. They're referring to me as the 'daddy' to everybody when I can't be their daddy," and you see evidence in the hypothetical that person is trying to sort of gradually get away from them, it's unlikely a molestation is going to occur at that point, isn't it.

A. It's not my place to make a determination about whether a molestation occurred or not.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Thank you.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Doctor, the example that Mr. Mesereau just gave you of a person attempting to disassociate with a victim, if the same person was, in fact, plying that child with alcohol and pornography, is that consistent with grooming that child for purposes of molestation.

A. The prospect of giving alcohol, exposing children or the victim to pornographic material, is completely consistent with the notion of grooming. That phrase, "grooming," has specific meaning in the field, but it's consistent with the notion of grooming.

MR. MESEREAU: Object to the question. Move to strike, violates the Court's order.

MR. ZONEN: I believe that it was opened up by the preceding question by counsel, behavior of the suspect.

MR. MESEREAU: The Court has ordered not to use the word “pornography,” and Mr. Zonen knows that.

MR. ZONEN: If I did use that word, I don’t recall. I’m sorry.

THE COURT: I haven’t forbidden anyone to use the word “pornography.” The use of the word “pornography” as applying to the materials being introduced is forbidden, because that’s going to be a jury question for how they characterize that evidence.

But as long as you’re not -- as you’re using “pornography,” that it doesn’t relate to the evidence in this case, you can use that. It was used earlier in the hearing. But since you have a hard time distinguishing that, maybe you should use “adult material” all the time.

MR. ZONEN: I will.

Is that the extent of the objection.

MR. MESEREAU: It is.

MR. ZONEN: Then I’m prepared to proceed.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Doctor, a person who makes available to a child, virtually 24-hours a day, every form of entertainment, from video games to all manner of other games, to no restrictions whatsoever, is that something that could be considered grooming for purposes of making a child susceptible to sexual abuse.

A. Certainly. I mean, grooming is -- and I made reference earlier to this pattern of increasing sexuality in the relationship. It desensitizes the child.

Grooming, I think, is a broader scope issue, because grooming really involves the prospect where a perpetrator provides a lot of desirable things to a child, and those can be the special attention, making best buddies, you know, sharing a lot of things.

It can also be sharing a lot of material things, the coolest Nintendo games, the most interesting bikes or nicest car, whatever. It can be a lot of things that essentially pair the perpetrator with good, fun, enjoyable times.

And once that is established, then is when the sexuality starts to become a part of that relationship. And again, as I say, that’s part of the grooming. The increased sexuality makes it more accessible for the child to respond positively or favorably to the sexual approaches of the perpetrator.

Now, the statement that you made is within the realm of grooming behavior.

Q. How about encouraging a child to share not just a bedroom with the suspect, but sharing a bed with the person as well. Would that be considered grooming.

A. Certainly. That would be --

MR. MESEREAU: Beyond the scope, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Doctor, in circumstances where children have difficulty relating -- or relaying with some degree of accuracy events, tell us, what is the difficulty associated with children talking about when things occur, or how frequently things occur.

A. Well, when things occur, is kids don’t run their lives with watches and calendars like adults do. So they may make mistakes about whether it happened the day before, the day after, the 13th or the 14th. I mean, those types of things. They make mistakes like this fairly commonly, not just within the context of the sexual abuse. But kids do that.

So there’s the “when.” And I forget what the other part of your question was.

Q. When or how frequently.

A. The “how frequently” is, if something happens just once, usually this issue of frequency is not hard to determine. If it happens twice or three times, it’s not hard to determine.

If it happens more than that, then it’s easy to not be clear about whether something happened on the first time -- well, actually the fourth time or the sixth time. Because those things -- the specific events related to each of those incidents may run together.

With regard to sexual abuse, if oral copulation occurred on the fourth time and the sixth, but not the fifth time, that would be the mistake, the child would say, “Well, maybe it happened on the fourth and fifth time.” They may not be completely accurate in being able to be reliable in describing those types of details.

Q. Doctor, are you familiar at all with any studies that have been written that deal with the issue of false allegations of child sexual abuse for purposes of financial gain.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.

MR. ZONEN: Not by me.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I’m not familiar with any studies related to that.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: None that you’ve read or none that you haven’t read; in other words, studies that you’re aware of their existence but haven’t read.

A. I try to keep fairly current with the literature on all aspects of -- most aspects of sexual abuse. And particularly with issues of false allegations.

And there are, in fact, several studies about false allegations, but I’m not familiar with any study, either that I’ve read or just generally aware of, where the purpose of the false allegation was financial gain.

Q. Can I assume that over the past 20-plus years that you’ve been dealing with this subject, child sexual abuse, have there been any cases that you have had personal contact with where there were allegations of sexual impropriety for purposes of financial gain.

A. I've never encountered a case like that.

Q. Doctor, of all the cases that you have dealt with on a personal level, not research, but on a personal level, have you had a number of cases where you were later able to determine were false allegations.

A. If the number is two, yes. I've had two cases where there was a determination that the allegation was false.

Q. That's over 20 years with more than what, a thousand cases.

A. Well, I started doing therapy with kids in 1983, so since that time. I've had two cases in which there was a determination that the allegation that the child made was false.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Counsel.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. In the cases where the false allegations were made, were you the one determining that the child made a false allegation of sexual abuse.

A. In one of them. It wasn't -- I wasn't making the determination. It was an incident where a child made an allegation that he was sexually abused by his father in a fast food restaurant. I don't remember what kind of fast food restaurant. And the father had -- it was a custody dispute between the mother and the father. And the father had videotaped the entire duration of the visit, and the mother was there through most of it. And he videotaped driving in, the beginning to the end. So it captured the whole interaction of him and his child in the visit. And I watched that videotape. And the child said he was molested, and I never saw anything related to that. So that was one.

The other one I didn't make that determination. It was a child who was on a locked psychiatric unit, made an allegation of abuse of a staff person on a particular day. And that staff person was not working on that day and wasn't physically there. So it was impossible for him to have been sexually abused by that staff person.

Q. Now, you're not telling the jury that a parent cannot manipulate children to make false statements for financial gain, are you.

A. No, that was related to the questions that you asked me earlier. I mean, I can't make that statement.

Q. In any of your work as a clinical psychologist, have you ever done any investigation or study of situations where parents have schooled children to steal or lie.

A. Have schooled children to steal or lie.

Q. Yes.

A. So they coached them, trained them to steal or lie.

Q. Yes.

A. Not that I'm aware.

Q. It's not your field, is it.

A. I've -- I'm not aware of any research studies. I have not done any research studying on stealing and lying, at least directly. And I'm not aware of any cases in which a parent had coached their child to steal or lie.

Q. You can go back to the novel Oliver Twist to see examples of situations where an adult --

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as exceeding the scope of the redirect.

THE COURT: The sounds like an argumentative question to me.

MR. ZONEN: I'll object in that way as well.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Okay. Okay.

Q. In any of these cases of false allegations of child sexual abuse, was the target a world-famous celebrity perceived as being very wealthy.

A. I’ve never been involved in a case like that, nor read research related to that.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: No further questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you, Counsel. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Lauren Wallace.

THE COURT: While that witness is coming in, let me remind you that tomorrow afternoon we won’t be in session from 11:30. We’ll release you at 11:30.

And Monday morning, we’re going to have you come in later than normal because we’re going to have some oral argument on some issues. I’ll wait till later in the week to tell you exactly what time, because I need to talk to the attorneys about how long the argument’s going to take. But you won’t be coming in at 8:30. It will be 10:30 or 11:30.

And then Thursday, the 31st, which is a week from this coming Thursday, is a court holiday, so we won’t be in session on that court holiday.

All right. Is the witness here now.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.

THE COURT: Come forward.

When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

LAUREN WALLACE

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I swear.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Lauren Wallace, L-a-u-r-e-n, W-a-l-l-a-c-e.
THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. Good afternoon, Miss Wallace.
A. Hi.
Q. Who is your employer, please.
A. I’m currently self-employed at this time.
THE BAILIFF: She’s got to speak up.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: One thing we’re going to have you do is speak into that microphone. We’ve had a little problem with people hearing.
A. Okay.
Q. Okay.
A. Can you hear me now.
Q. Yes.
A. Okay.
Q. You’re currently self-employed.
A. Yes.
Q. At some time in the past, did you work for a company called Xtra Jet.
A. Yes.
Q. What did you do for Extra Jet.
A. I was the lead flight attendant for Xtra Jet.
Q. And when did your employment cease for Xtra Jet.

A. July 3rd, 2004.
THE BAILIFF: She still needs to scoot up.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. They’re still asking us to have you get closer to the microphone.
THE BAILIFF: Is your microphone on.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Mine is on.
Q. What is Xtra Jet.
A. Xtra Jet is a charter airline company.
Q. And who does Xtra Jet seek as clientele for their services.
A. Basically anyone who can -- who would like their services rendered. They specify particularly towards celebrities and sports figures.

Q. How many planes does Xtra Jet fly, or did Xtra Jet fly during the period, say, 2003, 2004, when you worked for them.

A. They had approximately four different aircraft, two of which were Gulfstreams.

Q. You said you quit working for Xtra Jet in June of ‘04. How long did you work for Xtra Jet.

A. I worked for them approximately two and a half years.

Q. And you said you were chief cabin hostess, is that correct.

A. Yes, chief flight -- lead flight attendant.

Q. Could you describe to me what your duties were as a chief flight attendant for Xtra Jet.

A. My duties entailed ensuring that all the aircraft were up to specifications in regards to emergency equipment, safety equipment; all the dishes and linens and china and crystal and everything on board for -- in preparation for a First Class flight; as well as finding and staffing the right flight attendants for each aircraft.

Q. So you’d supervise other flight attendants.

A. Yes.

Q. And how many other flight attendants did you supervise. Again, we’ll go to the time frame, 2003, 2004.

A. Two other flight attendants other than myself.

Q. Okay. And what were their names.

A. One was -- one’s name was Cindy, and the other girl’s name was Jamie.

Q. Jamie.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And Cindy’s last name, was that Bell. Cindy Bell.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Have you had any background or training as a flight attendant before the time you went to work for Xtra Jet.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And can you tell us a little bit about that.

A. Training entailed a five-day training course in in-corporate aviation. I also had FAA Part 121 training with a different company. And approximately six months of experience prior to coming to Xtra Jet.

Q. As far as supervising the other flight attendants, what would that involve.

A. I basically ensured that their service was -- was better than average; that it was -- they had better than a First Class service; and that they knew what to do in case there was an emergency.

Q. Can you tell me who your immediate boss or supervisor was in that same time period. And I'm going to stick with the 2003, 2004 time period.

A. Yes, Jim Duggan.

Q. And you mentioned the number of jets. What are the capacities, different capacities of these jets that Xtra Jet owns.

A. They carried approximately 12 people.

Q. What kind of configurations in terms of the layout of the floor plan in the jet.

A. They had club seating in them. Sometimes they had seating at tables. Normally there will be two seats immediately upon walking in; one to the left, one to the right. Another one facing that -- those seats. Then may be a table of four. And then maybe a sofa for three. And then two more seating -- seats facing each other, approximately.

Q. Are any of these jets capable of coast-to-coast flight, from, say, California to Miami.

A. Yes.

Q. All of them or just a few of them.

A. Gulfstreams, yes. The other Lear jets I really don't know.

Q. Can you give me a brief synopsis of the day in the life of a flight attendant for a private charter jet such as a Gulfstream on a coast-to-coast flight.

A. First of all, you need to be there two hours ahead of time. And then you need to arrive with all of your catering, the food and everything that the clients requested. In addition to that, all the -- the food for the pilots as well.

You need to make sure the aircraft is clean and that everything is functional in the aircraft. The entertainment system, the drains, the toilet, everything.

And then you wait for the passengers -- or you prepare for the passengers, whatever you think they might want. Coffee, soda pop. And then you wait for the passengers and you greet the passengers. You take off.

Q. And then how long does the flight take from -- again, we'll use California to Miami as an example.

A. Five to five and a half hours.

Q. And over that five to five and a half hours, what are your duties.

A. My duties are, first, to ensure that the passengers are all safe, and should we need to emergency-evacuate, that we're able to do that.

Secondly, it is to cater to the passengers and that they get their food and their beverages, and that they're comfortable and happy.

Q. You mentioned that Xtra Jet -- among the clients that Xtra Jet works with are celebrities.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you personally worked on flights provided by Xtra Jet to Michael Jackson.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And is the individual Michael Jackson in court today.

A. Yes.

Q. Could you identify him for the record, please. Just identify him by pointing, if you would, please.

A. Okay. Mr. Jackson.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If the record could reflect the defendant was identified.
THE COURT: All right.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: How many total flights have you flown with Mr. Jackson on them in which you were the flight attendant.
A. Between 15 and 25.

Q. And were you also the preparation hostess on those flights, the person who prepared the plane for Mr. Jackson.
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me, when was the last time that you flew on a flight with him, or worked on a flight with Mr. Jackson.
A. I believe that last flight was November -- around the end of November. November, I think, 22nd, 2003.
Q. All right. And can you characterize for us your relationship with Mr. Jackson based on those 11-odd flights.
A. It was professional, but on a very friendly basis.
Q. During a five-hour flight, would you serve cocktails if that was requested.
A. Certainly.
Q. Okay. And soft drinks.
A. Yes.
Q. What about meals.
A. Yes.
Q. Snacks, this type of thing.
A. Yes.
Q. What other services would you provide, other than food and beverage.
A. I would ensure that the passengers were warm. I would ensure that the passengers knew if there was going to be turbulence, or if we had to wait to take off. I would give them their jackets, take their shoes away if they requested.

Q. Did you ever work any flights with a family that you -- by the name of Arvizo.

A. I don’t believe so, no.

Q. Okay. Are you aware of other flight attendants at Xtra Jet who did work flights involving Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Who would that be.

A. I know of the two from Xtra Jet, Cindy Bell and Jamie Crow, both.

Q. Both worked with Mr. Jackson.

A. That were employees of Xtra Jet.

Q. So other than food and beverage and helping out with the requests of the passengers, would that pretty much compromise -- comprise your duties, and making sure the safety of the passengers is paramount. Would that pretty much take care of your duties as a flight attendant.

A. That and cleaning, yes.

Q. Okay. How busy would you be during a five- to five-and-a-half-hour flight coast to coast, typically.

A. Depending on the number of passengers, I would not be busy at all, or I would be very busy throughout the entire flight.

Q. And assume that the -- you have a full passenger list on one of the Gulfstreams. How busy would you be during that five-hour flight. I guess my question would be, would you get any downtime during that five-and-a-half-hour flight with a full passenger list on a Gulfstream.

A. It would be safe to say that I would have minimal downtime.

Q. Regarding Mr. Jackson’s -- the preparation of Mr. Jackson’s plane, would he have any special requests.

A. He had special catering orders.

Q. Okay.

A. That is standard with every flight.

Q. And describe what that would be for me, if you could.

A. His precise orders or --

Q. Yes.

A. Or an example of --

Q. How would he like the plane prepared before take-off.

A. Well, as far as having the plane itself prepared --

Q. No, I mean special requests. Any things -- items that he wanted on the plane. Beverages, food, this type of thing.

A. His normal catering request was -- and it may not have been his. It may have been one of his children's or nannies or something. But my trip sheet always had like Kentucky Fried Chicken, and Subway sandwiches some of the time, and sometimes chicken breast with rice pilaf.

Q. Okay. Concerning -- would Mr. Jackson have any special requests regarding alcohol.

A. It was never written on a trip sheet.

Q. Okay. But did you become aware of a special request that he desired when he flew on Xtra Jet regarding alcohol.

A. Yes.

Q. How did you become aware of that.

A. Through another flight attendant.

Q. And who was that.

A. Miss Bell.

Q. And during the flights that you flew with Mr. Jackson, what -- how did you handle -- well, let me back up, first of all, and ask you a foundational question.

Did Mr. Jackson drink alcohol on those flights that you flew with him, the 11 flights.

A. Yes.

Q. All of them.

A. Not all of them, no.

Q. Okay. Can you characterize how many of them he drank alcohol on.

A. Nine or ten.

Q. Can you characterize the amount of consumption of alcohol that he would drink on a given flight.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: How about -- I can tighten that up.

Can you characterize how much alcohol he would drink on a typical coast-to-coast flight.

A. It was different from what I witnessed.

Q. From what to what.

A. Sometimes maybe it was a little bit of wine. And other times it was maybe three six ounces of wine, and then a glass or two of tequila or Tangueray gin. But it -- it wasn't like I looked and said, "That's exactly seven ounces," or anything.

Q. Okay. I'm just asking for your general recollections.

You said a glass or two of Tangueray or tequila. Would he drink out of a glass.

A. Yes, he would.

Q. Would he ever drink wine out of anything other than a glass.

A. Yes.

Q. What would he drink out of.

A. A Diet Coke can.

Q. Did you prepare those cans for him.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Okay. Tell me about that. How did that come about that you would put wine in a Diet Coke can.

A. Miss Bell had informed me that that is something that he did. And so when I initially flew Mr. Jackson, I had emptied out three Diet Coke cans and filled them up halfway with white wine, kept them on ice for him, and had them available for him upon boarding.

Q. Did you serve him wine in a Diet Coke can.

A. Yes. I placed them there for him.

Q. Did he drink it.

A. Yes. Maybe not all of it sometimes.

Q. Would he ever have a mixed drink in a Diet Coke can, such as tequila or Tangueray.

A. Not that I’m aware of, no.

Q. And when you prepared a flight for Mr. Jackson, how often would you prepare these cans with wine in them. You said you did about three.

A. I would make three up, approximately three. And if there was more people in the party, I would make up more than that.

Q. Would other people drink wine out of the Coke cans.

A. Sometimes, yes.

Q. Do you have any specific recollections of someone else drinking wine out of a Coke can other than Mr. Jackson.

A. I believe -- I don’t know his name, but I think he was his cousin or something. I think he was a family member.

Q. A what.

A. I believe he was a family member of Mr. Jackson’s.

Q. You don’t recall his name.

A. No.

Q. Do you recall what he looked like, this individual.

A. He was an attractive younger gentleman. Brown, wavy hair, very full. Dark olive complexion.

Q. Do you know -- can you approximate his age.

A. 22.

Q. When was this flight; do you remember.

A. It must have been around October of 2003.

Q. Miss Wallace, did you ever hide alcohol on any of these flights for Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you hide. What alcohol did you hide for Mr. Jackson.

A. I hid little bottles of Tangueray and tequila, and maybe vodka.

Q. And what are we talking about, the small airplane-type bottles.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that --

A. Those are called minis.

Q. Minis. Okay. And where would you hide those bottles.

A. It depended. Usually in the lav above children’s reach. The lav is the lavatory and the bathroom of the airplane.

Q. And how would Mr. Jackson become aware of the location of the bottles.

A. I would inform him. Initially I informed him. But after a while, upon flying the same aircraft, I figured that maybe he would know they were there for his disposal.

Q. You said, “Usually in the lav.” Where else would you hide bottles.

A. I know once I carried one in my jacket pocket, but he never got it.

Q. Okay.

A. He never knew it was there. It wasn’t for him to really get. I was just going to give it to him, but I never got the opportunity.

Q. And did he ever drink those bottles. Did you ever find evidence that he had ever drunk any of those bottles.

A. Once or twice. Only one or two bottles. It was very rare.

Q. How many occasions -- how many of the flights that you flew on with him did you hide these bottles.

A. Out of the -- let’s see, 20 -- 20 flights we did, they were there maybe 15, 15 of the flights.

Q. All right. 15 times.

A. Yeah.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Thank you. No further questions.

THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good afternoon.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. You were interviewed by the Santa Barbara Sheriffs about this case, right.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you know how many times you were interviewed by them.

A. Once.

Q. Okay. And your understanding was that Mr. Jackson did not want children seeing him drink alcohol, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And it was your understanding that he wanted wine placed in cans because he didn’t want children to see him drinking that wine, right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object. Foundation; hearsay.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you have an understanding as to why Michael Jackson wanted white wine placed in cans on the flights.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You can answer that “yes” or “no.”

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Would you please tell the jury what your understanding was as to why you were putting white wine in cans on the flights.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained; foundation.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did someone ever tell you that Mr. Jackson wanted wine placed in soda cans because he didn’t want children to see it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Why did you hide those little bottles of alcohol so children couldn’t get to them.

A. I wanted to make sure that -- that Mr. Jackson and whomever he decided to inform that there was additional alcohol for grown-ups to drink, that they could at their own disposal in secrecy.
Q. And why did you put white wine in soda cans when Mr. Jackson flew on the flights.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection as before, Your Honor.

THE COURT: No, it’s not -- she’s already testified that the other flight attendant told her to under direct, so I’ll allow the question. I don’t think it’s the same question.
I’m going to have it reread so you know what the question is.
Go ahead, reread it.
(Record read.)
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as foundation.
THE COURT: Okay. I’ll -- go ahead and lay the foundation.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You testified in response to the government prosecutor’s questions that you had talked to Cindy Bell, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And Cindy Bell also worked with you with Xtra Jet, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And Cindy Bell would often work with you on plane flights where Mr. Jackson was a passenger, right.
A. We never worked together, but she was on one flight with him and I was on the others so --
Q. And you discussed with Cindy Bell why Mr. Jackson wanted wine placed in cans, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And you did indicate in response to the prosecutor’s questions that because of what

Ms. Bell said to you, you would put wine in cans, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And Ms. Bell told you in that regard, he didn't want children to see him drinking, right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained; hearsay.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What did Miss Bell tell you in that regard.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember telling the Santa Barbara Sheriffs in your interview that Mr. Jackson didn't want children to see him drinking at all.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know of your own personal knowledge why Mr. Jackson wanted wine placed in cans on these flights.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And what do you know.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, objection.

THE COURT: Calls for hearsay. Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. Do you remember telling the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that you had never observed children intoxicated on flights when Mr. Jackson was a passenger.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection, beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you know the question.

THE WITNESS: I never saw intoxicated children on Mr. Jackson's flights.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. And was it your understanding that Mr. Jackson wanted wine placed in cans because he tends to get nervous on flights.

A. Yes.

Q. And, Ms. Wallace, are you familiar with what is called a "Passenger Profile" for people who fly on Xtra Jet flights.

A. I am aware of this, yes.

Q. Would you please tell the jury what a Passenger Profile is.

A. A Passenger Profile is a profile based on each passenger with their likes and dislikes, their friends’ dislikes -- likes and dislikes, and family’s likes and dislikes.

And they’re notes basically so that if another flight attendant or another person should work with that particular client, that they’re aware of allergies or preferences.

Q. And Mr. Jackson had given the Xtra Jet company some information to put in his Passenger Profile, right.

A. He did not give Xtra Jet any information. It’s -- it’s information that was gathered.

Q. Well, didn’t Mr. Jackson’s Passenger Profile say that white wine in Diet Coke cans is to be prepared for every flight.

A. His profile could have said that.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I just show it to you.

A. Yes, it would.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: Uh-huh. Thank you.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Miss Wallace, have you had a chance to review that Passenger Profile on Michael Jackson that was prepared by Xtra Jet.

A. Yes.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection about whether or not in Mr. Jackson’s Passenger Profile it was specified that white wine in Diet Coke cans are to be ready for every flight.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Had you actually been shown that at some point.

A. I wrote it.

Q. Oh, you wrote it, okay. Okay.

All right. So you’re the one that wrote down "Kentucky Fried Chicken" for all these meals,

right.

A. Everybody has different likes.

Q. Okay. You had "Kentucky Fried Chicken" for breakfast, lunch and dinner, right.

A. Yeah. It's good.

Q. Now, did you do the passenger profiles for Mr. Jackson's children as well.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you wrote down "Paris loves to bake cookies and will try to eat the sugar." Is that what you wrote.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know his children very well.

A. I know them, but I don't think I know them very well.

Q. Did you often see them on flights with him.

A. Yes, I would.

Q. Okay. In fact, they -- most of the flights he took with Xtra Jet, they would be with him, right.

A. Certainly, yes.

Q. Okay. Now, Mr. Auchincloss, the prosecutor, asked you about miniature bottles of alcohol that you would have on the plane for Mr. Jackson, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know why Mr. Jackson wanted to have those miniature bottles on the plane.

A. Mr. Jackson never asked for the miniature bottles to be on the aircraft.

Q. Okay. Well, you brought those miniature bottles on the aircraft for a reason, didn't you.

A. I brought them to better my service rendered to Mr. Jackson.

Q. Do you remember testifying before the Santa Barbara Grand Jury about this.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember telling the Santa

Barbara Grand Jury, “I knew that Mr. Jackson did not like to drink alcohol in front of his children, so I would bring in a little miniature baggy full of little miniature bottles of Tangueray gin and tequila”. Do you remember saying that.

A. Yes.

Q. And you said, “I would put them away, hide them away in the lavatory, and I would sometimes inform him that they were there for his own disposal.” Do you remember saying that.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. When did you first meet Mr. Jackson.

A. I believe I initially met him, it must have been around October of -- maybe it was more like March of 2003.

Q. And when did you last see him.

A. Around the end of November of 2003.

Q. And did you ever meet a physician of Mr. Jackson on any of those flights.

A. No. Not that I know of, no.

Q. You don’t recall that. Okay. Do you recall seeing other people with Mr. Jackson typically on these flights.

A. Yes.

Q. Nannies, for example.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. When you saw his children, would you usually see nannies with them on these flights.

A. Yes.

Q. And other members of -- excuse me. Other members of his family would fly with him from time to time, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And approximately how many seats did an Xtra Jet plane have for one of these types of flights, if you know.

A. Usually -- 12. 12 or 13. One plane at that time carried 13.

Q. And when Mr. Jackson would fly on these flights, would all the seats typically be full, if you remember.

A. Six out of ten times the seats would be full. Sometimes there would be one or two, the empty seats.
Q. Did he often have security people with him.
A. Yes, he did.
Q. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson dozing off on any of these flights.

A. Sleeping, yes, I would.
Q. Okay. Did he often do that.
A. Half the time, yes.
Q. Okay.
A. Maybe seven out of ten times.
Q. Now, you have to get on a plane tomorrow morning, don’t you.
A. Yes, I do. It’s private. It’s a personal trip, so it’s not a work trip.
Q. Well, no further questions, then. Thank you.
THE COURT: Anything further.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just a couple of questions, Your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. How often would Mr. Jackson fly without his children percentagewise in terms of the flights that you were with him.
A. There may have been four or five trips that he didn’t have his children with him.
Q. Did he drink white wine out of Coke cans during those flights as well.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you hide alcohol for him on those flights as well.

A. Yes.
Q. Did he ever drink any of it, if you recall.
A. Out of the --
Q. Of the hidden alcohol.

A. I noticed two or three of the little bottles empty and that was it.

Q. Was it on one of the flights with -- when the children were present, or when they weren't, if you recall.

A. I don't recall.

Q. You said he drank mixed drinks out of a glass. Was that his normal routine.

A. Towards the end of the flight, he would -- if he was going to get into the tequila, or whatever it was, he normally would get a glass, or I would have a glass for him and make it up. But it wasn't every flight. It was pretty rare.

Q. Okay. Could his kids see him drinking at that point, if you were fixing a mixed drink for him.

A. They could if they were looking. But we were very discreet about it. He was very discreet.

Q. Do you know an individual by the name of Dieter Weizner.

A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever flown on Mr. Jackson's flights.

A. Yes.

Q. How often.

A. Maybe three --

MR. MESEREAU: This is beyond the scope.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: He asked questions about who was on these flights.

THE COURT: All right. Overruled.

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. You may answer.

A. Maybe three out of ten times.

Q. What about Ronald Konitzer.

A. I don't recall the name.

Q. How about an individual by the name of Marc Schaffel.

A. I am familiar with Mr. Schaffel.

Q. How many flights was Mr. Schaffel on with Mr. Jackson.

A. Maybe four out of ten.

Q. And this would all be in the 2003, 2004 time frame, or earlier. You tell me.

A. My initial flight with Mr. Jackson, I know that Mr. Schaffel was on board. And, yes, it was in the 2003 -- Mr. Schaffel flew with Mr. Jackson towards the beginning of our flights. And towards the end, I didn’t see him as often.

Q. All right. Thank you. No further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

THE BAILIFF: Should be right outside.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Call Louise Palanker.

THE COURT: Come to the front of the courtroom, please.

When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk here, raise your right hand.

THE WITNESS: Hi.

LOUISE PALANKER

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Louise Palanker. L-o-u-i-s-e, P-a-l-a-n-k-e-r.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good afternoon, Miss Palanker.

A. Hi. How are you.

Q. I’m just fine. How are you.

A. Good.

Q. What is your profession, please.

A. I'm a comedian, writer, producer, teacher.

Q. All right. And how long have you been so employed.

A. About 20 years.

Q. Have you had any association over your 20 years as a comedian with The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Tell me about that, if you would.

A. I was a comedienne there for a while. And during that time there, I helped Jamie on Saturdays during the summer with comedy camp for underprivileged children.

Q. Okay. You said "Jamie." Would that be Jamie Masada.

A. Yes, Jamie Masada.

Q. What is the comedy camp.

A. For two months during the summer, he has about 25 children come in from underprivileged neighborhoods and learn how to become comedians. And at the end of the summer, in September, they graduate and they perform in front of a live audience at night, at The Laugh Factory.

Q. And how often did the comedy camp meet over that two-month period.

A. Every Saturday for about four to five hours.

Q. Do you still work with the comedy camp.

A. No, I started my own program at two Boys & Girls Clubs, which I teach stand-up comedy to children all year long.

Q. And when did you switch over from the comedy camp to the Boys & Girls Clubs.

A. Right after the Arvizo summer. I did both for a little while --

Q. All right.

A. -- for a couple of summers afterwards. But I started my own program in 2000, which was the year Gavin got sick.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Miss Palanker, I show you People's Exhibit No. 49, a photograph. Can you identify that for me, please.

A. That's Gavin, Davellin, me and Star.

Q. All right. And when was this picture taken.

A. That was the day Fritz came as the guest teacher. And I remember he ran off before they could get their picture with him. And that was outside of Laugh Factory after class.

Q. Okay. So was that during one of the comedy camps.

A. Yes.

Q. And that would have been during one of the regular sessions, or during the end of the -- the graduation ceremony.

A. It was -- I'm feeling like it was the third or fourth Saturday of the summer.

Q. And I don't know if you said it, but did you mention what year that picture was taken.

A. 1999.

Q. Okay.

A. Summer of 1999.

Q. How did you come to meet the Arvizo children.

A. They came to audition. I met them the day they auditioned. And then they were chosen to be enrolled in the program.

Q. So there's a selection process for the program.

A. Yes, there is.

Q. How does that work.

A. Probably three times as many children as Jamie has room for have seen the flyers up at their schools and teachers have recommended talented children. And they all come down to The Laugh Factory over a series of two to three Saturdays. And then Jamie makes a final selection, and those children are called and told that they have been -- that they've been selected.

And Jamie -- he never takes one child from a group of siblings. If he takes one, he takes the brothers and sisters.

Q. So what is the criteria for becoming a member of the laugh camp for the children.

A. I think sometimes he looks for particularly talented children. And sometimes he looks for children that he feels would get something out of the program. For instance, if they’re especially withdrawn, he might choose them when you wouldn’t think that he would, but he might choose them thinking that they really need it.

Q. Is there any kind of aspect of these children’s background that makes them eligible for the laugh camp to begin with.

A. He -- he -- I think he recruits from neighborhoods where the children might not have even a chance to come to that part of town. Or sometimes they haven’t even been to Hollywood before.

Q. Okay.

THE COURT: Let’s take our afternoon break. See you at 8:30 tomorrow.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:30 p.m.)

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone.
THE JURY: (In unison) Good morning.

COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, before we get started this morning, there’s one housekeeping matter we -- it might be a good time to take care of.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Your microphone, sir. They can’t hear you.

MR. SNEDDON: I’ll go over here.

Your Honor, a housekeeping matter that we probably should get taken care of. It’s required by the Court rules that we file a transcript of the rebuttal film.

And I have submitted - I have here in my hand, I’ve given defense a copy, in fact, I gave it to them yesterday - an Exhibit 340-A, which would match up to the rebuttal tape. And I’m submitting that as the transcript for that particular exhibit.

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued)

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Miss Palanker.

A. Good morning.

Q. When we left off yesterday, we were talking about the comedy camp and the Arvizos' attendance. During -- and I believe you previously testified that that camp operated for two months in the summer of 1999, and that the Arvizo children were there each weekend, one day a week.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. To your recollection, did they attend every session.

A. I don't think they missed one.

Q. Okay. And were all three of the children members of the comedy camp.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you personally work with them.

A. Yes.

Q. And how did that work. How did you -- what would you do when you would be -- would go with them at the comedy camp.

A. I'm a comedy writer, and primarily I would help the children come up with punch lines for their stories and work on their material with them.

Q. So, they make up jokes and you help them make them funnier.

A. They tell stories from their real life, just like adult stand-up comedians would. They talk about things that they've observed or things that happen in their lives, and we try to twist the material into punch lines to create good pieces of material for the kids that adults will laugh at.

Q. What is the goal of the comedy camp in working with these children.

A. To give the children self-esteem, confidence, creative thinking, things of that nature.

Q. Is it effective.

A. Yes. I believe it is.

Q. And why do you say that.

A. Some of these children don’t really have a voice. They go through their day, no one’s really listening to them. You give that child a microphone and put them on a stage, and everyone is watching them, and it really makes them feel like they matter. And I’ve seen it work.

Q. Did you form any attachment to the Arvizo children.

A. I did, yes.

Q. And how did you find them to be.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: How did you find them to be in terms of their personality.

Well, maybe I’ll back off that question and ask you, why did you form an attachment to these children.

A. These children are --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; opinion.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Goes to this witness’s relationship with the children.

THE COURT: Objection sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, I will be asking that this is foundation for an ultimate question regarding character.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. How would the children -- would you notice how they would arrive at the camp.

A. They came by bus. City bus.

Q. And did you note how they would leave.

A. I believe they -- they left by bus. Took buses home.

Q. Okay.

A. With their mom.

Q. During the Christmas of that year that you met the Arvizos, did you do something special for the Arvizo family.

A. Yes. We -- Fritz Coleman wanted to bring presents to a needy family, and he asked me if I -- if I had any suggestions, and I immediately thought of the Arvizos.

Q. And did you talk with Mr. Coleman about what you were going to do for them that Christmas.

A. Yes. We discussed what we would -- what we would get the family, what we would get for the children, where we would get it.

And then we went to Best Buy, and we bought things. We had them wrapped, and we took them down there.

Q. And what did you buy for the Arvizos.

A. We bought a microwave, a Play Station, several games. Something else for Davellin, because we weren’t sure if she would like the games, and that’s what we did.

Q. Do you recall about how much you spent.

A. Well, a microwave and a Play Station would be $500, $600, perhaps.

Q. And then you said something else for Davellin. Do you recall what that was.

A. I don’t.

Q. And I suspect you split the cost of these gifts with Mr. Coleman.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you deliver them.

A. Yes, we did.

Q. With Mr. Coleman.

A. Yes.

Q. Anybody else.

A. His two children.

Q. And was this before Christmas.

A. It was -- I looked at my calendar, it was the 20th, about that time.

Q. December 20th.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So tell me about delivering these gifts. Tell me how that came about.

A. We drove down there, and before we got out of the car, Fritz’s younger son said he felt ill, so we didn’t spend that much time in the home.

Q. So were all the Arvizos present.

A. I don’t think David was there.

Q. Okay. So Janet, Gavin --

A. Gavin, Davellin and Star.

MR. ZONEN: Excuse me.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know why Mr. Coleman’s son didn’t want to get out of the car.

A. He said he felt sick, and he was scared, a little scared of the neighborhood.

Q. Did you see the Arvizos’ apartment.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Would you describe it for us, please.

A. You walk in. And it’s one room. And I remember there was a mattress on the floor on the left, and a mattress on the floor on the right. And the kitchen area was within the same room. And they had a couple of pictures of the kids drawn, just taped up on the walls.

Q. Were the Arvizos happy to see you.

A. Yes, very happy.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled. She answered. Next question.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And why do you say they were happy to see you. What makes you believe that.

A. The kids started jumping on the mattresses.

Q. Did you bring them any cards.

A. Fritz’s two sons had made them cards.

Q. Drawn the cards themselves.

A. Yeah. They drew the cards, yes.

Q. What did they do with those.

A. They hung them up on the walls.

Q. During the period that the Arvizos were visiting at the laugh -- at the comedy camp, did you ever see their father.

A. Never.

Q. You had never even met him at that point.

A. No, I hadn't.

Q. At the end of the comedy camp, was there -- I believe you mentioned there was a graduation or some kind of party.

A. Yes. There was a performance, and there was -- first it was a dress rehearsal performance one week, and then the following week, say on a Tuesday night, I believe, they were -- the following week was the actual graduation.

So all the kids in the camp, which -- usually the kids who make it to the end of the camp with enough material to perform are about 12 kids. So about 12 kids performed before the regular Laugh Factory lineup.

Q. Did all the Arvizos make the cut.

A. Yes, they did.

Q. And where is that -- so that party takes place at The Laugh Factory.

A. Right.

Q. And about what time of day; do you know.

A. It was about 8:00, between 7:00 and 8:30 at night.

Q. Is it a celebration of sorts.

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Arvizo show up for that.

A. No, he didn't.

Q. Was Janet there.

A. Yes, she was.

Q. At some point -- well, let me strike that.

After the comedy camp was over, did you continue to have a relationship with the Arvizos.

A. I believe we spoke on the phone a few times, but I did not see them until Gavin got ill, which was in June.

Q. So you had -- you had the experience at the summer -- during the summer of '99 with the comedy camp.

A. And then Christmas.

Q. And then Christmas. And then you spoke again when Gavin got ill.

A. Yes. Well, we spoke in between, but I didn't see them.

Q. Okay. And who would you talk to when you'd speak on the phone with the Arvizos.

A. Janet would call and then she would put each of the kids on one at a time.

Q. So tell me about how you found out that Gavin became ill.

A. Janet called me.

Q. Tell me about that conversation.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Offered to explain her conduct which followed this phone call.

THE COURT: All right. I'll overrule the objection. This is not offered for the truth of the matter. It's offered only to explain the conduct that follows.

THE WITNESS: She was screaming, "Gavin has cancer."

Q. BY MR AUCHINCLOSS: Were you upset by this.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And did Gavin go in the hospital after that phone call.

A. He was already in the hospital when she called me.

Q. Did you visit him.

A. Yes.

Q. During Gavin's stay at the hospital, how often would you visit him.

A. Two to three times a week.

Q. And can you describe your relationship with Gavin over this period.

A. I think -- I think we became very close. And it was very difficult, because he was very ill. They gave him very extreme doses of chemotherapy, and he became very, very ill.

Q. Did you become aware that he almost died.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. At some point did you offer some financial assistance to the Arvizo family.

A. When Gavin was in the hospital the first time I went down there before his operation, I realized the gravity of the situation, and I decided to pull his father aside and ask his father what the situation was financially in terms of did they have full medical coverage, and what else needed to be done to help the family get through, get through this crisis.

And I discussed that I was in a position to give them some money so that David could take some time off work and be with Gavin, and so that they could fix up a cleanroom for Gavin.

Q. All right. I have several exhibits I'd like to show you now, Miss Palanker.

I've previously showed counsel Item No. 718 and 719.

If I may approach.

THE COURT: You may.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Miss Palanker, I show you People's Exhibit No. 31. Can you identify that for me.

A. Janet Arvizo.

Q. And I show you People's No. 35. Would you identify that for me, please.

A. David Arvizo.

Q. I show you People's Exhibit No. 718. It appears to be a photocopy, not a very good, one of a check for $10,000, Check No. 114. It's dated 6-15-2000. Can you identify that for me, please.

A. That's my sister's -- excuse me, my sister's my business manager. That's her handwriting, and that's a check that she wrote to Janet.

Q. Okay. And I'm also going to show you a second exhibit, 719, appears to be a Check No. 10893, dated July 10th, 2000. Can you identify that for me, please.

A. That was a check made out to David three weeks after the first check.

Q. Okay. Also a check for $10,000.
A. Yes, for $10,000.
Q. All right. And are these copies, 718 and 719, are they fair representations as far as copies go of the checks that you wrote.
A. I imagine so, but I -- I didn't make them out. I just handed them to David, so I really didn't look at them that carefully.
Q. Okay. But you do recognize them.
A. Yes.

Q. Thank you.
Ask to move Exhibits 718 and 719 into evidence at this time.
MR. MESEREAU: No objection, Your Honor.
THE COURT: They're admitted.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Could we have the Elmo on, please, Your Honor.
THE COURT: "Input 4".
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: "Input 4."
Q. All right. Now, Miss Palanker, we have Exhibit No. 718 that we're showing at this time. I think you've identified that as a check that you wrote. The check indicates it is made out to Janet Arvizo. And I believe you testified that your sister wrote this check.
A. Yes.
Q. And did she do it at your direction.
A. Yes, she did.
Q. It was written to Janet Arvizo. Was that your idea to write it to Janet or did someone ask you to write it to her.
A. David told me to.
Q. All right. And it's endorsed -- if you can see underneath the endorsement, it appears to say, "Thank you, Louise, my Sweetie Wheezy," with a heart over the "Louise."
A. That -- that's Janet.
Q. Why do you say that.

A. That’s her personality.
Q. Okay. Is she prone to endearments like “Sweetie Wheezy”.
A. Very much so.
Q. Okay. And the date of that check, June 15th, is that the date that you delivered it to David.
A. Probably not. There might have been one or two days lag in between my sister handing me the check and me going back down to the hospital. Or sometimes if -- my memory is confusing in terms of this, but it may have been at The Laugh Factory that I handed him the second check, because he started hanging out at The Laugh Factory at night.
Q. “He” being.
A. David.
Q. Okay. Now, I want to go back to the -- how this check was actually provided to the Arvizos and what preceded it.
Tell me why you wrote a check for $10,000 to Janet Arvizo.
A. Why I made it out to her or why --
Q. No, why you gave them a check for $10,000. What was the purpose.
A. Because I was in a position where I could help this family, and I didn’t want to -- I didn’t want Gavin to ever be alone in the hospital. And I didn’t see -- I didn’t see how a family of their means would be able to take off work and be with him if I didn’t do this.
Q. Did you believe this check would help provide funds for his medical -- medical needs.
A. No, I did not.
Q. And why is that.
A. Because he was at Kaiser, and Kaiser provides full hospitalization.
Q. And how did you know that.
A. I knew that because my uncle passed away at Kaiser, and I knew that because I directly asked David if Gavin needed any financial help for medical purposes, and he told me no.

Q. Okay. Now, you mentioned a germ-free room. Tell me about that, that you thought the money might be used for such a purpose.
A. Yes. They told me that Gavin needed a room. And I had seen their apartment and I know they live in one room. And together we -- we determined that possibly Janet’s parents could provide such a room, but that it would have to be fixed up, and the rugs ripped out and tile -- tile floor put down, and some other changes. I don’t remember exactly, but to make sure that dust couldn’t get in, et cetera.
Q. So at the time you wrote the check, was it your impression that David was working at that time.
A. He was working at that time at a Von’s warehouse, to my understanding.

Q. And I believe you testified that you wanted him to take some time off to spend with Gavin.
A. Yes.
Q. Was it your impression that Janet was working at that time.
A. It was my impression that she worked either as a waitress, or a hostess at a restaurant, or something like that. And that if she took time off work, she would lose her job. But he would be able to take time off work and then get his job back.
Q. So tell me about the circumstances surrounding the act of your handing this check over to David. Do you recall where it occurred.
A. It was probably at the hospital. I probably pulled him out of the room and, you know, did it privately.
Q. Okay. But you do specifically recall giving it to David Arvizo.
A. Yes. Janet was seldom at the hospital.
Q. Okay. Did you have an explanation as to why she was seldom at the hospital.
A. In the beginning, I didn’t --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Objection. Calls for speculation; and hearsay.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll strike that and move on.

THE COURT: Could I have both counsel approach for a minute. I want to address a ruling I made a few minutes ago.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE COURT: You can talk.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

All right. Thank you. You may proceed, Counsel.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. I think where we left off, I'm covering the circumstances surrounding your actually giving the check to David.

So you recall that it happened at the hospital, I think you said it was maybe a day or two after June 15th. Do you know who else was around.

A. I don't recall that.

Q. At that point, had anybody of -- any member of the Arvizo family asked you for any money.

A. No.

Q. Had anybody influenced you in any way to give that $10,000 check to the Arvizos.

A. No, it was fairly spontaneous. It's just a decision I made after I saw Gavin and what the situation entailed and would entail for this family, and I just decided on my own to do it.

Q. Did you have any strings attached to this check -- to the giving of this check in terms of what the money had to be used for.

A. No.

Q. And what did you envision the money would be used for.

A. So that he could support his family. He has two other children, and a wife, and so he could support them and not have to be at work every day.

Q. So you didn't have any rules about what they spent that money on.

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you later become aware of some items or some changes or some redecorating, anything of that nature, that occurred to -- that -- well, let me strike that.

Did you later become aware of anything that the Arvizos used that $10,000 for.

A. I sent my contractor down to the home in El Monte, and when the room was finished they wanted me to come see it. And so I did. I went to see the room.

Q. And what did you see when you got there.

Well, maybe I should ask you first, did you go see the room.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what did you see when you got there.

A. It was a very small room in a suburban tract home in El Monte. And they had -- I don’t know what the room looked like before, but it looked like they had bought a nice big bed for Gavin, some bedding.

They explained that the carpet had been ripped up. And I saw that the tile -- and then there was -- the floorboards had been fixed so that it could be dust-free.

And there was some kind of air conditioning/ air filtration device right outside the window. And then a hose and a hole had been created near the floorboards so that the filtrated air could come in.

And they had bought a big television and a DVD player.

Q. Okay. And was that for Gavin’s use.

A. Yes, but I believe the whole family would sit on the bed in there and watch it.

Q. Okay. After you made that charitable gift to the Arvizos, did any member of the Arvizo family start asking you for money.

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that.

A. David.

Q. How often did that occur.

A. Within two weeks of having given him the first check, and very often from that point forward.

Q. Now, you’ve previously identified David. Tell me, when was the first time you met him.

A. At the hospital right before Gavin’s operation, the day that I offered him the money.

Q. And how long had you known him before he started asking you for money.

A. Two weeks.

Q. About two weeks.

A. Yeah.

Q. So tell me how he would do that. How would he approach you for money.

A. He would say -- I don’t remember the exact words, but it would be along the lines of, you know, “We’re really strapped and we’re not going to be able to make rent.”

And he would -- he would -- I don’t know if this is hearsay or not, but he would tell me that Janet had spent all the money.

Q. Did he tell you what Janet had spent all the money on.

A. He told me she was going crazy, and she had spent the money on votive candles and things of that nature, praying.

Q. Did you believe that, that she’d spent $10,000 on votive candles.

A. No, I didn’t.

Q. Where would these conversations take place.

A. At the hospital and at The Laugh Factory.

Q. And so David would sometimes go to The Laugh Factory.

A. At night, yes.

Q. Would he come with Gavin.

A. One -- after Gavin’s operation, he was in the hospital for about a month recovering. And then he had to start his first dose of chemo, so it was several months before Gavin was well enough to come to The Laugh Factory, or at least come between chemotherapy treatments. So at first he -- for several months, he would just come by himself.

Q. And at some point was there a benefit at The Laugh Factory for Gavin.

A. Yes. In October.

Q. So that's October 2000.

A. That's when Gavin was finally well enough to be able to attend.

Q. So prior to the time when Gavin would be -- was well enough to attend, if you can characterize it, about how many times did David come to The Laugh Factory.

A. 15 or 20. Maybe once a week or so.

Q. Was he given free admission, as far as you know.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Why is that.

A. Because Jamie does that for people.

Q. At some time did you give this second check that you've identified to the Arvizos.

A. Yes. I explained to him that I could -- I could gift them each $10,000 per year without being taxed on it.

And when he asked me for a second check, I realized I needed to put some boundaries on the situation, so I told him I could gift him 10,000, as I had already gifted Janet $10,000, and then that would have to be it.

Q. Okay.

A. And I would tell him, "You're going to have to" -- towards the end of, I would say, four to five months into Gavin's illness, I would repeatedly tell him, "You're going to have to figure out how to get your family back into balance, and go back to work or make this work for everyone. Because I'm not going to be able to give you any more money."

Q. Were you concerned about the Arvizos' finances.

A. I was concerned that they weren't managing them very well.

Q. And why did you say that. Why did you believe that.

A. Because he asked me for a second check within three weeks.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Could we have the Elmo turned -- oh, it’s already on. Then just the lights. Thank you.

Q. All right. I’m showing you People’s Exhibit 719, which you previously identified. Is that the second check that was written to David Arvizo, a copy of it, I should say.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And it’s dated July 10th, 2000. Do you know if that’s the date that you gave it to him.

A. Probably thereabouts, because he was acting as if he was fairly desperate to get the funds.

Q. And did you personally give him this check.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you remember where you gave it to him.

A. I believe I gave him that check at The Laugh Factory.

Q. Was anybody else around, if you recall.

A. I think Gavin may have been.

Q. Okay. Was Gavin well enough to go to The Laugh Factory at that period of time, do you know, on July 10th.

A. For some reason I believe he was there. I -- you know, it’s a long time ago. I may have two incidents confused in my mind.

Q. Okay.

A. Because I remember -- I remember something involving Gavin after having given David the second check, but it might not have been that same night. Because I also remember that we had to wait till October to do the benefit because Gavin wasn’t well enough.

Q. All right. Did you have any impression as to what this second $10,000 was going to be used for.

A. The same purposes.

Q. Just for the family.

A. The room had already been fixed up, but he kept telling me they didn’t have any money to live on. They didn’t have any food and clothing.

Q. As far as your contractor goes, do you know if he required to be paid for his services.
A. He charged them $800, which was just his bare costs. He did the labor for free, as a gift to the family, and he charged them $800.
Q. Do you know if David ever paid him that money.
A. I don’t believe he did.
Q. After you gave David the second check for $10,000, did he make any further requests of you.
A. Yes.
Q. More requests for money.
A. Continuously.
Q. Did this cause you some concern.
A. Yes, it did.
Q. Why do you say that.
A. Because it’s very difficult to keep saying no. It’s very awkward. And I had -- I had told him that that was going to be it. It seemed like the wisest thing for me personally to do in terms of the situation. And he just kept asking.
Q. And did these conversations take place at The Laugh Factory.
A. Primarily, yes, they did.
Q. Where else would they take place.
A. At the hospital. He’d pull me aside into a hallway and ask for more money.

Q. Same kind -- you tell me. What kind of -- what kind of requests would he make. How would he word it.
A. “Is there anything else you can do for us. We’re really having a tough time.” That type of language.
Q. Did he ever indicate that he had any ties to any organized crime.
A. Yes.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled. She said, “Yes.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: What did he have to say about that.

A. His brothers were thugs, he told me, and gangsters, and that he disrespected that lifestyle, and wouldn’t live that way himself.

Q. Did you have any impression as to why he’s sharing that impression.

A. He told me a lot of personal things.

Q. Okay. So let’s talk a little bit about the benefit, the first benefit.

A. Okay.

Q. This happened at The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes.

Q. And the approximate date was in October, you said.

A. I looked on my calendar, it was October 3027 26th, 2000.

Q. And do you know whose idea it was to have a benefit.

A. Mine.

Q. All right. And the benefit’s purpose.

A. To raise money for the family to live on.

Q. All right. And what was the -- what was the plan. How was this benefit to take shape.

A. That Jamie periodically does benefits for various causes, be they organized charitable fundraisers or sometimes for an individual family in need. So -- Jamie probably does a benefit every one to two weeks, so he’s fairly schooled in how to pull it off. It’s not that difficult.

You just call the best comics you can think of, and have them donate their services for the evening. Publicize it as best you can. Usually you charge more at the gate than you would on a given night, because it’s a benefit.

And the money from the door is given directly to the benefactors, and Jamie and his club keep the money from the drinks and food.

Q. Okay. And how did the first benefit go.

Was it a success.

A. I believe it was. I don't know exactly how much money was raised, but I would put it in the neighborhood of $800 to a thousand dollars.

Q. Did Gavin attend this benefit.

A. Yes, he did. He performed as well.

Q. How about Star.

A. Yes.

Q. And Davellin.

A. Yes.

Q. Was David there.

A. Yes.

Q. How about Janet.

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Was there a second benefit done under similar terms.

A. Yes, because I would discuss the situation with Jamie concerning David's repeated requests for money, and what we could do. And we ultimately decided sometime in 2001 or around -- around the beginning of 2001 to throw a second benefit for the family.

Q. Now, as far as the first benefit goes, you stated the gate would go to the Arvizo family.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know about how much it would cost to -- as a cover charge or an entry fee to get into The Laugh Factory for such an event.

A. Well, Jamie would know that specifically. I would just be guessing, but I would guess 30 --

Q. I won't ask you to guess.

A. Yeah.

Q. If you have an examination, that's okay.

But if it's a guess, I don't need it.

A. $20 to $30.

Q. Okay. And you also estimated around $800 to a thousand dollars was produced that night for the Arvizos.

A. I think so.

Q. Okay.

A. Once again, Jamie would have a better number for you.

Q. And were you present when that money was given to the Arvizos.

A. The second benefit I was, because there was an incident surrounding it that I recall. The first benefit I don’t recall being present.

Q. Okay. Let’s talk about the second benefit. Whose idea was that.

A. Me and Jamie, again, in talking about the family. He visited them as often as I did, so we were -- we were very involved in this situation together.

Q. So during the time that Gavin had come home from the hospital, I assume he was staying at his grandparents’ house.

A. Yes, he would stay at the cleanroom.

Q. Would you visit him there.

A. No, I didn’t. Just the one time. It was really far from where I live and difficult, you know, to get there. So I would wait until he was back at the hospital and I would visit him there.

Q. And so he would periodically go back to the hospital from his grandparents’.

A. Yes, for his next round of chemo.

Q. Okay. How long would he be in the hospital for a round of chemo.

A. A week or two.

Q. Do you know how many rounds of chemo he had.

A. I’m going to say nine. But I could be wrong.

Q. All right. So, do you know -- can you tell me what -- give me a time frame as to this period of these nine rounds of chemo.

A. About a year.

Q. And do you know about when they began and when they ended.

A. They probably began in July, when he had recovered enough from the surgery, and ended maybe

June of the following year.

Q. All right. At the second benefit, was it a celebration of sorts.

A. It was, but it was also a little bit difficult, because some people felt that the family was just having another benefit because David kept pushing for it.

Q. Okay. Did you have some reservations as well.

A. I was always in favor of doing anything we could for the kids.

Q. Had you formed any suspicions about David at this point.

A. No. Other than that he didn’t seem to hear me in terms of, “I’m not going to be able to give you any more money,” and him -- him trying to become increasingly close.

Q. To you personally.

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. So tell me about the second benefit. Was it as similar to the first, different. You tell me.

A. I think there was less big-name talent, because -- I’m not sure exactly why, but the thing I do remember is that David was insistent that he wanted George Lopez to host it. And he kept pushing for that.

Q. Did George Lopez perform at the first benefit.

A. I believe he did. He had been their coach to get them ready to graduate. He had worked with the three Arvizo children one-on-one, and he was very close to them.

Q. And at the second benefit, did Mr. Lopez perform.

A. No, he didn’t.

Q. Do you know why.

A. I believe he had become -- he and his wife Ann had become very aggravated with David.

Q. Do you know why that was.

A. I don’t -- I don’t know all of the reasons, but one of them had to do with a wallet that Gavin had left at their home.

Q. Okay. So, at the second benefit was David Arvizo there.

A. Yes.

Q. How about the three Arvizo children.

A. Yes.

Q. Was Janet Arvizo there.

A. No.

Q. Did you ever come to understand why she was not there.

A. I would ask -- once I became closer with David and I felt it was appropriate for me to ask, I would ask, and he would tell me, “She’s just having a nervous breakdown. She can’t handle this, and she just prays a lot.” And he would give me all kinds of different reasons that didn’t make a lot of sense to me.

Q. So his reasons wouldn’t always be consistent.

A. They would be different. But I know Janet, and I -- I didn’t understand why she wasn’t present.

Q. Okay. So I think you said that you were present at the time David received the money at The Laugh Factory for the second benefit.

A. Yes.

Q. Where did that take place.

A. Upstairs. There’s a VIP area upstairs where you can see the stage, but there’s also tables and couches, and you can talk and not disturb the performance.

Q. And who was present when that money was given to David.

A. Gavin. I’m not sure if Davellin and Star were immediately present. They were at The Laugh Factory, but they may have been elsewhere.

Q. Was David delivered the money at that time.

A. Yes, he was handed -- he was handed the money in cash and checks.

Q. From --

A. From Jamie.

Q. Do you know if -- either of these benefits, if the children participated in helping out in any fashion.

A. They helped to the extent where -- when you do a benefit, you have -- you have to set up a table in the lobby, so that rather than people purchasing their tickets at the ticket booth, they purchase their tickets from the volunteers sitting behind a table.

And the situation doesn’t have a staff, so Jamie asked me if I would sit behind the table and collect the money from -- from the people as they entered. And I wasn’t comfortable with that situation, and he commissioned the three Arvizo children and David to sit behind the table and collect the money.

Q. All right. So do you know about how much was collected at the second benefit.

A. I think it was about the same amount. $800 to a thousand dollars.

Q. And about what time was it that Jamie gave this money to David, in the evening or the day.

A. 11:30. 11:30 in the evening.

Q. In the evening.

A. Yes.

Q. And tell me about that. Tell me about the circumstances of that.

A. Well, there was some controversy concerning the wallet. And I decided this would be a good time, since me and Jamie and David were all together, to clear up the controversy, because David was very agitated about the situation where he had -- Gavin had left his wallet, they had called George, and said, “There was a wallet left at your house with $300 in it.”

And when Ann found the wallet, there was three dollars in it, and they became irate.

Q. So you’re talking about Ann.

A. Ann and George.

Q. Lopez.

A. Yes.

Q. And they became irate. Why did they become irate.

A. I think they thought that David was lying about the amount of money in the wallet.

Q. Did you confront David at this time about this problem between him and George and Ann Lopez.

A. I did. He still kept calling George and asking him to host the benefit, and they wouldn't return the phone calls. And I said, "David, you need to leave it alone. Just let it go."

And George was going to be doing a live broadcast the following morning. He was a disc jockey at that time. He was going to be doing a live broadcast from a remote location, which radio stations frequently do.

And David wanted to go down there and personally ask George one more time, "You promised you would host this benefit."

And I said, "Don't go down there. He hasn't returned your phone calls. It's pretty clear he's not going to be at the benefit."

But he went down there. And George got up from behind his broadcasting booth and just started screaming at him in front of everybody.

Q. So did you confront David about this problem at that meeting.

A. I had Jamie come up, and I said, "David, is this is a good time to tell us what happened. What happened with the wallet."

And David brought Gavin over, and he said, "Tell him. Tell him how much money was in the wallet."

And Gavin said, "I have a couple of wallets, Dad. I -- I don't -- I don't know what you mean."

And he just kept -- Gavin just kept saying, "I don't know what you mean. I don't know what you mean, Dad. I have a couple of wallets. Which wallet. Which wallet, Dad.”

And David kept saying, “Tell him about the wallet, Gavin.” And he got increasingly enraged at Gavin.

And when Gavin wouldn’t talk about the amount of money in the wallet, David got really frustrated, and angry, and he stood up, and he turned to Jamie, and he said, “I don’t want your money,” and he took the pile of cash and he threw it at Jamie.

Q. Did you get the feeling that -- well, let me strike that.

What happened after that, after the money got thrown at Jamie.

A. Jamie turned and walked away. And David sat back down and his face was red. And I said, “David, I don’t know what’s going on, but you might as well just pick up the money and take it, because Jamie’s not going to take it back,” and so that’s what he did. And we never solved the mystery of the wallet.

Q. All right. So after this second benefit, did you continue to have a relationship with the Arvizos.

A. I think it became less and less frequent, because Gavin was getting well, and he started spending more time with Michael.

Q. Okay. “Michael,” who do you mean.

A. Michael Jackson.

Q. Okay. At some time during the early part of 2003, did you see the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you recognize Gavin in that.

A. Yes. And I had TiVo’d it. And I had been told in advance by a comedian friend that Gavin was in it, so I was prepared to see Gavin.

Q. Do you recall what month that was in 2003.

A. Was it February. Around about that time. January, February.

Q. And sometime after you saw that documentary, did you attempt to contact the Arvizos.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were you successful.

A. No.

Q. Why not.

A. All of their numbers had been disconnected.

Q. So when was the next time you had contact with the Arvizo family.

A. I wrote a note to Janet and sent it to her mother’s house, and she called me within a couple of days.

Q. Do you know if she called you in response to the note.

A. In response to the note and because she felt that she was in trouble.

Q. Do you know if she had received the note. Do you know that.

A. She had heard about the note from her mother.

Q. All right. So do you recall about what time of the month this phone call took place between you and Janet.

A. It may have been late February, early March. I can’t really -- I can’t really pinpoint it.

Q. So tell me about the phone conversation.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll lay a little additional foundation, Your Honor, but it will be offered as a spontaneous statement and as a state-of-mind exception.

THE COURT: The foundation objection is sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Could you tell me about Janet’s demeanor when she called.

A. She was extremely agitated, and she was almost whispering.

Q. Could you tell if she was weeping.

MR. MESEREAU: Pardon me, I couldn’t hear that.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Could you tell if she was crying at the time.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; this is leading.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s foundational.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Can you tell me anything else about her emotional demeanor during this phone call.

A. She may have been crying at some point in the conversation. She was very frightened.

Q. Was -- can you characterize her level of emotion in relation to Janet’s normal demeanor.

A. Well, Janet’s a very emotional person, and -- but this was different. She’s usually emotional in a very ebullient, happy, charming type of personality. And this was fear. This is fear-based agitation.

Q. Were you concerned.

A. It was an extremely disturbing phone call.

Q. Tell me what she said.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Spontaneous statement. Also offered for the state of mind of one of the victims. Or I should say -- well, of Janet Arvizo.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll allow the statement.

THE WITNESS: She started by saying, “Wheezy, if you have caller I.D., this is not a safe line. Don’t call me back here. They’re listening to everything I say.”

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did she go on to tell you more.

A. She said, “These people are evil. They’re keeping us.”

I would say, “Where are the children.”

“The children are with me.”

I said, “Are the children in school.”

She said, “No,” and that’s when she started crying.

I said, “Can I come and see you.”

She said, “No.” She wanted me to come and get them and meet them at --

THE COURT: Just a moment. Now you’ve gone beyond the proposed --

THE WITNESS: Oh, sorry.

THE COURT: You’ve gone beyond your offer of proof. And I’ll stop her at that point. And I’ll advise the jury that the statements that the witness just related to you that Janet said are to be used by you only for the purpose of establishing Janet’s state of mind, not for the truth of the matter that Janet stated. All right. You cannot continue with the way you’re doing it. Go ahead, next question.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I offer it under the spontaneous exception --

THE COURT: I’ve accepted that, but you’re now into a lengthy conversation. The spontaneity has left. Start with another question immediately.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. So did she explain any further what was causing her agitation.

MR. MESEREAU: Same objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Were you concerned after this phone call.

A. Yes, I was concerned enough to call my lawyer immediately following the phone call.

Q. Why were you concerned.

A. She told me they were going to send her --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Offered to explain this witness’s conduct.

MR. MESEREAU: -- hearsay.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did you do anything. Did you take any action after this phone call.

A. I told her to, “Call me tomorrow at noon,” and I would meet her at a location that we had predetermined.

Q. And did you ever receive the phone call.
A. No, I didn’t.
Q. I should say from Janet the following day or any other day after that --
A. No, I didn’t.
Q. -- during that time period.
Did you take her remarks seriously.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Did you call anybody after this phone call.
A. Just my lawyer.
Q. Why did you call your lawyer.
A. I felt that they were being held against their will.
Q. And did you consult with your lawyer about this subject.
A. He told me that --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. This is hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Miss Palanker, over the years that you’ve known the Arvizos, have you had an opportunity to interact with Janet -- with Janet Arvizo under a variety of circumstances.
A. Yes, I have.
Q. What type of circumstances.
A. I visited -- I have seen her the whole summer at The Laugh Factory, probably three to four times at the hospital, and many, many phone conversations during her divorce from David.

Q. Have you had an opportunity to interact with her children, the Arvizo children, each of them.
A. Yes, I have.
Q. Also under a variety of circumstances.
A. Yes.
Q. Have you formed any affection for Janet Arvizo.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s offered as a foundational on -- for character evidence.

THE COURT: The objection was leading. It’s sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Have you formed any emotional bonds -- well, have you formed any -- let me just make it open-ended. How would you characterize your relationship with Janet Arvizo.

A. I feel that she’s a lovely, caring person.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I guess the question -- you have to answer the question specifically. How would you characterize your relationship with Janet Arvizo. Without saying what you think about her, how would you characterize your relationship.

A. We’re friends.

Q. And how would you characterize your relationship with Gavin Arvizo.

A. Friends.

Q. Davellin.

A. Friends.

Q. Same with Star.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you continue to communicate with the Arvizo family.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Has Janet Arvizo -- has Janet Arvizo ever asked you for money.

A. No.

Q. Have you ever had the impression that she was interested in your money.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Improper opinion; relevance; foundation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s a fairly --

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: No.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: How would you characterize your ability to judge character.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance;

improper opinion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Foundation for -- all right.

Q. Miss Palanker, during your period of time that you've known Gavin Arvizo, have you been able to form an opinion about him concerning his character for honesty.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And what is that opinion.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: He's been honest in the face of others wishing him not to be.

Q. BY MR AUCHINCLOSS: So you believe he is an honest person.

A. Yes, I do.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning.

A. Hey, how are you.

Q. Fine, thanks.

Miss Palanker, my name is Tom Mesereau, and I'm here to speak for Michael Jackson.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. You've testified to your opinion about the character and honesty of Janet Arvizo.

A. Yes.

Q. You've also testified to your opinion about the character and honesty of Gavin Arvizo, right.

A. Right.

Q. Do you know anything about the J.C. Penney lawsuit.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, I'm going to move to strike the question that counsel raised. You've testified to your opinion about the character and honesty of Janet Arvizo. She's never testified about that. I never asked her any questions concerning that.

THE COURT: That was his question, though. Your objection is overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you know that Gavin Arvizo and Janet Arvizo sued J.C. Penney stores when Gavin was caught with unpaid merchandise in the parking lot, and that both claim that security guards at J.C. Penney's pulled Janet's breasts out of her blouse, squeezed her nipple 10 to 25 times --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. 403, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, what's the objection.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. 403, as well as improper.

MR. MESEREAU: I think the door is opened, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: As well as improper impeachment without a good-faith basis. I have a good-faith basis.

MR. MESEREAU: And I think they've opened the door.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let's be sure about one thing. Even though I allowed your question, there's been no character testimony allowed as to Janet Arvizo. Understood. You successfully objected to that.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MESEREAU: Now, I'll limit my question --

THE COURT: Just a moment. I've got to scroll back. I wanted to see something else. But I've got to capture it here. If you'll bear with me a moment.

The second thing is the objection under 403, as to going into the J.C. Penney case, is sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor. May I inquire, Your Honor, with respect to the character testimony of Gavin, is it still precluded.

THE COURT: No. You know, I think maybe it would be better if you approach so we don't talk in front of the jury for a second, so I can give you some limitations on your questions.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

THE COURT: All right. I think we're ready to proceed again.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Miss Palanker, did you know that in the J.C. Penney lawsuit, Gavin Arvizo claimed that at the age of eight he had taken merchandise out of J.C. Penney that was not paid for, and run into the parking lot so he could trick his father into purchasing it.

A. No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Form of the question; "did you know."

THE COURT: You should say, "Have you heard," but I'll allow the question.

THE WITNESS: No, I didn't know that.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Would it be accurate to say you don't know anything about that lawsuit. Right.

A. I knew something of it, but they had told me they were not allowed to talk about it.

Q. Did you ever learn how much money, if any, was recovered by the Arvizo family in that case.

A. No, I didn't.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Relevancy as to credibility; irrelevant.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer's in. Next question.

MR. MESEREAU: May I see those exhibits, Your Honor. Are they -- oh, here they are. Thank you.

Q. Miss Palanker, referring you to Exhibit 719, which is the $10,000 check that you wrote to David Arvizo, okay.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Now, it says on the check that he’s living at Ramer Street in El Monte, California. Was that your understanding when you wrote that check.

A. I would just ask him how he wanted the check made out or who he wanted it -- where he wanted it sent or -- I don’t remember.

Q. I notice the date is July 10th, the year 2000. And this is the second $10,000 check you had written, right.

A. Okay.

Q. The first one you wrote to Janet Arvizo on June 15th, 2000.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Right.

A. Yes.

Q. So there’s really about a, what, three-week difference --

A. Right.

Q. -- between the two.

I don’t see any address for Janet on the 3050 check to her, but I notice that David’s address is Ramer Street.

Did you ever question where he was living at the time.

A. Nope.

Q. You just put on what he wanted; is that true.

A. Yeah, I did.

Q. All right. Now, you testified that David asked you to make out the first check to Janet, true.

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And you testified that you wanted to make the second check out to David for tax reasons, is that correct.

A. Right.

Q. In other words, he wanted you to write a second check to Janet, but you couldn’t do that without paying a gift tax because it was over the $10,000 limit, right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE WITNESS: He didn’t ask me to.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Pardon me.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: He didn’t ask me to. When he started asking me for more money, I told him that it would have to be made out to him, so he never asked me to make out a second check to Janet.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Now, you testified in response to the prosecutor’s questions that David, to your knowledge, never paid the repairman who fixed up Gavin’s room in El Monte, right.

A. That no one from the Arvizo family had paid him.

Q. So it wasn’t just David who didn’t pay them, Janet didn’t pay the person either.

A. He wasn’t paid.

Q. He just wasn’t paid, period.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, at some point you learned that both of these checks were deposited into Janet’s mother’s bank account, right.

A. I only learned that after the private investigator informed me of that.

Q. And that was an investigator for the defense, right.

A. For -- yes. Yes.

Q. And you don’t know whether David even had check-writing ability on Janet’s mother’s bank account, right.

A. I didn’t know any of those types of particulars, no.

Q. So realistically, you don’t know whether David even had the capacity to write a check on any of the $20,000 that you gave the Arvizos, right.

A. I never asked for any accountability. I just gave the money.

Q. Okay. Okay. Did you ever ask Janet, “Janet, why didn’t you pay the fellow who repaired the room for Gavin.”

A. I discussed it with the contractor, when I found out that he had not been paid. I said, “I’ll pay you.” I said, “Would you like me to check into that.” I just couldn’t believe that he hadn’t been paid, based on the amount of money that I had given them.

And I said, “Would you like me to call them.” He said, “No, just -- let’s just let this be my gift to Gavin.”

Q. So he decided that he would just donate his work at that point.

A. Yes.

Q. But your understanding was that when he did the work, he was expected to be paid, correct.

A. Oh, yes. Yes.

Q. Now, in response to the prosecutor’s questions, you indicated that David had called the Lopezes to talk about the $300 in the wallet, right.

A. Yes.

Q. But when you were interviewed by the Santa Barbara Sheriffs, you told them that Gavin had called the Lopezes to talk about that, didn’t you.

A. I wasn’t there. So I don’t know which one of them called. So I may have told the story differently.

Q. Okay. Would it refresh --

A. It wasn’t anything I witnessed.

Q. So you don’t really know which one called.

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Okay. I’m not trying to press you on this.

Is there a reason why you told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that Gavin called the Lopezes to complain.

A. I don't recall a reason, no.

Q. Okay.

A. One of them -- I may have said that because it was Gavin's wallet.

Q. Okay. Okay.

THE COURT: Is this a good place for our break.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, sir.

PLAINTIFF’S WITNESSES	DIRECT	CROSS	REDIRECT	RECROSS
PALANKER, Louise	3101-A	3115-M
	3129-A (Further)

THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Miss Palanker, I’d like to ask you a couple of questions about your interview with the Santa Barbara sheriffs on January 7th, 2005. Okay.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. You’ve told the sheriffs that you met the Arvizo family probably around ‘98 or ‘99, right.

A. Right.

Q. Do you know which year it was, do you think.

A. It was 1999. I’ve since had a chance to look at a calendar.

Q. Okay. And obviously you met them at The Laugh Factory --

A. Yes.

Q. -- right.

Okay. Now, you told the sheriffs the following, when you were discussing giving the Arvizos $10,000, okay. You said, “I gave him a check,” “him” being David, “a check for $10,000, and he accepted that. But the thing was, that a few weeks later, he was asking for more money, so that’s when I started going” -- and you said, “That was the thing where I went out of balance with this family.” Sound right.

A. I felt the family was out of balance.

Q. Yes.

A. Yeah.

Q. And then you mentioned Janet, and you talked about what was happening, and you said, “I believe the kid -- and the kids collaborated in what she was saying. I just wanted to be out of it.”

Clearly when you talked to the sheriffs, you were including Janet in your problems with the Arvizo family, weren’t you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I don’t recall. They were all a family. There were five of them.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You told the sheriffs, “This family can be as whacky as they want to be,” right.

A. I don’t recall saying that or what I would have meant by that, because you’re saying it to me out of context.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I just showed you the transcript of your interview.

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: There’s several things in here that say “inaudible,” so I’m having a difficult time remembering what the intent of this passage was because I was talking casually, so I don’t recall.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Let me just have that.

Q. Have you had a chance to review those pages of transcript.

A. Yes.

Q. And do they refresh your recollection about your interview with the Santa Barbara sheriffs.

A. Not really.

Q. Do you recall making statements to the Santa Barbara sheriffs on or around July 7th, 2005.

A. Yes.

Q. And were you at a meeting with the sheriffs.

A. Yes. They came to where I was working, yes.

Q. Okay. And you don't recall saying, "This family can be as whacky as they want to be".
A. It was probably --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, I'm going to object and move to strike. I believe counsel misspoke when he said "July 7th, 2005."
BAILIFF CORTEZ: Can't hear you, sir.
MR. MESEREAU: Pardon me, January 7th. I did misspeak. My mistake. Let me restate the question.
Q. You do recall being interviewed by the sheriffs on January 7th, 2005, right.
A. Yes.
Q. And do you recall making general statements to the sheriffs about the Arvizo family.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall telling them that you "went out of balance with this family".

A. No.
Q. You don't recall making those statements at all.
A. That was not the intent of what I had said.
Q. Okay. Did you say that.
A. I said I felt that something had gone out of balance; something was out of balance within that family.
Q. Okay. And do you recall, referring to Janet, saying that you believed the kids were collaborating in what she was saying.
A. No, I don't.
Q. Okay.
A. There's several things in there that are marked "inaudible," and so I know I never said anything to that extent.
Q. Okay. Do you recall saying, "This family can be as whacky as they want to be".
A. I'm a comedian, and I'm sure I was talking casually about something involving the family being out of balance.
Q. Okay. Okay. Do you recall telling the Santa Barbara sheriffs that Janet wanted to move -- take her kids and move into your home.

A. No, I never told them that.
Q. You never told them anything like that.
A. No.

Q. Okay. Have you ever told that to any sheriff at any time.
A. No. She wanted me to pick them up at one point so she could talk with me about what was happening in her situation.
Q. Did you know you were being tape-recorded in this discussion.
A. No, I don’t think I did.
Q. Do you remember telling them that, “I know that Janet’s unbalanced. I think she’s totally bipolar”.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Improper opinion.
THE WITNESS: Do I answer.
THE COURT: Overruled.
(To the witness.) I’m thinking.
(Laughter.)
THE COURT: You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I’m not a psychiatrist, but she -- she’s very excitable.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: But do you remember telling the sheriffs the following: “I know that Janet’s unbalanced. I think she’s totally bipolar. Something -- the behavior from the children from the family was so over the top all the time”. Do you remember saying that.
A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. Do you remember telling the Santa Barbara sheriffs when you were talking about letters you received from the Arvizos, “You don’t just get one letter from them. You get five letters from them. You don’t get one phone call. You get five phone calls. A message from Janet on your answering machine can last five minutes.’ She mimics types of messages on the phone.”

You mimicked for the sheriffs her messages on the machine. Do you remember that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Is that something you said.

A. Yes. I was exaggerating. I didn’t know I was being taped.

Q. Do you remember telling the Santa Barbara sheriffs, when you didn’t realize that you were being recorded, “Janet would sell them at the benefits, then sell them at the hospital, and David was never at The Laugh Factory when the children were coming”.

A. “Sell them”. I don’t remember saying that, no.

Q. Okay. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you a transcript of your recorded statement.

A. Okay.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: It says “inaudible,” and I don’t know what I was referring to.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Have you had a chance to review that page.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you recall telling the sheriffs --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Counsel, may I see that.

MR. MESEREAU: Sure.

Let me withdraw that question. Let me start again.

Q. You’ve had some meetings with the prosecutors before you came in to testify, true.

A. Over the phone.

Q. And you talked to some Santa Barbara sheriffs over the phone as well, correct.

A. I talked to the sheriffs in person.

Q. Did -- at any time, did any of them tell you that your conversation with the sheriffs had been recorded.

A. I don’t believe so.

Q. Okay. Is today the first time you ever realized that they had recorded you without your knowledge.

A. No, I found out a couple days ago.

Q. Who told you.

A. Ron.

Q. Prosecutor Zonen.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Okay. Do you recall telling the officer, “Janet would sell them at the benefits, then sell them at the hospital, and David was never at The Laugh Factory when the children were coming”.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, I’m going to object and ask counsel to notify the witness when there are inaudible portions of the statement that he is reading.

THE COURT: I don’t think he’s required to do that. But the question is -- all right. You may answer the question, but I know you won’t remember it, so I’ll have it reread.

THE WITNESS: I believe that the first portion of that statement is mistyped.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

A. The second portion of that statement is correct.

Q. Okay. So you don’t think you told the sheriffs, “Janet would sell them at the benefits, then sell them at the hospital”.

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Okay. Do you remember telling them that Janet was never at the hospital.

A. Yes, I do. I think it may have been “seldom,” now that I’m thinking of how they would have mistyped it.

Q. Do you remember being asked if Janet had ever approached you for money in that phone conversation -- excuse me, in that interview.

A. Say it again. I was just thinking about my last thought. I’m sorry.

Q. Okay. In that interview on January 7th, 2005, with the Santa Barbara sheriffs, do you remember being asked if Janet had ever personally approached you or asked you for money.

A. I told them she hadn’t.

Q. No, you have to answer my question, please.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you remember being asked that question.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you remember responding, “It was always David or it was the children being coached to ask me for a laptop”.

A. I felt that Gavin had been coached to ask me for a laptop.

Q. Did Gavin ask you for the laptop.

A. He would go like this (indicating), because I had promised him one, so he was reminding me.

Q. So you were asked by the officer, “What do you mean by coached.” Do you remember that.

A. Yes.

Q. And you said, “being coached to tell me that they hadn’t gotten any Christmas presents (inaudible)”.

A. Star had told me that, yes.

Q. Did you believe Star when he told you they hadn’t gotten any Christmas presents.

A. I didn’t, really. I wasn’t sure. A lot of people were giving them gifts at that time.

Q. Did you think Star was being coached.

A. I did.

Q. Okay. And how do you know a lot of people were giving them gifts around the same time that Star said, “We don’t have any Christmas presents”.

A. I don’t know. I just know that people visited them, comedians visited them, and it was Christmastime, so I felt that he -- they probably would have gotten something.

Q. Okay. And in discussing Gavin asking for a laptop, you told the sheriffs, “But he’s right next to David asking for things. The father should say, ‘Honey, don’t ask for anything. She’s being very generous.’” Do you remember saying that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What did you mean by that.

A. I had just given David a second check for $10,000 within a three-week period of time, and I felt that David should have told Gavin, “We’ll get you the laptop, Honey. It’s taken care of.”

Q. And this is when you thought Gavin was being coached to ask you for the laptop.

A. Because David was right there and he didn’t stop him.

Q. But you don’t know if his mother coached him at all, do you.

A. His mother wasn’t there.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Speculation.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. She did answer, though.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Do you recall saying, “And -- and David was never at The Laugh Factory when the children were coming”. Do you recall saying that.

A. During comedy camp. I recall saying that.

Q. That was referring to comedy camp.

A. Yes.

Q. Janet was always at the comedy camp, right.

A. Yes.

Q. At The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And when did you learn there was a problem with George Lopez.

A. David told me about it at The Laugh Factory.

Q. And do you remember -- do you remember telling the Santa Barbara sheriffs with respect to George Lopez the following: “I guess she had left a message on her machine screaming something that they were taking advantage of her child and that she didn’t want to have anything more to do with them and David.”

A. Yes, I --

Q. Do you remember.

A. I remember saying that, yes.

Q. And you were referring to Janet, correct.
A. I was referring to Ann Lopez.
Q. Okay. Weren’t referring to Janet at all.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Do you remember saying to the sheriffs, “Janet always put him up to it, and he had to do what she told him to do”.
A. No.
Q. Remember saying those words.
A. No, I don’t.
Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you the transcript.
A. Okay.
MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes.
THE WITNESS: All right.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had a chance to look at that portion of transcript.
A. Yes, I have.
Q. Does it refresh your recollection about what you said.
A. No. I think it’s a very inaccurate depiction of what would have been said.
Q. So you don’t think you said, “Janet always put him to it, and he had to do what she told him to do”.
A. No, I don’t.
Q. Okay. Now, to your knowledge, did Jamie

Masada have any involvement in the dispute with George Lopez.
A. To the extent where David told both Jamie and I had what had transpired.
Q. And did Jamie try to solve that problem, if you know.
A. Yes, he did.
Q. You knew the Arvizos had been at George Lopez’s house; is that correct.

A. Yes.
Q. How did you learn about that.
A. When they told me about the incident with the wallet. And he may have known that they had them over from time to time.
Q. And at some point, you told the sheriffs you thought David had made Gavin call and say the money was in the wallet, right.
A. Yeah, I was trying to remember, but I don’t remember.
Q. Do you remember saying that.
A. I probably said that, yes.
Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I just show you the transcript.
A. I think I know -- I think I know what I would have said. I would have said that I thought David had Gavin call, but I’m not sure who called.
Q. Okay. Do you remember telling the sheriffs, “These people are teaching their kids to lie”.

A. No, I don’t.
Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you a portion of the transcript of your recorded statement.
A. Okay.
MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had a chance to look at that portion of the transcript.
A. Yes, I have.
Q. Does it refresh your recollection about what you told the sheriffs.
A. Yes, it does.
Q. And what did you tell them.
A. That that would have been George and Ann’s suspicion.
Q. So George and Ann Lopez suspected that the Arvizos were teaching their kids to lie.
A. That would have been my understanding of what was going on.
Q. Okay.

A. Because they found a wallet and there was only three dollars in it.

Q. Right. Okay. Now, you indicated that David told you that Janet had spent the money that you had generously given them.

A. No.

Q. What did you say about that.

A. Oh, that David told me that.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And did he tell you what he had thought she had spent it on.

A. Votive candles.

Q. Anything else.

A. I can’t recall anything else he said.

Q. Well, he didn’t really just tell you she’d spent $20,000 on votive candles, did he.

A. He said, “She’s going crazy and she can’t cope with this situation, and she’s buying a lot of statues and votive candles.” I don’t remember -- he -- it was one big blurry sentence that didn’t make a lot of sense to me, considering the amount of money.

Q. And you did tell the sheriffs, in referring to the -- what the Arvizos had done with your money, “They bought him a giant, like, flat-screen picture and picture T.V. and DVD player. You know, a kid at that point, five years ago, doesn’t really need more than a VHS.” Do you remember that.

A. Yes, I did say that.

Q. And were you upset that your money had been spent that way.

A. I wouldn’t use the word “upset.” I was concerned that they weren’t going to be very good at budgeting their money.

Q. So you weren’t complaining that they should have spent it on a VHS.

A. No, it was just a thought in my head.

Q. Well, your thought in your head was, “Why spend the money on a flat-screen picture T.V. and a DVD player,” right.

A. That was my thought. I didn’t articulate that to them.

Q. You didn’t articulate that to the Arvizos.

A. No, I didn’t.

Q. You didn’t think it was your place to tell them how to spend it, right.

A. I really didn’t, no.

Q. You also told the sheriffs you think Jamie Masada is a pathological liar, right.

A. It was hyperbole. I had a falling-out with him, and his English is difficult to understand and sometimes he doesn’t recall events correctly.

Q. But you told them, “I think Jamie is a pathological liar,” correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object and move to strike. Mr. Masada’s character is not in evidence -- is not in issue here.

MR. MESEREAU: I think the prosecutor did bring out testimony about Mr. Masada throughout his examination.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

THE WITNESS: I -- I said something along those lines, because he sometimes doesn’t recall things. But I’m a comedian, so --

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Well, but just not recalling things doesn’t make you a pathological liar, right.

A. I’m not in a place to really make that diagnosis, so --

Q. Well, you told them, “I think Jamie’s a pathological liar,” right.

A. I may have said those words.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection to look at the transcript.

A. No, I may have said those words.

Q. I’m trying to find out if you did, okay.

A. I probably did. But I was exaggerating.

Q. Okay. You talked about Jamie Masada and

David, and you said that Jamie told you David wanted to set up a committee to get more money, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you said, with respect to Jamie and David, “One of them is telling the truth. The truth is somewhere in the middle,” right.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And the officer said, “Who do you believe to be the truth.” And your response was, “I think Jamie is a pathological liar,” right.

A. Well, it’s difficult to say in that situation. I still don’t know the truth, so it’s difficult to say.

Q. Well, let me ask you this, if you recall the conversation. I know you didn’t know they were recording you.

You could have responded, “I think David is a pathological liar,” but you didn’t. You said, “I think Jamie’s a pathological liar,” right.

A. Right.

Q. And then the officer said, “Jamie is.” And you said, “Yes.”

Now, that’s not just hyperbole, is it.

A. Sometimes he confuses incidents.

Q. Do you remember after you said, “I think Jamie is a pathological liar,” the officer said, “Jamie is.” And you said, “Yes”. Do you remember that.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So you did say that, right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; cumulative.

THE COURT: Asked and answered; sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What do you recall about the idea that a committee would be formed to raise more money.

A. Well, I had reason to believe that a few years prior to David asking me for more money, there had been some kind of committee at The Laugh Factory set up to help comedians that needed help. So the word “committee” was familiar to me in that there had been a committee at The Laugh Factory that was designed to give money to comedians in need. But I think the committee didn’t sustain itself and had been long since dissolved.

So, that’s what made me think that Jamie might have said that to David; that there was a committee that could decide to give the family more money. But there wasn’t a committee, to my knowledge. And Jamie insists that David made it up to try to get more money from me, so I really don’t know where the truth is.

Q. Okay. In this interview, do you remember telling the Santa Barbara sheriff that, “Janet needs to see a psychologist”.

A. No.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you the transcript.

A. Okay.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had a chance to look at that transcript.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection about what you told the Santa Barbara sheriff.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Did you tell them that, “Janet needs to see a psychologist”.

A. I told them that I had told David during the periods of time when Janet was not appearing at the hospital, and I found that to be very peculiar, that if she couldn’t be -- if she couldn’t be there for her son, that she might need to see a psychologist, because she was -- it didn’t seem like natural mother behavior.

Q. Okay. Now, with respect to Janet, you told the Santa Barbara sheriff that anytime the Arvizos got someone’s phone number, they would use it, right.

A. They liked making phone calls.
Q. And who do you know that they used to call besides yourself.
A. They called Jamie. Chris Tucker. George Lopez. And they called Jay Leno.
Q. And you -- excuse me. Something in my throat.
You told the sheriffs, “I have people call me at home and say, ‘What do you want me to do with these people.’ They won’t stop calling,” correct.
A. That was concerning the Jay Leno incident.
Q. Did Jay Leno tell you they won’t stop calling him.
A. He told me they had left about three messages on his voice mail.

Q. Okay. And you told the sheriffs you took David aside and said, “Stop calling all these people,” right.
A. I said specifically, “I’ve been asked by Jay for you to stop calling Jay.”
Q. Okay. Now, are you -- have you ever heard any recorded phone conversation between the Santa Barbara sheriffs and Jay Leno in this case.
A. No, I haven’t.
Q. Okay. Have you discussed what’s on that recorded conversation with any prosecutor.
A. No, I haven’t.
Q. Did you tell the prosecutors in your meeting that Jay Leno had asked you to tell these people to stop trying to contact him.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: Yes, I told them that.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Who did you tell that to.
A. The detectives that interviewed me.
Q. Okay. Do you know approximately when you told them that.
A. It would have been Craig, when -- a few months ago.

Q. Would that be Craig Bonner.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And where did that meeting take place.

A. At a recording studio.

Q. Is that in Los Angeles.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And who was at that meeting.

A. Me and Craig and someone he -- another detective that he brought with him.

Q. Okay. Now, when you told the sheriffs, “People call me at home and say, ‘What do you want me to do with these people. They won’t stop calling,’” that sounds like it’s more than just Jay Leno, doesn’t it.

A. But I wouldn’t have said that, because I was specifically talking about Jay.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I just show you what is in the transcript.

A. Okay.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had a chance to look at that passage.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection about what you told the Santa Barbara sheriffs.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. And you said “people” call you. You didn’t just limit it to Jay Leno, right.

A. No. I said, “Jay called me at home.” So that’s a mistype.

Q. That’s a mistype.

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Did you remember telling the Santa Barbara sheriffs, “I don’t know who’s putting the kids up to all the phone calls”.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And did you say that because you knew that the Arvizo children were calling celebrities by phone.

A. I did know they were calling. I didn’t know it was Gavin’s initiative - Gavin likes to pick up the phone and call people - or if they were being asked by their parents to do it.

Q. Okay. So you told the sheriffs, “They would go over to his house anytime they encountered a celebrity if they felt to be important. They would go over the top with cards and phone calls. And at first I thought, after I found out what -- maybe they saw celebrities as a lifeline to get out of her situation -- to get her out of her situation that she had gotten into at 16.” Do you remember saying that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. You’re referring to Janet Arvizo, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. You were referring to the fact that Janet Arvizo became -- got married at the age of 16, right.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And what you were telling the sheriffs was you thought Janet and the family were trying to latch on to a celebrity to get out of their situation, true.

A. Latch on to anyone who could help them.

Q. Okay. You told the sheriffs, after Gavin got ill, you rarely saw Janet, right.

A. Right.

Q. But you stayed in touch with her by phone, didn’t you.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, the prosecutor asked you some questions about Janet talking to you on the phone and you detected she was scared, right.

A. Yes.

Q. She wanted you to meet her in Van Nuys,

correct.

A. In Sherman Oaks.

Q. Okay. Just -- you told the sheriffs she wanted to meet you in Van Nuys, Van -- Ventura, at Von’s, correct.

A. Yeah. That would be Sherman Oaks.

Q. Okay. Okay. And you told the sheriff that she wanted you to come and get them, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you were on your way out the door, right.

A. To do something else, yes.

Q. And you said, “I didn’t really want something about the Arvizos.” You were afraid of David,” And “I just didn’t want them at my house.”

Do you remember that.

A. Right.

Q. She wanted you to take them to your house.

A. Yes, she did. Yeah.

Q. Do you recall either David or Janet wanting you to take Davellin and Gavin to a movie set.

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Well, at some point you told the sheriffs you thought David had made inappropriate remarks to you, right.

A. Oh, are you talking about when we went to see Adam Sandler.

Q. I’ll ask you about that for sure, but let me just stick to what I asked you first.

You did tell the sheriffs that, in your opinion, David had made some inappropriate remarks to you, right.

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And you told the sheriffs that you were asked to take Davellin and Gavin to a movie set, right.

A. I was asked to accompany Gavin and David to a movie set because Jamie had another appointment after the meeting he had set up between Gavin and Adam Sandler. So I was asked to drive David there and drive David and Gavin back to The Laugh Factory.

Q. And you were uncomfortable with Janet making comments to the effect, “You’re David’s Sweetheart,” right.

A. She said something to that effect to me at one point.

Q. And you didn’t like that comment.

A. No. They were married.

Q. Okay. And you told the sheriffs that David made inappropriate comments to you about Gavin starting to get erections, right.

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And that made you uncomfortable, didn’t it.

A. I didn’t -- I didn’t think that line of -- that area needed to be discussed. It would have been embarrassing to Gavin if he had known.

Q. Okay. And you first met David at the hospital, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when did you say David started going to The Laugh Factory on a regular basis.

A. Around about that time. You know, we told him, “If you need a break and you want to come hang out,” Jamie told him. Jamie invited him.

Q. Okay. Did you think that he and Jamie were close friends.

A. Not any closer than David and I. I didn’t --

Q. You did tell the sheriffs you thought you and Jamie were the ones who were most involved with this family.

A. Yes, we were.

Q. Okay. And at some point you learned that Michael Jackson seemed to be very involved with this family, right.

A. They were going up to the ranch, yes.

Q. And at some point, did it appear to you that you saw them less often because they were spending time with Michael Jackson.

A. Yes, because Gavin was getting better and they seemed to be spending more time with Michael.

Q. Okay. When you and Fritz Coleman visited the address on Soto Street --

A. Yes.

Q. -- that was around Christmastime; is that right.

A. Yes.

Q. And what did you bring them.

A. A microwave, a Play Station, and some games.

Q. Now, how close in time was that visit to your writing your first $10,000 check; do you know.

A. I wrote the check in June when he got ill, so --

Q. Okay.

A. -- however many months that is. Seven.

Q. So you began giving them gifts in December, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And the first $10,000 is written in June.

A. Yes.

Q. And the next one’s written in July.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. In this interview with the police, which you didn’t know was being recorded, do you remember telling them, “I didn’t know what was going on with the family. They were always kind of strange”.

A. I might have said words to that effect.

Q. Do you know if you did.

A. Yes, but by “strange,” I didn’t mean them as individuals. I meant the family as an entity.

Q. You didn’t mean them as individuals. You just meant when they all get together, they’re strange. Is that the idea.

A. I couldn’t really put my finger on what was out of balance within this family structure. Certainly not the children. Never the children.

Q. Okay. But clearly you were -- you were suspicious these children are being coached to lie, correct.

A. I was.

Q. Okay. When did you begin to be suspicious that this family was being -- excuse me, that these children were being coached to lie.

A. Not to -- oh, did you say “to lie”. I didn’t hear the word “to lie.” I thought you said, “Coached along.”

Q. Coached to lie.

A. “To lie.” I wouldn’t make that statement.

Q. You certainly told the sheriffs words to that effect.

A. Well, that they would stretch the truth as it -- you know, when it came to presents or what they had received; that they would say, “We got love.” “What did you get for Christmas.” “We got love.” That sounds coached to me.

Q. But you thought the children were also being coached by the parents to, in effect, plead poverty.

A. No, just that they hadn’t received a Christmas gift.

Q. Hadn’t received Christmas presents when you knew they had.

A. Yeah. Yes.

Q. Okay.

A. Gavin told me, when I got to the hospital, that Michael had given him a Play Station 2. A Play Station 2.

Q. What else did you learn Michael Jackson had given Gavin at the hospital.

A. That was -- that was the day that Star, on the phone, had said they “just got love.” And when I got to the hospital, Gavin told me the truth.

Q. And when was this.

A. Christmas of 2000.

Q. Okay. Now, you knew that Janet Arvizo wanted her kids to be in show business, right.

A. I believe she did, yes.

Q. And how did you learn that.

A. She had told me that she had taken them to tap as young children, to tap dancing, and had become involved in a dance academy, and that she felt that all of the children wanted -- wanted to perform; that she wanted that for them.
Q. When you first visited the Soto Street address during Christmastime --
A. Yes.
Q. -- did you know where Janet’s parents lived.
A. No. I wouldn’t have known at that point, no.
Q. Had she told you there was an address in El Monte that “we use also”.
A. No.
Q. Was it your belief that the family lived exclusively at the Soto Street address.
A. Yes. It was at that time, yes.
Q. And that’s what they represented to you, right.

A. Yes, they did.
Q. Okay. I don’t know if I got the answer. If I didn’t hear it, I apologize, but I asked you what you learned Michael Jackson had given the Arvizos at the hospital.
A. Oh, he had sent a large basket of toys, and that he -- in the year when nobody could find a Play Station 2, he had found a Play Station 2 for the kids.
Q. You’ve indicated you and Fritz Coleman were giving gifts to this family at least half a year before you heard Gavin had cancer, correct.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, somebody must have told you the family didn’t have any money, right.
A. We -- I came to believe that over the course of the previous summer where I had come to know them.
Q. And how did you come to believe that this family was impoverished.
A. The children would display it in their material on stage, their comedy material. And they would take the bus, sometimes not have enough money to take the bus back home.

Q. Now, you say the children would display this in their comedy material. Do you mean they would do comedy routines about how poor they were.

A. I don’t remember any specific jokes, but it -- a lot of children in that class did those types of jokes.

So they may -- they very well may have. And I may have just assumed that, they were from East L.A., so they were less privileged than a lot of children. I may have done a lot of assuming in those regards.

Q. Okay. Now, how many children were in the class at that point.

A. At the beginning of the summer, it would have been 25 to 30. And the ones who actually graduate would have been about 12.

Q. How many of those children did you visit that Christmastime with Fritz Coleman.

A. No others. They were the ones that we chose.

Q. Is there a reason why you chose the Arvizos to visit and not any of the other families.

A. Fritz told me that he wanted to bring his children to -- to bring gifts to other children that didn’t have the privileges that they enjoyed, and I immediately thought of the Arvizos. And probably one of the reasons would have been that there were three kids.

Q. Okay.

A. A lot of kids that come to comedy camp, it’s just an individual kid. So the Arvizos stuck in my memory because they were a family.

Q. Do you remember ever receiving a call from Janet informing you that somebody had repossessed her car.

A. No. She told me she didn’t have a car, because I would ask if she could meet me, you know, if she and the kids could meet me, and she would say she didn’t have a car.

Q. Do you recall her ever telling you that somebody had repossessed a car that Michael Jackson had given her.

A. No. I knew that Michael had given them a car, and then I knew that then they didn’t have a car, but it was very unspecific as to why.

Q. And didn’t Janet tell you at some point that David had damaged the car that Michael Jackson had given the family.

A. She led me to believe that he had, but she -- she was talking very vaguely, that David had crashed a car. And I don’t know if she meant the car that Michael had given them, but that he had caused a scene and went on a rampage and crashed a car.

Q. But she didn’t give you any details about it, right.

A. Not in terms of it having been Michael’s car, no.

Q. I think it goes without saying that, for the most part, you believe Janet rather than David when it came to their marriage difficulties, right.

A. I have come to that conclusion, yes.

Q. Yeah. You believe Janet more than David, right.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. You weren’t a witness to anything going on in the home, were you.

A. No, I wasn’t.

Q. Okay. And when did you last talk to David.

A. After -- if you have it on record when he lost custody of the children, right around that time period.

Q. Okay. And did you used to discuss their marital problems with Janet.

A. He would make comments, but this was -- he only called me after he lost the custody battle, because he wanted to tell me that everything she said was not true and everything he said was true, and I didn’t want to be involved in that type of conversation.

Q. Do you remember telling our investigator that, with regard to Janet’s claims of David’s abuse, a lot of things said by Janet didn’t seem to match up.

A. I don’t think I meant it in terms of the abuse.

Q. Okay. But you certainly told our investigator a lot of things Janet told you just didn’t seem to match up, correct.

A. There are some inconsistencies in things that she has said.

Q. Okay. And you visited Gavin at the hospital approximately 50 times, right.

A. That might be kind of high. It might be somewhere between 20 and 50, depending on whatever an average of two times a week would be over the course of a year.

Q. And you maybe saw Janet there twice; is that correct.

A. Two or three times, yeah.

Q. Okay. Now, it was your -- you were told that Janet was working, right.

A. Yes.

Q. But you never confirmed that, right.

A. No.

Q. Okay. Did you used to visit Gavin at different times of day.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Like what times would you visit Gavin typically.

A. Sometimes at 2:00. Sometimes after dinner. Sometimes at 4:00. Whenever I could make it over there.

Q. And you’d see David there quite often, correct.

A. Yes, I would.
Q. And did you believe that your very generous donations allowed David to go to the hospital.
A. I wasn’t sure, because he asked for the second check so quickly. I wasn’t really sure where he had money from.
Q. Do you remember telling our investigator you thought Janet had a hostage syndrome.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And you thought that began when she was married at the age of 16.
A. To an abusive man, yes.
Q. Right. Did you ever have a discussion with David about this alleged abuse.
A. No, I never knew anything about the abuse until after Janet finally told me, when she was going to court about it.
Q. Now, are you aware that at some point during the divorce, Janet, for the first time, claimed that David had molested Davellin.
A. No.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. 403; 352.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled. The answer was, “No.” Next question.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, did you believe any of the money you donated was to go to medical expenses.
A. No, I did not.

Q. Okay. You thought it was for general living expenses.
A. Yes.
Q. Because they were impoverished, right.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And did you know the contractor that went to their home to do the work on the room.
A. Yes. He was my contractor.
Q. Did you actually refer him to them.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Okay. Okay. Would it be accurate to describe what you saw Michael Jackson had provided Gavin at the hospital was a large display of gifts.

Does that sound accurate.

A. It was in keeping with what I had done. I wouldn’t consider it overly large.

Q. Did you see a lot of gifts from other celebrities at the hospital for Gavin.

A. It’s possible that I did, but they were celebrities that I knew. And Michael is a huge star, so that would have stood out in my memory.

Q. Okay. And you remember very clearly seeing what he had sent, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And did you discuss with Gavin that Michael Jackson had sent him a large gift display.

A. I saw the big gift basket, and I said, “Wow, who sent you that.” And he said, “Michael.”

Q. Okay.

A. And I was impressed.

Q. Did you discuss with Fritz Coleman the fact that other celebrities were providing benefits to the Arvizos at this particular point in time.

A. No. We didn’t know of any specific benefits.

Q. Okay. Did you talk to George Lopez, for example, about what he was doing, if anything.

A. No, I didn’t.

Q. Did you ever discuss with Michael Jackson what he was doing for them.

A. No, I didn’t.

Q. Ever talk to Chris Tucker about what he was doing for the family.

A. No, I didn’t.

Q. You mentioned Adam Sandler. Was it your understanding that Adam Sandler provided any benefits to the family.

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Did Gavin ask you to introduce him to other celebrities, like Jim Carey.

A. Gavin never asked me those questions. He would ask Jamie those questions.

Q. How do you know that.

A. That’s what Jamie told me, that he would ask

Gavin, “Who do you want to meet.” And Gavin would tell Jamie.

Q. Okay. Was it your understanding that Jamie would try to arrange those meetings.

A. Yeah, he did. I saw -- I know he did.

Q. Who did you see Jamie arrange meetings with for Gavin.

A. With Adam Sandler. And then he called Quincy concerning Michael.

Q. Called Quincy Jones.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know if Quincy Jones ever got involved with the Arvizo family.

A. No, I think it was Quincy’s office that called Neverland.

Q. Okay.

A. Or gave Jamie the number to call Neverland. I’m not sure exactly how it transpired.

Q. All right. Now, you indicated you thought David had obtained moneys that were raised at a fund-raiser, right.

A. Yes.

Q. How did you know he got that money.

A. I saw it handed to him.

Q. Okay. Did Jamie hand it to him.

A. Yes.

Q. And did you ever find out what happened with that money.

A. After he threw it at Jamie.

Q. Yes.

A. He picked it back up and put it in his pocket.

Q. And did he walk off with it.

A. Yes.

Q. You don’t know what he ever spent that on, right.

A. No, I don’t.

Q. You don’t know if he gave it to Janet or kept it himself, right.

A. No, I don't.

Q. That was the first fund-raiser.

A. That was the second one.

Q. Who took the money at the first fund-raiser, to your knowledge.

A. David, but I didn't see it.

Q. Did somebody tell you he took the money.

A. It was just assumed that the benefit was for him.

Q. Okay. And you don't know what that money was spent on either, right.

A. No, I don't.

Q. You don't know if he gave it to Janet or spent it himself, right.

A. No, I don't.

Q. Now, after you had your phone call with Janet where you thought she was scared, you said you called your lawyer, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. You didn't call the police, did you.

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You never called the police about anything Janet told you, correct.

A. Right. Correct.

Q. Have you talked to anyone about -- excuse me.

Before you took the witness stand yesterday, did you discuss with anyone what you were going to say in court.

A. I just had pre-interviews with Gordon.

Q. How many pre-interviews did you have with Gordon.

A. One.

Q. And when was that.

A. Friday -- Saturday, maybe. Saturday.

Q. And did Gordon tell you what he was going to ask you.

A. He just went over the events with me.

Q. Okay. Did he discuss what you were going to say.

A. No.

Q. Did you go over any of your sheriffs’ interviews with him.

A. No, I didn’t.

Q. All right. Are you aware of the Arvizos ever meeting Kobe Bryant.

A. I’ve only read it in the media recently. Gavin may have told me at that time, but I just don’t recall it.

Q. And do you know -- are you aware of the Arvizos ever meeting Mike Tyson.

A. No, I wasn’t familiar with that at all.

Q. Okay. Do you know anything about Gavin’s behavior at his school before the year 2003.

A. Yes. One of the teachers came to the hospital to visit him, and she joked about it.

Q. Do you know, for example, whether or not Gavin was repeated disciplined by virtually every teacher at school.

A. I think he was chatty. You know, we joked about that he was -- he talked a lot. And --

Q. Did you ever look at his school records.

A. No, I didn’t.

Q. Do you know anything about him fighting in school.

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Do you know anything about him getting up in the middle of class and starting to sing.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.

MR. MESEREAU: I think it’s been opened, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Has no bearing on credibility.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

THE WITNESS: I don’t know anything about that, no.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know how many teachers disciplined Gavin at his school, if any.

A. No, I don’t, other than it had been discussed in a joking manner by a teacher that came to visit him at the hospital.

Q. Do you know whether Gavin was often sent to detention at his school.

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Do you know whether he called teachers names.

A. No, I don’t.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Redirect.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Miss Palanker, as far as the contractor, your contractor that worked with the Arvizos --

A. Right.

Q. -- I just want to make sure I understand what his arrangement was with the Arvizo family. Do you know if he originally intended to be paid for his work.

A. He intended to be paid for the cost of the materials.

Q. Okay. So he originally intended to work for free, and just be paid for the cost of the materials.

A. Yes.

Q. You’ve made several statements about Janet’s emotional state, her mental state. There’s some words like “bipolar,” “whacky,” “over the top.”

A. Right.

Q. Can you explain that.

A. She’s very emotional.

Q. What do you mean by that.

A. She’s very emotional, very excitable, very gregarious. And I -- I didn’t know how to interpret her nonpresence at the hospital. I may know more about that now, but it’s all just speculation. But that was unusual behavior for a mother.

Q. Okay. You feel like you understand more about that now.

A. I do, yes.

Q. And why is that.

A. I've been told that David was beating her up, and threatening her if she would come down there, that he was going to kill her.

Q. You also talked about the children making phone calls to celebrities.

A. Yes.

Q. I believe so far we've talked about Chris Tucker. He was one, correct.

A. They were friends with Chris.

Q. So as far as you know, did Chris Tucker enjoy talking on the phone to the children.

A. I know that he did.

Q. What about Jamie.

A. Jamie loves the children.

Q. What about George Lopez, when things were still okay between the family.

A. He loves the children. He had a problem with David.

Q. Did you ever see Janet selling tickets at the hospital to the benefit.

A. No, I didn't.

Q. And there was a great deal of testimony dealing with the subject of coaching the Arvizo children.

A. Uh-huh. Right.

Q. Did you have an impression as to who would be the coach in that situation.

A. No, I really didn't.

Q. Okay.

A. I couldn't tell.

Q. Would it ever be Janet.

A. I wouldn't have been able to make that assessment.

Q. Now, specifically you've mentioned two occasions, I think, that you thought the children were coached; one involving a computer --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and another involving when Star was coached, you felt he was coached about saying he just got love for Christmas.

A. Yes. And as soon as David went down to the car, Gavin told me the truth.

Q. Okay. Let’s talk about that. Tell me the circumstances of that second incident.

A. I called to make sure they were there, because I wanted to bring them my presents for Christmas. And I said, “What else did you get for Christmas, Star.” And he said, “Just love.”

Q. Now, was this -- were you in the room at the time.

A. No, I was on the phone --

Q. Okay.

A. -- to make sure they were there before I came down.

Q. And this was at the hospital.

A. Yes.

Q. And Gavin’s hospital room.

A. Yes.

Q. And so you’re talking to Star, and you ask him this question, and he says what.

A. “Just love.”

Q. And that sounded what to you.

A. It sounded coached.

Q. Okay. But did you know it was coached.

A. No, I didn’t know it.

Q. It just sounded funny to you.

A. It didn’t sound like something a child would say, unless they say that in their family, unless it’s like a family thing, that that’s what they say.

Q. Okay. So then you go back down to the hospital.

A. Yes.

Q. How much time between the phone call and the trip to the hospital.

A. Half hour.

Q. And who do you find when you’re at the hospital. Who’s there.

A. All three of the children and David.

Q. Okay. Anything else said about what the kids got for Christmas.

A. When David took my gift down to the car, Gavin told me that Michael had given them a Play Station 2.

Q. And what impression, if any, did that leave upon you.

A. I went, “Oh.” Well, I was happy for them. And I -- I felt that, with David gone, they would tell me the truth.

Q. Did you notice any difference in the behavior between the children when they were around David and their mother.

A. They were much more affectionate with their mother.

Q. Are those the only two incidents where you felt you had an impression that the children were coached.

A. Those were the only two, yeah.

Q. Okay. But, in fact, did you ever see any coaching going on.

A. Never.

Q. Have you ever seen Janet Arvizo under any circumstances where you believe she was teaching her children to lie.

A. No. Never.

Q. Have you ever had that impression.

A. No.

Q. There was a statement that I believe you said there were some unintelligible remarks about it, but I want to find out what your true feelings are.

A. Okay.

Q. Something about Janet making David do things.

A. I never said anything to that effect. I wouldn’t have witnessed any of that behavior, ever.

Q. Is that your impression, that Janet made David do things.

A. No.

Q. What is your impression of the powers between Janet and David.

A. That she was very intimidated by him. And that after he was gone, she could tell me the truth, and so could the children.

Q. How much time -- how long have you known the Arvizo children since David left. I guess the better question would be, how long has it been since David left that family.

A. Gosh, it would have been, what, like 2001 or 2002. So three years since then.

Q. Is the family different --

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. -- since that time.

A. There's a weight lifted from them. They're almost joyous. When I'm in their presence, they're laughing and joking, easy to be around.

Q. You mentioned that -- there was a remark that you made about Jamie Masada being a pathological liar.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think Jamie Masada is a pathological liar.

A. No, I don't.

Q. That was an exaggeration.

A. Exaggeration, yeah.

Q. And there was a discussion about the issue of there being a Laugh Factory committee.

A. Right.

Q. What specifically did David tell you about this committee. I'm not sure I understand that.

A. He had me on the phone and he started going into it again, about the money. And then he said, "Jamie told me that you are on a committee" -- "you" meaning me -- "are on a committee and that you can bring up at the next meeting that the committee would vote to give us money."

And I said, "I don't know what you're talking about. There is no committee. I'm not on a committee."

The only thing I knew about a committee was that my boyfriend at the time, maybe three years prior, had been on a committee where they voted to pay for a comedian's dental work, and that's the only thing I think the committee did before it was dissolved.

Q. Have you had a chance to talk to Jamie Masada about this case.

A. I've talked to him. He wanted to --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That's a "yes" or "no" question.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I have.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. And do you have an impression of Jamie Masada's conduct towards the Arvizo family.

A. He --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I mean --

Q. That's a "yes" or "no," first of all.

A. Could you ask it again, please.

Q. The question is, do you have an impression of Mr. Masada's -- how he behaved and treated the Arvizo family.

A. Yes. I have a strong impression, yes.

Q. And what is that.

A. He cares very deeply for them, and he wants to do the right thing.

Q. You also said something about celebrities or famous people being a lifeline to this family.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you mean by that.

A. It felt to me like Janet was reaching out to people who were more stable so that they could pull her out of her circumstances and help her stabilize herself. Like she was almost desperate for stabilization or to rescue her children from this situation. The more people that she let know, the more likely she would be able to get help for herself and her kids.

Q. Do you perceive her to be vulnerable.

A. Yes.

Q. Why.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I believe counsel has questioned her extensively about Miss Arvizo's character and psychological wherewithal.

THE COURT: The objection was sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Has Gavin Arvizo ever lied to you.

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Move to strike; calls for speculation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Counsel has questioned extensively about specific instances of Gavin Arvizo and issues of credibility.

THE COURT: You're limited in your character evidence to the evidence you've already put on.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You mentioned that Janet was interested in getting her children into entertainment.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you -- did you perceive that as a good thing, or a bad thing, indifferent. Tell me.

A. I don't have a good opinion about pushing children into show business, but that wasn't the feeling I got. The children wanted to perform.

Q. Did you know that she put her children -- enrolled her children in other extracurricular activities other than just entertainment.

A. Oh, lots of them.

Q. Like what.

A. They're in the sea cadet program. Davellin was in the police cadet academy program. They're in -- I don't remember the others, but I think they're well-rounded children.

Q. Was that -- did Janet have something to do with getting her in these programs; do you know.

A. Oh, yeah. Yes. The boys play football.

Q. Have you been around Miss Arvizo, Janet Arvizo, around other people.

A. Yes.

Q. Other celebrities.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever seen her ask for money from anybody.

A. No, never.

Q. Ever seen her angling for money.

A. Never.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Excuse me for a moment. A moment ago you made a motion to strike, and I grant that now.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Thank you.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Getting back to the phone call that counsel questioned you about, when Janet called you and she was upset, did she express any other fears that she had at that time.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading, and hearsay, and no foundation.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Counsel has asked her about part of the statement, and I'm asking to have the entire statement come in.

THE COURT: All right. Then I think you need to identify the statement so he -- he and I know what you're addressing.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: How would you like me to do that, Your Honor. Should I read it, read the question.

THE COURT: You can say, "He asked you this," and then read it, and then complete it, if that's what you're --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Did Janet indicate that the Jackson people wanted to send her to Brazil, make her leave the country, and make her disappear.

A. Yes, she did.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Misstates the evidence; leading; no foundation; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Well, the question is stricken and the answer is stricken. The jury's admonished to disregard it.

That's not what I told you to do. I told you to address the statement that you say you're going to complete first with her, so that I know what statement you're talking about.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: You're saying that --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm sorry, I thought I made it clear.

THE COURT: You gave the complete statement, so I don't know that.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: The statement that I'm referring to is the statement in which Janet called you when she appeared to be distressed. Do you know what I'm talking about, which statement we're talking about.

A. The statement that Janet made or the statement that I made.

Q. The conversation between you.

A. Yes.

THE COURT: Now, does this go back to the spontaneous declaration statement.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, it does, but since that time, there has been an inquiry made into other areas of the statement by counsel.

THE COURT: All right. Maybe you better show me the statement so I can -- will you approach, with counsel, and let me see the statement.

(To the jury) You can talk.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

THE COURT: All right. You may proceed.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. You also made a remark that you thought

Janet suffered from hostage syndrome.

A. That was my assessment, yes.

Q. Okay. Do you have any training in psychology.

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Okay. Did you have something specific in mind. Do you know the clinical definition of hostage syndrome.

A. I don’t know the clinical definition, but it just reminded me of when Elizabeth Smart was kidnapped and she would be in public places and she wouldn’t tell anybody.

Q. Okay.

A. Just reminded me of Janet.

Q. And for those who don’t know who Elizabeth Smart is, I’m not going to ask you, but I’m going to ask you why you think -- or why you used that phrase to describe Janet.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Relevance; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you, Miss Palanker. I have no further questions.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Recross.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. You made a comment that you thought Janet had suffered from hostage syndrome since she was 16, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And it was your understanding at the age of 16 she married David, right.

A. Right.

Q. And you also talked to Janet about her upbringing, did you not.

A. No, I don’t think I did.

Q. Did she tell you that her father had beaten her and held her hostage, too.

A. No, she didn’t.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. No foundation; irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, the prosecutor -- excuse me, let me rephrase that.

Did you have a lot of discussions with Janet about her upbringing.

A. Not really, no.

Q. But you certainly had enough discussions to conclude that she has this thing about -- she’s had this thing about being held hostage since she was 16, right.

A. That’s when she got married.

Q. Right. Okay. All right. Did she ever describe her -- describe her situation as like a hostage syndrome since the time she was 16.

A. She didn’t use those words, but that’s what she described.

Q. Okay. Okay. So she told you, in effect, she’d been held hostage since she was 16, right.

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; misstates what the witness just said.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you discussed Janet’s life with her, it was your impression, was it not, that she felt she had been held hostage since she was 16.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Improper opinion; calls for a conclusion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did Janet tell you she’d been held hostage since she was 16.

A. No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: She said, “No.” The answer is in. The objection’s overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you ever had any discussion with David about his side of this story.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And when did you last talk to David about his impression of what was happening in the family.

A. It was about 2002, right after he had lost custody of his children.

Q. And David was complaining about not having custody of his children, was he not.

A. Yes, he was.

Q. He was complaining that Janet had told the children what to say, wasn’t he.

A. No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Where did you have a discussion with David.

A. On the phone.

Q. Did he call you.

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And was that the only discussion you had with him about the domestic situation.

A. Since the divorce, that -- there were two phone calls. Two phone calls.

Q. Did David ever tell you his belief that Janet used to coach the children.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever have any discussions with David about Janet coaching the children.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How long was your conversation with David.

A. Very short. I didn’t want to be in the middle of that domestic situation.

Q. But in a sense, you ended up in the middle, sort of, didn’t you.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. You did because you’ve become a good friend of Janet, right.

A. I wouldn’t classify it as “good friend.”

Q. Certainly more friendly than with David.

A. Yes.

Q. Because David offended you, didn’t he.

A. To a certain degree, he did.

Q. You thought his comments to you were very inappropriate.

A. Yes.

Q. You thought he might be interested in you.

A. Sometimes, yes.

Q. For a relationship, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And you complained about that, true.

A. I didn’t complain to him about it.

Q. But you complained to others about it, did you not.

A. Maybe to a couple of -- I think I told Jamie that I didn’t want to be left alone with him again.

Q. Right. Right. And needless to say, David never was a close friend of yours, correct.

A. No. He wanted to be, I think.

Q. And when did you last see him.

A. Probably the last benefit.

Q. Now, you admitted telling the sheriffs in a conversation you did not know they were recording that Masada was a pathological liar and then they asked you to confirm that, and you said, “Yes.” You come here today, under oath, and you completely change your statement. Why.

A. I haven’t completely changed it.

Q. Well, didn’t the prosecutor just get up and ask you if you thought Jamie Masada was a pathological liar.

A. I don’t think I’m clinically trained to make that diagnosis. So if I made that comment, it -- it was an exaggeration.

Q. Do you think you need clinical training to look at someone, evaluate what they’re saying, and conclude they’re a pathological liar.

A. I don’t even know the clinical definition of “pathological liar.”

Q. How about a nonclinical definition. Just an ordinary common sense one.

A. Someone that’s been caught misrepresenting past events.

Q. And when you told the police he was a pathological liar, you were accusing him of doing just that, weren’t you.

A. Of doing that, yes. But I don’t think I’m qualified to call him a pathological liar.

Q. Because you’re not a psychiatrist or psychologist.

A. Right.

Q. But don’t -- in your experience, don’t ordinary people often look at others and say, “That person is a pathological liar”.

A. Those would be opinions.

Q. When you told the sheriffs he was a pathological liar, you were telling them the truth, correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Right.

A. I was telling him an opinion.

Q. An opinion that you believed was true, correct.

A. I was probably exaggerating.

Q. Then why did you confirm it two sentences later that it was true.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When Janet was going through her divorce with David, did you have much interaction with Janet.

A. Yes. We talked on the phone quite a bit.
Q. Did you meet her in person, ever.
A. Not during that period.
Q. Okay. Would she call you every day.
A. No.
Q. Would she call you every other day.
A. Once a week, maybe.
Q. Did you ask Janet to stop calling celebrities on a regular basis.
A. No.
Q. Did you ever ask any of the Arvizos to stop calling Jay Leno.
A. David.
Q. Okay. Did you ever ask Janet to stop calling.
A. No.
Q. Have you ever talked to Jay about whether or not he ever spoke to Janet -- Gavin and Janet on a phone call.
A. Jay said he had placed a phone --
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. I’m going to object as hearsay.
THE COURT: The question requires a “yes” or “no.”
THE WITNESS: Okay. Ask it again, please.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes.

Q. Have you ever spoke to Jay Leno about whether or not Jay Leno believes he was in a phone conversation with Gavin and Janet.
A. Yes, I spoke to him about it.
Q. Okay. Have you ever spoke to Mr. Leno about what he told the Santa Barbara sheriffs about that.
A. No, I have not.
Q. Have you ever spoke to Mr. Leno about whether or not he knows he was recorded in that conversation by the Santa Barbara sheriffs.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevancy.
THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Now, you told the sheriffs that David claimed that Janet was abusive, correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Yes, he --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you tell the Santa Barbara sheriffs yourself that David believed Janet was abusive.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay. Ask the Court to admonish counsel not to go into this area.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained. Hearsay.

MR. MESEREAU: All right.

Q. How many greeting cards did you receive from the Arvizo children.

A. Maybe --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Where did the name “Wheezy” come from.

A. That’s short for “Louise.”

Q. Okay. And did Janet come up with that one.

A. No. I’ve been called that most of my life.

Q. Okay. Do you recall the Arvizo children ever referring to you in terms like “mother”.

A. No, they never did.

Q. Did they ever talk to you in terms of their being part of your family.

A. No, just like a guardian angel, words like that.

Q. Okay. Did they do that on a regular basis.

A. No, only on a card.

Q. Okay. Now, you were at both fund-raisers at The Laugh Factory, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And what time did they start, if you know.

A. Probably around 8:00.

Q. And I believe you told the jury that you didn’t want to sit in the front and help collect money; is that true.

A. Yeah. That’s true. Yes.

Q. Okay. And was it your understanding that the Arvizo family sat in the front to collect money.

A. I believe I saw them -- I saw them sitting behind a table.

Q. Was that at both fund-raisers.

A. I don’t know who did at the first one. I just remember that at the second one.

Q. And if you walked into The Laugh Factory, would you just see a table where they were sitting.

A. Yes. The way you would for any fund-raiser.

Q. And would the first people you saw as you walked in The Laugh Factory be the Arvizo family at those fund-raisers.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; vague as to “the Arvizo family.”

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: You would see the doorman, and he would escort you to where you would pay for your tickets, which would be them.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: So were you paying for your tickets by paying a member of the Arvizo family.

A. They had a money tray at The Laugh Factory that you --

Q. And would they then give a ticket to get in.

A. Yes.

Q. Would they stamp your hand or anything like that, if you know.

A. No, just a ticket.

Q. Who trained the members of the Arvizo family how to accept money and give tickets to the fund-raiser; do you know.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; assumes they were trained.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase it, Your Honor.

Q. Do you know if anybody instructed the Arvizo family how to handle the fund-raisers.

A. I don’t know anything about that. I was upstairs while that took place.

Q. Why did you not want to be there at the entrance helping with the tickets.

A. Because I had already given them -- I had already given them money, and I just -- I didn’t want to be in a position where I was the one taking the money. I just -- it was just personal. I just didn’t want to do that task.

Q. And to your knowledge, were the Arvizos the ones who actually added up the money or had possession of it.

A. No. Jamie did that.

Q. Well, would they collect money and put it in a box, to your knowledge.

A. Yes, there was a box.

Q. And do you know if they were supposed to add up how much there was.

A. It would surprise me if they would have.

Q. Did you ever see them hand that money to Jamie Masada.

A. I saw Jamie with the money.

Q. Okay. When was that.

A. When he came upstairs to give it to David.

Q. Now, to your knowledge, were any tickets sold in advance of that fund-raiser by anybody.

A. They might have been over the phone. You know, The Laugh Factory’s a business, so they may have been.

Q. Do you know if the Arvizos were given tickets to sell outside of The Laugh Factory.

A. I don’t know that.

Q. Have you been to other fund-raisers at The Laugh Factory besides the two for the Arvizos.

A. Oh, yes, I’ve been to plenty.

Q. And typically, are tickets given to people to sell outside of The Laugh Factory.

A. I’m not aware of that. I haven’t organized a fund-raiser, so I’m not aware if that’s one of the ways to bring in guests. I’m not aware of that.

Q. And to your knowledge, there were two fund-raisers, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And how far apart were they, if you know.

A. I want to say six months, approximately.

Q. Okay. When’s the last time you talked to George Lopez about the Arvizos.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: I never had a chance to talk to George about the Arvizos, even though he was involved. By that time -- at that time, he was working mornings on a radio station, so he wasn’t doing stand-up at that time, and he wasn’t around for me to discuss -- I would have liked to have discussed it with him, but he wasn’t around.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When was the last time you talked to Chris Tucker about the Arvizos.

A. Only just in a party setting, you know, at a Laugh Factory event.

Q. And you saw Chris Tucker at these fund-raisers, right.

A. Yes.

Q. When is the last time you talked to Mr. Leno about the Arvizos.

A. During that phone conversation, when he called me.

Q. And approximately when was that.

A. It would have been sometime in 2000, after I had asked him to send Gavin a picture.

Q. Now, at the two fund-raisers, how many people do you think attended each one.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object.

Beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You've indicated that when you spoke to Janet, she wanted you to meet her in Van Nuys or Sherman Oaks.

A. Sherman Oaks.

Q. Okay. And that was at a Von's.

A. It's now a Gelson's.

Q. Okay. And did you -- was it your understanding she was at Von's when she called you.

A. It was my understanding she was nearby.

Q. Okay. Do you know who she was with.

A. No.

Q. Do you know how she got to Von's.

A. No.

Q. Did she tell you.

A. It was all very secretive. She was scared.

Q. She was scared, but wanted you to meet her at Von's so she could come to your house, right.

A. So she could tell me what was happening.

Q. She wanted to go to your house at one point; is that correct.

A. She wanted to be able to privately tell me. She felt like she was being listened to all the time.

Q. She wanted to visit your home, true, and you said, "No".

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: At some point in the last six months, Janet Arvizo called you and said, "Don't talk to the defense investigator," right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Ask to strike the question.

THE COURT: The objection was sustained. The answers are stricken.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. Do you remember telling the Santa Barbara sheriffs in that interview where you didn't know you were being recorded, "I didn't want them at my house," something about it, "Giving me a red flag." Do you remember that.

A. Yes. I have boundaries with the children I teach, that I keep.

Q. Have they ever been to your house.

A. No.

Q. Have you ever driven them anywhere.

A. No.

MR. MESEREAU: I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Thank you, Counsel.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Just one question. Do you ever have children over at your house that are part of the programs where you work with children dealing with comedy.

A. I recently started an advanced program on Saturdays, and for lack of another place, we hold it at my house. And the parents are welcome to stay.

Q. When did that happen. When did that start.

A. About six weeks ago.

Q. And prior to that time, did you have a rule that you did not allow children to come to your house.

A. Yes, I did.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you. No further questions. Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down. Your testimony is completed. Thank you. The Court will recess now, and we'll convene tomorrow morning at 8:30.

MR. MESEREAU: May the witness be subject to re-call.

THE COURT: Yes, I did not excuse her.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good morning.

COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I understand there’s an issue you wanted to address before the jury comes in.

MR. SANGER: Yes, Your Honor. May I have just one more second.

Yes, Your Honor, on the issue of the computer testimony, we’re going to move to exclude the testimony on the grounds of relevance, lack of foundation with regard to this particular case. And let me outline it quickly.

As the Court is probably aware from pre-trial matters, there were quite a number of computers that were seized. I think there were 14 computers that were somehow allegedly associated with Neverland. The District Attorney has focused on four, and provided us last night with the particular exhibits that they wish to introduce, somewhere around 6:30, 7 o’clock last night.

Those particular items are culled from the voluminous CDs and other materials that were provided in the course of the case, in the course of discovery, but now, for the first time, we can see exactly what they want to introduce and try to divine what the theory is.

I received some other material by e-mail last night after that, which is not of much consequence. The big thing is what was delivered to us by hand.

Basically, the four computers -- none of the four computers that the District Attorney seeks to introduce testimony about have any material on it, on them, that was subject to the time period involved here.

One of the computers has -- or two of the computers have material from 1998, and two of the computers have material from September, October, and November of 2003. Actually, one of the computers, it appears, when it was downloaded by the sheriff’s department, that they somehow made a mistake and changed the date to the date that they were examining the material, which is something that’s supposed to be avoided. But looking at the material, it appears that there is nothing whatsoever from the time period involved, number one.

Number two, the type of material is such that it is not probative in this case. It is cached material. That is, material that was caught by the computer because somebody had opened a photograph. And it could have been by an e-mail, it could have been by virtue of somebody surfing the web at a particular time. And it’s heterosexual material, and it is not directly related to this case.

Thirdly, the issue of who accessed the material is totally unresolved. There is no way to determine who was using the computer to access this material in November -- September, October, November of 2003, or back in 1998. So there is no probative value if you cannot link that directly to Mr. Jackson or somebody else in this particular case.

I’m prepared to go into more detail to show the Court or explain to the Court what kinds of material we’re talking about. But I should also indicate that the material that has been gleaned from these computers is minuscule in comparison with the total amount of material that’s on the computers.

So the best that can be said, perhaps, is somebody surfed the web on some of these occasions that have nothing to do with the time period. Very discrete occasions on very specific dates in September and November of 2003. And again, it looks like a very brief four-minute look by somebody in 1998. That is compared to gigabytes of material on the disk of all sorts of other things.

THE COURT: Let me interrupt you and let me hear from the District Attorney.

MR. SANGER: Very well.

THE COURT: Sorry.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Good morning, Your Honor.

The evidence that we are seeking to introduce here comprises the contents -- the partial contents of four hard drives from three computers. Each of these computers was located in Michael Jackson’s bedroom. Not only in his bedroom, but in his private sanctuary, which is upstairs from the primary bedroom area. As you know from the photographs, this is a small room with a great deal of contents. These three computers each contained erotic -- adult erotic materials.

The first one is an Apple laptop. This computer has identifying information on it indicating -- we found a text message that says, “Michael Jackson’s Computer” with the date October 12th, ‘98. We also found text messaging in the form of Internet text messaging, which is a hybrid of e-mail, which provides the name “Apple Head’s Computer,” a name we also associate with the defendant.

We found teen pornography, or excuse me, teen adult materials on this computer, which we’ve downloaded approximately 16 pages.

As far as the time frame of this particular -- the downloading of these materials, we have an associated date of 1998. So clearly -- well, not “clearly,” I should say that the computer experts cannot tell us exactly when this material was downloaded. There are ways to manipulate the date. The clock in the computer is not always accurate. If the computer battery runs down, then the clock can go off, and that’s some of the testimony that we would adduce in expert testimony in presenting this evidence.

So -- but we do believe that, circumstantially at least, this evidence was downloaded sometime prior to the period of time that the victims in this case were at Neverland.

The next computer, which is identified -- and I should mention that that computer is -- would be Exhibit 626. And it’s Item No. 346 as far as the sheriff’s records go.

THE COURT: The Apple.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.

The next computer is a Vaio desktop computer, Exhibit No. 627, S.B.S.O. Item No. 344. This computer had connection or identification information on it, linking this computer to a Marcel Jackson, which we believe to be a code name, computer code name, for the defendant. We know of no relative of the defendant named Marcel Jackson.

In any event, this computer held downloaded photographs, 1700 downloaded photographs of adult erotic material. We wouldn't seek to introduce 1700. It would have taken us several days to print it, and we've certainly seen enough erotic material. But we would introduce -- we would introduce several pages showing associated porn sites that these images were downloaded from.

The final computer is an Apple desktop, Exhibit No. 628, S.B.S.O. Item No. 347-A. Now, as I mentioned before, this computer has two hard drives in it, apparently not an uncommon feature for some desktop computers. These hard drives are analyzed separately, so we have a second item number with this computer, Exhibit No. 629, and S.B.S.O. Item No. 347-B. This is an Apple PowerMac G-4 also located in the defendant's bedroom. It appears to be quite old. It also arguably or circumstantially could be the computer that was referred to by Star Arvizo when he said there was a desktop computer at the time they visited Neverland.

On the first hard drive for this computer, we located identification information, including text messages from king77tut -- I should say 777tut, privacy969, and a bigmike. Also information dealing with construction of a web page called "Michael's Web Page." This first hard drive had associated 3139 materials on it involving teen pornography -- or teen adult materials, excuse me, varsityteens.com. And numerous downloads of adoption agencies, adoptablekids.com, with associated pictures of children.

As the Court may recall, Mr. Jackson, I believe, in the Bashir video mentioned his interest in adopting children.

Finally, the last hard drive from the same computer has what is known as WAF Reports. We have approximately 100 pages in which these reports indicate Internet sites which were visited by the user of this computer. It's probably not complete, but it does indicate that this computer was used to access sites, adult erotic sites, involving teen subjects, adoptable kids sites, Disney, toy sites. Those are the relevant ones.

Now, the purpose of this evidence is to provide a link between the information that was adduced from Gavin and Star Arvizo concerning their viewing of adult materials on defendant's computer in the defendant's bedroom. We intend to use this evidence circumstantially to show Michael Jackson knows how to use a computer. He has four of them in his bedroom. He has another Apple computer in his desk in his office. That he knows how to access Internet sites; that he knows how to access adult erotic materials on Internet sites.

It's a circumstantial link that provides powerful corroboration for our victim in this case.

And the fact that all of these computers have at least some tie in the computer itself to the defendant, in addition to the fact that these computers were located in his very bedroom, certainly provides the necessary link between the defendant and the person who is accessing pornography, or adult material on these computers.

So that is what we're introducing. That's the purpose. It's not a very large volume, as you can see. I submitted a copy to the Court. And we'd ask the Court to admit this important evidence.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Sanger.

MR. SANGER: And you have a copy of the book, I guess.

THE COURT: I haven't looked at it, but it's here.

MR. SANGER: That may make it a little easier to follow.

First of all, there's nothing in -- on these computers that in and of itself is illegal. So the question is, what is the probative value of this otherwise lawful material.

Mr. Auchincloss continually used the word "download" as if somebody intentionally downloaded certain items. For the most part, and particularly as it pertains to any adult images, it was not downloaded. It’s a very important distinction. It’s in the cache. That means that whenever you’re on a computer and you open -- or a picture pops up on your screen, even if somebody had sent an e-mail, or it’s one of those automatic nasty things that gets sent to you, that photograph, that image, is automatically cached in your computer.

And without going into a lot of detail - the Court may be aware of this - but many years ago, I don’t know if it was 15 years ago or so, maybe 20 years ago, has determined that when we were going to have images downloaded off the Internet, it was too slow for computers to each time look at the image anew and create all the pixels to show it to you on the screen. So therefore, when people look at a picture, or when it just comes up, whether you look at it or not, it comes up on the screen, you go on to something else, that image is automatically cached. And that is the part of the computer where most of this stuff was found.

And I can go through in particular and explain which ones. But the adult material in particular was cached. That means nobody -- nobody -- whether it was Mr. Jackson or anybody else, nobody went and said, “I want to save this picture and I’m going to save it to a particular area.” It was simply cached. It came up on the screen. It could be from surfing the web. It could be from getting nasty e-mails with pictures that automatically pop up in the screen when you look at your e-mails. That’s a very important distinction.

The next distinction is that the amount of material here is extremely minimal compared to the overall content of this computer, and all the other material that was cached. Going to Time Magazine sites, going to all sorts of legitimate places that people would go when they’re using the Internet and they're looking at things, or when they're getting e-mails with legitimate things that pop up.

Legitimate -- I shouldn't say "legitimate" as opposed to "illegitimate," but not sexual in nature. All this stuff is lawful, but, you know, not sexual in nature stuff. You know, Time Magazine, sports things, pictures related to all sorts of different things.

So this is not very probative. But I want to take it one at a time, because I think it's very important to see this. And I'd encourage the Court to look at the book, if that's all right.

If you look at their Exhibit 626, which is computer 346, that's Item -- Sheriffs Item 346 --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: The indication -- if you look at the first and second pages, that's all you have there. The first page says, "Michael Jackson's G-3 computer, 10-12-98."

Now, nobody knows who put that there, whether it was put there to give to Michael Jackson or some tech person set it up for him or somebody else did it. Who knows.

The second page is a capture of user and group data files, which simply means that somebody had put in there "Apple Head's computer."

Now, the Court's already heard "Apple Head" is like an informal designation and people are called that as a term of endearment, so that doesn't establish even in 1998 that this was really Michael Jackson's computer. But let's assume that it was.

If you go to pages three, four, five, six, seven -- let's see here, I think all the way through to the end -- no, I'm sorry. Through to page 20.

If you go through to page 20, these are simply cached images.

As you can see, if you look at some of them, they're actual photographs or images of people or montages, and then there are also some images of text. And what happens in these computers is that text images are also cached, so the next time somebody goes to, say, the -- some picture that involved Netscape, or AOL, or some other -- some other logo, that logo doesn’t have to be recreated on the computer hard drive. The computer can find the existing logo, and that way it loads a lot more quickly.

What’s even more significant about these pages 3 to 20 is that they were all -- they all showed up on the computer on October 28, 1998, at one time in between 3:57 a.m. and 4:01 a.m. So somebody -- somebody on this particular computer probably got either a series of e-mails that had -- or an e-mail that had these images on it, or they went to a website and these images popped up. There is nothing indicating in these images that whoever was doing this on the computer -- whether it was somebody related to Mr. Jackson, or somebody visiting, or somebody who had the computer before he had it, or whatever, there’s nothing to indicate that the person actually entered this website. These are pictures from the cover, as it were, of the website, before the web site’s actually entered. If the website had been entered, there would be a whole lot of other pictures.

So in approximately a four-minute period in the early morning hours of October 28th, 1998, these pictures apparently flashed on the screen for some length of time. Couldn’t have been too long, given the time that they were recorded.

Now, we will show at some point -- and I don’t want to get too far ahead, because I don’t think we need to make an offer of proof right now, but there are relatives of Mr. Jackson who have used his computer. I think we’ve already had some testimony that there are all sorts of people using computers. Mr. Jackson himself is not particularly inclined to use computers. But there’s nothing from 1998 that’s going to tie Mr. Jackson to this case.

And when I hear the District Attorney saying this is powerful evidence to link Mr. Jackson, that's exactly the problem. It's offered as powerful evidence, and it has virtually no probative value.

When you look at 344, which is the next one, 627, look at the -- look at the images there, you'll also find that there are really two users on that computer. There was a Dr. Black, and there was a Marcel Jackson. Those are the screen names. And as the Court knows, you can put any screen name you want. Anybody can say they're Dr. Black or Marcel Jackson.

The images from Dr. Black, whoever that is, were -- primarily came up on the screen and were cached in October, around October 2, 3 and 4, and September 22nd, 24th of 2003, long after this was --

THE COURT: Before you go on, just -- I have a question back on 626, of the last page, 24, in the exhibit list.

MR. SANGER: Yes.

THE COURT: What's the significance of that.

MR. SANGER: 24. I don't have a page 24.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It's been provided to you.

MR. SANGER: That's something I was just given this morning.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.

Would you like me to answer that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes. At the very end of each of the files over the offered exhibits is a picture which Detective McCammon would testify that that is the computer, that is its location, and that is the state of the computer when it was originally seized by Detective McCammon.

THE COURT: That's where the computer which housed the hard drive, which is Exhibit 626, was found in the search.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Exactly.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Okay. All right. So we're now back to --

THE COURT: Just one other question, just so I'm clear. I think I understand this, but 626, the hard drive in 626 is -- well, 627, 628 and 629 are not connected to the hard drive of 626; is that correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That's correct.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: That may or may not be true, because there is some indication that there's contamination here, which we can get to. I wasn't going to address that precise issue right now, but it looks like some information from one hard drive got on another, but we'll see.

THE COURT: Do you mean in the forensic process.

MR. SANGER: As far as we can tell, it's not true on the main -- on the disk that we had. It is true on the forensic disk that we were given.

Let me go back to now the second disk that we were talking about, which is --

THE COURT: 627.

MR. SANGER: Their Exhibit 627, and that's Item 344.

Now, that, it's very clear, was used by other relatives and other people related to Mr. Jackson. There's a tremendous amount of e-mail on there back and forth from Marie Nicole, and she obviously used the computer extensively. And she corresponds with people about food recipes, all sorts of things.

As I mentioned, there were two specific user names that the government thought were interesting, and that was Dr. Black and Marcel Jackson.

Understand, that of all the other material and other user names, including Marie Nicole, nothing was found. But they find some adult material that again was not downloaded, but was cached, by somebody calling themselves Dr. Black, and somebody else calling themselves Marcel Jackson.

Now, Mr. Jackson does have a cousin named Elijah who goes by Marcel. We’re not going to blame him for this, but -- simply because it’s so easy for anybody to use a user name and simply log in, and so who knows what’s going on. But Marcel Jackson, according to the evidence on this computer, whoever used that name accessed this computer on November 17th of 2003. And that’s when the -- that’s when the information was downloaded on this particular computer.

THE COURT: On this exhibit, how do I see that on --

MR. SANGER: You don’t. And that’s part of the problem, is the prosecutor gave me this book last night. But if you have the disk from the FBI and you look at the disks that were processed and the notable information and other information that they preserved, it is on the material that they had, that the government had, and the FBI agent had downloaded.

In addition, you can go back to the original disk, but I’m just sticking right now with what is already known to the government because their own agents downloaded it so they could see it.

THE COURT: What was the date, the original date, the first visit to the Jackson home by the Arvizos. What was the date of that.

MR. SANGER: That was in 2000.

THE COURT: 2000.

MR. SANGER: And this is November 17th, 2003. So February and March, the first part of March of 2003, are the relevant time periods for this case. And after that, the Arvizos were never back to the ranch after March 12th or 13th. So we’re talking about November 17th. It appears that somebody using a screen name which is similar to a name of Mr. Jackson’s cousin, which is the name of Mr. Jackson’s cousin, is -- has accessed some basically -- looks like has gone to some sites, or material showed up on the screen on November 17th.

Now, given the fact that there's several of them here, it's quite possible a person went to the site. There's a list of some of the sites here, but there's no -- if you look at page six and page seven of that exhibit, there is no indication of when those sites were ever looked at, if they were. And I think there's a date of 10-5-2003 at the top of that as to when that -- that's -- the master site was looked at. Okay.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: Now, if you go to the next computer, which is Exhibit 628, and that's Computer No. 347-A, there are two hard drives, there's the A and the B. If you look at that on 347-A, we're hearing that this could be the desktop -- I just heard Mr. Auchincloss say this could be the desktop Star Arvizo saw, but remember his testimony was it didn't work.

The images on this actually are also listed to a certain extent on 647-B, so there's apparently some exchange between these two hard drives. And they could be, to a certain extent, mirror drives.

I give the Court as an example, there's a -- and again, nothing here is unlawful, nothing whatsoever. But there's something that's not even -- has no relevance to this case called, "The Funniest Grudge." And it's something taken off the Internet, which is an attempt at humor with regard to Mr. Jackson. And that shows up both on A and on B.

Now, the problem with A is that apparently when the forensic people went to download this material, they converted the time and the date to February 26, 2004. So for 347-A, there is no ability to go back in and determine whether or not -- or when these things were actually recorded. And as I say "recorded," if they're caught in cache, it's because the image popped up on the screen at some point. But there's just no way to tell from the disk that was converted by law enforcement, because they converted the date on it.

And once again, they talk about some -- what Mr. Auchincloss called teenage websites. And actually, it’s the same thing as the “Barely Legal” or anything else. These are perfectly lawful. It’s over 18, 18-or-over kind of websites, but it appears that it’s a website that was not entered. It’s a website that was not entered. We don’t know when because it says, “February 26, 2004,” and we assume it was not the FBI that was entering the website, so that was that.

Now, the other thing about adoption is just completely off the wall. It’s prejudicial. There’s absolutely no probative value. Mr. Jackson did say --

THE COURT: Isn’t the probative value that it would tie Mr. Jackson to the computer that he was interested in adopting children or --

MR. SANGER: Anybody in his household could be interested in that. Grace Rwaramba, for instance, his nanny --

THE COURT: I’m asking you -- I’m not asking you for other reasons. Isn’t that the probative value.

MR. SANGER: If you could show Mr. Jackson used the computer, yes.

THE COURT: Wasn’t that how you show maybe he used the computer, because he’s interested in adopting children.

MR. SANGER: The key word would be “maybe.” I’m not arguing with the Court.

THE COURT: “Maybe,” I can use that word.

MR. SANGER: Yes. And I’m just focusing -- that’s the -- that’s the probative value versus the prejudicial effect. The probative value is very weak on this. The adoption website simply shows -- it’s not many pictures, but it shows pictures of both boys and girls. And it looks like somebody had looked at an adoption website for whatever purpose.

It's certainly not illegitimate, and there's nothing salacious about that, unless the District Attorney wants to argue that it's a powerful link somehow to this particular case.

Now, when you go to 347-B, we have yet another problem.

THE COURT: That would be 629.

MR. SANGER: Yes, I'm sorry. That's the last one. There's a new Exhibit 629 computer, which is logged in as 347-B.

They have these W-A-F reports in there that show that people could abuse this computer for going to websites. They could have gone to the websites for just a very brief period of time, and we don't know. It could have been anybody, and it could have been at any time, because the W-A-F Reports don't have any dates.

The interesting thing is that on this computer -- and here's where contamination is a problem. On this computer, 347-B, you have the exact same cached material that you have on 626. Those few pictures -- it's not -- I don't think they copied them here. They didn't copy them here, but it's on the disk that law enforcement prepared.

It's -- the very same cached material on 347-B is the material that we talked about in the very first computer, which was -- which you saw, you saw the pictures of it, the ones we talked about where somebody had gone -- or those pictures had come up in an e-mail, or they had come up by somebody going to a site, they did not enter the site. And it has the very same date of October 28, 1998, on it. Now, the very same time, from 3:57 a.m. to 4:01 a.m. So it is somehow that those images are duplicated on this totally different computer. And it's impossible to tell whether this is contamination caused by the government, or if it's contamination -- or there is some other explanation. But it's hard to imagine what explanation there would be for that since these are simply cached images.

And it would be extremely improbable that the exact minute -- and, in fact, it breaks it down into seconds -- the exact seconds, the same exact images were retrieved in this four-minute period on October 28, 1998, by two separate -- completely separate computers.

So having -- having said that, the probative value of this is extremely weak. It doesn't tell us anything about the events of this case. It doesn't tell us anything about the testimony of the witnesses in this case. The state of the evidence is there are computers around. There's a desktop computer that didn't work. The government now wants to say it's one of these. But that's that. That's the evidence. The fact that somebody at some time later may have accessed some adult sites that are all heterosexual, most of them are just topless pictures, that somebody accessed that completely lawful material in September, October, and primarily November of 2003, or somehow, on two of these computers, at exactly the same nanosecond, somehow ended up with cached pictures from one website in 1998, there's just no probative value to that.

The prosecution's homework hasn't been done, because this is not in proper order and it was given to us at the last minute, culled from everything else they had. But if it's done, I don't see how they could possibly get to the point where this is probative, and I think it does tend to be very prejudicial.

And when you hear Mr. Auchincloss talk about it as a powerful link, I assume that's a prelude to his closing argument, or somebody's closing argument on that side, and that's exactly what it is not, and that's why it should not come in.

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just a few remarks, Your Honor.

First of all, as with all circumstantial evidence, you have to look at the evidence in the context of all the evidence in the case.

In this case, they are saying that it is just a coincidence that in these four -- or these three computers, these four hard drives, it’s just a coincidence that they have erotic materials on them. It’s just a coincidence that they have teen erotic materials on them. It’s just a coincidence that all three of these computers are found in his private sanctuary, his bedroom. It’s just a coincidence that Gavin Arvizo and Star Arvizo were shown erotic materials in his private bedroom. And it’s just a coincidence they were shown the same type of erotic materials, teen erotic materials.

THE COURT: How could they have been shown these materials, though.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, we’re not saying they were shown these materials. It’s conceivable, and it’s possible that the computer from ‘98 has information on it that was shown to these children.

But as you may recall, Gavin Arvizo took that computer that he believes -- he wasn’t sure, but he believes that was the computer, the computer he viewed the images on in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom, that computer was the computer he was given. And as you also know, that computer ultimately made its way back to Mr. Jackson after it was broken. So we can assume, circumstantially perhaps, that that computer is discarded and gone. But, if it wasn’t the computer, it’s possible -- I don’t think it’s probable, but it’s possible that one of these computers was the very same computer that Gavin Arvizo observed this pornography on.

And I might mention that the computer that has these older images on it is the same computer that Gavin Arvizo picked out of a lineup of computers as being the one most like the computer that was given to him. But again, it doesn’t tie it up perfectly.

The bottom line here is, is that this is circumstantial evidence that this defendant views teen pornographic, or erotic materials, on computers in his bedroom, which is one of the most important aspects of our -- was one of the important aspects of our case. And, as you know in these cases, it's always a matter of the credibility of the young victim. So corroboration is always highly probative to show that -- these young victims, when they're telling the truth. And I don't think you can just say it's a coincidence that these materials are on these, all three of them, and all in his bedroom, and all seeking the same sites.

Now, I will mention a few things Mr. Sanger said were wrong.

First of all, in the very first group of information, Exhibit 626, we have an Internet cache in the back of that exhibit. This is a history, just like you and I have on our computers. It shows the history of sites that were recently visited or most recently visited. And they're virtually all -- we've got "Teen Steam," "Gatefold," numerous hits to "Teen Sleaze," "slut1.com."

THE COURT: What are you referring to.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm referring to page 22 of 626. The Netscape history of showing the sites that were most recently viewed.

THE COURT: By "recently viewed," what does that mean.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Recently, the last sites that were viewed on this computer.

THE COURT: In 1998.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, some of these sites you can see go to 2001. There's one here that says, "Karas Adult 2002, 3, 01." That's on page 23. And that would be within the time frame that the Arvizo children were on Neverland.

But more importantly, it shows knowledge. It shows he understands how to use computers, which not everyone does, and it shows his familiarity with the Internet and Internet adult sites.

As for --

THE COURT: The testimony wasn't that he went on line, the testimony was that someone else went on line, right. I mean, when the children say they saw the -- it was the other person in the room that --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Frank.

THE COURT: Frank.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Frank was operating the computer at the time, but it was Mr. Jackson -- we are saying it is our position that Mr. Jackson is showing this porn to -- or this adult material to these children.

Now, as far as the legality of it, you know, they advertise themselves as being teen pictures. We don't know. As far as -- the bulk of Mr. Sanger's arguments go to weight. He can ask our witness, our expert witness, what percentage of these -- of the total information on these computers comprise this type of information. But as with any computer that holds a tremendous volume of this type of information, every fragment is going to be a small percentage of the whole.

THE COURT: Do you have another witness you can put on, other than the one you were going to call for this, right now.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Possibly.

THE COURT: I have some severe reservations about allowing you to put this on, so I'm going to ask you to call another witness. I may require some further foundation outside the presence of the jury with your expert.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: I need to -- I'm not prepared to rule at this moment on it, although I am leaning towards excluding it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I guess the next step would be to file some points and authorities on it for you. But if you would like to call -- I think maybe the best thing to do would be to allow us to have -- to call our expert, and have you question him, and we can question him, and maybe focus your concern --

THE COURT: The problem with that is the jury is sitting waiting. And I've asked that we -- you know, when we have these type of issues that we set them at times when the jury's not here, and we use the jury for evidence that they can hear.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Can you tell me what -- can you tell me what your concern is so that I may attempt to address it.

THE COURT: No. Do you have another witness.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We can -- we'll check, Your Honor. We'll see who's available.

THE COURT: All right.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: What I want to do is take the break now, while you're looking for a witness, so you don't just start the witness.

So we'll take a 15-minute break now while you find your witness.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: (To the jury) You didn't get it. It's "Simon Says."

All right. Call your next witness.

MR. SNEDDON: Detective Cooley.

THE COURT: Actually, we've been in session, even though you haven't been here. We were handling some issues that we had to handle. That's why it was not a formal introduction.

THE CLERK: Please raise your right hand.

ROBERT CHARLES COOLEY

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Robert Charles Cooley. Last name, C-o-o-l-e-y.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Good morning.

A. Good morning.

Q. You're employed by the sheriff's department, correct.

A. Yes, I am.

Q. How long have you been with the sheriff's department.

A. Be 25 years in July.

Q. And what are your current assignments.

A. My current assignment is I'm a detective stationed out of the Santa Ynez/Solvang station.

Q. Back on November the 18th of 2003, were you involved in the execution of a search warrant at the Neverland Valley Ranch.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And were you assigned some specific responsibilities in connection with the execution of that search warrant.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And what responsibilities -- what was your primary responsibility that day.

A. My primary responsibility was as a scribe at the arcade building on that property.

Q. Would you explain to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury just what it means to be a scribe in connection with the execution of a search warrant.

A. Being a scribe means that you're responsible for taking and seizing all evidence that's located by other searchers, and then packaging and sealing that evidence and documenting that evidence on a report.

Q. All right. Did you do that on that particular day in the arcade.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you do it in conjunction with some particular officers.

A. Yes, I did.
Q. And Officer -- Detective Conn Abel was one of the people you worked with that day.
A. Yes, he was.
Q. And when you set up business or set up your location in the arcade, particularly where did you set up your position to become a scribe. Where you did your scribing, I guess would be the best way to put it.
A. There were actually a couple locations. Down where we did the first floor, I just set up on a table down there. And then when we moved up there to a library area in that same building, I was right outside the library door.
Q. And what about when you went in the cellar.
A. We went in the cellar. That stuff was actually brought back to the table that was on the first floor.
Q. Okay, good. Now, I'm just going to show you a few items here.
MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me, can I see them before they're --

MR. SNEDDON: I thought you had.
MR. MESEREAU: I follow.
MR. SNEDDON: 581, 582 and 583.
MR. MESEREAU: Oh, okay. Oh, all right. Okay, thank you.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Let's talk about the first one. It's an item designated in this case as Exhibit 581. Do you see that.
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. And inside of that are three books in a brown paper bag. Do you see that.
A. Correct.
Q. Do you recognize the brown paper bag.
A. Yes, I do.
Q. When and where was the first time you saw that brown paper bag.
A. That would have been when the items were seized from the cellar area, and I placed them in that brown paper bag, and that's my writing on the outside of that brown evidence bag.

Q. So the white -- the white piece of paper with the black writing is your handwriting; is that correct.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And with regard to that particular item, 581, did you put those books into that brown paper bag.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what did you do with the brown paper bag after you put the books inside of it, into 581.

A. I sealed it, and then initialed and wrote my name on the outside of the evidence tag, seal itself.

Q. And do you see those initials now.

A. Yes, they’re still there.

Q. Okay. Now, why don’t you put that item aside.

Now, currently -- let me just ask you this. Currently that’s in a plastic bag, the whole brown paper bag with the three books.

A. That’s correct.

Q. Do you have any knowledge about where the plastic bag came from.

A. Not of this bag, but I know of the nature, why this bag was used.

Q. Why was that.

A. This is because occasionally if evidence is going to be reviewed, it’s opened, that the paper bag starts to get fragile and can’t be sealed properly, and then they’ll place it back in another larger bag, in this case this plastic bag, and reseal the plastic bag.

Q. And that’s a procedure you’ve used before.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Now, let’s direct your attention to Item 582, which is in evidence here. You’ve picked up a brown bag, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Do you recognize that bag.

A. Yes I do.

Q. And when and where was the first time you saw that particular bag.

A. This bag with this book was found up in the -- correction. The book was found in the library area in the upper story of the arcade building.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And I placed this book inside this paper bag, and this is my handwriting on the white tag on the outside.

Q. And after you put the bag -- after you put the book into that particular bag, what did you do with it.

A. Then I sealed the paper bag and wrote my name on the outside of the seal.

Q. And you see the seal and your initials on the bag.

A. Yes, it’s still there.

Q. Okay. Now, let’s look at 583 if we can. 583 is a smaller brown paper bag, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And when and where was the first time that you saw that particular bag.

A. This also was from the library in the upper story of the arcade area.

Q. You’re talking about the item that’s inside the bag, correct.

A. Right.

Q. And that was given to you by somebody.

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And who was that.

A. At this point I don’t recall. It would have been one of the searching detectives that was in the library at the time.

Q. So they gave it to you and you put it in the bag and it has a white piece of paper with writing on the front, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And is that your handwriting.
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Now, did you also seal that particular bag.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Do you see the place where you sealed it and your initials.
A. It’s still there.
Q. Now, with regard to the Items 581, 582 and 583, after you sealed them, you put the items that were given to you by the officer, seizing officer, put them in the bag, you sealed it, and you put the identification information on the front as you’ve told the jury.

What did you do with those three particular items after that.
A. After they were sealed and we were -- we concluded our search, these were turned over to forensics detectives at the search warrant scene, the front of the main house.
MR. SNEDDON: All right. Thank you. No further questions.
THE COURT: Questions.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Good morning.
A. Good morning.
Q. You said your function was to be a scribe.
A. That’s correct.
Q. And as a scribe, do you do any search yourself.
A. Occasionally we will do searching also, depending upon how large the area is.
Q. Did you search anything on that particular day, November 18th.
A. I believe so, I did, yes.
Q. What did you search.
A. I assisted in the search of the downstairs arcade building, and actually the whole building, the arcade, the cellar and the upstairs library area.

Q. Now, you indicated that as a scribe, you -- I think you said words to the effect, you were at a location where people would bring items to be seized to you.

A. Correct.

Q. And where was this location that you were talking about.

A. In particular, downstairs, the first location was at the front of the arcade on a table there. And then when we moved upstairs to the library area, was right outside the door of the library.

Q. And were you sort of searching and then being a scribe, and then searching and being a scribe, or just being a scribe the whole time.

A. No, I was doing some searching, and if somebody found an item of evidence that needed to be seized and packaged, then I would do my job as the scribe, seize the item, package and then seal it.

Q. Do you package and seal to prevent contamination.

A. I package and seal to preserve the evidence that's given to me.

Q. Do you package and seal to prevent contamination.

A. If I'm following you, to -- I'm not exactly sure what you're looking for contamination-wise.

Q. Do you know what contamination of evidence means.

A. Fingerprints, et cetera. Is that what you're looking for.

Q. I'm asking if you know what contamination of evidence means.

A. I guess I'm not following the course. When it's given to me, I package it as it's given to me.

Q. Let me -- maybe I'm not being clear. Have you ever heard of the word "contamination" when it comes to evidence.

A. Yes.

Q. What does that mean to you.

A. It depends a lot on the evidence. If it’s evidence that we think might need to be fingerprinted, then it’s placed in a paper bag and sealed. If it’s evidence that we think might need, say, DNA, for instance, it’s packaged and sealed accordingly to keep others from touching it.

Q. Were any of the three items in front of you packaged and sealed to prevent contamination.

A. Well, I was the last one to handle it, so it was packaged in there, and then it wasn’t my call whether it needed to be fingerprinted later on. So I just packaged it, I was the last one to handle it, packaged it like I would normally package evidence, and then it was turned over to forensics.

Q. Did you package it to preserve the items so it could be fingerprinted.

A. I would have to say I did. I was the last one to handle it, and it was sealed and turned over to forensics.

Q. Were the three items that you packaged and sealed packaged and sealed to preserve the ability to do any DNA testing.

A. That, again, would not have been my call. I was wearing gloves, when I was packaging evidence, so if anything later on needed to be completed, fingerprinting, DNA evidence, it was packaged in paper to preserve that, and then turned over to forensics, and then forensics would have made the call as to how they handled it after that.

Q. So am I correct in assuming that you packaged and sealed those three items to preserve the possibility of both fingerprinting and DNA testing on those items.

A. That’s one of the reasons why they’re packaged and sealed immediately, yes.

Q. And what are the other reasons why they’re packaged and sealed immediately.

A. To prevent a confusion as to evidence being seized and who seized it.

Q. Now, when you turn them over to forensics, you're saying it's their responsibility to decide whether they're going to test for fingerprints or not.

A. Not exactly. It would probably be the lead investigator or the investigators on the case that would decide what they were going to have fingerprinted and what they were going to have tested for DNA.

Q. Now, in your function as a scribe, does it ever happen that someone says to you, "See this evidence. We're going to do fingerprinting testing".

A. Has it ever happened to me.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. It didn't happen in this case, correct.

A. In --

Q. With respect to these three items.

A. In this particular case, with respect to these three items, I was not told specifically that these were to be fingerprinted. I just packaged them like I would normally package them.

Q. And you were not told specifically that anyone wanted to do DNA testing on those three items, correct.

A. That's correct.

Q. And who handed those items to you.

A. They would have been the searching detectives that were assigned to that building. And I do not recall who specifically handed these items to me.

Q. Don't you normally note that on the item.

A. Not normally in the course of search warrants that I've conducted. It's my responsibility to take the item and then package it and seal it as the seizing deputy.

Q. In terms of determining what is called “chain of custody,” meaning who had possession of the item at a particular time, don’t you normally note that on the package.
A. No, because I become -- in my particular job, I become the seizing detective. Each of these items was photographed where it was located, and then brought to me, and I packaged it, became the seizing detective, and became responsible for the evidence.
Q. And is any record made, to your knowledge, of -- excuse me, let me rephrase that. Was any record made, to your knowledge, of who in particular gave you either of those three items.
A. Not to my knowledge. I have the detectives listed in my report that was on scene at the time.
Q. If you wanted to determine who gave you one of those three items, what would you do.
A. Probably have to go back to the detectives that were on scene and ask them if they remembered actually locating that item.
Q. You would have to rely on their memory.

A. Correct.
Q. To your knowledge, no written record is made when someone hands you an item of evidence that may later be used in a case.
A. It wasn’t done in this case, no.
Q. It wasn’t done in this case.
A. No.
Q. Well, you’re aware that approximately 69 people related to the sheriff’s department descended on Neverland on that particular day, right.
A. Correct.
Q. And do you know how many of those 69 people or approximately 69 people were involved in the search.
A. Of the arcade building.
Q. Of any part of Neverland.
A. Not exactly, no.
Q. You had a meeting of those who were going to be involved in the search before you arrived, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And guidelines were given to everyone before you entered Mr. Jackson’s premises, right.

A. Assignments were made, yes.

Q. And are you telling the jury that there was no procedure to ensure if someone took a piece of evidence or whatever they wanted to use it for and handed it to another officer, there was no procedure to identify who did that.

A. Not that I recall that was brought up at the briefing.

Q. What was brought up at the briefing, now.

A. Again, assignments, as to who was going to be searching what part of the ranch.

Q. But what I’m saying is this: Aren’t reports typically made -- if someone decides, for whatever reason, good, bad, or indifferent, to focus on a particular item, pick up that item, take it to a scribe, like yourself, are you saying there is no record made of who actually initially retrieved the item and for what reason.

A. I did not make a record of that, no. I became the seizing detective.

Q. Okay. So in other words, what you’re saying is, the, quote, seizing detective is responsible for packaging items, but not responsible for determining how those items even got to he or her, correct.

A. I can tell you which part of the arcade building these items came from.

Q. But you can’t tell me who handled them before you did, right.

A. No.

Q. And you can’t tell me where they were found before you got them, right.

A. Only if I go back and look at the photographs prior to them being brought to me.

Q. And were they photographed before you got them.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Would the photographs identify who did the photographing.
A. The photographs would have on them who actually took the photo.
Q. Would the photographs identify who actually retrieved the item initially.
A. That I don’t know. I would have to look at the photograph to see if the detective who actually located the item is in the photo.
Q. Well, you’re aware in this case I think -- and tell me if you’re not. But I think you’re aware that there have been photographs taken of magazines, for example, that were allegedly in particular locations at Neverland, right.
A. I was not aware of items seized or photographs taken in other portions of the ranch except for the arcade building.
Q. Well, if it became an issue in a case like this how a particular magazine was in a particular location, or how a book or a magazine got out of a box, for example, that it initially was in, are you saying no record is made of who would have put their hands in the box and picked the book or magazine out.
A. In my case, with these three items, that was not done.

Q. Do you know why that wasn’t done.
A. Actually, no, I don’t.
Q. But wouldn’t you agree that in many other situations you’ve been in, it has been done.
A. I have never done it acting as a scribe. I’ve always just seized the item, made sure it was photographed prior to it being moved and brought to me, or if I actually went and retrieved the item, I made sure it was photographed before I moved it and seized it.
Q. I’m sorry, I didn’t --
A. That’s okay.

Q. Did you finish.
A. Yes, I had.
Q. Let me ask you this: Let’s take one of those books, okay. Doesn’t matter which one. Let’s assume the book is found in a bookcase, all right.
A. Okay.
Q. Now, you know there were lots of bookshelves in the library area, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. There were lots and lots of books all over the library, right.
A. Correct.
Q. And you probably didn’t count them, but you certainly saw shelf after shelf after shelf, right.
A. Yes.

Q. And along with the shelves, you saw boxes everywhere, right.
A. Right.
Q. And there were books found in those boxes, right.
A. Correct.
Q. Now, if someone opens a box, takes a book out, places it on the ground, looks at other books, takes them out, puts them on the ground, and somewhere in that search finds something they want to give to you, there’s really no record of knowing where that particular item was when it was first seen, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. In other words, if someone took a bunch of books out of a box, laid them around, and decided to focus on one of them, there would be no way of knowing if that person even placed that book in a particular location when it was photographed, right.
A. Correct.
Q. The only real record would be that that particular book was given to you and as the scribe, you’re responsible for saying, “We found this in this area,” right.
A. Correct.
Q. And you’re aware that sometimes it becomes an issue in an investigation as to where something actually was located initially, right.

A. Correct.

Q. In other words, if something’s in a box, it might suggest something different than if something is up on a shelf in plain view, right.

A. Correct.

Q. You’re saying that in this particular investigation at Neverland, with approximately 69 sheriffs searching, no provision was made to identify exactly who found an item first and where they found it, right.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m going to object as beyond the scope. I’m going to object lack of foundation as to other officers. He can only speak for himself

THE COURT: All right. You’re -- sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

Q. Was the intention, as far as you’re concerned -- I’m only talking about your work as a scribe. Was the intention to make sure you were the only person that could identify something that was found in the area where you were searching. In other words, was the intention the following: “If an item is used in the courtroom, the records will indicate that I’m the only one responsible for identifying where that item was found”.

A. I think the intent was just to try to minimize the number of people that may have to step up and say, you know, “Yes, this item was seized and it was seized from the arcade building during the course of this search.”

Q. Uh-huh. Now, the word “scribe” suggests someone who writes something, obviously, but you were doing more than that, right.

A. Correct.

Q. And if someone made the decision that a particular item found was going to possibly be used in the case, did you then stop your searching and go down and do the sort of scribe-type function.

A. Yes.
Q. And how much time did you spend in the library that day, if you remember.
A. I don’t recall.
Q. And was it a lot of time.
A. We were there for all day. And I don’t recall exactly how much time we spent in the library, no.
Q. Were you looking at books in the library yourself.
A. Yes, I was looking.
Q. Were you going through the shelves to see what books were on the shelves.
A. I don’t recall exactly what part of the library I searched, but I’m sure I looked at some of the books on the shelves.
Q. Well, was your desire to sort of go book by book and see sort of what each book was.
A. I don’t recall if I actually pulled every book out. I think I was just more looking to see what was in the general area. The library was quite crowded, so I mainly stayed back at the door to do the seizing.

Q. And to your knowledge, was any effort made to forensically determine who had been in the library and looking at those books.
A. Forensically.
Q. Yes.
A. Like fingerprints afterwards, or --
Q. Sure.
A. To the best of my knowledge, that I recall, everybody was wearing gloves when they were doing their searching, so if you’re -- I’m not sure exactly what you’re asking, here again.
Q. Well, everybody was told -- excuse me, that’s not the right word.
People were directed into the library, walked wherever they wanted to walk, right. Looked around as they chose. And if they saw a book somewhere that interested them, bring it to you, right.

A. That’s correct. We have a list of people that were in the library.

Q. And three books were brought to you.

A. These three items here.

Q. Yes. Those three items that were brought to you.

A. Okay.

Q. After those three items were brought to you, did you continue looking at books.

A. I think, if I recall correctly at this point, there was evidence coming out of the library, and I mainly stayed at the door and did the seizing and the scribing.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions.

THE COURT: Redirect.

MR. SNEDDON: One question, Your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. I think you told the jury before that one of the ways that you ensure the integrity of where the evidence came from is that you photograph in place before it’s picked up and taken.

A. That’s correct.

Q. Is that a procedure that you use.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. To your knowledge, is that a procedure that was used this day.

A. Yes, it is.

MR. SNEDDON: No further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: Very briefly, Your Honor.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Mr. Sneddon used the word “in place.”

Please tell the jury what the word “in place” means, to you.

A. To me, “in place” means that the item was photographed where the searching detective located that item.

Q. Now, if an item is found at the bottom of a box, pulled out of the bottom of the box and then photographed, there is no guarantee it’s going to be photographed at the bottom of the box where it was found, correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I’m going to object as assumes facts NOT in evidence, that it wasn’t photographed in place.

THE COURT: The objection is sustained, but I’ve warned you not to use speaking objections.

MR. SNEDDON: All right.

THE COURT: Objection sustained.

MR. SNEDDON: Lack of foundation.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

MR. SNEDDON: I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.

MR. SNEDDON: Deputy Padilla.

THE COURT: Come to the front of the courtroom, please. When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

FREDDY PADILLA

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Freddy Padilla. F-r-e-d-d-y; Padilla, P-a-d-i-l-l-a.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: Why don’t you hand me those, these bags. Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. All right. Detective Padilla, how long have you been -- you’re with the sheriff’s department, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been with the sheriff’s department.

A. 11 years.

Q. And with regard to your current duty assignment, what is that.

A. I’m a detective with the sheriff’s office.

Q. And in what capacity are you a detective.

A. I work personless crimes.

Q. On November the 18th of 2003, did you participate in the execution of a search warrant at Neverland Valley Ranch.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were your particular duty responsibilities that day.

A. I was assigned to package the items of evidence seized by the investigators and deputies at the Neverland Ranch.

Q. Was there a particular location that you were assigned to.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you tell the jury where you were assigned to.

A. The main house of the residence.

Q. And was there a certain location within the main house.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that.

A. It was in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom.

Q. And in connection with the execution of your responsibilities -- maybe I didn’t ask you this. What was your responsibility.

A. The investigators would locate items of evidence, seize them, and deliver them to me, and I would package them and seal them, and according to what they described, I would write on our SH-451, our sheriff's property form.

Q. Did you have a computer there handy where you did this work on --
A. Yes, sir.
Q. -- as it was given to you.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And on that particular day, you were given a number of items; is that correct.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. And....
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'm going to need a second to retrieve a number of bags from over here.
THE COURT: All right.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I'm going to hand you an exhibit marked as 580, clear plastic bag, binder inside of it, in a brown bag, and ask you if you recognize the Exhibit 580.
A. I don't recognize the item, but I recognize the packaging and my writing.
Q. All right. And you said -- by "packaging," what do you mean by "packaging".
A. The brown paper bag. These are the bags that I used at the Neverland Ranch, and I wrote down the case number and the specifics about the case.
Q. And did you write down the officer who gave you that item or gave you an item.
A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Who was that.
A. This is Detective Shepherd.
Q. What was it that you were given that went into that original brown bag.
A. On the property form, I would write down a description according to the investigator, what they seized, but here I wrote down "Magazines" on the package.
Q. Okay. Now, after you were given the magazine by Detective Shepherd, you placed it in that brown bag that's inside of the Exhibit 580.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you seal it in some fashion.

A. Yes.

Q. Would you describe how you sealed it.

A. It’s the department-issued evidence tape and I would staple it, seal it with the tape, and put my initials and the date on it.

Q. And after you did that, what did you do with the item.

A. I -- at the house, I stored it, and I attempted to keep them in numerical order, given my view.

Q. With regard to the brown bag that’s -- with regard to the brown bag inside the item marked as 580, is that what you did in this particular case.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Thank you.

Now I’ve handed you an item that’s marked I believe, as 576; is that correct. Should be like a tag down there.

A. The item is 303.

Q. And that’s your item. This is the exhibit Item 576.

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Do you see that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And with regard to the particular bag that’s been marked as exhibit item 576, do you recognize that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And how do you recognize that.

A. By the -- my writing on the front of the package.

Q. And when -- did you place something inside that package.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When and what did you place in there.

A. I don’t know specifically. I’d have to look on the SH-451.

Q. You don’t recall, but you placed something there.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does it indicate what officer it was that gave you the items you placed in the bag, 576.
A. Not on this package. I'd have to look on the SH-451.

Q. Do you have your SH-451 there.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. Why don't you do that. And this is a document that was prepared at or about the time that these entries were made; is that correct.
A. That's correct.
It says by Detective Shepherd.
Q. All right. And that's Item 576; is that correct.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did you seal that item in much the same fashion you described to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury on the other one.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. You have an item in front of you marked as -- whichever one that you have that's closest. It doesn't make any difference.
A. Exhibit 575.
Q. 575, all right. Do you recognize 575.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And when and where was the Item 575 the first time you saw it.
A. It was in the -- in the master bedroom of Mr. Jackson.
Q. Did somebody bring you that.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Bring something to you in that bag.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And who was that.
A. It was Detective Shepherd.
Q. And when Detective Shepherd gave you the item, did you prepare the bag that's marked as Exhibit 575.

A. That is correct.
Q. Did you put the item in it and seal it.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In much the same fashion that you've described.
A. Correct.
Q. All right. Let's turn our attention now to 569, if we could. That's in evidence.
With regard to 569, do you recognize that item.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And how do you recognize it.
A. The packaging.
Q. And do you recognize the handwriting.
A. Correct.
Q. Who's that. Whose handwriting is it.
A. It's mine.
Q. And with regard to that particular package, you placed some items inside that package.
A. Correct.
Q. And from whom did you get the items that you placed inside that package, 569.

A. Detective Shepherd.
Q. And when you did that, did you seal it in much the same fashion that you described to the jury.
A. Correct.
Q. And with regard to after you have sealed the Item 569, 575 and 576, what did you do with those items.
A. I stored them in my view at the master bedroom area.
Q. All right. All right, with regard to the last item I've just given you, which is marked as 633 in evidence, do you recognize that.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And how do you recognize that.
A. By the packaging.
Q. And whose handwriting is on that packaging.
A. That's my writing.
Q. When and where was the first time you saw that bag.

A. When it was given to me by the investigator in the master bedroom area.

Q. The bag itself, where was the first time that you saw that bag. Not the item that’s in it, the bag.

A. The bag itself.

Q. Yes.

A. Empty.

Q. Before you put the writing on it, yes.

A. You’re asking where --

Q. I’m asking you a bad question. Let me try and see if I can do it.

After the officer gave you an item --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- what did you do with it.

A. I put it in this bag and sealed it.

Q. Okay, thanks. That was a lot better.

A. Sorry.

Q. And does it indicate what officer gave you the item.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. And who was that.

A. Detective Shepherd.

Q. Okay. And was it sealed and your initials placed on it in much the same fashion as the others I talked to you about.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Let me hand you these items that are in evidence as 588, 589.

All right. With regard to the Exhibit 588, do you recognize that.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with regard to that particular exhibit, when and where was the first time you saw it.

A. When it was brought to me by the investigator in the master bedroom area.

Q. Does that indicate to you who the officer was who brought it to you.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who was that.
A. Detective O’Grady.
Q. And did you fill out the bag and the information on the bag.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did you seal it.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And place your initials on it.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now -- excuse me. Did you notice, with regard to your SH-451, whether there’s a difference between the name on the bag and the name placed on your SH-451 form.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. What’s the difference.
A. On the package it says Detective O’Grady, and on my SH-451, it has the name of another investigator on it.
Q. And what, to your knowledge is the correct one.
A. It’s Detective O’Grady.
Q. You placed that on there when he gave you the item.
A. That’s correct.
Q. All right. You have now 589 in front of 3200 you.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And with regard to the Exhibit 589, who gave you that item.
A. D.A. Investigator Ellis.
Q. And did you place the information on that particular exhibit.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you place inside of that exhibit the item that was given to you by Detective Ellis.
A. Correct.
Q. Or Investigator Ellis.
A. Correct.
Q. And did you then seal it. Is that correct.

A. That’s correct.
Q. And made the notations on the bag.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. Let me grab those. Okay. The top item there, I believe, is Item 710, if I’m not mistaken; is that correct.
A. 712.
Q. What is it.
A. This one’s 712.
Q. 712, all right. 712. I guess I was mistaken. With regard to that particular item, were you given something to put inside that bag.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you recognize the bag.

A. Yes, I do.
Q. And how do you recognize it.
A. By the bag itself, my writing, and my signature on the bag.
Q. And in that particular item, does it indicate to you who the officer was that gave you the item.
A. Yes, it does.
Q. Who is that.
A. Detective Wolff.
Q. And did you prepare the information, seal the particular exhibit and put your initials on it like you described in the other ones.
A. Correct.
Q. All right. Would you put that aside for just a moment. Sir, do you have an exhibit up there, let’s take the top one, and you just told me what it is and --
A. Exhibit 562.
Q. All right. 562. Do you recognize that.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And with regard to the particular exhibit, it’s a brown paper bag, did you put the notations on that bag.
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. And was -- did an officer give you something to place in that bag.

A. That is correct.

Q. What officer was that.

A. Detective Alvarez.

Q. And did you do that. Did you place the item in the bag.

A. Correct.

Q. And fill out the information.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you then seal it and package it.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. The next one is item -- is that 288.

A. Correct.

Q. And with regard to 288, do you recognize that.

A. I recognize the writing on the bag, yes, sir.

Q. Is that yours.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And were you given something to put into that particular bag.

A. Correct.

Q. It’s a large bag, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who’s the officer that gave you the item to put in there.

A. Detective Alvarez.

Q. And did you also place the item in that bag, seal it, and put your initials on the bag.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that point, it was placed down with the other items that were later given to somebody else, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. You should have one other bag up there. Perhaps it’s underneath. No. 565.

A. I only see three.

Q. Okay. We'll have to search around for that.
SERGEANT ROBEL: Tom.
MR. SNEDDON: Oh. Never mind. I found it.
(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)
MR. SNEDDON: All right. 470, the briefcase. Thanks, Lorna.
Q. I've handed you a briefcase that bears the initials -- or the numbers 4-7-0 on it.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It's in evidence in this particular case. Do you recognize that briefcase.
A. I don't recognize the briefcase, no, sir. I don't remember it.
THE BAILIFF: He has to speak up.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: I can't hear you.
A. I don't remember the briefcase.
Q. With regard to -- would you check your SH-451, please.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And look under Item 317.
A. "Briefcase."
Q. Was that given to you.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you see some -- open the bag if you have to, Detective.
A. Open the plastic.
Q. Yeah, if you have to, sure. It's a plastic bag. You're opening it. And the briefcase itself that's marked as 470 has some evidence seals on it, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. Do you recognize any of those seals.
A. I recognize the seals, but not the writing on them.
Q. Okay. Do you know what you did with the item that's 470 when it was given to you that day.
A. 470. May I explain one --
Q. Sure. That's why you're up there.
A. While I was seizing, there was times when there was some investigators waiting in line, and in my presence, under my supervision, the investigators would help me seize it, and then I would take it from them and place it on the line of where the items were.

Q. All right. And is this one of those items that you followed that procedure on.

A. It looks like this isn’t my writing.

Q. And does that indicate what officer -- does your SH-451 indicate what officer brought you that.

A. I can’t read the initials.

Q. On your SH-451.

A. Sorry. Detective Zelis.

Q. At the time that you were involved in the process with regard to 470, did you look inside the item at all.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. If we give you any more, we’re going to cover you up.

All right. I’ve just given you the item that’s been marked as 561; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Do you recognize the brown bag.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How do you recognize it.

A. By the writing and my initials on the seal.

Q. All right. Who is the officer who gave you the items -- who gave you the items to put inside that bag.

A. Detective Zelis.

Q. Did you note that on the bag.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Did you place the item inside the bag.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And seal it and initial it.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And set it aside for later providing to somebody else to take and book, correct.

A. That’s correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I have here an item that I’d like marked as 552 for identification purposes. I’ll show it to counsel.

Q. I’ll show you 552. Do you recognize that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Where was that the first time you saw it.

A. It was in the master bedroom area.

Q. And did you -- were you given some items to place in that particular bag.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. By who.

A. Detective Sergeant Robel.

Q. And now with regard to the time that the items were placed in that bag, do you recall how many items were placed in there and what they were.

A. I don’t recall what specific items were placed inside.

Q. Would you check your SH-451 form, please, and see if it refreshes your recollection.

A. “Magazines.”

Q. And were there multiple magazines placed in there. I mean, do you have an “S” by it or did you have a “magazine”.

A. I had -- on the SH-451, I have an “S” by it.

Q. You didn’t put the number.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. All right. When you took the items that you were given by Sergeant Robel, you placed them into that particular bag; is that correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And then did you then put the notations on it, seal it, and put your initials on it.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, that bag, at this particular point in time, only contains one item in it, correct. Open the bag and look.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that’s a book.

A. Correct.

Q. Correct, okay.

All right. Detective Padilla, were you give an item marked as 3 -- that you marked as 364 by Detective Robel.

A. May I look on the --

Q. Yes, please.

A. 364.

Q. If you have no present recollection, you need to refresh your recollection, go ahead.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with regard to that particular item, did you prepare a brown bag, with the notations on it that you've described to the jury as to the other items, in the same manner.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you seal it and put your initials on it.

A. I need to see the bag itself.

Q. I was afraid you were going to ask me that. I needed a recess to do these things. I'm just jumping all over.

Madam Clerk, I believe it's 553.

THE CLERK: I don't have that.

MR. SNEDDON: You don't have that.

THE CLERK: No.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Judge, at this time I'll re-call this officer when I get a chance to go through all of this stuff so we're not wasting a lot of time in front of the jury.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

Cross-examine.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning.

A. Good morning.

Q. You were designated the scribe in the main house, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the main house is the house where you have Mr. Jackson’s bedroom, right.

A. Correct.
Q. And Mr. Jackson’s bedroom, as you recall, is two levels, right.
A. I recall, yes.
Q. You got a downstairs, and you got a stairway that goes to an upstairs, right.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did you perform your activities as a scribe in Mr. Jackson’s room.
A. It was downstairs, and it looked like a lobby. There was a large T.V. in there and some chairs. There was not a bed in the room where I set up.
Q. But in the room where you say you set up, was that part of Mr. Jackson’s two-level bedroom.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it downstairs.
A. Correct.
Q. And when you say you “set up,” what did you do.
A. I set up a table where I processed all the items seized at the house.
Q. Did you bring the table with you.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it something you actually brought to Neverland as part of the search.
A. It was provided to me by personnel at the ranch.

Q. Okay. When you say “personnel,” do you mean Mr. Jackson’s personnel.
A. No, sir. No sir. Sheriff’s staff.
Q. Was the table you used something sheriffs brought with them.
A. Yes, that’s correct.
Q. Okay. So you brought a table into Mr. Jackson’s lower part of his bedroom, and that’s where you set up, right.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did you have a chair there, too.

A. I had a chair.
Q. And did you sort of sit there and wait for people to bring items to you to log in.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Okay. Did you participate in any search activities yourself.
A. No, I did not.
Q. Were you a scribe the whole day.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. Was it all of the main house.
A. At the main house.
Q. Okay. Now, you signed in and out at various times that day, correct.
A. I was relieved by Lieutenant Klapakis.
Q. Okay. So Lieutenant Klapakis became the scribe at times you were not there.

A. He didn’t seize any of the items. I just broke for a lunch break, or left out there, or for a rest room break.
Q. I’m not going to belabor it, but there is a sign-in and -out sheet that you signed in and out on, right.
A. I don’t recall one.
Q. Okay. Somebody typed up a sheet with various “in” and “out” times attributed to various people that were there that day, right.
A. I don’t recall.
Q. Have you seen that sheet.
A. No, sir, I haven’t.
Q. If I show it to you, would it refresh your recollection about signing in and out.
A. It may.
MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Yes.
THE WITNESS: I don’t recall ever seeing that.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How about the following.
A. I don’t recall. I don’t remember.
Q. (Indicating).
A. I don’t recall ever seeing that.
Q. Okay. I showed you what appear to be logs of people on the search team entering in and out, and you say you've never seen those sheets before.

A. I don't recall ever seeing them.

Q. Do you recall signing in and out.

A. That was in two thousand -- I don't recall. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall if anyone else replaced you as a scribe in Mr. Jackson's bedroom.

A. No one replaced me. I don't recall that.

Q. So you were the scribe that day, right.

A. For the main house area, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. How many people did you see searching in Mr. Jackson's bedroom while you were a scribe.

A. I couldn't physically see the investigators up in the bedroom, since it was upstairs and I was downstairs, so I couldn't answer that question.

Q. You couldn't physically see any of them.

A. No, sir. I was downstairs and they were upstairs. "The bedroom," are you just meaning specifically as to where his bed was.

Q. Maybe I'm not being clear. His bedroom is two levels, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You walk into a door. You enter into the lower level, right.

A. Correct.

Q. And you set up a table in the lower level, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you must have seen people entering or leaving the bedroom, because you were on that lower level where the entranceway is, correct.

A. Correct. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see activity in and out that day.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see activity in and out the whole day that you were there.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And approximately how many people did you see enter or leave that day.

A. I would guess maybe 15 to 20.

Q. So 15 or 20 people were searching through Mr. Jackson’s bedroom area.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As far as you know.

A. As far as I know, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Now, would it be correct to say that 16 detectives, three sergeants and five D.A. investigators entered into Mr. Jackson’s main house that day.

A. Yes, that would be correct.

Q. Okay. A total of 24 people were searching through Mr. Jackson’s home that day, right.

A. I don’t know about 24.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I just show you a police report which identifies who entered the main house that day.

A. Yes, sir.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir. I hadn’t counted them, but that’s the list I prepared.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Would you like to count them.

A. If you’d like me to.

Q. Okay. Please.

Have you had a chance to look at that document.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you had a chance to count who was in the main house that day.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would it be accurate to say about 16 detectives, three sergeants and five D.A. investigators.

A. Assigned to the main house, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And do you think about 20 went into his bedroom.

A. I don’t know what specific jobs each one of them did. That’s what I was -- do you want me to continue or --

Q. No, go ahead.

A. Oh, I don’t know which specific officers. I thought you asked how many were assigned in the main house area.

Q. How many did you see go in and out of his bedroom.

A. Oh, I don’t know. I know they were really strict on how many people were assigned to that specific area of the bedroom.

Q. Well, just as far as you remember, how many walked in and out. Because you’re the scribe. You’re sitting at a table, the lower level, which is where you enter, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it’s also where you leave, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So how many people did you see trafficking in and out.

A. To be honest with you, sir, I don’t remember counting, even. I was told what to do, and I don’t recall the specific --

Q. Could it have been more than ten.

A. I don’t recall.

Q. No number at all.

A. I didn’t pay attention. No, sir.

Q. You just identified various items of evidence that the prosecutor showed you, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And of those items, who did you get them from. You mentioned Shepherd, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you mention Zelis.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you mention anybody else.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Who else.

A. D.A. Investigator Ellis.

Q. Okay.

A. And Sergeant -- Detective Sergeant Robel.

Q. Okay.

A. And I don’t believe I mentioned any other investigators.

Q. Were you sitting at the table when the search went on.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your job the whole day was to have people bring items to you, and you would package them, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would put them first in a paper envelope, right.

A. In the appropriate package, depending on the size of the item.

Q. Do you recall someone named Wolff.

A. Oh, yes, sir. I do.

Q. Was a Detective Wolff involved.

A. Yes.

Q. You saw Detective Wolff in that bedroom area.

A. I don’t recall seeing that, but I recall the item.

Q. Now, was it your understanding as a scribe that you were supposed to package items to protect them from contamination.

A. I was assigned to package them, yes, sir.

Q. Were you assigned to package them to protect them from contamination.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what contamination were you trying to protect them from.

A. Any nonauthorized personnel.

Q. Did you have any role in deciding whether or not anything would be fingerprinted.

A. No, I wasn’t, specifically. It was just common sense. If an item appeared and if they told me, “Hold for prints,” I would be sure to use care in what packaging to use.

Q. And typically who would tell you to hold for prints.

A. The investigator.

Q. Do you recall being told to hold anything for prints.

A. Yes, I recall some of the investigators were real specific the way they held it and when they delivered it to me.

Q. And how many items do you think you were told to hold for prints.

A. I remember several of the items we tried not to touch as much as possible, but I don't recall how many or approximately how many specifically were to be held for prints.

Q. Now, the items the prosecutor just showed you, were any of them asked to be held for prints; do you know.

A. I don't recall specifically. I don't recall.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection just to take a look.

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not.

A. Because I didn't note it on there. Just every item that I packaged I tried to use the least amount of handling of the package.

Q. Okay. Let me go back a bit. I think you just said at times you were told to hold certain specific items for prints, true.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And other times you were not told to hold specific items for prints, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you were asked to hold something for prints by an investigator, what did you do.

A. I would use the least amount of -- I would not touch it as much as possible.

Q. Would you note anywhere on the packaging "Hold for prints".

A. No, sir.

Q. So "Hold for prints" meant, to you, don't touch it as much as you might touch it otherwise.

A. When they would tell me, yes, sir.

Q. If they didn’t tell you, “Hold for prints,” what would you do with it.

A. Personally, I would not touch it as much as possible.

Q. If they did tell you, “Hold for prints,” what would you do differently.

A. Extra care.

Q. What does “extra care” mean.

A. The least amount possible, without dropping it or contaminating it.

Q. But no record’s ever made of “Hold for prints”.

A. No, sir.

Q. “Hold for prints” is just a verbal suggestion that you touch it as little as possible, correct.

A. Yes, sir. Yes.

Q. And if they don’t tell it to you, you can still touch it a little more. Is that what you’re saying.

A. Personally, yes.

Q. Okay. And how would you touch it.

A. With rubber gloves, and package it in the appropriate bag.

Q. If you’re holding for prints, do you put it in a paper bag.

A. Depends on the item.

Q. And what do you mean.

A. There’s plastic packaging, and there’s paper.

Q. But if you look at what you wrote on any of the items you just identified, you won’t know whether or not they were held for prints, true.

A. No, sir.

Q. To your knowledge, as a scribe, are you ever obligated to make a notation anywhere that something is to be held for fingerprinting.

A. Personally, I would, but I was never told to.

Q. You were never told to.

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall ever doing that as a scribe in any other case.

A. Of caring for items and try to not touch them as much as possible.

Q. No, as a scribe in any other case, do you recall actually noting on a document “Hold for prints”.

A. Yes, sir, on my cases.

Q. But you didn’t do it in this case, right.

A. No, sir.

Q. During the time you were in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom working as a scribe, how many times do you think anyone asked you to hold an item for prints.

A. I recall maybe a few times.

Q. And you don’t know what those items were, right, as you sit here today.

A. No. Not specifically, no, sir.

Q. If you held something for prints, was it put in a separate location.

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it given to anyone special.

A. No, sir.

Q. So items that were held for prints and items that were not held for prints were given to the same person after you were through with them, right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who was that person.

A. It was Sergeant Cintron who was in charge of the property room.

Q. When he got the items, you never saw them again.

A. No, sir.

Q. And you filled out no report or document of any kind that said hold an item for prints, right.

A. Right.

Q. And what about the possibility of DNA testing on any of these items. Did you have any procedure that you used if something was to be tested for DNA.

A. I was not specifically instructed on labeling any of the items for DNA evidence.

Q. Were you ever verbally instructed to give any special treatment for anything that might be used for DNA testing.

A. No, sir. I don’t recall specifically, specifically for DNA.

Q. Do you recall being given any instructions of any kind for handling any item that was going to be forensically testing in any particular way.

A. Just some of the items when they brought them; you know, try not to touch it as much as possible. Just those items, if you’re referring to that.

Q. Okay. But there’s no record of what they are, right.

A. No, sir.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Anything further.

MR. SNEDDON: No. No questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: Detective Bonner.

THE COURT: Remain standing. Face the clerk. Raise your right hand, please.

CRAIG BONNER

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Craig Bonner, B-o-n-n-e-r.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Morning, Detective.

A. Good morning.

Q. You’re employed by the sheriff’s department.

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And how long have you been employed by the sheriff’s department.

A. Over 11 years.

Q. And you’re currently assigned to the detective bureau, correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. And how long have you been a detective.

A. Five years.

Q. And you were assigned to work on the investigation concerning the child molest allegations against the defendant, Michael Jackson, correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. And you’ve been part of that investigative team, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Now, with regard to that particular investigation, you participated in the execution of the search warrant on November the 18th of 2003, correct.

A. I did.

Q. And in your capacity, you actually did some searching, correct.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, after the warrant was executed and the evidence was brought back to the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department, were you assigned some responsibilities in connection with the further processing of items that were seized from the Neverland Valley Ranch on November the 18th, 2003.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And could you tell the jury what your responsibilities were.

A. Basically my responsibility was to go back, open up the items that were seized, and document the contents and determine if those contents were of specific evidentiary value in our investigation.

Q. Now, specifically I want to direct your attention to an item that's been referred to as Item 321 in your reports. Do you recall what 321 was.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And what was that.

A. Some magazines of adult material.

Q. And were these items that you opened, the bag, were these items that were taken from Neverland Valley Ranch and you opened the bag and looked at.

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall when it was you looked at the Item 321, your Item 321.

And you're referring to a piece of paper.

A. I am. I'm going back to my reports and a chart that I had prepared to assist in that.

Q. All right. Why don't you let me see that so I can show it to counsel.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Let's talk about Item 321, okay. And when was it that you actually opened the bag and the items contained in 321.

A. That was on 11-26, 2003.

Q. Where did you do that.

A. At the Santa Barbara Sheriffs main station in Goleta.

Q. And when you did that, what did you do with regard to those items.

A. I opened it, photodocumented the contents, and then wrote a report which documented what I found the contents to be.

Q. When you say you photodocumented the contents, would you tell the jury what that means.

A. Basically what I did is, I took the items out of the bag that they were sealed in, and I spread them out, and took photographs of those items so that I could go back and later ascertain, if something was lost, what it actually came from.

MR. ZONEN: Excuse me.

SERGEANT ROBEL: Bless you.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And after you completed that process, did you put those items back in the bag.

A. I did.

Q. And did you seal it.

A. I did.

Q. And did you initial it.

A. I initialed the bag, yes.

Q. Okay. I'm going to show you some items.

MR. ZONEN: Excuse me.

MR. SNEDDON: Mr. Mesereau.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Detective Bonner, in order to try to expedite this, I've asked you to look at the exhibits in that box that have been marked as 554 up to 560 for identification purposes prior to bringing them to court, correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. And would you, just quickly, just make sure that those are the numbers in that box with those particular binders. That it's 554 through 560.

A. These are the items that I reviewed.

MR. SNEDDON: And, Your Honor, for the record, they have been marked with the official seal of 554 through 560 for identification purposes.

THE COURT: Thank you.

I'll show that they've been identified.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Now, I also -- by the way, do you recognize the magazines that are -- did you, when I asked you to look at them in detail, recognize the magazines inside of the binders that are marked as 554 through 560.

A. I did.

Q. And where were those items the first time you saw them.

A. They were contained within the packaging for Item 321.

Q. And on the occasion in which you previously identified to the jury on --

A. On 11-26.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, I've handed you a series of photographs which are also marked, Your Honor, with the evidence tags for identification purposes of 682 through 688, and I've shown them to counsel. Do you recognize those photographs. Would you take a look at them real quickly. Or take as long as you need, I guess.

A. I recognize these items as being pictures of the cover sheets of these magazines that are in this box.

Q. 554 through 560.

A. Correct.

Q. Did I ask you to compare the photographs, 682 through 688, with the front covers of each of those items, 564 through 560.

A. Yes, you did.

Q. And did you do it.

A. Yes.

Q. And are those photographs accurate depictions of what they purport to represent, which is the front covers of those magazines.

A. They are.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I'd move that the photos be admitted into evidence at this time.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection.

THE COURT: That being.

MR. SNEDDON: That would be 682 through 688, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, may we have the Elmo, please.

THE COURT: “Input 4”.

THE BAILIFF: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Okay. We’re going to put the Exhibit 682, which is in evidence, up on the board for a second. You can do that now.

Now, with regard to the binders that are in front of you that we have previously had marked, for identification purposes, 554 through 560, can you mate up the Exhibit 682 to which exhibit that would be.

A. Can you raise the exhibit slightly.

Q. I think the number’s over in the far --

A. That corresponds with the magazine 321-A.

Q. All right. Now, if we could have the next one placed up there.

And with regard to the Exhibit 683, which is in evidence, which binder does that correspond to, exhibit number.

A. That is 321-B.

Q. Okay. What’s -- there’s an exhibit number on the back of it. Just turn it over, if you would.

A. Exhibit No. 555.

Q. Okay. Thank you.

With regard to the next photograph, please, that’s in evidence, and that is 684, and what binder would that -- what exhibit number.

A. That corresponds with Evidence Item No. 321-C, and Exhibit No. 556.

Q. That’s 556 for identification. All right.

And with regard to the next photograph. And that is Exhibit No. 685 that’s in evidence. Do you recognize that, and would you marry that up with the particular exhibit number.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 557.

Q. All right. The next one, please. That is No. 686.

A. That corresponds to Item -- or Exhibit No. 558.

Q. 558. All right. And that is No. 687.

A. That corresponds to Exhibit No. 559.

Q. All right. And then there should be one more, which is Photograph No. 688 in evidence.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 560.

Q. All right. Thank you, Officer. Now, I'd like to ask you a couple of questions about an exhibit that is in your department's Item No. 309, okay.

A. Okay.

Q. Now, were you involved in looking into the Item 309.

A. I was.

Q. And do you recall when it was that you looked into those items.

A. On December 2nd, 2003.

Q. And what did you do with regard to the Item 309.

A. At the time I opened it up, I inventoried the contents, and I believe I removed the pornographic videos out and gave those a sub item.

Q. The adult materials.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry.

THE COURT: He corrected it. Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: The adult materials.

A. The adult materials.

Q. Okay. And do you recall what it was that you removed out of the Exhibit 309 when you saw it.

A. There were two "Barely Legal" DVDs.

Q. And did you repackage those.

A. I did.

Q. And do you recall if you gave them a number when you repackaged them.

A. I did.

Q. What number did you give them.

A. I believe I gave it 309-A.

Q. Now, at a subsequent time, did you also go back into the Exhibit 309 and repackage any other items there.

A. I don’t know that I did. However, I am aware that that happened.
Q. Okay. So you don’t think you were involved in that process.
A. I don’t recall.
Q. Okay. Now, you have an item that is called 363 for your nomenclature.

A. Correct.
Q. And were you involved in reviewing that particular item.
A. Yes, I was.
Q. And at the time that you reviewed it, do you recall what was in there.
A. Yes.
Q. What was in there.
A. There were magazines of adult nature.
Q. And do you recall what day it was that you looked at the item -- your Item 363.
A. That was also done on 11-26, 2003.
Q. And you’ve described to the jury what you did as to Item 321 that you photodocumented. Did you follow that same process with regard to your Item 363.
A. The same procedure, yes.
Q. Okay. And then after you were completed, what did you do with the items that were inside your package 363.
A. Put them back into the package, sealed the package, signed it, and returned it to evidence.
MR. SNEDDON: Tom. Do you want to take a look.
Your Honor, I see we’re a couple minutes from a break. We might save some time if we do this during the break. It’s up to you. Otherwise, I’ll just keep going.

Your Honor, I’d indicate for the record that the items Mr. Mesereau’s now looking at are premarked as Items 530 through 551 for identification purposes.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

THE COURT: All right. We’ll take our morning break.

(Recess taken.)

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you, Your Honor. I think we’ll be able to proceed more expeditiously now.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Detective Bonner, you have a box in front of you.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And you told the ladies and gentlemen of the jury that you had at one point in time removed the articles from an item that you had marked as a sheriff’s exhibit 363, correct.

A. Evidence item number, yes.

Q. Evidence item number.

A. Yes.

Q. And you reviewed those materials, correct.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, I actually -- I misspoke myself. There is a box in front of you, and there’s a box at your feet, correct.

A. There’s also a box at my feet.

Q. And have I asked you, prior to coming into court here today, to review the items contained in those two boxes.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And do you recognize those items.

A. I do.

Q. With regard to those particular items, when and where were they the first time you saw them.

A. The first time I saw them was on 11-26 at the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s main station in Goleta.

Q. I may have asked you this, but if I didn’t, I want to make sure. Did you photodocument those items that were in the original bag, 363.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, when you put them back into the bag, were they in the condition they’re in now, in the binder, or did you just place them back in the bag.

A. They were not in the condition that they are now in. They were still together in magazine form, and I just put them back in the same condition as I pulled them out of that bag.
Q. And with regard to the handling of these magazines, were you using gloves.
A. Yes, I was.
Q. Were you using gloves with regard to the handling of all the magazines that you testified about here this morning.

A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: Now, Your Honor, with regard to the two boxes, I’d like to have them marked, and they are marked, premarked, with the help of the Court, as 530 through 551. Okay.
THE COURT: You’re saying the materials in the boxes, not the boxes. You’re marking --
MR. SNEDDON: Right. Just the materials in the box, Your Honor.
THE COURT: All right.
MR. SNEDDON: And then I’ve shown counsel during the break a series of photographs that have been marked as 689 through 709 for identification purposes.
Q. Now, with regard to the photographs that I just handed you, 689 through 709 - okay. - did I also ask you to review those photographs before you came into court here this morning.
A. Yes, you did.
Q. And did I ask you to compare those photographs with the series of exhibits that have been marked as 530 through 551.
A. That being 3 -- Item 363.
Q. Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. And your Item 363, but our items in evidence that have been marked for identification purposes.
A. Yes.

Q. Okay. We'll get to the numbers in just a second. And did you -- with regard to those photographs, you were asked to compare those with the front pages of each of those -- of the items in the box, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, with regard to the -- to the photographs themselves, do they accurately depict what they purport to represent, which is the front covers of each of those books -- magazines and items.

A. Yes, they do.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. I move that the Items No. 689 through 709 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

MR. MESEREAU: I'm going to object, Your Honor. Chain.

THE COURT: All right. They're admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Detective Bonner, what I'm going to ask you to do now is sort of the same thing we did with the other items, is we're going to put on the Elmo the photographic number that is in evidence and then ask you to identify the specific exhibit number of the binder that corresponds to the front cover of that photograph. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. Now, with regard to -- if we could put the 3237 first one up, which I believe is 689. It's in evidence.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If we could go to "Input 4," Your Honor, please. Thank you.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. With regard to the photograph, 689, that's in evidence, can you find the exhibit number in this case that corresponds with that.

A. The corresponding exhibit number is 531.

Q. 531. Okay.

And is that photograph an accurate depiction, or it does depict the front cover of that Exhibit 531, correct.

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. Let’s go to the next one, 690 in evidence.

With regard to 690, do you have an exhibit number that corresponds to that.

A. I do. It’s 532.

Q. 532. And that’s the cover of that Exhibit 532, correct.

A. It is.

Q. All right. Let’s go to the next one, 691.

With regard to 691, what exhibit number does that correspond to.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 533.

Q. Okay. Let’s go to the next one, photograph 692. What exhibit number does that correspond to.

A. Corresponds to Item No. -- or Exhibit No. 534.

Q. So -- okay. If we could have 693, please, in evidence.

And with regard to the photograph, 693, what exhibit number does that correspond to.

A. I’m sorry, these are slightly out of order.

Q. I’ll tell you what, let’s take that one down and come back to it, by process of elimination, if we can. Let’s just skip that one and go to Photograph No. 694.

A. That corresponds to Exhibit No. 536.

Q. All right. And Photograph 695 in evidence.

A. Corresponds with -- there’s no exhibit.

Q. Must have come off inside there.

All right. Madam Clerk, perhaps you can give us another 537, and I’ll retrieve the other one at the recess and replace it, if you wouldn’t mind.

THE WITNESS: There’s a sticker down here.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: There is a sticker. Okay.

A. 537.

Q. 537. All right. Thank you. Why don’t you just put that back on there.

A. That is not the cover page to this, though.

It's a page from within the magazine. The cover page is missing on this magazine.
Q. So that's from within the magazine itself.
A. Correct.

Q. Okay. But that would be 537.
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And 696 is the photograph.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 538.
Q. 697 in evidence.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 539.
Q. 698.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 540.
Q. 699.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 541.
Q. 700.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 542.
Q. 701.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 543.
Q. 702 in evidence.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 544.
Q. 703.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 545.
Q. 704.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 546.
Q. 705.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 547.
Q. 706.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 548.
Q. 707.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 549.
Q. 708.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 550.

Q. And lastly, 709.
A. Corresponds with Exhibit No. 551.
Q. All right. Thank you.
We can have the lights.
Did you run across your number 653-F in there when you were going through that.

A. I did not.
Q. All right. We'll deal with it later.
Okay. Why don't you take that box and put it on the floor behind you there, because we're done with it for right now.
Showing you Exhibit 565, which is in evidence, do you recognize that.
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Now, with regard to the contents of 565, where was it the first time you saw it.
A. It was within Item 309.
Q. And you've indicated to the jury that you took some items out and separately packaged them; is that correct.
A. That's correct.
Q. And is that your handwriting on the front of that.
A. Yes, it is.
Q. And did you place those items into that bag.
A. I did.
Q. And then seal them.
A. Yes.

Q. And put them back into evidence.
A. Yes.
Q. All right.
Okay. Your Honor, at the break, we had an opportunity for counsel to go through another set of exhibits. And I'm not sure whether they've gone through the photographs, and I'll hand it to counsel right now while I'm giving the exhibits to the officer, and then I'll identify both of them for the record, Your Honor.
THE COURT: All right.
Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Why don't you put this on the side, so we can see you.
I'm handing you two exhibits, one is 470, a black suitcase. Briefcase, actually. Do you see that.
A. I do.
Q. And do you recognize that item.
A. Yes, I do.

Q. And where was that briefcase the first time you saw it.

A. At the Santa Barbara Sheriff's Department main station.

Q. And do you recall -- will you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what you did in connection with that particular briefcase, 470.

A. I handled this briefcase in the same manner as the previous items. I checked it out of evidence, opened it up, and inventoried the contents of it, and then sealed it back up and submitted it back into evidence.

Q. And -- now, there's a photograph in front of you, which I believe is People's No. 86 in evidence. Do you recognize that photograph.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What does that photograph depict.

A. This briefcase and some of the contents within the briefcase.

Q. All right. With regard to the particular briefcase, I've handed you a big box full of exhibits up there. When you examined the contents of the briefcase, did you put the items that you examined back into the briefcase.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I'm sorry, I didn't hear you.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And were you using gloves again.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. All right. And did I ask you in conjunction with your testimony here today - it's almost afternoon now - to look at the box that I handed you with all of the proposed exhibits in it.

A. Yes, you did.

Q. And that is your Item No. 317, correct.

A. Correct.

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, for the record,

we've had marked for identification purposes Items

471 through 529.

And in that connection, I've shown counsel a series of photographs that run from -- the first one is 295, and then after that there's 632, and then 634 through 680. I'm sorry, 681. Let me just double-check that. Yes, 681, I'm sorry.

Q. First of all, I'd like you to please examine the photographs that I've handed you. That's 295, 632, and then 634 through 681.

A. I've finished.

Q. All right. Now, with regard to the photographs that I've just referred you to, do you recognize those photographs.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And did you compare those photographs with the items that are contained inside of the box.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Okay. Now, one moment.

Your Honor, if I haven't done it, I want to have just now -- the items inside the box I believe I've already indicated would be marked as 471 through 529. Did I do that already. Did I do that already. I just wanted to make sure so we didn't have any problems.

Thank you, Madam Clerk.

All right. So I asked you to examine the photographs and to match them up with the items, the Exhibit Nos. 471 through 529, correct.

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, with regard to the items that are in that box that I've referred to, 471 through 529, generically, just could you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury what you observed about those items in terms of what they were when you first saw them on the 26th of November.

A. They are magazines and loose pages of adult or explicit material.

Q. All right. So with regard to the photographs that you were handed, some of those simply are photographs of the -- if it's a one-page explicit material thing, a photograph of that; is that correct.

A. Correct.
Q. And in other cases, there's -- they're the cover sheet of the entire magazine.
A. Correct.
Q. And do those photographs accurately depict what they purport to represent. In other words, do they purport to represent, in the case of if it's one piece of paper, what was photographed.
A. Yes.
Q. Is that correct.
A. Yes.
Q. And if it's a magazine, it's the front cover of that magazine; is that correct.

A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I would move Exhibit 295, 632, and 634 through 681 be admitted into evidence.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Foundation and chain.
THE COURT: The chain objection is overruled. That goes to the weight. I'm not clear on your foundation objection.
MR. MESEREAU: The proof of actual seizure, who seized it, who they gave it to --
THE COURT: They can't hear you in the back. But I heard you.
MR. MESEREAU: It's a chain type of foundational objection. Basically the proof of who seized it, where they seized it, who they handed it to. There's evidence that there's no record of any of that.
THE COURT: All right. Counsel, the issue --
MR. SNEDDON: We established that already.
THE COURT: I'm going to overrule the objection. The chain, as I've stated, goes to weight. Go ahead.
MR. SNEDDON: Thank you, Your Honor. And we'll need the Elmo again, Your Honor.
Q. Just to clarify, Officer, before we start this process, the items that you're about to testify to with regard to the photographs and the exhibits

there came out of that briefcase, 470, correct. Excuse me, the briefcase that’s in front of you in the Photograph 86.
A. Yes. I know it as Item 317.
Q. All right. Let’s put up 295. And can you find the exhibit number to which that corresponds.
A. That corresponds to Exhibit No. 471.
Q. Now, you have a binder in front of you that has a number of different materials, correct.
A. That’s correct.
Q. And with regard to the materials in that particular binder, are these the loose materials that were found inside the suitcase.
A. Yes, they are.
Q. Okay. Let’s continue, then. If we can put up 632 that is in evidence, do you recognize that.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 472.
Q. Okay. And with regard to 634.
A. That corresponds to Exhibit No. 473.
Q. Okay. 635.
A. That correspond to Exhibit No. 474.
Q. 636.
A. That corresponds to Exhibit No. 475.
Q. And exhibit in evidence 630 -- what’s the next number you have there, the photograph number. 637. That would be the binder.
A. That corresponds to Exhibit No. 510.
Q. That is a whole magazine, correct.

A. That’s a whole magazine.
Q. It was when you first saw it.
A. Yes.
Q. And it’s now in a binder.
A. Yes.
Q. 638.
A. That corresponds to Exhibit No. 476.
Q. 640. I’m sorry, I skipped one. 639. I think that's a magazine.

A. It's a loose page, Exhibit No. 511.
Q. Okay. 640.
A. It's going to correspond with Exhibit No. 477.
Q. Okay. Let's go to 641, which I believe is a magazine.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 512.
Q. And 642. Did you lose a tag again.
A. We lost a tag again. It appears I have a 513.
Q. That's correct. 643.
A. I have Exhibit No. 514.
Q. 644.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 515.
Q. 645.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 516.
Q. 646.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 517.
Q. 647.
A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 518.
Q. 648. I have a note that it's a notebook.
A. Upside down.
Q. Oh, okay.
A. Okay. That corresponds with Item -- I'm sorry, Exhibit No. 519. And that is not the cover page, but it is the second page within it, which identifies what it is.
Q. All right. 649.
A. Corresponds with Exhibit No. 520.
Q. 650.
A. Corresponds with Exhibit No. 521.
Q. 3 -- I'm sorry, 651.
A. Corresponds with Exhibit No. 522.
Q. 652.
A. Corresponds with Exhibit No. 523.
Q. 653.
A. Corresponds with Exhibit No. 524, and it's a loose page.
Q. Okay. 654. And Y. That might help you.

317-Y.

A. Okay. That's Item No. -- or, I'm sorry, Exhibit No. 479, and that's a centerfold. It's one of the pages of it.

Q. Okay. 655.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 480, and that's also one page within a centerfold.

Q. 656.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 481, and that's also a centerfold.

Q. 657. You might want to look at 317-BB. I think there's --

A. Exhibit No. 525.

Q. Now, is there a -- never mind.
658.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 483. It's also a centerfold.

Q. 659.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 485. It's a centerfold.

Q. 660.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 487. It's a loose page.

Q. 488. I'm sorry, 661.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 488. It's a centerfold.

Q. 662.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 489. It's a loose page.

Q. 663.

A. Corresponds to Exhibit No. 490, is the cover off of the magazine.

Q. 664.

A. Exhibit No. 491. It's a loose page.

Q. All right. 665.

A. I'm sorry. Exhibit No. 492. It's a loose page.

Q. And 666.

A. Exhibit No. 494. Loose page.
Q. And 667.
A. Exhibit No. 495. It's the cover off the magazine.
Q. 668.
A. Exhibit No. 496. It's a centerfold.
Q. 669.
A. Exhibit No. 497. Loose page.
Q. 670.
A. Exhibit No. 498. Loose page.
Q. 671.
A. Exhibit No. 499. Loose page.
Q. 672.
A. That's Exhibit No. 500. Centerfold layout.
Q. 673.
A. Exhibit No. 501. Centerfold.
Q. Exhibit No. 674.
A. It's Exhibit No. 502. Centerfold.
Q. 675.
A. It's Exhibit No. 503. Again, centerfold.
Q. 677 -- I'm sorry, 676.
A. Exhibit No. 504. It was a pamphlet.
Q. 677.
A. Exhibit No. 505, centerfold.

Q. 678.
A. Exhibit No. 506. Cover page of a magazine.
Q. 679.
A. Exhibit No. 507. Loose page.
Q. And 680.
A. Exhibit No. 508, centerfold.
Q. Lastly, 681.
A. Exhibit No. 528.
Q. All right. I think we can turn the lights back on.
All right. I want to ask you some questions with regard to the briefcase, Exhibit 470. Now, you told the ladies and gentlemen of the jury I believe -- I believe on November the 26th of 2003, you opened the briefcase and photodocumented the materials inside, correct.
A. That's correct.

Q. And inventoried them.

A. Correct.

Q. Now, when was the next time that you became involved in dealing with the materials that were contained inside of the black briefcase marked as 470.

A. On July 20th, 2004.

Q. And would you tell the ladies and gentlemen of the jury exactly what it was that you did on July 20th.

A. On July 20th, I went to the Santa Barbara Superior Court, met with the clerk who was in charge of controlling the evidence that was booked in the grand jury. And I, while wearing gloves, opened up this item and photodocumented exactly what was within there. That included not just the cover pages, but every single page and every single piece of paper that was inside that item that was booked into grand jury evidence.

And I then closed it back up, gave it back to the clerk who was maintaining custody of this item, and I prepared a CDR disk that contained those digital images that I took of the contents.

Q. Now, did you at some time go back -- did you at some time again become involved in the handling of the Exhibit 470.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When was the next time that you were involved in that.

A. On October 1st, 2004.

Q. And the purpose for that. What did you do and where did you go.

A. A court order was signed that allowed me to check this item out of evidence and bring it back to the sheriff’s department to have it forensically examined and processed.

Q. Now, did you do that.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you work with any other individual in that process.

A. I -- initially, after checking it out, I brought it to Detective Lafferty. I later went back and I met with Detective Spinner, and we went through and did a much more detailed inventory of those items to ensure that each one had a sub item number.

Q. Now, Detective Spinner, do you know, he works for the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department.

A. Actually, he is retired, so --

Q. He was brought back for this case.

A. Correct.

Q. To do some fingerprint evaluation.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Now, in the process of doing the -- what you call documentation of the alpha numbers given to these, were some -- did Detective Spinner already have some of the magazines at the time that you went through this process.

A. That’s correct. Some of the items had already been processed and were split up and in binders, such as you see here today. Some of the other items were not in binders. They were still in complete magazine form.

Q. And the process that you did with Detective Spinner was simply to make sure that all of those items were accounted for; is that correct.

A. Correct. And to give each one a sub item number, and document that on something that was written.

Q. And you did that.

A. Yes.

Q. And that’s why we see on the display here that they have an A, B, C, and in some cases AA or GG, or whatever.

A. Correct.

Q. That was the process you documented with Detective Spinner.

A. Correct.

Q. Now, at the time that you went to the Santa Barbara Superior Court on July 20th of 2004 and photodocumented the contents of the Exhibit 740 (sic), to your knowledge, had some items already been removed and sent to forensic examination.

A. Prior to grand jury.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And that's documented in reports, correct.

A. I believe so. Not mine.

Q. Right.

MR. SNEDDON: Mr. Mesereau.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

MR. SNEDDON: Madam Clerk, I'm going to need two exhibit numbers. Next in order would be fine.

THE CLERK: It would -- have you used the 3255 numbers through 740 yet.

MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me, Your Honor.

May the record reflect that I opened these packages at Mr. Sneddon's direction.

MR. SNEDDON: Actually, that one was open, but the small one was closed, correct.

MR. MESEREAU: It would be No. 122980, and that's also No. 332.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

MR. SNEDDON: For the record, Your Honor, the items that Mr. Mesereau just examined, I'm going to have the first one marked, it's a small brown bag, which is the No. 332, which is the one he did open, and that's Exhibit 720 for identification purposes.

And then the next one's a larger brown bag with Item No. #305 at the top, and that's marked as 721, and that one was already opened.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you.

Q. Please take a look at 720. Do you recognize that.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And where was that the first time that you saw it.

A. I found this item within a briefcase which was in the upstairs area of Michael Jackson's bedroom at Neverland Ranch.

Q. And did you then take it into your custody and control.

A. I did.

Q. And what did you do with it.

A. I provided it to Detective Padilla, told him where I found it, what it was. And he then processed it, giving it an item number, sealing it.

Q. And is the exhibit in the same condition that it was when you seized it on that particular day.

A. Yes, it is.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Move that it be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: And the next item is 721. Do you recognize that item.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. All right. And where was that item the first item that you saw it.

A. This item was sitting on a piece of furniture within one of the bathrooms in Michael Jackson's bedroom area.

Q. And it's a photograph, correct.

A. It is.

Q. And do you recognize the person in the photograph.

A. Yes, I do. It's Macaulay Culkin.

Q. And with regard to that particular exhibit, go ahead and take it out of the bag for just a second. Just look at it for yourself, if you would. Now, with regard to that particular exhibit -- 721; is that correct.

A. That's correct.

Q. 721, it looks like, on the photograph that you withdrew from the brown bag, it has some writing on it, correct.

A. It does.
Q. Was that writing -- was it in that condition when you first saw it.
A. Yes.
Q. Did it have that writing on it.
A. Yes, it did.
Q. And then after you took that particular item, what did you do with it.
A. I again took it down to Detective Padilla, provided it to him, told him where I found it, what it was. He then processed it by putting it into a sealed evidence bag, and noting it on his report.
Q. And is it in the same condition as when you seized the item on November the 11th.
A. For the most part.
Q. What's different about it.
A. There's a couple of corner pieces that have fallen off into the bag.
Q. But they're in the bag, correct.

A. Yes.
Q. So everything in substance is there that was there when you seized it.
A. Yes.
MR. SNEDDON: All right. Move that that be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.
MR. MESEREAU: No objection.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I think I'm finished. No further questions. Thank you.
THE COURT: Cross-examine.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. You have answered questions about a large number of what appear to be --
MR. SNEDDON: Tom, excuse me.
Your Honor, there is one other thing I forgot to do. I've just been reminded.

If you don’t mind, Counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: No, not at all.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you. Appreciate it, Tom.

Your Honor, I have a photograph that’s been marked as 151 for identification purposes. May I show it to the witness.

THE COURT: Yes.

FURTHER DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. Do you recognize the items depicted in the photograph, No. 151.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Where and when were those items the first time you saw them.

A. These items were situated on the ground within one of the closets in Michael Jackson’s bedroom area.

Q. Does that photograph accurately depict the condition of those items at the time that you seized them.

A. With the exception that I have picked them up, yes.

Q. And you’ve picked them up.

A. Yes.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Move that 151 be admitted into evidence, Your Honor.

MR. MESEREAU: No objection.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: All right. Would you just show to the ladies and gentlemen of the jury the photograph that’s in evidence.

Now, what -- where were those -- where were those found specifically in Mr. Jackson’s bedroom.

A. Within his bedroom, there were two bathroom areas. One, as you enter, was on the right. The other was on the left. Both bathroom areas had a closet that went off of it. This one was on the left side. It was a locked closet area. As you entered the closet, it made an L shape going to the left. It was within that L-shaped -- the bottom of the L on the ground on the left side.

THE COURT: Counsel, can’t you put that up on the screen so the people out there can see.

Q. BY MR. SNEDDON: Okay. I think we got -- I kind of interrupted you. Could you tell me where exactly it was, what closet it was that you found it in, what bathroom.

A. Okay. Again, there were two bathrooms: One that was on the right as you entered; one that was on the left. This one was on the left side. As you entered the bathroom, there was a closet that went off to the right. This was a locked closet that we had opened. This closet was actually in an L shape. As I went in, I went into the bottom of the L, continued down, and it was on the left side on the ground.

Q. And then did you actually take the items depicted in the photograph, 152, in evidence, and book them into evidence.

A. I took them down to Detective Padilla, again told him where I found it, what they were, and he then booked them.

MR. SNEDDON: All right. Thank you, Counsel. And thank you, Court. No further questions.

FURTHER CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Regarding the items that you were just shown in the last exhibit, there’s a bottle of Jack Daniels and a bottle of what appears to be red wine, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. Do you know if those bottles were ever fingerprinted.

A. I do not know.

Q. Did you have any responsibility for determining if they should be chemically tested for anything.

A. Not responsibility, but involvement.

Q. And what was your involvement.

A. We spoke about it amongst all of us that were part of the team at that point in time. And I know that they were sent off for DNA swabbing, or that they were swabbed, and that was sent off to be compared. I do not know whether or not they were fingerprinted.

Q. But they were DNA swabbed, as far as you know.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever get any results.

A. I believe there were no results.

Q. Okay. “No results” meaning what.

A. That we did not get any comparable DNA matter off of them.

Q. Were you responsible for recommending DNA testing of any of these materials that you’ve talked about today.

A. Again, “responsible” probably isn’t the word. “Involved” is probably the more correct word to use.

Q. Do you know if any of the materials that you’ve identified today were DNA tested.

A. I know that items within 317 were sent off to the Department of Justice laboratory to ascertain if there were materials on the items which could be tested for DNA.

Q. And just -- just for the record, Item 317 is what.

A. I’m sorry. It’s the briefcase that had these materials in it.

Q. Okay. And to your knowledge, there was no DNA found, correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. And you’re talking about -- you’re talking about DNA testing of the briefcase, correct.

A. Of the materials within the briefcase.

Q. Yes. Are you talking about the briefcase itself, too.

A. No.

Q. Okay. And what you’re saying is no DNA of Gavin Arvizo, or Star Arvizo, or any Arvizo, were found, correct.

A. No DNA at all, including theirs.

Q. Okay. Now, you say you were involved in decisions regarding DNA testing, right.

A. Correct.

Q. What does “involved” mean.

A. We had meetings where we discussed what was going on, who was going to do what, and we -- this type of -- you know, it included dispositions of evidence, who was going to go do interviews with whom. And we spoke about what we wanted to do and in what order that we wanted to do it.

Q. And who was at these meetings typically.

A. Typically would include, at minimum, Lieutenant Klapakis, Sergeant Robel, Detective Zelis, Detective Alvarez, and myself, and many times also included members of the prosecution.

Q. Now, you’ve identified a lot of what appear to be commercially produced adult material, right.

A. Correct.

Q. And all of it appears to be commercially produced, for the most part, doesn’t it.

A. For the most part, yes.

Q. And all of it appears to be the type of material you can lawfully purchase, correct.

A. Depends.

Q. Well, you can go to most magazine stands that sell this kind of material and find thousands of magazines that you can buy like that, correct.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And it goes without saying, Mr. Jackson is not being charged with possessing or anything related to this kind -- illegal adult material, is he.

A. We have not charged as such, no.

Q. Okay. Have you actually checked to see if you can find these magazines available in a commercial market type of situation.

A. No, I have not.

Q. Have you gone to newsstands to see if you can find this material available at newsstands.

A. No.

Q. Have you ever done any -- made any effort to find out where you can actually go buy this stuff.

A. No.

Q. Okay. And you don’t know where a lot of this material originated, correct.

A. I do not.

Q. You don’t know if it was mailed to Mr. Jackson or purchased on his behalf, correct.

A. For the most part, no.

Q. Okay. With respect to DNA testing, was the DNA testing that you’re aware of limited to materials in the briefcase.

A. As far as I’m aware of, yes.

Q. Okay. And as far as the other exhibits you’ve talked about today, which appear to be, for the most, part adult material, you’re not aware of any DNA testing on those exhibits, correct.

A. I am not.

Q. If any were done, would you most likely know about it.

A. Probably, yes.

Q. And that would be because of your involvement that you’ve just described.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, were you involved in actually searching and seizing some of this material.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Okay. Was that your primary role during the day of the search.

A. Initially it was not.

Q. What initially was your role.

A. Initially myself and Detective Alvarez were assigned to go conduct an interview with a witness.

Q. Okay. And then following that, you went to

Mr. Jackson’s main residence, correct.

A. Neverland, correct.

Q. And you started conducting a search, right.

A. Initially, again, I was assigned to assist in interviews.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, let me ask some questions about Exhibits 471 to 529. Okay. And they’re the items that you say were found inside of 470, which is the black briefcase, right.

A. Item 3 -- I’m sorry, I normally know things by our item numbers.

Q. The black briefcase is Item 470, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And Exhibits 471 to 529 were found inside of that briefcase, right. Do you know.

A. I -- I cannot -- if you show me the item, I mean, obviously we’re dealing with a lot of numbers here. If you tell me, like, our evidence item, I can tell you whether or not it came from that.

Q. Let me approach it from a different way. I think you said at one point, in response to the prosecutor’s questions, that you had checked out items out of 470, which is the black briefcase, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. And I believe you said those items were 471 to 529.

A. I have identified them as such by cross-referencing them, looking at the materials, looking at the actual physical items and also checking it against our evidence item number, which is how we track items, as opposed to the court tracking of items.

Q. Am I correct that you testified you checked out Items 471 to 529.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So you know what they are, right.

A. Yes.

Q. And presumably before you testified today, you went over some of this with the prosecutor for the government, right.
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And when did you do that.
A. I did that on Tuesday.
Q. Okay. Did you have any items of evidence with you at that point.
A. No, I did not.
Q. Okay. How did you discuss what numbers you were going to testify about. Maybe that’s not a good question.
You clearly discussed what numbers you were going to testify about, true.
A. Correct. Yes.
Q. And did you use anything to facilitate your ability to prepare for your testimony today.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. What did you use.
A. District Attorney Sneddon provided me, one, with the pictures that he has introduced.
Q. Okay.
A. They also were in possession of the actual physical evidence items, okay. I also compared that with my reports that I authored and with pictures that we have taken.

Q. Okay. Now, you took them out originally. Was it at the sheriff’s department.
A. The first time.
Q. Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. And what did you do with them.
A. I pulled them -- I opened up, for instance, on this particular one, the briefcase, broke the seals, I opened it up. I then inspected the contents of it. As I was doing that, I was dictating a report of the contents of it, and taking photographs of the contents. Once that was completed, I then put the materials back where they were originally, closed it, sealed it, and then booked it back into evidence.

Q. And were you alone when you did that.
A. Yes.
Q. At some point, did you separate some of these materials yourself.
A. For Item 317.
Q. Any item.
A. Item 309, yes.
Q. What you did was you took the item apart, right.
A. I took two of the items which were contained within the original evidence, Item 309, which was the briefcase, that being the two adult material DVDs, and I put them into the separate bag.

Q. Okay. Did you ever separate any of the photographs that are contained in the exhibits you referred to today.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Did you ever pull any pages or photos out from any attached type of magazine.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Do you know if anybody ever did.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Somebody did.
A. Yes.
Q. Who did that.
A. Forensics personnel.
Q. So they took magazines and actually separated pages out, correct.
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And do you know when that was done.
A. I do not.
Q. Okay. How do you know it was done.
A. I have read reports. And again, during our meetings where we discussed what’s going on with the case, again I’ve heard conversation to that effect.
Q. And were the items then returned to you.
A. No, they would have been returned to the evidence locker, to our property office.

Q. So they would have been returned to the evidence locker, separated out from what they originally were like, right.
A. Correct.
Q. And basically what you’re saying is people at forensics, when asked to test a particular item, would take that item apart, right.
A. Correct.
Q. And your understanding was they would take that item apart, because that would facilitate forensic analysis of some kind, right.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And you were part of the -- you were part of the group that decided which items to forensically test in that manner, correct.
A. Discussed. Decisions are done at a higher level than a detective.
Q. Who made the decisions to forensically test some items and not forensically test others.
A. At minimum, probably with Lieutenant Klapakis, and it probably also involved members of the prosecution.
Q. Okay. And that would be Prosecutor Sneddon, Zonen, Auchincloss.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. All right. Now, there must have been meetings where you had discussed whether or not to forensically test certain items, correct.

A. Correct.
Q. And you would presumably look at an item and decide, “Do we want to test this or not,” right.
A. Sometimes look at them; sometimes they weren’t checked out. For the most part we check them out one time, and allow them to look at them, just like we allowed you guys to look at them. And based upon that, we categorized them and began to make a priority list of which items should be done first.
Q. Now, am I correct that no forensic testing of any of the items you’ve identified today was done till after the grand jury met.

A. I do not believe that’s correct.

Q. Okay. What items that you identified today were forensically tested before the grand jury convened.

A. I believe certain items within 317 were forensically tested and subsequently sent out to the California Department of Justice for further testing.

Q. Okay. And were you involved in that process.

A. No, I wasn’t.

Q. Okay. Well, to this date, you’ve never found Gavin, or Star, or any Arvizos’ DNA on anything, right.

A. We have not.

Q. So the first time you checked out Items 471 to 529 was to photograph them, as you just described, right.

A. Correct.

Q. And then you repackaged them and put them back in the condition you found them and rebooked them into evidence, right.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Were you responsible for conducting any fingerprint analysis of any of the items contained in 470, the briefcase.

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Okay. Do you often do that in your type of work.

A. Never have.

Q. Okay. Are you familiar with what is called ALS, an alternate light source type of test for fluids.

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Do you know if that was ever done on any of the items you’ve identified today.

A. I believe it has.

Q. And which items would they be.

A. I believe it was done with certain items within Item 317.

Q. Were you part of the group that decided to make that type of test or, excuse me, to do that type of test.

A. I was part of the group that discussed it. Again, the decision would have been made, but, yes, I was aware of it.
Q. Now, if a decision was made to do forensic testing, would you be the one to essentially refer it to forensic people in this case.
A. Not in this case, no.
Q. You’ve done it in other cases, though, right.
A. Yes.
Q. Typically, once a decision was made, who would be the one to actually be responsible for referring an item of evidence for forensic analysis.
A. Typically.
Q. Yes.
A. Under any other or most other instances, it would be the lead investigating officer.
Q. Okay. And in this case, who were you referring to.
A. Well, in this case Detective -- or Sergeant Robel was the lead investigating officer.
Q. Okay. So as far as you know, was he the one that had the responsibility, once a decision was made, to refer an item of evidence for forensic examination.
A. In this particular case, I believe it would have been actually Lieutenant Klapakis.
Q. Okay. Okay. Let’s get back to the first time you removed items from the black briefcase, which is No. 470. You put them back, and do you know what -- you rebooked them into evidence. And to your knowledge, what happened after that to that black briefcase.

A. Other than the times that I personally came into contact with it, I have not had any contact. I don’t know for certain. However, I do know that we have checked items out for you guys to look at, as well as for the prosecuting attorneys to look at, and then it has gone out to grand jury, and then also to forensics personnel.

Q. Okay. When did you next handle the black briefcase, No. 470, and its contents.

A. That would have been on July 20th.

Q. And again, the purpose for that was.

A. There was a court order that basically stated, prior to us being able to remove these items, I had to go and photographically document the contents of the item, and turn those photographs over to you guys, and eventually to provide a copy to the court as a replacement for what we were taking.

Q. Okay. And did you repackage these items again.

A. I put them back into the briefcase.

Q. And how did you do that.

A. Put them back in where I found them as I opened it.

Q. And you had gloves on your hand, correct.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you have gloves on your hands at all times when you handled 470.

A. Yes.

Q. Would that include at the main residence as well during the day of the search.

A. I didn’t handle Item 470 at the main residence.

Q. Never touched it that day.

A. No.

Q. Now, to your knowledge, an alternative light source type of test can be done in approximately a day, correct.

A. I don’t know how long it takes.

Q. Okay. And to your knowledge, it’s not a destructive type of test, meaning it doesn’t actually --

A. No.

Q. -- harm or destroy an item of evidence,

right.
A. No.
Q. Okay. And I think what you’re saying is at some point people at forensics must have repackaged the material and sent it back to re-book it into evidence, right.
A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Were you part of that process at all.
A. No.
Q. Okay. Is it true, based upon what you know, that no fingerprint analysis of Item 470, the black briefcase and its contents, was done till approximately one year after the search at Neverland.
A. That sounds about correct.
Q. Okay. Were you involved in the decision to wait that long --
A. No.
Q. -- to test it.
In fact, those items in 470, the black briefcase and the contents, were not tested for fingerprints till approximately November of 2004, right.
A. I know it happened after I checked it out.
Q. Okay. Okay. Now, you appear to have focused on Item 470 more than you did a lot of the adult magazines you discussed today, correct.
A. What do you mean by --
Q. Well, you seem to have been handling and repackaging and handling and repackaging 470 --
A. Correct.
Q. -- in a way that you were not with a lot of the adult material that you referred to today, correct.
A. Correct.

Q. But, are you saying that the question whether or not to forensically test that material all came up for discussion with the group of people you mentioned.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And typically would the group sit around and look at something and decide where it was found and make a decision whether or not to test it.

A. We wouldn't look at it. Again, we would discuss it. These items were, at the time, in evidence lock-up still, and basically we went through what was found, what was found within it, and how it correlated to the case that we were investigating and prioritized from that.

Q. Okay. Okay. With regard to the items you've discussed today other than 470, do you recall, after they were initially booked into evidence, your retrieving them for any purpose.

A. Again, the first time was when I pulled it out to inventory the contents. I have also pulled it out for you guys to look at, as well as for members of the prosecution to look at, and that's what I -- and then also to bring them to court.

Q. Okay.

THE COURT: Counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I want to handle the break a little differently.

MR. MESEREAU: Sure.

THE COURT: I'd like to have the jury taken out now. We'll start your break a couple minutes early. That's a reward.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: And then we'll start our break just in a couple of minutes for the people in the courtroom. I just want to address an issue.

You can step down, Officer. We're on our break.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right. I was just going to make a ruling. I told you this morning that I had a tentative ruling, which I gave you, and I wanted to look at the materials a little further that were submitted to the Court before I made my ruling.

The Court will grant the defense motion not to allow that evidence in. The primary reason is, it does appear to be cached material. There wouldn't be any way of knowing whether anyone looked at it or not. It doesn't seem to be material, as it doesn't relate to the area -- the time area that I'm talking about. So that will be the Court's ruling.

We're in recess.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor --

THE CLERK: We did not have those exhibits marked.

THE COURT: Oh, I need those exhibits marked that you referred to in your opening --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Yes. That's fine.

THE COURT: -- these.

(Recess taken.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor. No further questions.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: Anything further, Counsel.

MR. SNEDDON: Unfortunately, yes. It will be brief.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SNEDDON:

Q. You were asked by Mr. Mesereau with regard to the time frame for which the contents of 3 -- what you call 317, we're calling 470, the black briefcase, okay.

A. Okay.

Q. They were sent for fingerprint analysis around November of 2004, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, with regard to those items inside of that briefcase, were they sent to other forensic evaluation prior to the time that they were fingerprinted.

A. Yes, they were.

Q. Was that according to the game plan that was put together by the group as to how those things should be processed.

A. Yes, they were.

Q. And the forensic analysis for the same exhibits that were eventually fingerprinted began very early on.

A. Yes, it was.

MR. SNEDDON: Nothing further.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

Call your next witness.

THE BAILIFF: Mr. Zonen is --

MR. SNEDDON: Everybody's leaving me, Judge.

THE BAILIFF: Mr. Zonen went to get your next witness.

MR. SNEDDON: They're getting him. Mr.

Auchincloss's witness, Your Honor. He should be coming.

THE COURT: Oh, I decided the time Monday for you to come in is 11:30. We'll start the jury at 11:30.

A JUROR: Thank you.

THE COURT: Come forward, please.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, our next witness will be Dr. Antonio Cantu.

THE COURT: Come forward to the witness stand, please. When you get to the witness stand, remain standing, face the clerk and raise your right hand.

ANTONIO A. CANTU

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Thank you. My name is Antonio A. Cantu. Last name is spelled C-a-n-t-u.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, could I inquire who the people are who are standing in the aisleway.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes, you may.

Your Honor --

MR. SANGER: I did ask the Court.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm sorry.

THE COURT: The Court doesn't know.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: So I will be happy to explain.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, as we mentioned in chambers, we have a demonstration of the Scenescope, which is the technology that was used in this case for purposes of finding latent fingerprints.

And if -- with the Court's permission, I would like to allow our -- Detective Sutcliffe to set up the Scenescope while I'm beginning my examination.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If that's permissible.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good afternoon, Dr. Cantu.

A. Good afternoon, sir.

Q. Who do you work for, please.

A. I work for the United States Secret Service, the Forensic Services Division within the United States Secret Service.

Q. And what do you do for the Secret Service.

A. I am the chief scientist, research scientist, for the Forensic Services Division. And my many duties includes the chemistry and physics of things having to do with documents. For example, fingerprints, or inks on paper, or any other items that may be found on a document.

Q. How long have you worked for the Secret Service in this capacity.

A. Well, I’ve been with the Secret Service about 20 years. And I’ve been working in this particular area, among others, for that extended period of time.

Q. And tell me about what training you’ve had that qualifies you for your position there. Maybe I’ll back up. First of all, tell me specifically what your title is with the Secret Service.

A. I’m a chief forensic scientist.

Q. And what qualifies you for that position. What training have you had.

A. Well, first of all, I have a degree in chemistry. Chemical physics, actually. And I’ve had some training in -- in forensic science. I spent about ten years at the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Laboratory, where I developed the expertise particularly in the area of the analysis of documents from a chemical and physical point of view.

Q. Have you had -- tell me about your experiences with the Secret Service. Have your -- in terms of what work you’ve done for them in the past.

A. Most of the work that I have done for the Secret Service falls into two general areas. I spent part of my time over there doing some work in the area called protective research, which has to do with coming up with countermeasures to possible threats that would involve chemical, or biological, or different materials.

But the rest of the time has been really the area of forensic science, where my expertise has been mostly in the area of the analysis of documents from a chemical and physical point of view, as I mentioned.

Q. Have you had any published papers in the area of forensic science.

A. I’ve already published about 26 papers that I have in the field of forensic science.

Q. Any of them in fingerprint analysis, or --

A. There are -- about seven of those are in fingerprints, and two are pending publication at the moment.

Q. How long have you been involved in the chemistry of fingerprints.

A. In excess of 20 years.

Q. And can you tell me what the International Fingerprint Research Group is.

A. That is a group of international experts that, most of which, specialize in the area of coming up with new technology for visualizing fingerprints, for developing fingerprints. And they are -- the biggest centers involved in this are Israel, England, Australia, and of course us in the United States.

And we started that group at the U.S. Secret Service back in the middle ‘80s. And now we meet every couple of years, different parts of the -- Europe and the United States and Canada.

Q. Are you involved in developing new techniques in locating latent fingerprints.

A. Yes. New techniques particularly in the visualization of fingerprints. We are responsible for developing a new technique for visualizing fingerprints, particularly those that are visualized normally by the use of ninhydrin. And it’s a technique for essentially looking at fingerprints on paper and coming up with better, more sensitive methods.

There’s another technique for looking at the fats and oils in fingerprints, and we helped develop new advances in that area, being able to bring them out better, and looking at weaker prints and being able to see them better with this technology.

And then thirdly, I’ve been involved in a technique that has to do with the use of ultraviolet light basically in visualizing fingerprints.

Q. Tell me, what does the term “latent fingerprint” mean.

A. It’s not noticeable. I mean, it’s basically a fingerprint that is not noticeable to the human eye but becomes noticeable by means of either chemical or physical techniques.

Q. And can you explain for the jury exactly what it is, from a chemistry point of view, that creates a fingerprint on a surface when a human hand touches it.

A. Well, our fingers bear certain chemicals on them. These chemicals are on the surface of the hand. And every time you touch something, there is some transferability of those chemicals onto the surface that you touch.

And what we do, in our field, is try to find methods of making those things be visible, either by optical methods or chemical methods or physical methods. And to be able to do that, one has to, first of all, know what is in fingerprint residue, that is, what chemicals, so you know what sort of reagents to use to make them visible. So that’s the general philosophy of -- that is used in developing fingerprints.

Q. Can I have just a moment.

A. Yes.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. So tell me specifically -- you mentioned that there are biological substances that are left behind by a fingerprint, by the human hand.

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Are those -- can you describe the basic grouping of chemicals that are left behind by a human fingerprint.

A. There are several chemicals. I can generally group them into those that are water-soluble chemicals, and they include amino acids, and those that are water insoluble, and they are the ones that are normally referred to as the fats or oils, or more precisely, lipids.

And the water-soluble ones contain amino acids, proteins, salts, and other things. But it is the amino acids that are really the target items that we look at to try to visualize these things.

As far as the water insoluble ones, it's usually the lipids or the fats and oils that we use as the materials that we target chemicals or methods to be able to visualize these.

Q. So, tell me, what are the biological origins of the water-soluble group of materials that is left in fingerprints.

A. Well, I'll give you an answer to both the water soluble and water insoluble. The water soluble ones are the ones that are found mostly on the palms of your hand or the soles of your feet.

And there you have one type of gland referred to as an eccrine gland, and they are the ones that release the amino acids and certain proteins that are water dispersible, and certain salts.

But there are other glands as well. There's some that you have that are different from the eccrine gland. The armpits or the groin area have glands referred to as apocrine glands, and they release other forms of water-soluble material.

And then the third group of glands that we have in our skin are referred to as the sebaceous glands, and these are the ones that actually put out the -- the lipids or the fats and oils. And they exist in the scalp and the face and the nose area.

But -- and of course the -- anywhere where you have hair you would have these glands as well.

Q. So if I understand correctly, your hand doesn’t have any oil glands.

A. That’s correct.

Q. Or fingers.

MR. SANGER: I’m sorry, I’m going to interrupt for just a second.

I understand Detective Sutcliffe is going to be a witness, and I didn’t object to him just coming in during the preliminaries here and helping to set this up, but I don’t think he should be here during the testimony.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s fine. I will call him back for the demonstration, if that’s permissible.

MR. SANGER: But all witnesses are excluded on both sides.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I did notify counsel that Detective Sutcliffe was here setting it up when he was doing so.

(To Detective Sutcliffe) All right. We’ll call you back in, Detective, as soon as we get to the demonstration. Thank you.

Q. All right. So getting back to these substances that leave fingerprints, there’s no lipids or oil glands, sebaceous glands, in your fingertips; is that true.

A. True. Yes, that is correct.

Q. But sometimes you will leave lipids or oils or fatty substances that are produced by your body by your sebaceous glands on a fingerprint.

A. That is correct.

Q. And how does the oil get on the finger.

A. Normally by touching your face or your hair would be one way of transferring that material onto your fingers.

Q. I see. And is that a common way of establishing a fingerprint that’s based on fatty oils, or oils.

A. Yes. If you find the fatty oils in there, it's usually assumed that they come from that contact, or perhaps handling something exogenous, something outside, like face creams and lotions or food.

Q. Okay.

A. Stuff like that.

Q. So is that a third grouping that can produce a fingerprint. Foreign substances.

A. Yes.

Q. Nonbiological substances, or something that came outside the body.

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. So, tell me, explain to me what optical methods are used in visualizing these latent prints when they're left behind.

A. Optical methods would be -- there are about four methods that I will describe. One of them is just a visual examination of the material that you're looking at that may have the fingerprints. And occasionally lighting in a certain direction. Or if a print, for example, is one which is found on something like clay or putty, you can actually see the imprint in there, very, very simply. And -- otherwise, you have to use other methods.

Now, there are cases as well where you have a print that's heavy laden with material, and you touch something, and then you can say, "Oh, you made a smudge on the glass," or, "a smudge on the T.V.," or, "a smudge on my screen." That's, again, some of the residue that you leave behind. And sometimes that could be actually seen without anything else but just proper illumination. When some of these fail and cannot be photographed or documented, then there are other methods that are used.

For example, you could use ultraviolet light. And there's certain proteins and amino acids that actually fluoresce in -- when illuminated with ultraviolet light. They fluoresce in the ultraviolet. Tryptophan is one such material that does that. And for that, you illuminate with the ultraviolet light and view it in the ultraviolet region.

And then there are other cases in which you may find fluorescence, but in this case, visible. That is, you illuminate with a visible light and then block it with, for example, a green light produced by a laser, and then you block that with orange goggles and you see some fluoresence. And if it’s inherent, if it comes from the skin, that is normally due to perhaps bilirubin - that’s a biological chemical - that may be in the hand.

And then lastly, a method that is used for very smooth surfaces, very glass-like surfaces, would be a reflectance technique. You illuminate, and you view this thing in a reflected mode. And the most sensitive of those would be viewing in the ultraviolet. That is, you illuminate with ultraviolet, then you have to have something that sees in the ultraviolet. So there’s imaging devices that are capable of viewing in the ultraviolet, and that’s what we use.

Q. So if I understand correctly, you might use different methods depending upon the surface. Is that fair to say.

A. That’s --

Q. For looking for latents.

A. That’s correct.

Q. And is it also fair to say that different methods might capture a fingerprint that is amino-acid based or water-soluble based. True.

A. Uh --

Q. Some methods are designed to capture the protein-based residue. Is that fair to say.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are some methods more suitable for capturing the oil-based residue.

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Okay. So I didn’t ask you this question, but I think the jury understands it.

Is it true that the -- the amino or protein product that might be left behind, is that something that comes from the finger itself.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So the amino acids are something that your finger secretes.

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. All right. So tell me, if I touch something, does that mean it’s going to leave a fingerprint.

A. Not necessarily.

Q. And why do you say that.

A. Well, there are several reasons why it may not, and one of them is your hand is quite dry and just doesn’t transfer anything.

And secondly, the surface may be one that sort of rejects any sort of materials that may be put on it and it doesn’t have the absorbency of the material that’s on your finger.

And then thirdly, the surface may be quite corrugated or textured and it -- the transfer may be there, but it’s not very resolvable.

Q. Is it fair to say that textured objects are poor surfaces for fingerprints.

A. Generally, yes, they are. Depending on the roughness of the surface.

Q. For shiny, smooth paper, such as you might find in a magazine, can you please describe how one detects latent fingerprints that that magazine may hold.

A. Well, I mentioned earlier, I answered the question about the optical methods, and one of the optical methods that I mentioned earlier was the fact that if you have a very smooth surface or glass-like surface, you could use these reflected ultraviolet techniques.

And for something that’s a very, very smooth surface, like a magazine paper, something like that, one of the first techniques that I would use would be to see if it could be visualized without doing anything to it; that is, just by seeing if this technique of reflected ultraviolet visualization will bring out anything.

And then the next step --

Q. Let’s stop right there. What do you mean by “reflected ultraviolet”. Tell me specifically what you do to examine this piece of paper for fingerprints without the aid of anything else, other than perhaps reflected ultraviolet.

A. I’ll do it by means of an example.

Q. Okay.

A. If you put, for example, your finger on a piece of glass, that’s a very smooth surface. You sometimes can turn that glass around and actually see the print on there.

When you view it in the ultraviolet, that’s magnified immensely, and it’s due to the fact that the fingerprint residue itself becomes very reflective. And secondly, it -- it’s a scatter media for the light. It just casts the light and reflects it in multi directions. The fingerprint material becomes like micromirrors. It becomes very reflective in UV. And that’s essentially how this thing is able to enter the fingerprint on a very smooth surface. And of course paper that is very glossy is of this category as well.

Q. So is that -- ultraviolet light, is that synonymous with ALS, or alternative light source.

A. No, sir.

Q. That’s something different.

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. So if you were -- looked at it with ultraviolet light, would that be something different than a Scenescope.

A. No.

Q. It would be the same as a scenescope.

A. It is similar to a Scenescope.

Q. Okay. Would you use -- now, I guess the common notion is that ultraviolet light is something like a black light.

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. Is that what we’re talking about here.

A. A little more than that.

Q. Tell me what you mean.

A. “Black light” that you normally hear is what you may see in places of entertainment where they have the ultraviolet light tubes called “black lights.” That light is ultraviolet, but it’s -- the wavelength of it is -- first of all, it’s for the eye safe reason, and that’s the same sort of ultraviolet that the sun puts out.

The one I’m talking about is shorter wavelength. It is the ultraviolet light that the sun puts out, but it’s sort of blocked by the ozone layer of the earth. You don’t get those rays, the shorter wavelength rays.

And the reason this technology works so well is because the shorter the wavelength, the better you can see this surface roughness that may be caused by the fingerprint on the object. And the shorter the wavelength, the less that surface has to be in size. In other words, the shorter the wavelength -- the one that we use is called 254 nanometers. That can detect roughnesses or it can scatter the roughness of one 100,000ths of an inch.

So it works very well for very, very light fingerprints on surfaces.

Q. Okay. So tell me what a ridge is.

A. Well, a ridge is the -- in a fingerprint, it is the raised portion of the fingerprint that meanders throughout the finger.

Q. So it’s like one of the lines in the fingerprint.

A. That’s correct.

Q. So using that as an example, a ridge would be material that is on the surface that you’re looking at. Is that fair to say.

A. That’s correct. When you transfer the chemicals, you actually transfer the pattern that’s found on the ridges.

Q. Okay. And when the light hits the ridge, you said it scatters. Can you give me a little better idea what that means.

A. Yes. When the light hits the ridge, it actually reflects, and -- but in multiple directions.

Q. And if I understand correctly, the ultraviolet light will reflect in multiple directions, but the daylight that we have is too big a wavelength to scatter and make the print visible.

A. It doesn’t scatter as well.

Q. Okay. So the ultraviolet light with the shorter wavelength scatters better.

A. That is correct.

Q. And allows you to see the print better.

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. Now, that was the first method. We just started talking about the methods of trying to find fingerprints on a magazine. What next. What else would you do on shiny magazine paper.

A. Okay. What we described so far is -- you know, there’s no chemical treatment. No nothing. You just see the raw fingerprint.

The next step that you would do on surfaces like that, or any nonporous surface as well, would be to use fuming with a gas. And the gas is referred to as cyanoacrylate ester, or better known as super glue. And the super glue gases, when they see, for example, fingerprint residue, they see in it things that trigger its polymerization, basically a material that is basic, like amino acids. It also -- water is another substance, or moisture triggers this condensation and polymerization of the cyanoacrylate material that’s in the gaseous form, and that basically forms around the fingerprint and becomes another way of visualizing the fingerprint.

Normally they appear whitish in color after you finish doing the polymerization. So in essence, you put the material in this vapor, and the polymerization occurs around the fingerprint. And then you pull it out, and you sometimes can see the fingerprint in there. But it does a couple of things. It hardens the fingerprint, and it also makes it just slightly bigger than what it was before as far as the thickness.

So, if you don’t see the fingerprint by means of this method, then you can submit it again to the ultraviolet reflection, and the super glue treatment actually enhances, even, that more.

I’ve seen cases where, for example, I had a substance in which I saw, let’s say, ten fingerprints using the RUVIS -- I’m sorry, using the ultraviolet technique. It’s referred to as Reflected Ultraviolet Imaging System. I just called it RUVIS, but that’s what it stands for.

And then I did super gluing, and multiple more fingerprints showed up after that with the RUVIS, with the Reflected Ultraviolet System.

Q. So you take a magazine, and you said you somehow coat it with this super glue. Is that how it works. You put a very fine coat of super glue on the magazine.

A. It only condenses primarily around the portions where the fingerprint residue is.

Q. Okay. And is this cyanoacrylate, whatever you said, is this the same product that we use at home as super glue.

A. Yes, it’s a cyanoacrylate ester.

Q. And when you say “polymer,” what does that mean, polymerization.

A. The polymerization process is basically the single molecule of the cyanoacrylate ester, and just -- chemically it multiplies itself and becomes a very long chain, and that’s referred to as a polymer.

Q. So what is the process of getting this polymer to condense around the fingerprints. What happens in the lab when they do that. What do they do.

A. Oh --

Q. How do they get it to --

A. The way it's normally done, you have a shaver, and some people actually use something like a fish tank. And they get the cyanoacrylate liquid, like your super glue, and put it in a small aluminum dish. And you heat this by putting it on a heating pad, or a heating mantel, or some sort of heating source. And also you have some water on the site. It's the moisture content that is used to condense around the fingerprint residue.

And then you let it sit there for a period of time. It sits probably ten minutes or more. And then by that time, you can begin to see the fingerprints being developed on the material. And then you take it out. And basically that's about it.

It is a very simple process that you see periodically on "CSI" referred to as, you know, super glue fuming.

Q. Does super glue fuming enhance the water-based materials, the oil-based materials, or some combination.

A. It enhances both.

Q. Okay. So it enhances -- whatever material is there, it will condense and form a bigger ridge or a more visible ridge. Is that fair to say.

A. That is fair to say. As far as the water-soluble material, it has the amines. As far as the water-insoluble material, it has certain lipoproteins, and proteins contain the amines. And there's also moisture condensed in there as well.

Q. So let's talk about RUVIS. You mentioned that term, Reflective Ultraviolet Imaging System.

A. Yes.

Q. What is RUVIS. How is that technology normally used in forensic science.

A. I’ve used that term maybe two or three times in my discussion, and it involves two things. The system itself, the imaging system, and the illuminator. The illuminator is simply an ultraviolet lamp, but works in that short wavelength region.

I might add if you’re not familiar with the short wavelength region, stamp collectors normally use that to be able to examine their stamps. U.S. stamps have material in it that only glows under short wave, not long wave. So you would see that type of lamp among stamp collectors.

So anyway, it is that type of lamp that you use to illuminate your substance that you’re examining. And then you image it with a system that is capable of seeing that region. Human eyes can only see in the so-called visible region. It doesn’t see ultraviolet, it doesn’t see infrared, so you have to use special imaging systems to see in those regions.

In the infrared, you have things called night vision scopes. In the ultraviolet, there are scopes out there that have intensified tubes in there that can see in the ultraviolet, and that’s what we currently have.

The optical system for viewing has a filter in front of that system that only allows the short wavelengths to go through. So essentially you’re illuminating with light that is of a certain frequency. To be exact, it’s 254 nanometers. And then you have a filter on the system that is only able to allow that wavelength to go through.

So the -- the so-called imager consists of the filter, a lens, which has to be made out of quartz, otherwise ultraviolet light couldn’t go through. And then inside is referred to as an image intensifier. Basically it converts that ultraviolet light that’s hitting the surface into visible light, into a phosphor, and then you are able to see it at the other end. And some people put a camera at the other end to view that, or other people can just look at that phosphor screen and see the image. So basically that's what the Reflected Ultraviolet Imaging System is.

Q. Now, you've talked about infrared, and you've talked about ultraviolet. Are those the two ends of the light spectrum.

A. Well, the two ends of the visible spectra. There's more to it than a one end and more to it on the other.

Q. Okay.

A. But if you have the visible spectra, the so-called lower end would be the ultraviolet, the higher end would be the infrared.

Q. Okay. Now, the infrared is the -- tell me about the technology that is used in a product called the Scenescope.

A. The Scenescope is basically what I just described as the RUVIS, the Reflected Ultraviolet Imaging System.

It consists of a scope that is able to see in the ultraviolet, a filter, and the illuminating light, and a camera sometimes sits on top. And it's actually on the stand there, that you see.

Q. So this object to my left here is a Scenescope with a camera mounted on it.

A. That's just the one part. That's just the viewing portion. I don't see the illuminator set up yet.

Q. Would this be the illuminator.

A. That would be the illuminator.

Q. Okay. So the Scenescope has an ultraviolet light, true.

A. Correct.

Q. And a special device that makes that light visible; is that true.

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. So it works in two different realms, or two different ways. It projects ultraviolet light and then allows you to look through a special instrument to see that ultraviolet light.

A. The reflected light.

Q. The reflected light. Okay.

And I think you previously explained that this light is uniquely suitable to observe the scatter effect of very tiny residue that’s left by fingerprints.

A. On smooth surfaces.

Q. All right. So, lastly, we haven’t talked about ninhydrin. You’ve mentioned it, but we haven’t really described what it is. What is ninhydrin.

A. Well, you’ve asked me questions about the optical methods of examining for fingerprints. There are also chemical methods, and I alluded to that. The chemical methods would involve -- are mostly used in porous material like ordinary paper. And normally you take it in two steps. The first step is to look for the water-soluble components, the amino acids. And there you use amino acid visualized in reagents, or reagents that can visualize the amino acids.

The most common one that has been around since the 1950s is ninhydrin, and that -- when you apply ninhydrin to -- to a piece of paper that has fingerprint residue, and then let it dry, and over a period of time, or you could artificially use some heat and some humidity, the latent fingerprint or the invisible fingerprint turns out to be a purple image of the fingerprint. The reaction between amino acids and ninhydrin is purple, and it’s -- that chemical is referred to as Ruben’s purple.

Q. Is there a certain order -- if you’re using two different methods to look for fingerprints, is there a certain order you’d want to choose if you’re going to use the fuming method, the Scenescope, and ninhydrin. Is there a method you’d want to use first before the other one.

A. Yes. In the case in question, having to do with smooth paper, you would use the optical method first, followed by the cyanoacrylate ester fuming or the super glue fuming, and then the ninhydrin at the very end to look for the amino acids.

The cyanoacrylate fuming method does not affect the amino acids, so you could actually see them afterwards. And essentially you try to see if there are more prints. Or sometimes the fingerprints that you develop with ninhydrin are the same ones that the cyanoacrylate or super glue fuming developed.

Q. So you might find a ninhydrin print where you didn’t find it with the fuming method.

A. That is possible, of course.

Q. Why wouldn’t you want to use ninhydrin first.

A. Because it may affect the polymerization of the super glue.

Q. You might lose some fingerprints if you did it that way.

A. That is correct. It simply involves the application of ninhydrin in a solvent. So it’s that solvent that you’re trying to avoid from getting onto your evidence before anything else. So that’s why you do all these optical methods first.

Q. Are these methods that you’ve described for looking for fingerprints on smooth magazine-type paper, are they time-tested methods that are accepted by law enforcement agencies around the world.

A. As far as I know, they are.

Q. How about in the United States in particular.

A. Very much so.

Q. Okay. And how long has ultraviolet light been around used in looking for fingerprints.

A. In that reflected mode that I’ve been talking about -- excuse me -- it started out, I guess in the early 1970s in Japan, and then it got rekindled again in Japan in the mid ‘80s. And it was then that the Army forensic laboratory in Japan became aware of it. In the middle ‘80s, late ‘80s, it was brought over to this country. And we began to use it among just a few of us in the mid ‘90s. And then later on, toward the end of the ‘90s, it became more commonly known to other people. And now it’s rather common technology known throughout the entire world.

Q. And I think you said ninhydrin has been used for locating fingerprints for how many years.

A. Oh, that goes back to the ‘50s.

Q. How about cyanoacrylate, the fuming. How long has that been used to enhance fingerprints.

A. In the ‘70s.

Q. And who is the manufacturer of the Scenescope.

A. It’s -- the company that I know that made that is Spex Industries, S-p-e-x Industries. I think they’ve been bought by a French company, and I just cannot recall the name of that company. But all the times that I’ve known it as Spex Industries. In fact, their ad still says, “S-p-e-x Industries.”

Q. And is that how you came to the attention of Santa Barbara County law enforcement, through an introduction from the Spex people.

MR. SANGER: I would object. That calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Are you sometimes referred by Spex to act as an expert when people request expert testimony on Scenescope technology.

A. I’ve been asked by Spex about certain technical things to have to do with their system. And yes, I have been asked to be able to say something on the technical nature of their instrument.

Q. Okay. And as a member of the Secret Service, are you being paid anything special for today’s testimony.

A. No, sir.

Q. Is this a service that the Secret Service offers to law enforcement agencies in the United States.

A. That is correct.

Q. All right.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, at this time I think we have enough time to do a brief demonstration.

Q. I'll ask Dr. Cantu if he can tell me, first off, what would be a good way to do a proper demonstration of the Scenescope. Just a simple demonstration to show how it works.

A. Well, I think you have it all set up. I don't quite see the monitor to see the image.

Q. The monitor will show on that screen.

A. Oh, it will. Okay, fine.

Q. Yes.

A. All you have to do is turn the -- what I call the intensifier, that's the unit that actually does the conversion of the ultraviolet to the visible and illuminate your material. And that material is going to be -- I mean, I could get my credit card and put a print on there, and I'll show you how it actually shows through this system. Or I think -- I believe the other gentleman that was here has some demonstration sheets as well.

Q. All right. I'm going to ask you to step off the stand at this time. I'm not going to ask you any more questions. But I'll make a couple of requests. And we'll let the detective assist. And if we could have "Input 4," Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: Before this occurs, Your Honor, I did have an objection. But in addition to that, this is not preserved. This is something that's going to be up on a screen, I suppose, and it's not preserved as a --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We can take a -- ask the detective to take a photograph of each exhibit. And we'll introduce it, if that's permissible. If that's agreeable.

THE COURT: Does that solve your problem.

MR. SANGER: I'm not asking it be introduced into evidence, but preserved for the record.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes, preserved for the record. That's fine.

THE COURT: They'll become exhibits.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Can you do that.

DETECTIVE SUTCLIFFE: Uh-huh.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. I'll ask the detective at this time to find the proper setting for the VHS.

And if you please -- could you show us the fingerprint in its natural state on the Scenescope, without cyanoacrylate fuming or any enhancement. And take a picture of it when you identify that print.

Why don't you come out here where the jury can see what you're doing. Just step back.

MR. SANGER: So I take it that Mr. Sutcliffe is doing the demonstration. It was my impression that Mr. Cantu was going to be asked to do it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I was going to have Detective Sutcliffe do it. There's no testimony at this time. I'm just asking him to do these two demonstrations.

What are you doing -- well, why don't you show what you're doing.

DETECTIVE SUTCLIFFE: Okay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If you stand over here --

DETECTIVE SUTCLIFFE: It's just a --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If you would demonstrate just -- if you would, please, just take -- place a fingerprint, if you will, on that piece of magazine paper and then try and locate it using the Scenescope.

All right. Did you take a photograph of that.

DETECTIVE SUTCLIFFE: I will.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Now, if you please, if you have a fingerprint pre-prepared with cyanoacrylate fuming.

DETECTIVE SUTCLIFFE: I do.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Would you please show that and take a picture of that for the jury.

DETECTIVE SUTCLIFFE: There is -- actually, one is circled, and I have another one --

THE COURT: Wait. He can’t testify.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You’re not sworn, so you can’t testify.

DETECTIVE SUTCLIFFE: Excuse me.

That’s it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. And if you would take a picture of that.

Thank you, Detective.

And you can take this down.

Thank you, Your Honor. I have no further questions for Dr. Cantu.

We’ll wait just a moment while -- actually, you can just leave it there and come back in after the jury. Okay.

We’ll take it down afterwards.

Thank you.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Dr. Cantu, how are you.

A. I’m doing well, thank you.

Q. Good.

You have a Ph.D. in -- I think it’s chemistry, is it not. What is it.

A. Chemical physics.

Q. Chemical physics. All right. From the University of Texas in Austin; is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you indicated that you are familiar with this company that makes the Scenescope; is that right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, in fact, you had something to do with helping this company develop the Scenescope; is that correct.

A. I did to an extent.

Q. And this company is in competition with some other companies regarding the same kind of ultraviolet technology; is that right.

A. It is now.

Q. Okay. I think last I saw, they're actually suing another company for violating their patents; is that right.

A. That's unbeknownst to me.

Q. Do you have -- do you hold a patent on this, first off.

A. No.

Q. Do you have any business relationship, or have you ever had any business relationship with a company regarding this kind of technology.

A. No. I had a relationship with a company that helped develop the technology before Spex bought the rights to make it.

Q. And what was the name of that company.

A. Electro Optical Systems, Incorporated, in Charlottesville, Virginia.

Q. And did you derive -- I'm not going into detail, but did you derive economic benefit for that.

A. No.

Q. So you worked with that company to help develop something like this, or something that turned into this eventual machine; is that correct.

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. Now, in this particular case, you said something about a shiny surface, and it was a little unclear. Were you indicating that you had reviewed fingerprints in this case from shiny surfaces in this case.

A. No.

Q. Okay. So, in fact, you have not actually reviewed any fingerprints in this particular case; is that correct, sir.

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. And I just did one of those things I shouldn’t do. I said, “Is that correct,” and you said, “No.” So let me ask the question.

Have you reviewed any fingerprints in this particular case.

A. I have not reviewed any fingerprints in this particular case.

Q. So you’re brought in basically -- you’re asked to come testify basically to how the Scenescope works.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. You are, nevertheless, familiar with fingerprint evaluation; is that correct.

A. In this case.

Q. Not in this case in particular, but in general.

A. I am familiar with fingerprint evaluation.

Q. Okay. You are not -- you are not a latent print examiner.

A. No, sir. I’m an expert in this particular area and the chemistry behind the development of fingerprints.

Q. And I didn’t mean that in an offensive fashion, but different people do different things.

You know what a latent print examiner is.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. All right. And what you have told us about 3315 is part of the process of doing latent print examinations, correct.

A. About a part of latent fingerprint examination, yes. I have said that I’ve spoken about the developmental part of the fingerprint.

Q. Just so we’re clear -- and we’re almost to the end of the day here, so I’ll just try to take a short subject.

Latent print examination is, what I’m getting at, is a bigger subject than what you’ve just talked to us about here, correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. In other words, when you look at fingerprints, you've told us, for instance, that you may be able to see fingerprints, they're called visible prints; is that correct.

A. Yes.

Q. And that's because somebody put their finger in paint or something, and you can just see it, correct.

A. Correct.

Q. It could be any other substance that allows it to be visible. You might have what are called plastic prints; is that correct.

A. I gave you a couple of examples of that.

Q. Please.

A. No, I said I gave a couple of examples.

Q. I thought you said you would give.

But, for instance, a plastic print might be somebody who puts their finger in clay, and you can actually -- the ridges are actually transferred onto the clay; is that correct.

A. I believe I gave that example. That, and putty are the two examples I gave of the so-called plastic or mold fingerprints.

Q. And then the next category is the latent print. That's the print that you cannot see unaided; is that correct.

A. That was -- yes, sir.

Q. And you told us in general about different processes by way -- by which you can get the latent prints so that you can make them capable of being examined; is that correct.

A. Make them visible, yes.

Q. Visible. So that can either be by light sources, for the ultraviolet light sources, or it can be chemical; is that correct.

A. And physical.

Q. And physical. "Physical" being.

A. Like powder techniques.

Q. Okay. I see. You wouldn't call that part of chemical. You'd call that --

A. No, it's adherence. It's an aspect of chemistry in a way. In fact, cyanoacrylate deposition of the polymerization is a physical chemical type of process.

Q. Because it actually not only chemically reacts so that you can see the prints better, but it also actually enhances the structure of whatever is there so that it is more visible; is that correct.

A. That’s the super glue fuming, yes.

Q. Super glue fuming, yes. All right. Now, ultimately fingerprint examination and comparison, when you go beyond what you’re talking about, which is developing prints so that you can see them, in essence, fingerprint comparison and examination is a subjective enterprise, is it not.

A. Fingerprint --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as beyond the scope. There’s been no testimony about comparison.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: It’s subjective, is it not, sir.

A. I’m afraid I could not answer that, because it’s not part of my expertise.

Q. Okay. You have spoken on the need in recent years to increase the validation studies for the purpose of enhancing fingerprint examination, latent fingerprint examination for court purposes; is that correct, sir.

A. No, I have not spoken on that. I’ve been invited to be at meetings where they’re speaking about that.

Q. Okay. You participated in conferences.

A. Yes.

THE COURT: Counsel, it’s the end of the day.

MR. SANGER: Very well.

THE COURT: See you tomorrow morning.

THE COURT: Good morning.
COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Wasn't there a witness?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes. Dr. Cantu, please.
THE COURT: You're still under oath. Please be seated.
MR. SANGER: May I proceed, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: All right.

ANTHONY A. CANTU
Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Dr. Cantu, you have expressed an interest in countering the challenges that have recently come up to fingerprint identification; is that correct?
A. I've been involved in discussions of that nature, yes.
Q. And recent challenges have involved, for instance, a fairly well-known court case in Pennsylvania, where Judge Pollack ruled on fingerprint admissibility?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. There have been some rather remarkable issues regarding reliability of fingerprint comparison, correct?

A. That’s what I understand.

Q. You’re aware of the Oregon attorney who was accused of the Madrid terrorist bombing; is that correct?

A. I’m aware of that.

Q. The people that did that fingerprint comparison were in the FBI office in Washington D.C.?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Those are people you know, right?

A. No, I do not know them.

Q. Okay. That’s fine.

In the context of this, you have expressed a desire to see that the second part of what we have been talking about -- we’ve been talking about the first part, which is being able to see fingerprints so you can look at them, and then presumably compare them, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And the second part is comparing them?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you have indicated that you believe 3325 there needs to be additional validation studies in order to bolster the admissibility of fingerprint evidence in this country, correct?

A. No, sir, that is not correct. I’ve been involved in discussions of that nature, but I don’t think you’ve ever seen coming out of my mouth a statement like that.

Q. Do you remember sending a communication to Richard Rau, R-a-u, who’s the senior program manager at the National Institute of Justice?

A. He was.

Q. He was. And in February of 2000, did you tell him, “It will not be long before more and more cases come up where fingerprint testimony will be challenged, and therefore we need to provide the examiners with necessary hard data on validation to counter challenges”?

A. I believe I did say that.

Q. Okay. All right. So when you’re talking about validation, additional hard data on validation, you’re talking about validating the second part, which is the aspects of comparison, that there’s permanence, there’s individuality, and that comparisons can actually be made to come up with a positive conclusion, right?

A. Well, that’s what some people contend. I’m not, as I mentioned earlier, in that area. My particular expertise has been in the first part, coming up with technology for the visualization of fingerprints and advanced technology to be able to detect fingerprints that would not be able to be detected by the ordinary methods.

Q. Okay. I understand. And that’s a science, that’s part of the science that you study; is that correct?
A. Well, I’m a chemist.
Q. You’re a chemist. You’re a scientist, right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you’re a very senior scientist for the United States Secret Service, correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. How many times have you testified in court?
A. Probably in excess of 40 times.
Q. Okay. And how many times have you been called to testify in court before a jury?
A. About that many times.
Q. About that many times. How many times have you been called by the prosecution, U.S. Attorney, or the District Attorney, or whatever the prosecution --
A. Most of those times.
Q. Would it be all of those times?
A. I’d have to look at my records. I don’t have that. I believe it’s most of those times.
Q. All right. You’re pretty sure it’s most of those times, right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. So you’re trying to think, was there a time or two that you may have been called by a defense lawyer?

A. Yes, that’s what I think.

Q. Can’t think of one right at the moment?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And basically what you’ve come to tell us is that there’s a ninhydrin process which makes it possible to visualize or see latent prints, that is, prints that you can’t really see on paper. You use this ninhydrin, and they turn purple and you can see them, right?

A. That’s one of the processes.

Q. And that’s been around since the ‘50s, right?

A. That particular one has.

Q. And you developed actually a newer version of that ninhydrin process, haven’t you?

A. Several.

Q. Do you know what version of the process was used here in Santa Barbara, Santa Maria, with regard to Mr. Jackson’s case?

A. Well, as far as the amino acid visualization, it was ninhydrin.

Q. So you’re aware of that?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And then you've come to tell us that the super glue fuming process is one that's existed, I think you said, since the '80s; is that correct?

A. I believe '70s, but --

Q. '70s or '80s?

A. It's been quite some time.

Q. Quite some time. And that's been around. And that basically is another way of visualizing these things, so you can actually see the ridge marks, right?

A. Depends on the surface, of course. But yes, in this particular case that's what was used.

Q. And you've been told that; is that correct?

A. Yes, I saw the evidence.

Q. Okay. Now, I think you said yesterday that you had not evaluated any of the evidence in this case?

A. No. I mean, I did say I had not evaluated any of the evidence --

Q. All right.

A. -- as far as the comparison of fingerprints.

Q. So what you did is you looked to see what technology they used to bring forth the fingerprints so they were visual?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And then you talked about the Scenescope, which is a device that uses the 3329 ultraviolet light to make it easier to see fingerprints; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Now, there are a couple issues that you’re aware of -- let me see if this is true or not. Let’s talk about a couple. One, with regard to the fuming technique, the fuming technique can be done to excess; is that correct? If you overfume the paper, you can lose some of the detail; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when you have a Scenescope, you can, in fact, minimize the fuming, because the Scenescope is going to be more sensitive in picking up the ridges or the imprints of the ridges; is that correct?

A. There’s some truth to that, yes.

Q. Okay. You also -- well, let me ask this: Generally the Scenescope company, the company, whatever its name was over a period of time that has manufactured this Scenescope, recommends that film be used rather than digital when taking the pictures through the Scenescope; is that correct?

A. That’s a recommendation, sir.

Q. Okay. And you’re aware that using a digital camera can actually filter out some of the detail; is that correct?

A. No, that’s not quite correct. It all depends on the digital camera, its resolution, and that's something that has to be taken into account. And the people at Spex are fully aware that a good digital camera will bring out the details that are in a fingerprint.

Q. Their recommendation, however, is that you use a 35-millimeter-film camera, correct?

A. Like you said, a recommendation.

Q. All right. And you're aware of studies showing that -- that some of the detail, particularly in between ridges or nonridge detail of fingerprints, can be lost when using a digital camera, correct?

A. No, I'm not aware of that.

Q. All right. Now, you told us that you developed prints -- I mean, not oversimplify, you told us that you're familiar with the technology used to develop prints and, in fact, you've been -- you participated in improving that technology, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Nevertheless, when you are dedicating part of your career to this, you must understand what it is that's going to be done with the developed prints, correct?

A. Right.

Q. All right. So you know that one of the things you're looking for, or a latent print examiner, which you're not, I understand, but one of the things that a latent print examiner is going to be looking for are ridge details; is that correct?

A. Correct.
Q. So when you talk about ridge details, you’re talking about the parts of the skin that protrude and form ridges?
A. Correct.
Q. All right. The people who are doing this examination have begun to call themselves ridgeologists; is that correct?
A. Yes, I’ve heard that term.
Q. Okay. Now, I’d asked you before, when it goes from your part of the science to raising the prints so they can be seen to the next step, the next step is not scientific, is it?
A. I wouldn’t say that.
Q. It’s subjective, is it not, sir?
A. I cannot say that.
Q. You cannot say whether it’s subjective or not subjective?
A. It’s not my area of expertise.
Q. Okay. But basically, you have people who are going to look at what has been raised as a part of your technology, let us say, and they’re going to compare it with a rolled print, you know that, right?
A. Yes.
Q. And they are going to come to a conclusion as to whether or not they believe it matches, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. Now, in the course of doing this, they'll be looking for the identification of certain points from the latent fingerprint to the known fingerprint; is that correct?

A. That's the way the comparison is done, yes.

Q. Okay. They'll also -- besides looking for comparisons of ridge detail, they may also be looking for pores; is that correct?

A. If they are present.

Q. All right. So that's one of the things that you would like to bring out with your technology? In other words, your effort to come up with the best latent print that can be obtained, you would like to have all the detail there that would be possible for a print examiner to compare, correct?

A. That would be ideal, but it doesn't happen all the time.

Q. Okay. Well, we'll get to what happens, but your goal is to give them the best prints so that you can -- you can compare it?

A. Well, I should add, even a rolled print that you've been talking about, one that's carefully done, sometimes does not contain any pores.

Q. All right. We're going back to pores, but that's where I was going back, so you're right.

Okay.

Sometimes a rolled print doesn’t even contain all the ridges; is that correct? There can be a fold in the paper, there can be some glitch in rolling the print?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. Now, digital imaging tends not to pick up the pores as well as film imaging or a film camera, correct?

A. I cannot say that. First of all, for reasons that it’s not part of my expertise.

Q. Now, let me just ask you about -- I know I’m going to mispronounce it, but it looks like 1, 2-indanedione, known as IND, which would be my preference, if we can call it that. Are you familiar with that?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that an advancement in the visualization or the ability to visualize latent prints?

A. The amino acid portion, yes.

Q. Do you know if that was used at all in this case?

A. No, it was not used.

Q. And that’s something that you helped develop here in the last ten years or so; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, let’s just talk briefly about prints in the demonstration that was given here. You recall the demonstration that was given yesterday?

A. Yes.

Q. And you sort of stood back and you let Mr. Sutcliffe do it, I think; is that safe to say?

A. That's correct.

Q. You didn't have anything to do with putting the fingerprints on the paper that was put under the Scenescope, did you?

A. No. I had nothing to do with it.

Q. Okay. So, you would agree that when fingerprints are found in their natural state, for lack of a better term, but at a crime scene or wherever, you don't have -- for the most part, you don't have people rolling their thumbprint on a piece of paper, correct?

A. I'm sorry, could you repeat that question?

Q. Well, it's just a basic question. In other words, when we saw the demonstration, I believe that Mr. Sutcliffe at one point took his -- it may have been his thumb or his finger, and he kind of rolled it, pushed it onto the paper so it could be seen. That's pretty much an ideal fingerprint, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And, in fact, I think he was wearing gloves before he did that. He took the gloves off, and made a good, clean, print; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you had a chance to see it up on the screen, correct?

A. I did.

Q. And it looked like a pretty good, clean print, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And were you to see that in actual -- in the actual course of a case, you would say that is a pretty good, clean print, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. What happens is you have generally partial prints that are sometimes smudged, that are sometimes just the tip of a finger or the side, or the -- whatever, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And so you try to develop whatever is on the paper so that it can be seen?

A. Correct.

Q. Sometimes that fingerprint may be over another fingerprint or over some other imperfection in the paper, or whatever the substance is, that makes it impossible to see the rest of the print, correct?

A. It may.

Q. So the challenge is to take whatever you have, and get as clear a picture of whatever that is so the latent print examiner can make a comparison;

is that right?

A. Well, my role is to provide them with the best possible tools to develop the print.

Q. Right. And actually, you don’t go out in the field and do this latent print development yourself, do you?

A. Not recently.

Q. Okay. You’ve done it on occasion?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Your job is really, as a chemist, to -- for the United States Secret Service to come up with the best technology you can to make this work; is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And by “this” I mean the visualization of these latent prints.

A. That is correct.

Q. And this has been something you’ve been working on now for the last few years; is that right?

A. I think I mentioned in excess of 20 years. That’s one of the areas that I get involved in. There are other ones, of course.

Q. Originally you were with the ATF --

A. That’s correct.

Q. -- Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, right? And you’ve written a lot of papers; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You have written more papers, for instance, on the subject of identifying ink or pencil lead, those kind of markings on paper, than you have about fingerprint development; is that correct?

A. I gave a number of -- when I was asked about publications, and I think I said of 26 papers that are, you know, published in peer-reviewed journals, and nine of those are on fingerprints. And I've got two that are in review right now. One is a chapter in a book. And the other one is a publication on -- again, on fingerprints, that's going to be in the Journal of Forensic Sciences. So that would be like a total of 11.

Q. I thought you said seven and two for nine, yesterday?

A. Seven and two, okay.

Q. All right. Well, whichever one it is, that's a lot of papers. But you've written more papers on ink, and documents, the identification of ink and pencil lead and that sort of thing in document review than you have on fingerprints, right?

A. That is a fascinating area. Yes, I have worked on the area of the analysis of items on documents to be able to associate documents, date documents, and this includes ink, paper, pencil, erasure residue, and things like that. And fingerprints is just one of the items that you find on documents as well.

Q. Okay. But -- thank you. But the subject matter of the papers on ink had nothing to do with fingerprints, did they?

A. No.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. Okay. I have no further questions. Thank you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Very briefly, Your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. As far as the use of digital cameras in capturing a fingerprint on a piece of paper, have you ever used a digital camera to do that?

A. We have tested some digital cameras for doing that.

Q. And have you found them to be satisfactory?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object as lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Have you used -- you said you've used digital cameras to -- well, let me back up.

Have you used digital cameras to photograph fingerprints in the past?

A. Our laboratory has.

Q. And have you reviewed those photographs?

A. No, I have not had a chance to review them.

Q. All right. As far as the questions regarding the protocol that was used in this case, have you had an opportunity to talk to Detective Tim Sutcliffe about the exact protocol that was used to examine fingerprints in this case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And are you aware of the fact that they initially looked at the magazines to see if they could see anything with the naked eye or with a loop?

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object that that calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Then I’ll ask it in hypothetical form.

Assume that -- and this is a hypothetical.

Assume that a large number of magazines are being looked at for latent fingerprints. Assume that the first step is to use an alternative light source, look at the magazines visually, see if you can find any biological evidence, including fingerprints, on those magazines.

Assume the next step is that you then fume the magazines with the super glue. And then you again look at the magazines using the Scenescope and the alternative light source that’s provided by the Scenescope. You identify notable prints, you circle them, you have a system by which you identify those prints, and then you take it a step further. You use a ninhydrin solution and go on to a second phase of looking for prints on these magazines where -- or I should say a third phase, where you're actually looking for identifiable prints that are shown by the ninhydrin solution, and you note those items, circle them, and document their location on the individual pages.

In your opinion, do you have an opinion as to the validity or integrity of such a protocol for identifying and locating fingerprints on smooth magazine paper surfaces?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object that that's an improper hypothetical, and it's vague as to "the validity or integrity."

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I gave an answer yesterday to that effect when you asked me about smooth paper, like on a magazine, and I indicated a protocol that could be used. And I indicated that one would use optical methods first, maybe use the ultraviolet imaging source for the purpose of seeing if there's any prints that it could bring out before any processing. And then the super glue would be the next step, and see if there's any prints visually also using the Reflected Ultraviolet Imaging System. And you find some -- let's say you find some in that case, and you mark them. And then the next step, "Let's go after the amino acids," and that would be the use of a ninhydrin or other reagents. But in this case, ninhydrin is the one that was used.

So I did indicate that yesterday.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And so what is your opinion about the use of that type of protocol as far as its validity in locating fingerprints on smooth magazine paper?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: No, I indicated that that's what would normally be done.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Is that the protocol that you yourself would use to find fingerprints on such an item?

A. Yes, we have used that protocol --

MR. SANGER: I'm going to move to strike. That calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: You may answer.

A. Very well.

We had a similar case in our laboratory where exactly the same protocol was followed.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to move to strike as nonresponsive.

THE COURT: Sustained; stricken.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll just ask you to answer this question -- just to satisfy the rules, to answer the question in a “yes” or “no” fashion. Isn’t this the type of protocol you yourself would use if you were trying to locate fingerprints on smooth magazine papers?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. No further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Now, you said you have done this a few times in actual cases; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. For the most part, somebody else does this in actual cases, does this -- bringing the fingerprints up either through alternative light source, fluorescence, ultraviolet, super glue, ninhydrin, or one of the other means; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. They do it, but I consult with them, and they consult with me, occasionally on the technology that they're using.

Q. Okay. That's fine. And I didn't mean that to be a demeaning-sounding question. I'm just saying as a practical matter, you're not the one out there putting on the rubber gloves and doing this in real cases?

A. Well, I have done that, too.

Q. You have. For the most part, not, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. There you go. All right.

Now, nevertheless, you are aware that fingerprints are the type of evidence that you want to preserve at a crime scene, is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. Okay. And when I say "a crime scene," you understand law enforcement, whatever type of law enforcement, Secret Service, FBI, the Santa Maria Police Department, sheriff's department here in Santa Barbara, whatever, they go to a scene where they think they may be recovering something that's going to have evidentiary value, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And if there's any issue with regard to who may have touched something, you would think, based on your professional experience, that you would want to preserve that very carefully so that if there are any fingerprints there, they will be intact so that they can be made visible and then evaluated by a latent fingerprint examiner, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. So you would not recommend, for instance, that somebody seize an item and not note for forensics that it should be preserved for fingerprints, right? Is that clear? It was kind of a negative.

Let me rephrase it.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object as vague.

MR. SANGER: Let me rephrase that.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Object as vague and beyond the scope.

MR. SANGER: First of all, I’m withdrawing it. So I can rephrase it, if I may.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You talked about the protocol here. You just -- in response to Mr. Auchincloss’s question. Part of the protocol is to preserve the evidence, right, so you can get -- you can visualize -- you can make visible the prints that are there, right?

A. Right.

Q. And you would expect that law enforcement, when they are seizing something that may have fingerprints, and fingerprints where identity may an issue in the case, for whatever it’s worth, you would expect them to note for the purpose of forensics that this item is being preserved for fingerprints, correct?

A. I would expect that, yes.

Q. And then you would expect that that item would be carefully handled until fingerprints are taken, correct? When I say “taken” -- fingerprints are developed?

A. Well, you are speaking about an area that we call collection and preservation of evidence. It’s like a first part before we enter the part of the development and the part of comparison. There’s actually another part if you do comparison with a computer with a set of database. But in any event --

Q. Let’s stop there, because that’s -- that’s like the AFIS system?

A. Yes.

Q. That’s at the very end?

A. That’s right.

Q. And I just want to focus so we don’t lose the jury here. We’re at the very beginning?

A. The very beginning, the preservation and collection of evidence. And I get involved in the second phase.

Now, I know some of the rules and regulations about conservation, preservation of evidence, and that is, you know, first of all, don’t put your prints on there. Wear gloves. And put it in a plastic bag. And all depends on the evidence as well. Some people -- well, again, I’ll just leave it at that. There’s some rules and regulations about how to do this, and people that do crime scene investigations are trained to be able to do this.

Q. All right.

A. You always see them wearing gloves or wearing a handkerchief and picking things up so that they minimize the amount of handling. That’s the object.

Q. Because when you get involved as a scientist, your part -- and we understand sometimes you’ve done it, other times you’ve supervised, and other times you’ve studied it. But your part is the visualization of these prints, the science of trying to make the prints more visible, okay? But you are aware of the issue of contamination of evidence, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that’s something that comes up not only in fingerprints, but comes up with documents, and with fiber comparisons, and all sorts of things; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. So the -- it’s very important that evidence be preserved as it is found, as best as possible, so that the scientists and the examiner can do their job, correct?

A. That is correct. That’s also part of the chain of custody. That’s why we establish things like that, to avoid things of that nature.

Q. When you say “chain of custody” -- we introduced a term here that hasn’t been fully explained yet, so I’m going to ask you to do it. When you say “chain of custody,” each person who touches the item, or takes the item somewhere, should clearly record what they’re doing and make sure that they do not contribute in any way to contamination of that item; is that correct?

A. That’s part of the regulations of chain of custody.

Q. All right. So at the very end, when somebody comes into court and wants to say to the Court, and to the jury, and counsel, and the department, and everybody, “Here’s this piece of evidence,” they can say, “Well, I took it out of the evidence locker today, here it is, and prior to that, I booked it into the evidence locker,” or we can bring in a series of people saying, “They were booked in by me, it was taken out by the next witness, it was put back in,” so on, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m going to object as beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. When you’re talking about the protocol here, the issue of evidence collection and preservation is something that you’re assuming or hoping would be done properly before you would get involved in the case, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. Now, with regard to fingerprints in particular, are you aware of -- let me withdraw that.

Are you aware of an alternative light source process to look at something to determine whether or not there are bodily fluid stains?

A. I’m aware of that, yes.

Q. Okay. I’m not going to ask you to go into that in detail, but tell me -- can you tell me how that works in general?

A. Yes. An alternate light source came into existence after the laser-induced fluorescence was introduced, and that was -- probably goes back to the ‘70s. But some people said, “I can get the same effect by using a powerful light and just filtering it at a particular color that I want using a device that selectively picks out the frequency that you want.”

So the alternate light source is alternate to the laser, basically. And the lights range normally from the blue region all the way to the red region. And depending on which one that you have, some of them are very selective, like several wavelengths at a time, and a very narrow band. That's terminology used in optics. But in any event, very precise colors is what I'm trying to say.

And what happens with this thing is you illuminate something, and it is possible that that material may have something that glows. You mentioned body fluids. Some of them actually have fluorescence that use goggles that block the illuminating light and you see any of the fluorescence that comes out.

Q. All right. So what color light might you have and what color of goggles, just so we have a picture?

A. I mentioned yesterday that in fingerprints, they usually have one that would be a blue-green light and they use orange goggles.

Q. Just so we have a mental picture, without going into a lot of detail, because I'm sure we'll have more of this later, somebody's got these goggles on that filters the light to a particular wavelength, or filters out other light, however you want to look at it, and they're looking with a light and they're able to see some things you couldn't see if you took the goggles out and just turned the house lights on, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And is that destructive -- let’s assume we’re looking at magazines. Is that destructive of the magazine, do you --

A. Normally not.

Q. Okay. So you do not consume the magazine, you don’t interfere with subsequent tests like fingerprint tests; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. And that type of a test can be done quickly, in a matter of minutes, or an hour, or a couple of hours, right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. So it’s not something that takes weeks or months to do?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, in a case -- in a case where there is -- the case is considered to be an important case, let us say - I suppose all cases are important to the people involved - you would expect that fingerprint evaluation would take place sooner rather than later, right?

A. Right.

Q. You certainly wouldn’t want to take, for instance, a container with all the materials, and take it to a grand jury and book it into evidence and then take it out months later and do fingerprints, would you?

A. Well, let me make a point here, if I may.

Q. Before you make the point, is that what you would prefer to do, or not?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Okay. You would prefer to do the fingerprint evaluation first, before you go book something into evidence before a body, whether it’s a grand jury, a trial court, or anything else, right?

A. Yeah, you would expect to do the analysis first.

Q. Okay. And were you aware that the fingerprint analysis in this case wasn’t done for over a year after the items were seized?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Argumentative; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Very well. First of all --

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Were you aware of that, was the question, sir.

A. I was not aware that they were a year old.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. No further questions.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Dr. Cantu, assuming that an item of evidence is properly handled with gloves -- and let’s narrow our hypothetical to magazines, all right?

A. Yes.

Q. -- bagged in paper or plastic at the scene, and preserved in that fashion for a period of 8 to 12 months, would you expect the fingerprints that might be located on that magazine to disappear during that 8 to 12 months?

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I'm going to object that that is an improper hypothetical and misstates the facts in evidence. Misstates any facts that may be shown in this case.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That --

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Fingerprints, I would not expect it to go away. We have had cases -- perhaps you have heard of a fingerprint that's -- you know, a 50-year-old fingerprint. The FBI used to talk about this quite a bit --

MR. SANGER: I'm going to move to strike as nonresponsive.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That's fine. That's fine. I'll --

THE COURT: Strike the second sentence.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Dr. Cantu, why do you say that?

A. Which of the statements?

Q. You just said you would not expect the fingerprints to disappear over that period of time, and now I'm asking you to elaborate. Why do you say that?

A. By experience.

Q. Okay.

A. We have studied how long fingerprints last for the ninhydrin process or the amino acid process, and for the physical develop process, which I haven't gone into, but let's say the lipid portion of the wax and oils of the fingerprint, and they last a significant amount of time and can be picked up by the chemical methods that we have mentioned.

Q. All right. And as far as contamination goes, is it fair to say that if a fingerprint is -- well, let me strike that.

Assume you're looking for an individual's fingerprint, a particular individual, Individual X we'll call him.

Is contamination, any form of contamination, going to affect whether or not that fingerprint changes to look like someone else's fingerprint?

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. The witness -- it's beyond the scope of his professed expertise to do comparison.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: This is not a comparison question. The question is chemical.

Q. Chemically, based upon --

MR. SANGER: Excuse me, Your Honor, there's an objection pending.

THE COURT: I’m going to sustain the objection.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m sorry?

THE COURT: I am sustaining the objection.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Can a fingerprint of one person morph into that of another person with the passage of time or contamination?

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor, it’s beyond the scope of his expertise.

THE COURT: He has stated that contamination is not within his area of expertise, Counsel.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Is there any chemical process, irrespective of contamination, any physical process that you are aware of that will cause a fingerprint of one person to change and turn into that of another’s?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Comparison is outside his scope.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m asking him a chemical question. That is his area of expertise, the chemical formation of fingerprints.

MR. SANGER: I object to speaking --

THE COURT: Sustained. The question will be allowed.

You may answer. Do you want it read back? Would you like the question read back? You may answer it.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Sir, chemically, I could only say that the chemicals of the fingerprint residue can possibly change. But as far as the pattern, I don’t think so.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to move to strike the last part, which he said he doesn’t do comparisons.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m talking -- well --

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. Motion to strike is denied.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Without belaboring this too much farther, there is such a thing as degradation of evidence, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And degradation basically means that over a passage of time, with or without other factors, evidence can degrade so that the ability to analyze that evidence becomes more difficult; is that correct?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Excuse me, let me -- I didn’t ask necessarily, so let me ask the question again so it’s clear.

Degradation involves something deteriorating over time, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And you’re familiar with that in all sorts of areas of evidence besides -- other than, let’s say, fingerprints, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And degradation can take place because the underlying material on which the evidence is deposited starts to degrade, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Degradation can take place because there is, in fact, a chemical change in - we’re talking about fingerprints - the actual fingerprints that are left on the item, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And just based on degradation, you can end up with a less clear latent print than you might have had, say, a year before; is that correct?

A. Again, I’d say not necessarily.

Q. I didn’t ask necessarily. I said, you can --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. He’s answered the question.

THE WITNESS: I would like to --

THE COURT: Just a moment.

Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I’m asking, is that something that’s reasonably possible, that over a period of time, there can be degradation of a fingerprint, a latent fingerprint?

A. It is.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. Answer.

THE WITNESS: It is possible.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Now, in addition to that -- or let me stop on that for a moment. Part of what might happen over a period of time is that you lose some part of a detail in a print that might have been recoverable earlier; is that correct?

A. That may happen.

Q. All right. Now, in addition to that, there’s contamination besides just degradation of underlying materials and chemicals. There’s the possibility of contamination, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; beyond this witness’s expertise.

THE COURT: Sustained. Sustained. That’s the same objection you made earlier.

MR. SANGER: It was, but I thought it was overruled. I thought it was overruled on the contamination issue. Maybe I’m wrong.

Q. In any event, one of the things that you don’t want to -- so we’re not being too mystical here with the use of the language, one of the things that you -- as a scientist, if the question posed to you is whose fingerprints were on this magazine on November 18th, 2003, you would -- and you have -- and you know that there's certain people who are -- not by you, but eventually are going to be looked at as possible donors for the fingerprint, you would want to know that that person didn't handle the items in between November 18th, 2003, and November 2004, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; ambiguous.

THE COURT: It's not ambiguous, but it is so long --

MR. SANGER: That was my last question, too.

THE COURT: Would you ask --

MR. SANGER: I'll break it down.

THE COURT: Just ask the question.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. Understanding for the moment that the task before long --

THE COURT: Wait. Just ask him.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

THE COURT: The question was -- to get right to the question --

MR. SANGER: Yeah.

THE COURT: Let me stop this thing.

"And you know that there's certain people who are -- not by you, but eventually are going to be looked at for possible donors for the fingerprint, you would want to know" -- Here's the question: "Do you want to know that that person didn't handle the items between November 18th, 2003, and November of 2004?" That's the question, without the --

THE WITNESS: From the point of view of developing fingerprints, I don't think it matters to me. I just process the fingerprints.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You talked about the -- you talked about the protocol. And the protocol you told us included all of these steps from the beginning of collection of preservation onto the point of comparison, and you're involved in the middle. You said the protocol in this case looked okay, from what you saw, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And my question is, you would want to know that one of the subjects did not handle the item in between the time it was seized and the time you're searching for prints, right?

A. You would hope so.

MR. SANGER: There you go. Thank you. No further questions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No further questions.

THE COURT: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may step down

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.
MR. NICOLA: Lisa Hemman, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Come to the front of the courtroom, please. When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk here and raise your right hand.

LISA SUSAN ROOTE HEMMAN
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes.
THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: Lisa Susan Roote Hemman; L-i-s-a, S-u-s-a-n, R-o-o-t-e, H-e-m-m-a-n.
THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. NICOLA:
Q. Good morning.
A. Good morning.
Q. How are you employed, ma’am?
A. I work for the Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Department.
Q. And what’s your current assignment?
A. I’m a senior identification technician in the forensic unit.
Q. How long have you been with the sheriff’s office?

A. Eight years.

Q. How long have you been an identification technician?

A. Eight years.

Q. Are you currently working a full assignment with the sheriff’s office?

A. No. Right now I’m on maternity leave.

Q. Congratulations.

A. Thanks.

Q. Were you involved in handling any of the evidence from the Michael Jackson case?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you begin your maternity leave?

A. December 17th, I believe, was my last day.

Q. Of ‘04?

A. Of ‘04.

Q. And what period of time do you recall having any contact with any of the evidence from the Michael Jackson case?

A. I was at the initial search at the Neverland Ranch in November of 2003.

Q. And what were your duties then?

A. I was assigned to search the arcade/cellar building, and then the office that was part of the security building.

Q. Okay. Did you seize any evidence yourself?

A. No. My assignment during that time was to photograph any evidence seized.

Q. Okay. When was the next time you had contact with the evidence from that particular search?

A. January 2004.

Q. Do you recall the circumstances around that?

A. Yes, I was asked to examine numerous items, do a cursory search for possible trace evidence and body fluids.

Q. Do you recall which items of evidence you were asked to search?

A. Yes. Can I just pull them off my report so I get them down correctly?

Q. Will it refresh your recollection?

A. Yes.

Q. Please do.

A. I was asked to examine Item 316, 317, 321, 363, and 364.

Q. Could you describe for us briefly what you did with those items, the protocol you used?

A. I was -- I got each item independently, opened up the evidence bag, examined them under white light. They were books and magazines, basically. And then I searched them through ultraviolet light, looking for trace evidence, dried body fluids, or anything that fluoresced that seemed interesting that wasn't there when the book was, or the magazine was originally published. And I separated those items and sent them off to the Department of Justice for further testing.

Q. When you handled 316, 317, 321, 363 and 364, did you come across, within those evidence bags, multiple items?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the circumstance of a multiple-item bag, what did you do, if anything?

A. When I came across an evidence bag that had multiple pieces of paper, magazines, or books, what I did with them, as I took them out of the bag, I put a small letter with an item number on the back of them, starting with “A.” So I put, say, 317 -- 317-A for the first piece of paper. The next piece of paper I came across, 317-B, and would go through the alphabet. And once I completed the alphabet, then I would start with “AA” and so on, and work through.

So each individual piece, it could be a magazine intact, or a clipping, anything that was individual, got a letter put on the back side of it.

Q. How did you handle the magazines or loose papers within those items?

A. I wore gloves, not to transfer anything of mine onto -- I placed each piece of evidence down on a clean piece of butcher paper, and then I examined them with a light source.

Q. Did you at any time photodocument the items 3364 within them?

A. Yes. When I originally took them out of the bag, before I did the examination, I took a photograph of it with a little post-it note saying this is “Item 317-A,” and then I’d take the next picture when I examined the next piece of evidence.

Q. Okay. I have a number of exhibits here for you to look at.

A. Okay.

MR. NICOLA: May I show these to her? These are 634 through 709.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

THE COURT: You can give her the documents, but you have to come back to the stand to question her. If you need to stand there for identification of a particular exhibit or something, that’s all right.

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Do you recognize this item? It’s 634.

A. Yes.

Q. How do you recognize it?

A. It’s my handwriting saying it’s 317-B, and you can also see my handwriting on the bottom corner piece of the paper, saying 317-B.

Q. And you took this picture?

A. Yes.

Q. Exhibit 635?

A. Yes. It's 317-D, with my handwriting also on the piece of paper.

Q. Okay. Exhibit 636?

A. 317-E, it's the same thing on the paper.

Q. Exhibit 637?

A. 317-G, and my handwriting would be on the back side of the magazine.

Q. 632, a yellow sticky?

A. Yes, there's a yellow sticky right next to it.

Q. 638?

A. 317-H, and I see my handwriting on the bottom corner of the piece of paper.

Q. Okay. Exhibit 639?

A. 317-I, and it's another loose-leaf paper.

Q. Did you take this photograph as well?

A. Yes. 317-J, and it's another piece of paper I photographed.

Q. It's Exhibit 640?

A. Yes.

Q. Exhibit 641?

A. 317-K, and it's a magazine that I photographed.

Q. Exhibit 642?

A. 317-O, and it's the same.

Q. You photographed this as well?

A. I photographed it. 317-M, and I photographed that.

Q. Okay. That's Exhibit 643?

A. Yes.

Q. Exhibit 644 --

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I have two objections. One, counsel is down there and it's hard to hear him. And secondly, I think this is cumulative.

THE COURT: The exhibits are in evidence. Is there some --

MR. NICOLA: There will be in a moment.

THE WITNESS: 317-O --

MR. NICOLA: Would you like me to examine her from down there?

THE COURT: Well, except on specific exhibits where you need to approach, I don't --

MR. NICOLA: I just want to run down through the list so we can move to the next part, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I don't want to make a speaking objection, but I think I understand the next part. And I don't understand going through every one of these pieces of paper for the next part, which involves 19 pieces of paper.

THE COURT: Your objection is overruled.

MR. NICOLA: Okay.

THE COURT: But I would rather have you question from here. The main reason is that the 3367 audience has a hard time hearing, and we've tried to have everyone speak where there's a microphone.

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. If you could, please, just read the exhibit number and then the item on the photograph, and let us know whether or not you're the one that took that picture.

A. Okay.

Q. What's the next one in order?

A. Exhibit 644, and I photographed 317-O.
654, and I photographed 317-P.
646, 317-Q.
Exhibit 647, and I photographed 317-R.
648, and I photographed 317-S.
649, and it's exhibit -- or Item No. 317-T.
650, and it's 317-U.
651, 317-B.
652, 317-W.
653, 317-X.
And this is Exhibit 654. I'm unsure what this photograph is as far as what number it was.

Q. May have I see the front of that, please?

A. (Indicating.)

Q. Okay.

A. 655, 317-Z.
656, 317-AA.
657, and I'm unsure of what number it was in 317, but I recognize it.

658, 317-DD.
659, 317-FF.
660, 317-HH.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I'm sorry, I'm going to make a slightly different objection. I think the witness is just reading from the exhibits, and they speak for themselves.

THE COURT: She's saying that she took those photographs. That's what I understood.

THE WITNESS: Yes. Yeah.

THE COURT: When she's saying, "I took this photograph," she's just giving you a list. So overruled.

MR. SANGER: All right.

THE WITNESS: Okay.
661, 317-II.
662, 317-JJ.
663, 317-KK.
664, 317-LL.
665, 317-MM.
666, 317-OO.
667, 317-PP.
668, 317-QQ.
669, 317-RR.
670, 317-SS.
671, 317-TT.
672, 317-UU.
673, 317-VV.

674, 317-WW.
675, 317-XX.
676, 317-YY.
677, 317-ZZ.
678, 317-AAA.
679, 317-BBB.
680, 317-CCC.
681, 617-FFF.
And then we moved on to a new item number that I -- another bag I opened up, and this is --

Q. Let me stop you right there.

A. Okay.

Q. That’s as far as I wanted you to go for now.

A. Okay.

Q. That long list of exhibits, which item did they come from?

A. They came from 317.

Q. And do you recognize this item, which is marked as Exhibit 470?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you tell us about that, please?

A. This is Item No. 317, and the way I can recognize it is it has my initials on the evidence tape that I sealed it up with after I examined it. It’s -- when I first got it, it had evidence tape on it. I broke the evidence tape, opened it up, separated all the items. And when I was finished with it, I placed the items that I did not separate out from this, put my evidence seal back on and signed it.

Q. Okay. You mentioned something about separating items out of 317. Would you like me to get that out of the way?

A. That’s fine there. Yes.

Q. Could you explain that for us, please?

A. I was asked to do a visual inspection of the contents, and I used an alternate light source which goes into the UV wavelengths. And when you look -- search for body fluids, they will fluoresce under UV light, and anything that seemed to fluoresce, it could be body fluids, but it could also be other things. My job was to find items that weren’t on the paper when they were published, they were placed there later. It could be anything that fluoresced. And I separated those items out for further testing. And when I did that, I repackaged them into another bag and I sent them to the Department of Justice Lab to find out what those fluids or deposits were.

Q. How did you mark on a specific item where you suspected there may be some kind of body fluid or other substance that was foreign to that magazine or picture?

A. I sent the entire item to be reinspected by 3371 the Department of Justice. I also put a yellow tab, a post-it note, on the page that I suspected, but I also requested that the Department of Justice reevaluate the entire magazine or piece of paper.

Q. Okay. And did you keep a log of the items that you separated out of the briefcase?
A. Yes. I made a separate property form when I separated items out.
Q. Would you please tell the jury which items --
A. I --
Q. -- you sent to the DOJ and removed from the briefcase?
A. Okay. I separated out 317-B, 317-G, 317-K, 317-L, 317-R, 317-S, 317-Y, 317-BB, 317-CC, 317-EE, 317-KK, 317-RR, 317-UU, 317-YY, 317-BBB.
Q. Okay. The first -- the first item, was that 317-B, as in “boy”?
A. Yes.
Q. How did you package those items to go to the Department of Justice?
A. I repackaged them in a separate evidence bag.
Q. Were any of those items in an evidence bag aside from inside the briefcase?
A. I got them out of the briefcase, separated them and placed them into another bag.
Q. So while they were in the briefcase, they weren't in a bag?

A. No.

Q. Okay. I'd like to show you Exhibit No. 529, please, and I'd ask you to open up that plastic bag and take the contents out. Do you recognize that item?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that?

A. This is the evidence bag I placed the separated items into. I recognize it, because it's my handwriting, and it should be my handwriting on the seal on the top.

Q. Okay. On the front of that bag, did you itemize the items that you had removed from the original 317 and placed into that bag?

A. Yes. They are listed on the contents.

Q. Are you the first person to use that bag to package evidence from 317?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Do you recall which date you sent it to the Department of Justice?

A. On my report I specify it as 2-5-04.

Q. Do you have a signed receipt?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is indicated on the receipt?

A. 2-4-04.

MR. SANGER: Calls for hearsay.

THE WITNESS: 2-4-04.

THE COURT: Just -- overruled. Next question.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: And how did you deliver the item to the Department of Justice?

A. I delivered it by hand. It came directly from our secure lab to their secure lab.

Q. And to whom did you hand the item?

A. Char Marie, who is a criminalist at the Department of Justice.

THE COURT: All right. Let's take our morning break.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May we have just a minute, Mr. Sanger and I?

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

DEFENDANT'S NO.
5006	Timeline (Lisa Hemman)	3397	3423

THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

May I approach the witness again?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: There was one item out of 317 I believe I didn’t give to you. Exhibit No. 681.

A. That is 317-FFF.

Q. That’s also one of the photographs that you took?

A. Yes.

THE BAILIFF: Mr. Nicola, can you make sure the microphone’s on?

Now it’s on. Thanks.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: You mentioned that you used an ALS light source, alternate light source --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- on the magazines looking for biological fluids during the break.

Is there a reason for doing that prior to checking for latent fingerprints?

A. Yes, we wanted to preserve any, if there was any DNA evidence, and some of the processing for fingerprints could possibly damage or destroy any DNA evidence. So if you want to search for DNA, you search for that first prior to doing any processing for fingerprints.

Q. Do you do any DNA testing at the Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Lab?

A. No, we send that off to the Department of Justice.

Q. Okay. Regarding the items that you did not put in the evidence bag that you’ve described earlier, what did you do with the rest of the items that came out of the briefcase, 317?

A. The items that I did not separate went back into the briefcase. I sealed the briefcase and sent it back to the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s property room.

Q. And at the time you placed the remaining items back into the briefcase, were they now marked with the numbers that -- the numbers and letters that you had assigned each of the magazines or pieces of papers?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Do you recall when you began your examination of Item 317, the black briefcase?

A. I started my examination on 1-20-04.

Q. How long did it take you to completely photodocument and number what was in there?

A. I completed the entire task when I delivered them to the Department of Justice on 2-5-04.

Q. Okay. So it took you approximately a week and a half?

A. Couple weeks. Yeah.

Q. Okay. While you were processing each of the 3381

items that were in 317, and then you had to go home at night, what would you do with all the evidence?
A. I’d place them there in -- all evidence that I took out of the property room goes into our secure lab. The only personnel that has keys are the three people that work in our unit.
And then I place them in my cupboard which is assigned to me and place a piece of evidence tape over the top of the -- the door so I know that I was the one who sealed them in there. In the morning, the seal was still complete, so I would know that no one has ever looked at them between when I left them that evening and came back the next morning.
Q. And you kept this going for a couple of weeks until your task was complete?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you do with the -- it’s going around.
What did you do with the briefcase, Item 317, when you finished putting the material that you were not going to send to the Department of Justice back into?
A. It went back to the property room at the Santa Barbara office.
Q. Did you place any kind of seal on it?
A. Yes.
Q. Is that the one that you pointed out for the jury earlier?

A. Yes.
Q. And again, what are your initials on that seal?
A. It will be LSRH 2696. 2696 is my assigned body number by the sheriff’s department. My I.D. number.
Q. Did you also process Item 321?
A. Yes.
Q. And are those pictures in front of you?
A. Yes. Would you like me to read --
Q. I think there’s only a few of them.
A. There’s seven, I believe.
Q. Could you tell us the exhibit number?
A. Yes.
Q. And confirm with the item number whether you took the picture?
A. Okay. It’s Exhibit No. 682, Item No. 321-A.
Exhibit No. 683, Item No. 321-B.
684, 321-C.
685, 321-D.
686, 321-E.
687, 321-F.
688, 321-G.
Q. Could you please take a look at the photograph depicted in Exhibit 685?
A. Okay.
Q. That’s Item 321-D?
A. Yes.

Q. And what is that magazine, please?

A. It’s called “Hawk,” and it was published in February 2003.

Q. And do you recall the date that you processed that particular magazine?

A. Not without going back to looking at the file in the forensic computer as far as the date I filed them.

Q. And the pictures?

A. In the pictures, yeah. Or the original placard that would have been my first picture.

Q. Could you give us a time frame?

A. It was between 1-20-04 and 2-5-04.

Q. Okay. And Exhibit No. 687, please?

A. This is a “Finally Legal” magazine published in February 2003.

Q. That was tough.

Okay. 321-D, Exhibit 557, for the record, would you please open up that binder? Is that the magazine that you marked 321-D?

A. Yes. I placed the numbers on the back lower corner unless that cover was black, and then I would put the number on the inside of the back cover.

Q. Okay. The page numbers on the sleeves were placed there, I assume, afterwards?

A. By someone else. Yes.

Q. Would you please place that back into its exhibit bag? Can you reach the next bag or did I --

thank you.

Is that Exhibit 687?

A. No. This one is Exhibit 559.

Q. I understand what I did. The picture is 687, right? Okay. Exhibit 559 is which?

A. It’s Item No. 321-F.

Q. Okay. Would you open that up, please? Is that the same magazine you photographed between January 20th and February 5th --

A. Yes.

Q. -- of 2004?

Okay. Does that also have your markings on it?

A. Yes, on the back corner. Right down here.

Q. Would you mind putting those items back in their bags, please?

Would you please tell us which other magazines you processed?

A. The next item was 363, and I’m missing “A,” but do you want me to read the list?

Q. Just tell us what the exhibit is.

A. Okay. The exhibit number is 689, 363-B.
690, 363-C.
691, 363-D.
692, 363-E.
693, 363-F.
694, 363-G.
695, 363-H.

696, 363-I.
697, 363-J.
698, 363-K.
699, 363-L.

Q. And you processed all those magazines?

A. Yes.

Q. I’d like you to take a look, please, at Exhibit 518. Do you recognize the contents of 518?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that?

A. This is 317-R. It’s a magazine, a “Barely Legal Hard-Core,” published by Hustler that I examined during the time I was there.

Q. Between February 20th -- excuse me -- January 20th --

A. January 20th and February 5.

Q. Of last year?

A. Of last year.

Q. Okay. Do you see any of the post-it notes that you have placed on that magazine initially when you had sent it to DOJ still on there?

A. Yes, there’s one actually on the first page.

MR. NICOLA: May she publish to the jury, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Just -- the way we do that is --

MR. NICOLA: Do you want me to do it up here?

THE COURT: Yeah, use the --

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object if it’s publishing hearsay, for the truth of the matter. I don’t know what’s being shown.

THE COURT: Show counsel.

MR. SANGER: That’s not the receipt?

MR. NICOLA: No.

MR. SANGER: Okay, that’s fine.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: This is a --

A. It’s a yellow post-it note that I placed there to direct DOJ to examine this page especially, because I felt that there was something on this page that fluoresced and could possibly have DNA evidence on it.

Q. Okay. Did you notice other pages of post-it notes on there?

A. Yes.

MR. NICOLA: Mr. Sanger?

MR. SANGER: That’s fine.

THE COURT: You should state the exhibit number when you show it.

MR. NICOLA: This is all of 317-R.

THE COURT: The individual pages aren’t separately marked.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Page number three?

A. Yes.

Q. And there’s the page number.

Did you process any of these items after they came back from the Department of Justice any further?

A. No.
Q. Okay. If you could please identify for the record the remainder of those photographic exhibits if you do recognize them.
A. Okay. This first picture was not taken by me.
Q. Okay. That's 363-M?
A. And it's Exhibit No. 700.
Q. Okay. Is that 363-M?
A. It's 363-M.
Q. Okay.
A. And Exhibit No. 701, 363-N, as in "Nora."
Three -- Exhibit No. 702, 363-O.
Exhibit No. 703, 363-P.
704, 363-Q.
705, 363-R.
706, 363-S.
707, 363-T.
708, 363-U.
709, 363-V.
THE COURT: Again, she's testifying that she took those pictures?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
MR. NICOLA: Yes, Your Honor.
Okay. I have no further questions, Judge.
THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Hi.

A. Hi.

Q. What is your exact title with the sheriff’s department?

A. I’m a senior identification technician.

Q. So you’re in the forensic --

A. Yes.

Q. -- lab?

A. Yes.

Q. And what kind of duties do you have in general?

A. My basic duties are crime scene investigation, latent print searches, latent print comparisons, shoeprint comparisons. I run the Cal. I.D. section. I process evidence. I photodocument victims or suspects. I collect evidence.

Q. Okay. Do you do any other kinds of forensic or scientific tests on evidence?

A. We collect what we think is possible evidence, like body fluids, off -- like blood at a crime scene, stuff like that that could be possibly blood, and then it is sent to the Department of Justice for testing.

Q. Okay. Now, the Department of Justice, we’re talking about the California Department of Justice?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct? That’s a state agency?

A. Yes.

Q. It’s not the United States Department of Justice?

A. No, it’s California.

Q. And the California Department of Justice has regional labs; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And they have one in Goleta?

A. Yes.

Q. And so when you said you hand-delivered something to the lab, does that mean you went over to Goleta?

A. Yes, I just deliver it to the Goleta lab.

Q. And your office is located in Santa Maria or is it in Santa Barbara?

A. Santa Barbara.

Q. So you basically came across the freeway and took it to the people there?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. The Department of Justice Lab is their Department of Law Enforcement Bureau of Criminalistics, right?

A. Yes.

Q. So they’re a lab that’s set up to assist law enforcement, like yourself, in doing criminal investigations; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, besides -- you mentioned you're a latent print examiner?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct?

And did you participate in fingerprint examinations in this case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you do comparisons?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. When you were out at the ranch, you said you were at the search at Neverland Ranch on November 18, 2003, is that correct, to start with?

A. Yes.

Q. And your job was to do what again?

A. I was to photodocument any evidence seized during -- I was assigned to a search team, and anytime they found a peace of piece of evidence that they wanted to seize, I photographed it before it was seized.

Q. And what location were you in?

A. I was in the arcade cellar and then the office that's adjoined in the security building.

Q. Okay. Mr. Jackson's office?

A. Yes.

Q. And it's -- sometimes people called it a museum as well?

A. Yeah, a museum/office.

Q. A lot of artifacts?

A. A lot of memorabilia.

Q. Did you go into Mr. Jackson’s bedroom?

A. No.

Q. Therefore you didn’t photodocument anything in the main residence; is that correct?

A. No.

Q. As far as seizing evidence, did you actually seize, touch, package evidence, or just photograph it?

A. Just photograph it.

Q. Now, you were aware that your unit, the forensics unit at the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department, was going to be involved in some follow-ups based on the evidence that was seized at Neverland; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to the briefing that was held before the officers went to Neverland?

A. Yes.

Q. And when was that briefing?

A. That briefing was in the -- I think it’s the veterans hall that’s adjoined in the -- in Solvang.

Q. Okay. Was that the day before?

A. No.

Q. When was it?

A. It was at 6 a.m. the morning of the search.

Q. Okay. The actual morning of the search.

And at that time you were given a description by Sergeant Robel and others of the general nature of the investigation; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So you know what kind of investigation it was?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of case? You also were given the names of some of the possible individuals involved in the case; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Given the name, for instance, of Gavin Arvizo and Star Arvizo?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were aware that Mr. Michael Jackson, my client, was the focus of this investigation; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, at that time you were advised that the sheriff’s department had already obtained an arrest warrant for Mr. Jackson; is that correct?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. All right. So when you went out there to the scene, how many -- approximately how many officers went out to the scene, to the Neverland Ranch, with you?

A. I’m not quite sure. Probably 50.

Q. Okay. However many it was, this was a big operation, right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And you understood the need to be careful with the evidence and so on?

A. Uh-huh. Yes.

Q. In any case, you want to be careful of evidence, right?

A. Yes, you always wear gloves and you bag it.

Q. In this particular case after you got through photodocumenting evidence at the scene at Neverland, did you return to the sheriff’s department?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. That very day?

A. Yes, that evening.

Q. That night.

What did you do with at the sheriff’s department?

A. We secured anything that we had in our forensics vehicle as far as equipment. We didn’t have any evidence with us. And we went home for the night. It was a long day.

Q. All right. Sounds like a good idea at the time.

The point being that when you went back to the sheriff’s department, you had equipment. You had what you started out with?

A. Yes.

Q. But you didn’t come back -- you, in your unit, did not come back with any evidence?

A. No.

Q. So the other deputy sheriffs and detectives had custody of whatever evidence you had seen and photodocumented at the time; is that correct?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. When was the next time that you actually saw any evidence in this case?

A. I’m not quite sure. I was never assigned to work on any evidence until January 20th, but other people in our unit were assigned to conduct searches or photodocument things, and in passing, I could have seen some evidence and --

Q. Okay. Did you -- okay. So you could have seen somebody have something on their desk at the lab or somewhere?

A. Well, inside our lab, that’s where we kept most of our evidence.

Q. But you were not assigned to do anything with it; is that correct?

A. No.

Q. So you didn’t do anything?

A. I was not assigned to do any work on it until January 20th.

Q. All right. So just to -- other than a passing glance or some casual look at something, you didn’t have any formal contact with any evidence in this case until January 20th of 2004; is that correct?

A. Yes. The only evidence would be photographs, you know, detectives requesting photographs that were taken at the scene, or prior -- or during the investigation, I may have printed them out or downloaded them onto a CD.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Your Honor, what I’d like to do is ask that an exhibit be marked next in order, and we had a gap. We could use that gap, or whatever the clerk wants to do.

THE CLERK: That would be 5005.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you.

And what I’d like to do, with the Court’s permission, is first of all approach the witness and hand this to the witness.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I placed before the witness, with the Court’s permission, Exhibit 5005. And what I’d like to do is put a blank copy, it’s just a timeline, up on the screen so we can follow along, if there’s no objection.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Oops, you know what? I have the wrong timeline. That will happen. Sorry. We can leave 5005 marked, because I will use it with another witness. Ask that we have this marked as 3396 5006.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SANGER: It’s that one, sorry.

Okay. Thank you. May I approach again, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: I’m going to trade you exhibits there, and give you 5006, and we’ll save 5005 for another witness.

All right. Does that make sense to you? It’s a timeline. Do you have your --

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. If you look at the board, I have a blank version up there going through February, March, April. Actually, it’s a little cut off, but it starts with January of 2003 and goes through 2004.

The first thing I’d like you to do is, on your copy which is the actual exhibit - this is just up on the board as a blank - I’d like you to put your name up there where it says “Witness,” if you would, please.

A. Do you have a pen?

Q. Do I have a pen? Yes, I do. May I approach?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. All right. And do I understand that your 3397 first contact with the evidence was in November, on November 18th of 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. And so that would be right about there somewhere; is that correct?

A. Yeah. Yes.

Q. Could you please make a notation there, however you want to do it. Just a line, and above it maybe say “Search,” or “First contact,” whatever you’d like, and then tell me what you wrote.

A. “Search.”

Q. Okay. The next formal contact you had with the evidence was then in January of 2004; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So, could you make a notation there? And how would you describe that contact? That’s when you were assigned to do the ALS?

A. The visual search.

Q. Okay. All right. Now, in between -- in between November the 18th and January, when you checked the evidence out that you told us about, did you determine that anybody else had broken the seal on the bag, or, say, broken the seal? Had, for instance, cut another side open to open it up and look at it?

A. The first time I saw that evidence was January, so between November and January, I wouldn’t know, because the first time I ever saw it was January 20th.

Q. I see. So you can’t tell us whether or not somebody else checked the evidence out in between to inspect it, or look at it, or do something with it?

A. There should be the original seals. You never take another person’s seal off an evidence item number. So whoever’s opened that briefcase will have their seal on the briefcase, and so you can -- and -- so --

Q. All right. You’re saying “briefcase.” And you’re looking somewhere. Is it right down there?

A. Yeah, it’s the briefcase.

Q. It’s underneath the table?

A. But in the evidence bag, every time you open the evidence bag, you got to open it an original way. You can’t open up someone else’s seal. So you cut it down the sides, on the bottom. You got to be creative when it gets opened multiple times, but there’s always a new seal every time you open it and close it back up.

Q. You start out with a bag; has no seals on it. Whoever puts it in first, puts a seal on it, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And then the next person to open the bag would cut the side or the bottom or someplace where there’s --

A. Different.
Q. -- there’s otherwise not an opening?
A. Yes.
Q. Right? And then when they’re through, if they do it right, they’ll seal it up and put their initials and date on it, right?
A. Yes.
Q. They should document all this in reports; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. So my question was, based on your observations, if you can remember -- and we can take Exhibit 470, which is the briefcase, Sheriff’s Item 317.
A. Yeah.
Q. Okay. And you looked at that for the first time, the first time ever you looked at that was January of 2004, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. January 20th?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. When you looked at it, my question was -- and perhaps I wasn’t clear. When you looked at it on January 20th, 2004, did you determine that more than one person had sealed the bag up?
A. I would have to look at my original -- I also photographed it prior to opening it, so I would have to look at my photograph to determine that.

Q. Can you -- is that possible? Would that refresh your recollection?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have it here where you can look at it?

A. Uh --

Q. It’s one of the exhibits?

A. I don’t have it with me, no.

Q. Okay. All right.

So for the purposes of the jury, or anybody else that wants to look at it, we could look at the bag, and presumably there would be some other seal on there if somebody else looked at it in between?

A. Right.

Q. All right. Now, when you opened -- let me withdraw that.

As you sit here today, then, you cannot tell us whether or not anybody did anything with that evidence between seizure on November 18 and January 20th of 2004, correct?

A. No.

Q. Okay. At the time that you inspected the contents of Exhibit 470, which is Item 317 --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- you opened the bag, right?

A. It was not in the bag at the time. It was just a briefcase with the seals over the locks.

Q. I see. Okay. So you would have to look at the seals on the locks on that, not on the bag?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Well, then we have the briefcase --
A. But there’s probably been multiple ones after me, maybe. I don’t know.
Q. Let’s start with 470. Is it under the table here someplace?
MR. NICOLA: It’s right in front, Mr. Sanger.
MR. SANGER: May I approach and retrieve it?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. I’m going to just hand you 470 and go back to where I was. I’d ask you to inspect that.
A. Okay.
Q. And see if, by looking at the whole thing, you can tell what happened between November 18 and January 20th of 2004.
A. Okay. This would be the last seal on it, and this was 12-03-04, because it’s the last one on the outside. Let me work down.
Q. So while you’re doing that, in other words, the bag doesn’t help you answer the question --
A. No.
Q. -- because that’s a later addition.
A. There’s a seal from 11 -- and unfortunately, it’s 11-03, and it’s after the initial ones, and I can't quite tell whose it is.

There's one on 1-14-04.
And then there's one on mine, which I sealed up on 1-26-04.
And then the one -- oops, sorry.
And then the top one, 11-26-03.
Q. And so the first seal --
A. The first seal is the yellow one that's underneath all the red ones.
Q. So you would -- based on your experience, you would say that the yellow seal represents --
A. The original seal.
Q. -- the sealing on November 18, 2003?
A. Yes.
Q. And then you see at least one seal from later in November of 2003; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. So that implies, or suggests to you, based on your training and experience, that somebody broke the yellow seal, opened the briefcase --
A. Yes.
Q. -- and then resealed it?
A. Resealed it.
Q. And how many other -- or were there any others between then?
A. Yes, there's one other. 1-14-04.
Q. Okay. So on the 14th of January, 2004, somebody else apparently did the same thing, which was at least open the briefcase and then reseal it?

A. Yes.

Q. And you don’t know what any of those people did with the contents of the briefcase during those two incidents in between the original seizure and January 20th?

A. No.

Q. Looking at your seal on there, does that refresh your recollection when you concluded working with that evidence?

A. Yes, I sealed it back up on 1-26-04.

Q. So you had the evidence for about a week; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Took it out on 1-20, opened it up, did the things we’ll talk about, which we’ll go into in a moment, and then you resealed it on the 26th?

A. Yes.

Q. So you delivered it to the Department of Justice crime lab across the freeway, you said, on February --

A. 5th.

Q. -- 5th, but it was already sealed for a week or so by the time you delivered it, right?

A. Yes. Well, this would have gone back to the property room. The separated items were kept in our secure lab behind my cupboard until I finished processing all the other items in there.

Q. And then you went back to the property room and checked that out? No?

A. No. This did not go to the Department of Justice.

Q. Oh, that did not go to the Department of Justice. Okay.

So the other items -- I'm sorry, the other items you took out went to the Department of Justice?

A. Yes.

Q. And this -- on the 26th, then, this just --

A. Got returned to the property room.

Q. This was -- this was returned to your property room in the sheriff's department?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Good.

So now, having refreshed your recollection with all that, as far as Item 317 of the sheriff's department, Exhibit 470, it took you about a week to go through all the evidence in there and photograph it and number the back of each item; is that correct?

A. Yes. Along with this -- I did this during that week, and then the other items after that.

Q. Okay. So your answer was correct?

A. Yeah.

Q. -- to the question that I asked?

A. Yeah.

Q. You took about a week to go through this particular item, 470, Exhibit 470, Item 317, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And during the time that you went through there, what kind of a test did you do? This is when you did your alternate light source?

A. Well, I first opened it up, noticed that there was numerous items inside the briefcase. And I like to assign them a letter, and we discussed it with the other people processing other evidence that we would assign it a letter so it would be a reference number for us so we could identify each piece individually in that item number.

I went through from top to bottom, labeled them all with 317-A, on through FFF, I believe. And then took each piece, photographed it, and then examined it under white light and then under the alternate light source, using goggles, and searching each page by page.

Q. All right. So when you got through doing that, you put it back in the briefcase. Did you put it back in the same order or --

A. Yes.

Q. You didn't shuffle it up?

A. I did not shuffle it up.

Q. Okay. So, you put it -- do you remember which magazine was on top?

A. Not offhand. I think it was a loose piece 3406 of paper or something, yeah.

Q. Okay. In any event, whatever it was, you put it back in the same order, and then you sealed it, right? Sealed the actual --

A. I wouldn’t seal the briefcase. I sealed my cupboard, because I was -- it was open so I could examine each piece. We would have a bazillion --

Q. All right. Thank you.

A. So I --

Q. I may not be communicating well.

A. When I finished with it for the day, I would place it, with the seal broken, inside the cabinet and then I’d place a seal over my cabinet door.

Q. All right. I understood that, so what I was asking, though, is when you were through at the end of the week’s time on the 26th, you then resealed, put your own tape on the briefcase itself?

A. Yes.

Q. And took that back to the sheriff’s booking; is that correct?

A. The property room, yes.

Q. Or -- sorry, the property room where you book the evidence in, right?

A. Yes.

Q. So could you indicate “January 26th” on your timeline there, “returned,” wherever you want to put it there in January 2004, and that’s when you returned the item to the sheriff’s evidence room?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Your Honor, I believe Exhibit 86 was already received into evidence. And I would like to put that on up the board for the purpose of asking questions.

THE CLERK: On March 7th.

THE COURT: Yes, it was.

MR. SANGER: May I do that?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. This is Exhibit 86. Do you recognize the subject matter in Exhibit 86 that’s in evidence?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that appear to be the contents of the briefcase?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the way it looked when you opened the briefcase the first time on January the 20th of 2004?

A. Well, I can’t say the order, because it’s been a long time, but there was loose papers and things up in the top area where there’s a divider, and then there was papers and magazines in the entire briefcase, yes.

Q. And you remember there being some loose pages --

A. Yes.

Q. -- of the magazines on top of the actual stack of magazines in the briefcase, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So therefore this was not -- this was not the way that it looked when you opened it up on the 20th?

A. Well, the top -- what I consider the top is the pocket right up on the top. There’s a little divider pocket. That’s what I considered the top, and I cannot see that in this picture.

Q. Okay. I’m asking about the magazines stacked in there. I think earlier you said you believed there was some loose papers on top of the stack of magazines.

A. Yes, but I consider the top being the closest to the top of the briefcase.

Q. So you mean in the top pocket of the briefcase?

A. Yeah. I started up there with “A” and worked through.

Q. Okay. Do you recall what magazine was on the top of the stack of magazines in the briefcase?

A. No.

Q. All right. So you did not take this picture, did you? You don’t know if you did or not?

A. No, I did not.

Q. So you don’t know when that was taken --

A. No.

Q. -- or what it represents, except it appears 3409 to be generally the same briefcase, right?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Do you know -- actually let me just put that up one more time. This “Barely Legal” magazine that’s on the top, do you know what number you gave that?
A. Not without looking at it back on my original photographs.
Q. Can you do that easily?
A. There’s a stack of photographs right there.
MR. SANGER: May I approach, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
THE WITNESS: I believe there was 58 pieces of either magazines or evidence in 317, so I cannot remember the order.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Is that -- by the way, you looked at the materials in the briefcase?
A. Yes.
Q. While you’re looking, I’ll ask you a question here.
The materials in the briefcase are lawful to possess by an adult in California; is that correct?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. Most of it’s commercially available in one sense or another?
A. In one sense or another, I guess, yeah.
Q. In other words, some you can buy at a newsstand. Others you might have to buy at a specialty store of some sort, but they’re available, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you able to find that -- yeah. Were you able to find the magazine that I asked about?

A. I believe so, if you can show me that original photograph.

Q. Sure.

A. Do you mind if I put this back up? It’s Exhibit 86.

THE COURT: You may.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Thank you. I’m showing you Exhibit 86. By the way, do you know who took this photograph?

A. I did.

Q. Oh.

A. Oh, not that. I took this photograph. I didn’t take that picture. I do not know who took that photograph.

Q. Okay. For the record, when we say “this” and “that,” it later makes absolutely no sense if anybody wants to read it.

So Exhibit 86 that we put up on the board that you’re referring to, you do not know who took that photograph, correct?

A. No.

Q. And I said “correct.” Let me try it again.

Do you who took Exhibit 86?

A. No, I do not.
Q. And then you have in front of you a photograph.
A. And this is Exhibit 644, and this is a photograph I took.
Q. Okay. And you took that photograph?
A. And this is 317-O.
Q. Okay. 317-O. So based on the lettering system that you had, if you started lettering from the pocket of the briefcase --
A. Yes.
Q. -- can you tell us whether or not that was on the top of the stack?
A. No.
Q. Okay. So you either had -- I don’t know what letter of the alphabet O is, somebody will yell it out probably, but A through O --
A. A through -- yeah.
Q. Or A through N, and then it could or could not have been in the pocket, but they preceded your documenting that one. Okay.
All right. I’ve removed 86, so we still have the timeline up there. And if the Court wants the lights turned on for a moment, we can proceed and come back to this in a moment.
Okay. Now, the alternative light source that you used during that one-week period from January 20 to January 26th was for the purpose of -- oh -- was for the purpose of determining whether or not there was bodily fluids?

A. Or any trace evidence, hair, fibers.

Q. And an alternative light source, can you describe that briefly?

A. Yes. What --

Q. Let me stop you for a second. We’ve already had a little testimony. What color is it, and did you wear goggles, or was there a different color? What did you do?

A. Yes, it’s basically a light source that goes through numerous wavelengths, mainly in the UV, and I wore orange goggles which narrows the band down and helps you see things fluoresce, or absorb the light, turn dark. And so basically I just went page by page, wearing those orange goggles, and using the UV light and examining each piece of paper.

Q. All right. Is this destructive of the evidence to do that?

A. No. The CSS -- the light source has dials on it, which dial each wavelength, and the CSS is the one that we use mainly for searching for body fluids, and that one is not, as far as I know, destructive to DNA evidence.

Q. Okay. It’s not destructive to the paper?

A. No.

Q. Okay. So when you do an alternative light source examination of that sort, you can then do other tests on the materials --

A. Yes.

Q. -- freely thereafter, right?

A. It’s harmless to the evidence that we looked at.

Q. All right. Now, you are a latent print examiner, you told us?

A. Yes.

Q. And that means that you have training and experience in examining fingerprints and then comparing them to known prints; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you examine these documents for fingerprints?

A. I did not examine -- I looked for fingerprints, visible fingerprints, but until you -- I did find one fingerprint on, I think it was UUU, or -- I can’t remember. But it was just a partial print. I don’t think it was comparable.

Q. Okay. So with regard --

A. It was visible. A latent print is something that you can’t see without processing.

Q. I was just going to let you explain that. You have three kinds of prints that you find. One would be a visible print, where somebody sticks their finger into wet paint or blood or something, and it’s just sitting there and you can see it with your eyeballs, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you have a plastic print where somebody puts their print into clay, or -- well, silly putty wouldn’t last very long, would it? Or clay or putty of some sort, and it actually reflects the ridges in three dimensions; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you have the latent prints?

A. Yes.

Q. And the latent print -- the latent print, you’re likely to find more latent prints than you are the other two varieties; is that correct?

A. Most of the time, yes.

Q. Okay. And in order to determine if there are latent prints, you can use various technologies to try to develop those prints, either using light sources or using chemical technology; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, you did not use any chemical technology in January of 2004 to attempt to find fingerprints on these documents?

A. No.

Q. And did you use a RUVIS system or a Scenescope system in January?

A. I used a -- no, not a Scenescope. I used their alternate light source that they provide us.

Q. There’s a company that makes Scenescope.

They’ve had different names, but it was Crimescope at one time, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And the official brand name, or whatever it is, of Scenescope is their RUVIS system; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. You are referring to something.

A. Yes. This is actually the manual to the Scene -- the ALS that I used.

Q. Okay. And what was -- now you’ve --

A. This is made by Jovinyvon --

Q. Okay. The court reporter is going to want to know how to spell that. You may as well spell it now, while you have a chance.

A. It’s J-o-v-i-n-y-v-o-n, and the bottom name is H-o-r-i-b-a.

MR. SANGER: May I approach, Your Honor, and look at that?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Don’t put it away until I look at it. I just want to get a quick look of what you referred to, if I may.

THE WITNESS: I need to have it back. That’s the only one I have.

MR. SANGER: I’m not going to take it.

Q. All right. Having refreshed your recollection on that, that is a -- the brand name for that particular alternative light source is the Crimescope, right?

A. Yes.
Q. And, in fact, that was a mini Crimescope?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. So Crimescope alternative light source. Scenescope is the special UV fingerprint scope; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. So, you did not use the Scenescope in January of 2004?
A. No. I did not use the Scenescope, no.
Q. When you were using the Crimescope -- after you used the Crimescope, do you know if anybody had requested that you or another sheriff's department employee do a fingerprint examination on these documents?
A. Yes.
Q. When did that occur?
A. It started in late spring, summer, 2004.
Q. All right.
A. I believe.
Q. Okay.
A. Not by myself, so I'm not quite sure of the date.
MR. SANGER: Okay. Can we put the light back on; if that's all right? And I have the blank form up here. It's Exhibit.... 3417

Q. Were you aware that there was a grand jury proceeding in this case?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you know roughly when that was?
A. April?
Q. March and April of 2004 --
A. Yeah.
Q. -- something like that?
Could you mark on your chart there, in the general vicinity of March and April 2004, “Grand jury”?
A. I’m marking “Grand jury.”
Q. All right. Thank you.
And do you know if Exhibit 317 -- let me withdraw that.
Did you take possession of Exhibit 470, which is Sheriff’s Item 317, at any time between January the 26th, 2004, and the time of the grand jury?
A. No.
Q. Do you know if anybody else did?
A. Not offhand --
Q. All right. Were you --
A. -- no.
Q. Were you aware that Exhibit 470 and its contents was introduced into evidence at the grand jury?
A. Not personally. I --

Q. Did you come to be aware of that later?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. So it’s your best understanding right now that it was an exhibit in the grand jury; is that correct?

A. As far as I know, but I don’t know personally.

Q. Okay. Now, when you got through on January the 26th of 2004 with your examination, other than the items that you took out, separated out, to take to the crime lab, the rest of the items were simply put back in the briefcase, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no individual packaging?

A. No.

Q. There weren’t -- each item wasn’t put in a plastic sleeve or anything like that?

A. No.

Q. They were put in, much like we saw in Exhibit 86?

A. Yes.

Q. After the grand jury, when did you next see Exhibit 470, Item 317, or its contents?

A. I was never assigned to do anything with 317 after I finished with it. I know it was processed for fingerprints later, late spring, August, by other people in my unit, but I had nothing to do with it at that point.

Q. Okay. Did you have anything to do with the fingerprint comparison?

A. Yes. And those were photographs.

Q. You took photographs?

A. No, I examined photographs of latents.

Q. I’m sorry. So you were presented with latent prints by way of photographs?

A. Yes.

Q. And were they digital photographs or filmed?

A. Digital.

Q. And was it your understanding, based on what you were asked to do, that you were presented with photographs that were taken with the assistance of the Scenescope?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the super glue fuming or ninhydrin process in developing this paper?

A. No, I was pregnant at the time and trying to avoid the chemicals.

Q. Okay. That’s a good idea. Okay.

So your next involvement was then looking at photographs, and when was that, do you recall, that you were asked to look at the photographs of latent prints?

A. I started late summer, early fall examining photographs that were taken by other members of the forensics unit.

Q. Did you have meetings with other members of the forensic team to discuss the photographs?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you say you're a latent print investigator by training and experience; is that correct?

A. Examiner, yes.

Q. What did I say?

A. "Investigator."

Q. I meant "examiner," I'm sorry. LPE, Latent Print Examiner.

Do you have any certifications in that regard?

A. No, I have --

MR. NICOLA: I'm going to object. It's beyond the scope, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Following the time that you looked at the photographs as a latent print examiner, did you have any other contact with Exhibit 470 or the contents, which would have been Item 317?

A. No. Other than photographs, no.

Q. Okay. Other than looking at photographs, you didn't take more photographs?

A. No.

MR. SANGER: May I have just one moment, Your Honor?

Q. Oh, by the way, the DNA, you said you sent some things off for DNA testing; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you are aware that subjects that were being compared to anything that may or may not have been found, or anything that may have been found, included Gavin and Star Arvizo; is that correct?

A. Yes.

MR. NICOLA: Objection; compound.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Were you aware that one of the subjects who was a subject to compare any substances found was Gavin Arvizo?

MR. NICOLA: Objection; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: When I sent these off to the lab, I believe my request was to be compared to the defendant.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Do you know if that original request was superseded?

A. I don’t know.

Q. So you’re not aware of whether or not Gavin Arvizo’s DNA was searched for in various items of evidence in this case?

A. No.

Q. Same question pertaining to Star. Would I get the same answers?

A. Yes.

Q. You're not aware of any matches that have been made to Gavin or Star Arvizo's DNA in this case, are you?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Okay. Thank you.

Subject to re-call on those issues that we can't go into now, I have no further questions at this time.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Excuse me. And I would move -- 5006 I believe is up there. I'd move that in evidence, if I may, please.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

MR. NICOLA: May I see it first, please, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, you may.

MR. SANGER: That was kind of a pig in a poke. I didn't look at it either. So maybe I should look at it.

THE COURT: It's too late. It's in evidence.

(Laughter.)

MR. NICOLA: (To the witness) You could have been a doctor.

May I project 5006, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. I can't write on that diagram so I'll just ask you some questions about it.

In between -- excuse me. In between January 26, when you sealed up Item 317, the briefcase --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and the grand jury --

A. Yes.

Q. -- do you know where the evidence items were that you removed and had sent to the Department of Justice?

A. I --

MR. SANGER: Calls for speculation.

THE COURT: She can answer that "yes" or "no."

THE WITNESS: As far as I know, I left it --

THE COURT: Just "yes" or "no." Do you know where they were?

THE WITNESS: Yes. Yes.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Were they in the briefcase?

A. No.

Q. Do you know where they were?

A. They were sent to the Department of Justice Lab in Goleta.

Q. So as far as you know, Exhibit No. 518, which you've previously identified as being in the 3424 bag that went to the Department of Justice, as far as you know, that didn’t go to the grand jury in that briefcase?

A. It was separated out from the briefcase, so it couldn’t have gone in the briefcase.

MR. SNEDDON: Excuse me.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I’d like to show you Penal Code Section 313.1, and ask you to read it to yourself, subparagraph (a).

MR. SANGER: I’m sorry, I -- is this to refresh recollection? If it’s not, it’s improper.

THE COURT: It’s improper to read in court?

MR. SANGER: That’s such a good straight line, there’s got to be an answer, but I don’t have one, Your Honor.

It’s not proper to have the witness read something unless there’s a foundation laid refreshing recollection. She’s being asked to read a law book.

THE COURT: I’ve never heard that objection.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Have you read it?

A. Sort of.

MR. SANGER: Object. Irrelevant; “Have you read it?” It’s got to be relevant to something, refreshing recollection.

MR. NICOLA: It will be, Your Honor. And if it’s not, then the Court won’t let me ask the question, I’m certain.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Finished reading?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Mr. Sanger elicited from you the opinion that possessing the kind of material that you found in the briefcase is generally lawful. You gave him the opinion that you thought it was.

A. Lawful to own by an adult.

Q. If that material were shown to a minor --

A. I believe --

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor. Calls for a legal conclusion.

THE COURT: It’s rebuttal to your question, Counsel.

THE WITNESS: It would be illegal --

THE COURT: You may answer.

THE WITNESS: It would be illegal to the minor.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: And that’s Penal Code Section --

A. One -- 313.1(a).

Q. When you -- when you participated in the fingerprint work in this case later on in 2004, were you the partner of anybody in particular?

A. Yes. I was partnered up with a retired sergeant, Bob Spinner.

Q. And is he the person tasked with making the 3426 analysis of the fingerprint comparisons in this case?

A. Yes. He was the initial and I was the verifier.

Q. And is that a standard protocol?

A. Yes. We used -- every time we've made a fingerprint, we always have two people examine it independently. That way we hopefully won't make a mistake.

Q. To your knowledge, were the fingerprints of any minors recovered from Item 317-R?

A. I'll need to check a list.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object that there's a lack of foundation at this point.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to withdraw the objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

THE WITNESS: Yes, there were some.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. It's a "yes" or "no."

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. I have no further questions, Your Honor.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Well, first of all, before we get into the last area, the identification of the fingerprints - and I think we can turn off the screen if you - the District Attorney asked you to read a section out of the Penal Code, I guess. Is that what he did?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And you would agree that you’re not a lawyer, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And -- you could be, actually. I shouldn’t have put it that way. But you aren’t, it turns out.

A. I’m not a lawyer.

Q. Okay. And you’re not offering an opinion as to what Mr. Jackson is charged with in this case, are you?

A. No.

Q. And as far as you know, he is not charged with the code section that you were asked to look at?

A. As far as I know, no.

Q. Okay. And in fact, the kind of material that if adults possess it - that’s all I asked was if adults possessed that kind of material - there’s nothing illegal about simply possessing that kind of material, true?

A. True.

Q. Okay. Now, going back to your fingerprint testimony, I would like to ask you some questions, then, about your experience and training in fingerprints. So are you certified by any organization? I think you told us that you are, by training and experience, a latent print examiner.

A. I am trained in -- with experience, a latent print examiner.

Q. So are you certified by anybody or any association as a latent print examiner or anything else in that category?

A. No.

Q. Are there bodies that certify people as latent print examiners?

A. Yes.

Q. And what bodies are those, for instance?

A. International Association of Identification I'm a member of, but I have not taken the test through them. It's not a requirement of our department.

Q. Okay. Are you familiar with SWGFST, S-W-G-F-S-T?

A. Yes.

Q. And what's that?

A. Scientific Working Group, Finger -- I can't -- it's a fingerprint group --

Q. Okay.

A. -- that sets basically the guiding rules of fingerprint examiners.

Q. Sets forth the standards for --

A. The standards.

Q. Right. And are there any other groups that you're aware of that are specifically oriented towards fingerprint examiners?

A. Yes. There's SCAFO, which is Southern California Association of Fingerprint Officers. There's numerous -- IAI State Division. There's the California Division of IAI. IAI is International Association of Identification, but they have little subgroups, and then in any major city you find smaller groups.

Q. So people, latent print examiners, kind of get together and they have seminars from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. Talk about what they're doing; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you're not certified by any of those organizations or licensed; is that correct?

A. No, but I do go to their meetings.

Q. Okay. Now, in that regard, there are three aspects to latent print examination; is that right? Let me back up before we get to that. There are three -- there are three principles to the underlying concept of latent print comparison; is that right?

MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: As far as --

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Well, let me suggest, the reason that you examine latent prints and compare them to what's called a known print --

A. Yes.

Q. -- is to try to make a determination, the best you can, as to whether or not the same person gave the latent print who gave the rolled print, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And generally when you have a rolled print, that means you had somebody there with -- a law enforcement officer rolling their prints?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And so there's some form of identification, often a picture, right?

A. Yes.

Q. So that way, you want to be pretty sure that the rolled prints belong to the person that --

A. Yes. They're usually -- there's the demographical information attached to the card.

Q. So that's rolled prints.

Now, the latent prints are the ones that randomly show up in evidence that you're asked to inspect; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And those prints may be partial prints; is that correct?

A. It can be partial. They mainly are partial.

Q. That’s what I was going to say. You don’t -- what you call a “ten print,” whereas you have somebody who’s got ten fingers, they do the whole --

A. Yeah, you roll from nail to nail. And usually you don’t go and pick up pieces of paper and items going like this (indicating). You touch it, and that way you get a partial print.

Q. And sometimes partial prints are obscured by imperfections in the surface; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And sometimes partial prints are obscured because somebody has smeared the print?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, the basic principles I was getting at are that, number one, fingerprints are more or less permanent for an individual; is that correct?

A. Yes. They start at 12 weeks in the womb and they’re the same until you die.

Q. All right. Now, there are some ways to -- for fingerprints to actually change during the course of somebody’s life; is that correct?

A. Change -- you add things to it, like scars, marks, you know, warts can alter, but they’re not altering the fingerprint. They’re just -- they’re adding to the --

Q. All right. It’s a matter of semantics, I suppose. But the ridge lines, when you’re talking about fingerprints, those are sometimes what are called friction ridges; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And those are the ridges, when you look at the pictures on the screen there, you’ll see that they go -- it’s not there. We have seen the picture up there. You might see hoops or whorls.
A. Loops, whorls or arches.
Q. I’m sorry. Loops, whorls or arches. I said “hoops.” All right. Loops, whorls, or arches.
Those are the three main configurations of prints?
A. Yes.
Q. And then you’re going to see a lot of individual characteristics; is that correct?
A. Yes, which we call minutia.
Q. So, for instance, something like 65 percent of the population have whorls; is that right?
A. No, loops.
Q. Loops. Okay.
35 percent whorls. See if I get that right.
A. Yes. Approximate. In that area.
Q. But large parts of the population have loops or whorls, so that isn’t going to get you too far, right, in making an actual comparison?
A. No. That’s your initial pattern of 3433 recognition.

Q. And then to get to a better comfort level to say that you have some kind of identification, you need to look at the minutia, which are the very small individual characteristics; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, those small individual characteristics can change, as you indicated, based on scarring or warts or some other kind of deformity over a period of time?

A. They don’t change. They’re more -- the scar is actually added into the original pattern.

Q. All right. But one of the basic premises is that if somebody has fingerprints at some point in their life, that’s pretty much going to be their fingerprints --

A. For the rest of their life.

Q. Okay. Now, the next principle that’s involved in doing an examination and a comparison is that fingerprints are pretty much unique to an individual?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, that proposition is somewhat controversial, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. We had a recent example with the Madrid bombing case; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You’re familiar with that?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you tell the jury just briefly what that’s about?
MR. NICOLA: Objection; relevance.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Without going into the details -- I don’t want to run afoul of the Court’s ruling, but without going into the details, can I ask you this: Was there a lawyer in Oregon who was accused of being involved in a terrorist bombing in Madrid based on a fingerprint?
MR. NICOLA: Objection. What is the relevance of that?
MR. SANGER: Validation studies. I won’t say any more.
THE COURT: Can you approach that issue without raising another case?
MR. SANGER: Let me go back and see if I can -- if I can go back and see if we get to this point or not. Let’s do it this way.
THE COURT: Thank you.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Within the last ten years or so, there has been writings raising the question of whether or not there’s sufficient differentiation between any two given fingerprints in the world to make positive identifications; is that correct?
A. Yes.

MR. NICOLA: I’m going to object as compound, Judge.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: And there has been, among other things, some litigation in various courts around the country regarding what we might call validation, validating that prints are unique enough to make positive identifications?
A. Yes.
Q. And you’re aware of Judge Pollack’s decision in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania?
MR. NICOLA: Objection. Relevance; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You can answer that “yes” or “no.”
THE WITNESS: Yes, I know of it.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. And without going into detail, Judge Pollack raised serious questions about the validity of fingerprint examination and its admissibility in court, correct?
MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor. Calls for hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: In response to Judge Pollack’s decisions, have there been increasing efforts on the part of the fingerprint examining community to validate their techniques?
A. Yes.

Q. All right. And that brings us to the Madrid bombing case, which I’d just like to ask briefly about, if I may.

MR. NICOLA: I’m going to make the same objection, Your Honor. I don’t know how that’s relevant.

THE COURT: Well, I think I have to let you ask the question before I know whether I’ll let you ask the question.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

(Laughter.)

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. I’ll try to do it as simply as I can, or as summarily as possible, so we don’t get into too much detail.

You’re aware that a number of fingerprint examiners that were doing the Madrid bombing case had made a positive identification of the fingerprint of a lawyer in Oregon. Are you aware of that?

MR. NICOLA: Objection; relevance.

THE COURT: You may answer that “yes” or “no.”

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And in that particular case, the experts found in excess of 16 points of identification when they made that, what turned out to be a false positive identification, correct?

A. I don’t --

MR. NICOLA: Assumes facts not in evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You were going to say, “I don’t know”; is that right?

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

THE COURT: I’ll allow the answer and the question.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, as a result of that particular case, has there been even more intensification of the efforts on the part of the fingerprint examining community to validate their techniques?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. That calls for speculation; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained; foundation.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Are you aware -- you participate in these various organizations. Are you aware -- let’s just make it real simple: The Madrid bombing case and the false identification in that case of the fingerprint --

MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor. Counsel is assuming facts not in evidence. He’s testifying.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Well, was there a false identification of a fingerprint in the Madrid bombing case?

MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor. Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.
THE WITNESS: Yes. Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. And as a result of that false identification -- do you know when that was, by the way, when that occurred?
A. Last year.
Q. Okay. Sometime in 2004, right?
A. Yes.
Q. As a result of that incident, in addition to all the others, has there been additional concern in the fingerprint examination and comparison community that you are involved in, to your personal knowledge?
MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor, the question is compound; it inserts facts not in evidence; and it lacks foundation.
THE COURT: I think there’s a more basic question you have to ask her before you can ask that, which is a foundational question.
MR. SANGER: All right.
Q. Has that case been discussed in -- amongst fingerprint examiners in your presence?
A. Yes.
Q. Has it been discussed at seminars? Have you been to a seminar since that case came down?
A. Yes, I’ve been to a seminar. It wasn’t discussed directly, but it was referred to.
Q. And it was a topic of conversation at the coffee machine at the break?

A. Don’t drink coffee.

Q. Okay. That’s right. Okay. You’re taking a very healthy approach.

All right. In any event -- and then do you read periodicals and other literature regarding fingerprint examination?

A. Yes.

Q. And has that case been the subject of significant discussion in the periodicals relating to fingerprint examination?

A. Yes. And I haven’t quite finished reading that one article.

Q. Okay. As a result of this -- of these concerns, has there been an increased effort to -- let me withdraw that. As a result -- let me withdraw that.

What are validation studies?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Lack of foundation, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: They’re tests for competency.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Has there been an effort to enhance the validation studies in order to prove the proficiency of fingerprint examiners?

A. I don’t know of any official ones, but we always try to be perfectionists.

Q. All right. Now, in the areas -- I’m trying to think of a one-minute question, so I don’t launch into something.

THE COURT: That’s kind of you.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: But in the area of fingerprint examination, there were -- there’s a fellow by the name of Galton who really pioneered all of this in the 1880s; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And to this day, there’s a reference to Galton when you talk about Galton points; is that correct?

A. Galton’s details. And that’s basically minutia, which are points of reference.

Q. So you look at points -- Galton looked at points of reference which would be actual details of the ridge lines in the fingerprint; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right.

THE COURT: All right. We’ll --

MR. SANGER: Being so bold as to take 20 seconds extra here.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: You may proceed.

MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Okay. Just before the break, we were talking about validation studies, and one of the aspects that you talked about was proficiency testing, I think; is that right?

A. Competency.

Q. Competency. Are there blind proficiency tests that are issued to latent print examiners?

A. If your agency requests one, yes.

Q. Have you been involved in such a test?

A. No.

Q. Now, you’re aware that over the last few years, that various agencies have tested where they send out prints and ask that they be compared and that they found both false negatives and false positives; is that correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection; compound.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Not personally, but I know of proficiency tests, yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: So you have not been tested at all?

A. No.

Q. All right. In this particular case, in this particular case involving Mr. Jackson, you went over the original set of prints that were compared, and you participated in confirming the conclusion that either there was an identification or there wasn’t; is that correct?

A. Yes. There would be three results. There would be a positive, meaning it was an I.D., a negative, meaning it did not match, or inconclusive, meaning that it could, but we couldn’t rule out and we couldn’t rule in.

Q. All right. And when you make a positive identification, is it your understanding under the rules that govern latent print examiners -- let me withdraw that.

Are there any formal rules and regulations that govern latent print examiners in California?

A. There’s no formal rules, but our agency uses the ACE-V method, which is analysis, comparison, evaluation, and then verification.

Q. All right. You’re familiar with the rules of ethics that have been promulgated by SWGFST?

A. I’ve read them.

Q. Well, do you feel they’re appropriate for the profession?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And they reflect, pretty much, what the latent print examiners as a group are striving towards --

A. Yes.

Q. -- is that right?

When you make a positive identification, it is supposed to be just that, positive?

A. Positive.

Q. And it’s -- there’s no room -- if you say positive, you’re expressing the opinion that there’s no possibility that anybody else could have left that print; is that correct?

A. It has to be 100 percent. If it’s 99.9, it’s inconclusive.

Q. All right. And in this particular case, there were two prints that you had expressed an opinion on which were later determined by others not to be a correct evaluation; is that correct?

A. Which ones?

Q. Are you -- okay. After you got through looking at the fingerprints, you did that with Detective Spinner; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you and Detective Spinner each formed an opinion as to whether or not there was a positive identification or not; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you then reduced these opinions to written reports; is that correct?

A. I did not write any reports.

Q. Detective Spinner did?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you review his reports?

A. Not every one of them, but I -- I verbally talked to him about everything.

Q. So you were aware that he was filing reports that reflected your conclusions that either a print was positive or inconclusive or negative; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware of two prints that later were determined by other examiners not to be correctly evaluated?

MR. NICOLA: I’m going to object. It assumes facts not in evidence. There’s a lack of foundation as to her personal knowledge.

THE COURT: I’ll sustain the foundation.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Let’s take it one at a time. Were you aware that 317-L -- you had formed an opinion, along with Detective Spinner, that the print was inconclusive; is that correct?

A. I --

MR. NICOLA: Objection; vague. There were a number of prints on 317.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Let’s get the exact one here.

Q. While I’m looking for it, let’s just do this: Were you aware that, with regard to 317-L, that one of the prints that you determined was inconclusive, other examiners have come back and said that there is a positive match?

A. We --

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Lack of foundation as to who the other examiners might be.

THE COURT: Overruled. But the question --

THE WITNESS: This is --

THE COURT: The question is, “Are you aware of other opinions?”

THE WITNESS: Yes. Can I --
THE COURT: No, you can ask your next question.
MR. SANGER: Okay.
THE WITNESS: Can I --
Q. BY MR. SANGER: And we are talking specifically about Fingerprint No. 1, on page 31 of Evidence Item 317-L, which would have been -- well, anyway, evidence Item 317-L. Are you familiar with that print?
A. Yes.
Q. And you and Detective Spinner decided that that was inconclusive; is that correct?
A. At the time of -- when we did all the comparisons, we did 24,000 comparisons, we figured, approximately. We couldn’t spend a lot of time really evaluating --
MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I move to strike the answer. Not responsive.
THE COURT: Sustained. It’s stricken.
MR. SANGER: Could you answer that question?
THE COURT: Have it read back.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: May I explain a little, other than a “yes” or “no”?
MR. SANGER: I have to have an answer first.
THE WITNESS: Okay. Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You found that to be inconclusive?
A. At that time, yes.
Q. Later, there was a determination made by somebody other than you that that should be classified as a print belonging to Star Arvizo; is that correct?
A. We did it together, yes.
Q. Okay. So you filed your original report, or Detective Spinner filed his original report on that particular item around the end of June of 2004; is that correct?
A. Approximately, yeah.
Q. Okay. And that's roughly when you concluded your work making the comparisons; is that right?
A. With that particular latent?
Q. Yes, I'm sorry. But with regard to that particular --
A. Amongst thousands, yes.
Q. With regard to that particular item, 317-L, which was a particular magazine; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. With regard to that magazine, you concluded your work towards the end of June of 2004; is that right?
A. I don't think it was 2 -- in June, no.
Q. When was it?
A. It was sometime in the fall.

Q. Okay. All right. In any event, fall 2004?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And then in February, or let's say January and February of 2005, you looked again at Item 317 with Detective Spinner; is that correct? 317-L?
A. I think it was in January, yes.
Q. January 2005?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. We're in the middle, at that time, of pre-trial motions in this case; is that correct?
A. I guess so, yeah.
Q. Jury's about to be --
A. Well, it was the beginning of January 2005, because I -- I was still pregnant.
Q. Okay. All right. And at that time you had already -- by that time, you had already filed this report saying that print, that being Fingerprint No. 1, developed on page 31 of Evidence Item 317-L, was inconclusive?
A. I did not file a report.
Q. Detective Spinner filed the report with that conclusion, correct? Your unit filed a report with that conclusion, correct?
A. Inconclusive in November, October. And then we filed another report I believe in January.
Q. Yes, ma'am. And then -- actually, the report that you filed -- do you have that report in 3448 front of you, by the way?

A. I did not file a report. It’s all -- it’s Spinner.

Q. Detective Spinner filed it, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you and he were working together in your unit, the forensic unit, Bureau of Criminalistics for the sheriff’s department analyzing these prints, correct?

A. Not -- I was on maternity leave at that time. I came in on a -- for a couple hours one day to meet with him.

Q. One day when?

A. In January.

Q. Okay. So when he says that you concurred with him that this print should be reclassified, you concurred with him based on a two-hour consultation?

A. Well, I would think it was more than two hours, but I can’t say exactly. I didn’t have a stopwatch with me. It was an afternoon. It was a print that was -- we couldn’t spend the time on it, as I recall.

Q. What I want to ask you is how much time, now. What you’re saying is maybe more than two hours, but it was an afternoon?

A. It was an afternoon, yes.

Q. All right. And in the course of that afternoon, did you review other prints other than 3449 the one that we just referred to, Print No. 1 on page 31 of 317-L?

A. Yes, I believe we reviewed all the inconclusives.
Q. All of them?
A. Yes.
Q. And you determined in this case, between the two of you in that period of time, that your previous inconclusive should be now reported as a positive for Star Arvizo; is that correct?
A. Yes. There’s -- as an examiner, you always go on the edge of caution, so you want to make sure it’s a positive-positive. If you have any -- if you want -- if you want to rush a job and you don’t -- if you don’t want to rush a job, you make it an inconclusive.
Q. How many weeks did you work on the fingerprint examinations prior to coming back in January?
A. Oh, a few months.
Q. Few months?
A. At least, yeah.
Q. And when you said -- I forgot what the number was, some thousands of comparisons?
A. Yes. You have ten fingers on each hand, and we had three people to compare it to, and I believe there was over 700 latents, so that makes approximately 21,000 comparisons.

Q. So you're comparing the 700, more or less, 700 latent prints --

A. Approximately.

Q. -- to three people, each of whom had ten fingers?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And you said you never want to make a positive identification unless you're 100 percent positive, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said if you're rushing things, you definitely don't rush into a positive. You'd rush into an inconclusive?

A. Yes, so you can spend the time later re-examining, if you have the time.

Q. In that same January time period, it was determined that your positive identification of Fingerprint No. 1 on page seven of Evidence Item 317-O where Mr. Jackson was positively identified by you earlier, that that should have been inconclusive; is that correct?

A. We didn't make it a positive, because I still feel it's a positive. Bob feels it's more of an inconclusive. And so we can't come to a conclusion, so it's still an inconclusive.

Q. So "Bob" is Detective Spinner; is that correct?

A. Detective Spinner, yeah.

Q. But once again, that had been written up as a positive prior to January and February of 2005, correct?

A. By “Bob,” by Bob Spinner, yes.

Q. So fingerprint identification is really subjective; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, it’s up to somebody who has training or -- in other words, or whatever their background is, to look at the latent and look at the rolled print and make a subjective determination that they believe that it’s the same person; is that right?

A. Yes, with training.

Q. And we have indicated with a couple of examples, and I won’t go into any more particular ones with you right now, but there have been a number of other notable misidentifications of prints in recent years, have there not?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, you talk about the ACE-V analysis. And the ACE-V analysis was actually put together really by Sergeant Ashbaugh of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police?

A. Yes.

Q. And Sergeant Ashbaugh was a sergeant in the RCMP?

A. Yes.

Q. And he decided that, oh, 20 years ago or so, that fingerprint analysis needed to be upgraded and have a more scientific vocabulary; is that correct?

A. He was one of the many people, yes.

Q. And he, in fact, coined the phrase “ridgeology”?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you consider yourself a ridgeologist?

A. To a certain point, yes.

Q. And he wrote a book with that name in the title, I think.

A. Yes.

Q. When you say “ridgeologist” or “latent print examiner,” you’re talking about looking at the ridges and trying to see what you got in that latent, if it matches the ridges of the rolled print; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, prior to Sergeant Ashbaugh’s arrival on the scene and his writing and whatnot, the Galton points were given a tremendous amount of weight; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And by “Galton points,” we sometimes hear there’s so many points of identification where you look at a particular image on the magazine or from the Scenescope or the super glue or the ninhydrin, and then you look at the rolled print, and you say, "Ah-hah, that looks like the end of that line ends just about exactly the same place on both prints." Would that be an example of a Galton point?

A. Yes.

Q. And at one time it was thought that simply counting the number of Galton points was a good way to make a positive identification; is that correct?

A. A long time ago. They need to be the same orientation, too.

Q. All right. So we've gone from just counting, where somebody says, "Oh, we've got 12 points of identification," for instance, to looking at more than just the 12 points of identification?

A. Yes.

Q. Ultimately, when you do your analysis, the first thing that you need to feel comfortable with is that you have a -- a valid print; that is, a latent print is a print that was, in fact, preserved properly and enhanced, or whatever was done to make it visible, that all of that was done in a reliable fashion; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you do an analysis of the print to see if there's going to be enough of a print and enough of a coherent print to do a comparison, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You could have one print over another that 3454 might cause problems; is that right?

A. That’s one of our problems, yes.

Q. And you can have a print that’s on paper that’s crinkled, or there’s some other problem with it so you don’t get enough of a print?

A. Yes.

Q. You could have a print where just the edge of somebody’s finger hit the paper and that’s the only thing that will show up?

A. Yes.

Q. So the first thing is, you try to analyze the print and make sure you got enough to go with. If there are danger signs, do you reject the print?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. So, for instance, if there are too many -- there’s too much pressure, there’s a smear or something like that, it may render the print really unusable; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, assuming you find a partial print, which is a portion of that otherwise ideally rolled print that’s sufficient, you go to the comparison stage; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. So we’re actually doing this ACE-V thing.

A. You do the analysis. Can I give a quick description?

Q. We did analysis, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Now we're going to comparison. That's C, AC?

A. You have missed a few things in the analysis.

Q. Go ahead. Okay.

A. You also look at the general pattern. If the pattern -- the subject you're comparing to is a known, your suspect, has all whorls, and the print that you're comparing it to is a loop, you can eliminate him right then. You don't have to go any further than that. So you've got to look at the overall latent print as far as the pattern, the details in the -- in the latent, and you can do some quick evaluation, right then and there, that you don't need to continue on to the comparison process.

Q. All right. So whether that's part of analysis or the first part of comparison, you do a basic overall comparison of the known or rolled prints with the latent --

A. Yes.

Q. -- is what you're saying, and then you go to a more detailed comparison if you feel we're still in the ball game. You got enough to look at, you think, and then there's a general agreement that it's either a whorl or a loop or an arch or something, right?

A. Yes.

Q. So when you get to comparison, tell me what you do besides count Galton points.

A. You look at the three levels of detail.

There's the general pattern, then ridge flow of the fingerprint or palm print.

Then the next layer of detail is Galton's details or minutia, which is what we call it now, and those are ridge endings, where the ridge will just go up and end, or bifurcation, where the ridge goes up and it separates into two. There's short ridges, which are just little short ridges in between the row of other ridges. There's dots, which are just a little dot. And there's scars, marks, warts, you know, other things. You look at those and see if they line up in the same orientation.

And then you can go down to the third level of detail, which is ridgeology of -- the edges of the ridges, like edgeoscopy they call it, and it's the actual way the ridges form, if there's a bump in it, or if it flows a certain different way. And you can also look at the poreoscopy, the actual placement of the pores along the ridges.

Q. Okay. In order to get to what you're calling the edgeoscopy or the poreoscopy, you have to have a very good latent; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Most latents -- for instance, on a magazine, most latents you’re not going to be able to see that kind of detail to make that kind of comparison; is that correct?

A. Most of them, yes. But some are clear enough, yes.

Q. And you talked about the Galton points. For instance, at one time it was thought that maybe 12 points of identification would assure an absolute positive identification; is that correct?

A. By some agencies, yes.

Q. In fact, some agencies went as low as seven or nine points of identification; is that correct?

A. I don’t know.

Q. And we were talking about this lawyer who was falsely identified based on a fingerprint in Oregon in the Madrid bombing case, that there were over 16 points of identification that were established by the FBI in that case; isn’t that correct?

A. I don’t know how many points they went off. I looked at the print itself and I wouldn’t I.D. it, so --

Q. In any event, whatever it was, it was enough for the FBI to say there was sufficient points of identification, correct?

A. At that time, yeah, I guess so.

Q. Okay. In 2004?

A. Yeah.

Q. And they were aware of this additional -- the more than just Galton’s 1886 approach to counting points. They were aware of all the advances that had been made in fingerprint identification?

MR. NICOLA: Objection; assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: May call for speculation, actually. Let me withdraw that.

Q. Have you worked with the FBI before?

A. No.

Q. Now, once you get through with the analysis and comparison, you then go to the evaluation, which is the E --

A. Yes.

Q. -- part of ACE?

A. Yes.

Q. And that, as we just said, is not a matter of counting points of identification, correct?

A. No.

Q. So -- I did that again, I said “correct.” Is evaluation merely a matter of counting the points of identification?

A. We don’t count points.

Q. Okay. In other words, it’s a subjective determination?

A. Yes.

Q. That’s, for instance, where Bob says, “Oh, 317-O was Michael Jackson’s print,” and you say you don’t think it was, or you don’t think there was enough to make that determination, right?

A. It’s actually reversed.

Q. Whichever way it went. Whichever way it went. I’m sorry if I got it backwards. But there’s a disagreement, because it’s subjective?

A. It’s -- yeah.

Q. There’s no scientific way of absolutely verifying the point, is there?

A. Well, we strive to, as this is an applied science.

Q. But -- it’s an applied science, but it ultimately is your subjective opinion, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the last -- it’s ACE, and then usually puts a dash and a “V,” I suppose.

A. Yes.

Q. And the “V” is for verification; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And that means that ordinarily you would have another examiner look at your work, or you would look at another examiner’s work?

A. Yes, independently.

Q. And see if you come up with the same conclusion; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you’re aware that many cases where there have been false positives involve just that. There was verification by two or more people in addition to the regular, or the original examiner, correct?

A. Not personally, but by reading, yes.

Q. By reading about other examples and --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and discussing them.

Your Honor, since this witness has not gone into any more specifics, slides, pictures, I am going to ask for leave to bring her back at that time, if those are introduced into evidence, rather than attempt to take the People’s evidence and put it up on the screen and go through it, if that’s acceptable to the Court.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. I have no further questions at this time.

MR. NICOLA: I’ll be brief.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. You’ve mentioned the word “subjective” a few times when you’re talking about fingerprint 3461 comparisons.

When you go through the ridges and pick out the minutia, what you're trained to do, is it your belief that those items are there, or is that something that other people, you hope, can pick out as well?

A. Well, I hope that other people can come to the same conclusion that I came to.

Q. And you've used the word "applied science."

A. Yes.

Q. Is your craft one that, I hope, can be replicated by others doing the same fingerprint comparison?

A. It should be.

Q. Okay.

A. If I did a comparison and I hand it off to another examiner, they should come to the same conclusion I did. And that's what an applied science is.

Q. That suggests some objectivity to this?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Move to strike.

THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Did you want to explain that inconclusive that you and Mr. Spinner went back to take a look at?

A. Yes. Fingerprint comparisons --

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object as, first of all, the question is vague. Secondly, that seems to be nonresponsive.

MR. NICOLA: Can I rephrase?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Okay. Mr. Sanger brought up an inconclusive fingerprint on Item 317-L.

A. Yes.

Q. What can you tell us about that one?

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for a narrative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Can you explain what an inconclusive means?

A. It means it’s a difficult print, and you can’t rule the person to be a positive I.D., and you can’t rule him out to be a negative I.D. With further time examining it and spending time running the ridges and working with the print, you can turn it into a positive or you can turn it into a negative.

But at the time of evaluation at that time, we wanted to leave it as an inconclusive, and come back to it, because it was a more difficult print to make an I.D. of.

Q. Okay. With respect to that particular print, an inconclusive fingerprint is one that you believe belongs to a particular person?

MR. SANGER: Objection; leading.

MR. NICOLA: I’ll rephrase it, Your Honor.

Q. Did you have a belief as to who that fingerprint was made by, even when you labeled it inconclusive?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Objection; that’s an opinion without an adequate foundation.

THE COURT: It’s overruled. She’s already testified that she had an opinion separate from the other person, so I’ll allow the question.

MR. NICOLA: Do you want it read back?

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: And what was that?

A. As Star Arvizo.

Q. Okay. You mentioned that you reviewed all the inconclusives with Detective Spinner. Were there many inconclusive fingerprints?

A. I don’t have the complete list, but there weren’t that many.

Q. And in fact, there weren’t very many positive fingerprints either, were there?

A. No.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object -- withdrawn.

THE COURT: Did you withdraw that?

MR. SANGER: I withdrew it. I’m sorry, Your Honor.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Can you explain to us what you meant by fingerprint examining being an applied science?

MR. SANGER: Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: An applied science is something that can be repeated by someone of the same level of proficiency that you are at. So if I did a comparison and gave it to another examiner, they should come to the same conclusion that I came to.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. Thank you very much. I have no further questions.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. One of the rules articulated by SWGFST is you don’t express an opinion on an inconclusive other than it’s inconclusive, right?

A. Yes, but you still have a gut feeling as to what you -- what you feel.

Q. And according to SWGFST, according to their rules of ethics, it’s inappropriate to come into a courtroom and testify as to who you believe an inconclusive print may belong to. They deem that unethical, do they not?

A. I guess so.

Q. Okay. Now, as far as your explanation of this applied science business, I understand that you come to this by certain training and experience, but when you put the actual prints up on the board - when I say “the board,” the screen, for instance, behind you - and show them to a jury or a group of intelligent people, they should be able to follow your analysis in coming to the conclusion that there either is or is not a match, correct?

A. On -- yeah. Yes. With some explaining and, you know, some basic training in the courtroom, yeah.

Q. All right. In other words, it’s not -- it’s not -- you’re not seeing something that other people cannot see. You are appreciating things that you have learned to appreciate from your training and experience, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So when it’s up there, the jury or anybody else in the courtroom can look to see the points of identification or the other characteristics of the print, the latent print and the rolled print, and they should be able to visually see the same things that you can see, correct?

A. They should --

MR. NICOLA: Objection, Your Honor, that calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: They should, you know, with some explaining from the examiner, you know, pointing out the details, be able to see everything we see.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: It’s not reading tea leaves or something --

A. No.

Q. -- or where there’s something mystical about it.

A. No, they’re there.

MR. SANGER: All right. Thank you. No further questions.

MR. NICOLA: I have nothing further, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down. Call your next witness.

MR. NICOLA: Yes, Your Honor. Char Marie.

THE COURT: Raise your right hand, please.

CHARLENE MARIE

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Charlene Marie; 3467

C-h-a-r-l-e-n-e, M-a-r-i-e.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Did you bring my binder?

A. I did.

Q. Well, good afternoon.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. Can you please tell the jury who you’re employed by?

A. I work for the California Department of Justice at the Santa Barbara Regional Crime Laboratory. I’m a senior criminalist there.

Q. How long have you been employed by that agency?

A. Just about 15 years.

Q. How long have you been a criminalist?

A. 15 years.

Q. Do you, on occasion, receive requests from the Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Office to process evidence on their behalf?

A. I do.

Q. And what is the procedure in getting the evidence to you to process?

A. The procedure is that someone from the sheriff’s office will bring in the evidence. We also accept evidence via UPS, or in the mail. We serve San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara Counties, so some of our agencies ship their evidence in to us. And sometimes we go to the scene and help collect evidence.

Q. On or about February 4th of 2004, did you receive some evidence --

A. Is that the question?

Q. I lost my place -- from a Lisa Hemman?

A. May I look at my notes?

Q. If that refreshes your recollection, certainly. On or about February 4th, did you receive an item of evidence from Lisa Hemman of the sheriff’s office?

MR. SANGER: May I approach to see what notes are being looked at to refresh?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: These are submission forms. So, yes, I did. I received evidence. And did you ask me what did I receive?

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Not yet.

A. Okay.

Q. What did you receive?

A. I received Item 317, and various subsets of that, 317-B, G, K, L, R, S, Y, double B, double C, double E, double K, double R, double U, double Y, and triple D. 15 items.

Q. Okay. Did you note the date on a form 3469 anywhere when that evidence came to you?

A. I did, on the submission form. Lisa Hemman signed it off. I made a notation, “IP,” which means to us “in person,” and my signature, and then I wrote the date.

Q. Okay. If she testified earlier that she dropped it off on February 5th of 2004, is that in conflict with your record?

A. I --

MR. SANGER: Objection; leading. And calls for speculation as to when it was received.

THE COURT: Calls for a conclusion; sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: What did you do with the item when you received it from Ms. Hemman?

A. I locked it -- well, we logged it into the lab, and then I locked it in my evidence locker in the evidence vault.

Q. Did you mark the bag in any fashion?

A. Yes, we put the case number on it, my initials would be on it, and the date that I received it.

Q. I’ve just placed in front of you Exhibit No. 529; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you please remove the contents of Exhibit 529 and tell the jury if you recognize what the contents of that exhibit are?

A. I recognize it. It’s a sealed brown paper bag and this is my writing on the bag that has our lab case number for this case. That’s my signature, and that’s the date that I put on the bag.

Q. Is this the bag that you received on February 4th from Lisa Hemman?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did you open that bag immediately upon receipt?

A. I did not.

Q. When did you first open that bag?

A. I’m going to check my notes. That’s okay? I first examined Item 317, the contents of this bag, in July, July 27th.

Q. And from the time that you received it on February 4th until July 27th, where did that bag remain?

A. The bag was in my evidence locker in the evidence vault from the time I received it until May 20th. On May 20th, Detective Al Lafferty of the S.O. picked it up and he returned it the next day, on May 21st.

Q. So from February 4th until May 20th of 2004 --

A. It was in -- sorry.

Q. -- it was in your evidence locker?

A. Yes.

Q. Did anyone else have access to your evidence locker?

A. No.

Q. No?

A. No.

Q. Okay. When you did open the bag in July --

A. In July.

Q. -- did you make a photographic record of the contents?

A. I did.

Q. Okay. Did you also write notes on the photographic record explaining what you did at the time that you did it?

A. Yes, I did.

MR. NICOLA: I'm going to mark this next in order, 766. May I have this two-page document....

Q. Do you recognize Exhibit 766?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Can you tell the jury what is depicted in that?

A. I took a photo of the front cover of each item that was in the brown paper bag after I opened it, so at the top is my writing saying that I removed the taped, sealed bag from the vault and that there were 15 items in the bag. I list them, and then I started taking photographs of what I saw in the bag with their item numbers on these two pages. So there are 15 -- 15 photos printed out on these two pages.

Q. Is Exhibit 766 an accurate depiction of --
A. Yes.
Q. -- the record of your file?
A. Yes.
Q. Does it accurately depict the magazines that were within Exhibit -- what is the exhibit number on the bag? I'm sorry.
A. 766.
Q. I need to look at the bag.
I'm sorry, I'll ask that question again.
Is 766 an accurate depiction of what was inside the bag, Exhibit 529, when you received it from Lisa Hemman on February 4th, 2004?
A. Yes.
MR. NICOLA: May I publish, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Any objection?
MR. SANGER: Is he offering to admit it, I suppose, first before he publishes?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: No objection.
MR. NICOLA: Move to admit and publish.
THE COURT: All right. It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: These are just the photographs of the front pages, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And there's a page two?
A. Yes, there's a second page.
Q. The yellow stickies, post-it notes, that are visible in this Exhibit 766, in particular protruding from 317-R and 317-UU, were those in place at the time that you received this evidence item?

A. They were.

Q. Okay. When was Exhibit 529 and its contents released to the sheriff’s office for good?

A. On July 29th of ‘04.

Q. Okay. So essentially you had that item for almost six months?

A. Yes, but for the one day that it went to the sheriff’s office and came back.

Q. For that period of time, was there -- excuse me. During that period of time, was there any period that you were unavailable to work on this case?

A. Yes.

Q. Explain to the jury why that was.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object, relevance, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Last spring I spent seven weeks as a juror on a civil trial down in Santa Barbara.

MR. NICOLA: Trial lasting seven weeks.

THE COURT: It’s a short one.

THE WITNESS: I thought it was long.

MR. NICOLA: I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Cross?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. All right. How are you doing?

A. I'm a little nervous.

Q. Really?

A. Otherwise fine, thank you.

Q. Excuse me. Now it's caused me to choke. Sorry about that.

(Laughter.)

Q. BY MR. SANGER: To everybody's dismay, I have recovered, however, so -- all right, just a few questions here.

The exhibit that you identified, 766, which is the photographs that you took of the various items, first of all, are those all of the items that you took?

A. On the whole case?

Q. In this bag. You said there was a bag of items that you received. Excuse me. Were those all of the items? Are all of the items depicted in that exhibit?

A. I believe so. I counted 15 items.

Q. Okay. And there are 15 here?

A. 15 photos, uh-huh.

Q. And this is from -- what you understand -- when you say it's 317, you understand this to be Sheriff's Item 317; correct?

A. That's right.

Q. You never saw Sheriff’s Item 317 itself, did you?

A. This is what I saw, this tape-sealed paper bag that had 15 things in it.

Q. So if I were to take the time to find it here and hold up a black briefcase that was Item 317, you would say, “I never saw that”?

A. Right, I haven’t seen that.

Q. Okay. And similarly, you mentioned that you had B -- I won’t read them all because it makes it difficult for the court reporter, among other things. But you have the various letters you wrote down after each item there, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. 317-B, and then BB, et cetera --

A. Yes.

Q. -- that applies to you, does it not, Miss Marie? That there were probably other items that were labeled with letters that you never saw?

A. It’s quite possible, yes.

Q. Okay. The sequence that you saw goes as far as 317-DDD, correct?

A. Well, I have a triple D. I also have a double Y.

Q. Assuming it went through the alphabet, it went through a double alphabet and then went through a triple alphabet. It went at least up to 317-DDD, it seems.

A. Yes. In that case, there were a lot of other items that were named that way.

Q. Okay. And your job was to look at that with an alternative light source, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did I ask you this? On 766, that’s your handwriting on the notes around the pictures?

A. It is.

Q. All right. And when you looked at the alternative light source, looked at the items with the alternative light source, did you find any suspected DNA to sample and analyze?

A. Well, the light source is just a presumptive searching tool, and all it’s going to tell you is if something’s glowing. If something’s glowing, biologicals do glow, so that’s one area that you might want to test.

Q. Okay. Is that what you were looking for?

A. I was looking for biological material, yes.

Q. Bodily fluids, pretty much?

A. Correct.

Q. The question is, did you find any?

A. I did not.

Q. So as far as you could tell, there was no DNA to be tested from the materials you were sent?

A. Well, there’s no seminal material.

Q. There’s nothing you felt -- just to make it clear, I’m not trying to trap you here, but there 3477 was nothing that you found and you said, “Ah-hah, we ought to send this off to Sacramento or have a DNA lab do a further analysis of this”; is that correct?

A. That’s right.

Q. You pretty much packaged it back up and sent it back to Santa Barbara?

A. I did, yes.

MR. SANGER: All right. Very good. Thank you. No further questions.

MR. NICOLA: No questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: See, all that worrying for nothing.

THE WITNESS: I know. Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, while we’re waiting for the witness, may Mr. Nicola and I approach briefly?

THE COURT: Yes.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand -- when you get to the witness stand, remain standing.

Face the clerk here and raise your right hand.

HERIBERTO MARTINEZ, JR.

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Heriberto Martinez, Junior. That’s spelled H-e-r-i-b-e-r-t-o; last name Martinez, M-a-r-t-i-n-e-z; and the suffix Junior, J-r.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Good afternoon, sir.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. Where are you employed, sir?

A. I work for the County of Santa Barbara in the sheriff’s department.

Q. And have you ever seen the defendant before?

A. I have.

Q. Have you seen him in person before?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you recognize the exhibit I put in front of you?

A. It’s a fingerprint card.

Q. Okay. Turn it over. Did you make that fingerprint card with Mr. Jackson?

A. I took these fingerprints.

Q. Okay. Is the date written on the back?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Okay. And that's Exhibit 766?

A. It's 767.

Q. 767. You took those fingerprints on which date?

A. On November 20th, 2003.

Q. And are they the fingerprints of Mr. Jackson?

A. To my knowledge, they are.

Q. Okay. Are those inked fingerprints?

A. These fingerprints are -- I took them on a Livescan machine.

Q. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. How does the Livescan machine work, just generally?

A. When you take a fingerprint, it's on a glass plate, and it shows up on a monitor, computer monitor, immediately as you take the fingerprint. As you roll the fingerprint from one side -- the finger from one side to the next, it shows immediately what you're taking a picture of.

Q. Okay. Do all these images stay up on the screen for some period of time?

A. Each one will show up individually. At the end of the taking the set of fingerprints, it will display as it displays here, with all fingerprints showing.

Q. Okay. Did you take Mr. Jackson's 3480

fingerprints on that date?
A. I did.
Q. Okay. And does that record reflect that those are Mr. Jackson’s fingerprints on the writing on the back of that exhibit, 767?
MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.
MR. NICOLA: It’s an official record.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.
THE WITNESS: I may answer?
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Yes, you may answer.
A. Repeat the question, please.
Q. The question was, does the back of that document, 767, with the writings, indicate that those are Mr. Jackson’s fingerprints?
A. Yes, it does.
Q. Okay. And is your name and body number also on that document?
A. My last name and my body number are on the document.
MR. NICOLA: Okay. Your Honor, I move 767 into evidence.
MR. SANGER: No objection.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
MR. NICOLA: No other questions.
THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Mr. Martinez, how are you?

A. Very well. How are you, sir?

Q. I'm doing fine. Thank you for asking. You are a sworn peace officer, or not?

A. I'm a sworn officer, yes.

Q. Are you 24-hours-a-day sworn or when you're on duty?

A. Only when I'm on duty.

Q. So you're a correctional officer with the sheriff's department; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. You're not a deputy who patrols or a detective, that sort of thing; is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Okay. And one of your duties at the jail, excuse me, from time to time, is to book people in who come in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have other duties there as well; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Sometimes you patrol various areas of the jail?

A. I work in most areas of the jail, yes.

Q. So you've done pretty much anything that a correctional officer would do in the jail, I take it?

A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. There you go.

And you're not trained as a latent print examiner, are you?

A. No, I'm not.

Q. And you -- when you're taking these prints from people and using this Livescan device, you received some training on that from some source?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. It was on-the-job training?

A. I was working at the time I was trained, but it was provided by the Department of Justice.

Q. Okay. Somebody from the crime lab in Goleta?

A. No, it was a -- may I check my note I have here?

Q. Well, okay.

A. It was from the state. Somebody -- I took a 15-hour class on fingerprints.

Q. Okay. And based on that 15-hour class, that's where you learned how to put people's hands in this machine and get the prints up on the screen?

A. The actual using the Livescan itself was on-the-job training.

Q. That's what I was asking about. So you had a 15-hour class as part of your training to book people in the jail. You had a 15-hour class on how to roll fingerprints, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. And then you had the on-the-job training to learn how to use that Livescan device, right?

A. Yes, that’s correct.

Q. So one of your supervisors or colleagues said, “Okay, we’ve got this machine. This is how you do it”?

A. Yes, that’s correct.

Q. All right. And you said you were -- to the best of your knowledge, those were Mr. Jackson’s prints. Do you have any question as to whether or not those belong to Michael Jackson?

A. As I stated earlier, I’m not an expert witness on the fingerprints, so I know I took his fingerprints on the day noted here.

Q. Okay.

A. If these are, in fact, the same ones, then, yes, they are his prints.

Q. It looks familiar to you is what you’re saying?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: All right. I have no further questions.

MR. NICOLA: No redirect, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. NICOLA: Alicia Romero.

THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

ALICIA ROMERO

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name’s Alicia Romero; A-l-i-c-i-a, R-o-m-e-r-o.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I have an objection to proceeding. It’s somewhat technical, but could we just have a moment? I know you --

THE COURT: They can’t hear you in the courtroom.

MR. SANGER: I say, could we just have a moment at the bench? I know you don’t prefer that, but I think it’s a technical --

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

(Discussion held off the record at sidebar.)

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, since we will not be prepared to go forward with this witness, we’d like to excuse her pending re-call.

THE COURT: We won’t excuse you, but we’ll re-call you. You may step down.

Sorry. We won’t excuse you, we’ll re-call you.

MR. NICOLA: May we make notice to Miss Romero at her office? It probably won’t be today.

THE COURT: Yes. Remain on call.

THE WITNESS: May I leave for today?

THE COURT: Yes.
She can return to work today, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, we’ll call Detective Tim Sutcliffe as our next witness. He’s downstairs.

THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

TIMOTHY SUTCLIFFE

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Timothy Sutcliffe; S-u-t-c-l-i-f-f-e.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Technical difficulties.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. Good afternoon, Detective Sutcliffe.
A. Good afternoon.
Q. Who do you work for?
A. Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Department.
Q. What do you do for the sheriff’s department?
A. Currently right now, I’m assigned as a detective in the forensics unit, the Criminal Investigations Division.
Q. Are you a law enforcement officer?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. How long have you been a law enforcement officer?
A. Approximately 16 years.
Q. Have you worked with the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department that entire time?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. And what did you say your current assignment is?
A. I’m a detective in the Forensics Bureau of the sheriff’s department. Criminal investigations.
Q. All right. Tell me what the duties of a detective in the Forensics Bureau are.
A. Respond to crime scenes, do crime scene investigation, evidence collection, searching for latent evidence, booking of property, seize the crime scenes, and sketching. All the facets of crime scene investigation.

Q. Have you had any special training in procedures for locating latent fingerprints?

A. Yes, I have. I had -- my duties as a patrol officer included also crime scene investigation, responding to take general dusting prints of latents at the scenes of auto burglaries and such.

Also, I attended a 40-hour crime scene investigation course in 1999 that dealt with crime scene investigation. Also delved into latent print recovery techniques.

I attended a class in 2003 at the Department of Justice in California regarding latent print techniques.

I also attended a class regarding latent print comparisons, 40-hour class, also taught by the Department of Justice.

And I also took a 24-hour course regarding the identification of palm prints.

Q. Have you had experience in the field and in the lab concerning locating and identifying latent fingerprints?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Can you briefly describe that for us?

A. In the lab we do print techniques dealing with using the alternate light source, Scenescope techniques, using chemical processes to develop latent fingerprints, and also using super gluing techniques, as well as fluorescent powder dusting, magnetic powder dusting and the like.

Q. So have you personally used ninhydrin solution to locate fingerprints?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And have you personally done cyanoacrylate ester fuming, if I pronounced that correctly, to aid in the detection of fingerprints?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Have you personally used the Scenescope in the detection of latent fingerprints?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Did you participate in establishing a protocol for finding latent fingerprints in the Jackson -- People v. Jackson case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Who else participated in establishing that protocol?

A. At that time, I believe it was I.D. Technician Torres, myself, and Detective Albert Lafferty.

Q. And can you briefly tell the jury, or -- yes, just briefly tell the jury what protocol was decided upon to look for fingerprints on magazines that were seized pursuant to a search warrant of Neverland.

A. Based on the type of magazines that we had, mostly of a semi-glossy, glossy nature, it was decided, after lots of consideration, that we would use the super gluing technique, followed by a Scenescope search for latents after the super glue technique.

And once that was completed, we would then do a ninhydrin chemical process to hopefully further develop some prints.

Q. And did your department prepare a Power Point presentation to guide us through this protocol that was established for this particular case?

A. Yes, they did.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, could we have the lights dimmed? And I'd ask that you provide me with "Input No. 1."

For the record, this is a Power Point presentation. I presented a copy to the Court marked as an exhibit and provided a copy to defense counsel.

MR. SANGER: What exhibit is it?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Madam Clerk, could you help me with that?

THE CLERK: 723.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 723. Okay.

Q. All right. Detective, I'm going to ask you about each of these slides and ask you to tell me exactly what they depict, okay?

A. Very well.

Q. Let's begin.

A. This is a demonstration of the original photography recording protocol. Each magazine was placed on a copy stand, photodocumented page for page. This included the loose pages which were not part of a complete magazine, which might be some of the inserts such as the little subscription cards you might send in to get another copy, that sort of thing.

Q. Were there also some pages that were standing alone, some pages that had been torn out?

A. Yes.

Q. All right.

A. Once that process was done, a digital camera was connected to the computer, the pictures were automatically downloaded and stored onto our forensics computer.

Q. Now, was this before any examination of the magazine was done, before any alternate light source, anything of that nature?

A. Actually, we had completed some alternate light source examination of this prior to this process taking place.

Q. All right. So the magazines were intact when you first looked for biological materials using the alternate light source?

A. That's correct.

Q. So then the magazine was taken apart after that portion of the protocol was completed?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay.

A. As a matter of fact, here is showing the separation of the magazine after the photographs are taken. They were cut down the middle and separated into individual pages. And this is to facilitate the processes that we were going to be using to develop the latent prints.

Each item was retained, pending the next process, altogether as one item.

Q. I’m not sure what that means. Do you mean you kept the magazines together?

A. No, each magazine was kept, all pages together, before they were put into the next process.

Q. I see. Okay.

A. At that time, they were subjected to a cyanoacrylate ester fuming process, and that’s referred to as super glue fuming, and each separate page was hung in a fuming tank. In this case we have some aquariums which work quite well for that. Just need an airtight container.

The pages were exposed for approximately 15 minutes, allowed to dry for approximately 30 minutes. And then they were individually placed into plastic sheet protectors which were placed into binders.

Q. Now, where was this process done, the 3492 fuming?

A. The fuming was done in our lab at our Santa Barbara station.

Q. Okay. And who was it that was assigned the task of fuming all of these magazines?

A. Detective Spinner did the majority of the fuming. And I believe that he was assisted, at times, by Technician Shelly.

Q. All right. Scenescope. Tell us about that.

A. Moving on to --

Q. Tell us about that.

A. Moving on to the Scenescope, which is -- the actual scientific name for the instrument is a RUVIS, which is Reflective Ultraviolet Imaging System. Scenescope happens to be a trade name for the particular company that we use, but it’s commonly referred to as that.

Q. And you use the Scenescope after the fuming is completed?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And where was the Scenescope -- or Scenescoping of these individuals pages done?

A. We actually, excuse me, had two -- used two Scenescopes, one at our Santa Barbara main station lab and also in our Santa Maria station lab.

Q. What does this slide depict?

A. This is showing I.D. Technician Torres just demonstrating the Scenescoping process. Each page was examined for latent prints using the Scenescope. We had it hooked to a monitor, just as was displayed yesterday, but obviously a lot smaller, so that we could scan the -- each page individually. And as we came across what might be a usable print, we then marked and identified that print with the use of a permanent marker.

We had a numbered grid that we used to reference the location on the page. To get into a ninhydrin process, it can run ink, so we wanted to make sure we still had enough area of location of the print in case that happened.

Q. So tell me a little bit more about this grid. I see a picture of it in the lower right-hand corner. Is that correct, there’s a grid on that page?

A. Yes, there is.

Q. And -- go ahead.

A. Excuse me. The grid is just a transparency that was -- it was a transparency divided into 20 squares, and that grid was used to help mark the location of any known prints that we had developed.

Q. So did you have a separate number for each of those squares, 1 through 20?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. And if you located a print in one of those quadrants, you would mark it as 1, 2, 3, depending upon the quadrant?

A. That’s correct. And we used the template and always aligned it to the bottom and outside uncut edge so we’d have a clear edge to do our locations.

Q. Were there times when a fingerprint overlapped a quadrant?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do in that instance?

A. In that instance, we referred to that area in our report as an intersection of whatever particular quadrant it was.

Q. And after you noted the quadrant, assuming you found a fingerprint using the Scenescope, did you further mark it in any fashion?

A. The print was marked using the marking pen as illustrated here. Also, we would note if there was -- the first latent on the print -- on the actual magazine page would be listed as L-1. If we came across another latent print, it would be marked as L-2. They were circled with the permanent marker showing the location.

Q. So you’d actually -- now, you’d actually circle the print with the permanent marker on the page?

A. On the page itself.

Q. On the page itself. All right.
And you would identify the latent print as L-1 through however many prints you found on that page?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And what would determine whether a print was designated 1, 2, 3, 4, et cetera?

A. At the time we found it, whatever sequence we were in. So if we’d already found two and came across the next one, it would be 3.

THE COURT: Let’s take our break.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: You may proceed.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.

If we could go back to “Input No. 1.”

Q. All right. Detective, I have -- I believe where we left off, we were describing how the individual fingerprints were marked.

The next step is photography. Describe what’s going on here for us.

A. Yes. We use a Canon G2 digital camera, which is attached to the Scenescope, and that allows us to photograph the images. It’s mounted on the top. And each usable latent print was photodocumented.

Q. Why did you use the digital camera?

A. This particular digital camera allows us to view with the T.V. monitor, for one reason, and also all of our digital images for all cases. That’s the standard camera that we’re using.

Q. Is this a high-resolution digital camera?

A. This particular one is a four megapixel.

Q. And that would be?

A. Four million -- it’s mid-range to upper -- it’s mid-range.

Q. For resolution?

A. For resolution.

Q. And how does it compare to regular film?

MR. SANGER: Objection; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. Detective, can you -- have you had a chance to ever use normal film photography with the Scenescope? Have you ever tried that out?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Is there a reason why you use a digital camera with it as opposed to a regular film camera?

MR. SANGER: Asked and answered.

THE WITNESS: A regular --

THE COURT: Just a moment.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Go ahead.

A. With a regular film camera, a single-lens reflex does not allow us to scan the item to search for the prints, where in this case, the digital camera, we can hook the T.V. monitor up to it, see a live video feed through the camera and be able to do our scanning of the particular pages.

Q. All right. Now, I notice in the photograph to the right, there appears to be something like a ruler there. What is that?

A. Yes. Every photograph that we take with a fingerprint, we have a ruler for size measurement. And also attached to the ruler is depicting the actual item number, the page number that that latent print was found on, and also the latent number.

Q. And who prepares that tag that’s to the left of that photograph?

A. In our case, while I was Scenescoping; scanning the items, I.D. Technician Torres was also inputting into the computer, logging the prints that were found. So she would mark in the actual location onto a post-it and attach it for me, and then the photo was taken.

Q. So this little note was written by I.D. Tech Torres; is that what you’re telling us?

A. Yes, in that particular example it was. And likewise, while she was Scenescoping, I would write the post-it notes.

Q. Did you work in a team with I.D. Tech Torres in this protocol?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And during the time that you were working with her to examine these various pages, were you always working with I.D. Tech Torres?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Let’s look at the next slide.

A. This is depicting Identity Technician Torres inputting the results that we got onto our reports. Again, they’re referenced via the page location and number and entered into the computer. After we completed the photodocumentation of each page, we then returned that page to its original sleeve and continued with the next page.

Q. All right. Next slide.

A. Once we had completed the photodocumentation through the Scenescope with the particular item, it was then subjected to a ninhydrin chemical process, and that’s when we went to the fume tank. Each item was removed from a page protector, again that same binder, submerged in a liquid solution, ninhydrin, hung to dry.

Q. Okay. And ninhydrin is?

A. Ninhydrin is a chemical that reacts with the amino acids in your body, skin, and what’s transmitted onto papers or other items when you transfer a fingerprint. And so the ninhydrin reacts with the amino acids that are left in that item from your transfer.

Q. All right.

A. After the ninhydrin process, each page was resleeved, and placed back into the binder in its original location.

It takes a couple days for the ninhydrin to fully develop. You can speed it up with heat, but it’s better to just let it cure by itself for a few days. Then we go back and look for development. It will develop a purple color, usually red to purple. So that’s what we’re doing right now is an examination of each page to see if we have any prints that have developed with that process.

Q. All right. Let’s look at the next slide.

A. Any usable latent prints developed with the ninhydrin process were marked again with a permanent marker. And we used the numbered grid again to locate the point on the page for reference. And this is an example of a ninhydrin print. You’ll notice it’s marked “No. 1-N,” standing for “ninhydrin,” and that’s -- if we had latent prints on the page as well as ninhydrin prints, we would distinguish between the two. So Latent 1 would be ninhydrin, “Latent No. 1,” and the -- or, excuse me, “Latent No. 1-N” would be ninhydrin, and just “Latent 1” for the super glued fingerprint. The fingerprint images were saved into the forensics digital imaging system. We made copies of the images, and they were placed onto compact disks. And once those were compiled for each magazine, or group of magazines, they were then given to our Santa Barbara fingerprint examiners for evaluation.

Q. All right. So the photographs were placed 3500 on a CD-Rom format?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Would you also photograph the ninhydrin-developed prints?

A. The ninhydrin prints were scanned as opposed to photographed.

Q. What do you mean by “scanned”?

A. The particular page was placed onto the scanner, computer scanner, and -- with a ruler, and the image was scanned into the system.

Q. Okay. So a digital image was created by means of a scanner as well?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And then these images were provided to the examiners for comparison purposes?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right.

Thank you, Your Honor.

Do you know -- and I’ll ask for an estimate, if you don’t off the top of your head. How many pages in this process were examined?

A. I don’t know the exact number of pages that we scanned, but I would say a thousand.

Q. Was this a time-consuming process?

A. Very time-consuming.

Q. Can you tell me about that, expand upon that?

A. We started, I believe, processing somewhere 3501 near the end of August. Specifically in Santa Maria, we had 74 separate items that we were tasked with doing the processes on. The majority of those were magazines. There were several individual pages or centerfolds that had separated by themselves and were not with magazines. Individual manila folders and the like. But once the process started, it's -- while you're scanning each page, you have to take usually about seven scans per page on one side, you then flip the page and scan again.

Q. What do you mean "seven scans"?

A. Basically you're taking your page, and the Scenescope while you're scanning only allows you to do an area that's maybe three inches or two inches in width, so you're scanning across the top of the page, moving down, scanning back, moving down, scanning across. And as you come across anything that's fluorescing, ridge detail that's been subjected to the super glue, then we have to analyze it, look at it, see if we're going to use it as a print. If not, move on, and continue scanning -- the scanning process. So a magazine would take us a full day of -- depending on the number of pages, of course, of scanning and just doing the Scenescoping.

Q. Just doing the Scenescoping. Not including the fuming or ninhydrin?

A. The fuming had already been done, but the ninhydrin process still had to be completed.

Q. How time-consuming is the fuming process?

A. The fuming process is, as we depicted earlier, for each magazine, they have to hang them in the tanks, fumed -- the fuming process itself is 15 minutes, then they let them dry and they continue.

So it’s just a matter of hanging the magazine pages into the fuming tanks, which they were using three. But we’re limited. Each tank has a certain size, so it’s just the number of pages that would fit in each particular tank.

Q. What about ninhydrin, is that also time-consuming?

A. The ninhydrin process itself is not as time-consuming as the Scenescope, because we’re just removing the pages, dipping them into the solution, and letting them air dry. And once we fill up our fume hood with the number of pages, then we have to go back, resleeve those items, and then continue on through the magazine with the remaining items. So it would be -- just the process itself would probably be an hour to an hour and a half, but then you have to let it, like I say, sit for a couple of days and then go back and do the analysis on it.

Q. In your experience as a law enforcement officer, have you ever undertaken or even heard of a fingerprinting protocol that involved materials of this magnitude?

A. No, I have not.

MR. SANGER: I would object. Move to strike the answer and object. It was compound. Has he been involved in it, as opposed to --

THE COURT: Sustained. Stricken.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. Have you ever been involved in a fingerprint analysis that involved materials of such a large quantity?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Anything remotely this large?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Have you ever heard, in your experience as a law enforcement officer, of a fingerprint analysis that involves such large quantities?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Did the sheriff’s department have to bring in extra help to complete this task?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Do you know if there were any time constraints on you?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said that you were part of a team. Where did your team operate?

A. I.D. Technician Torres and I worked out of our Santa Maria station.

Q. Okay. And who were the other members of the sheriff’s department that worked on that protocol?

A. Detective Spinner. Detective Wittenbrock. And Technician Shelly.

Q. All right. Detective, at this time I'd like to show you some cards that have been prepared, and we'll go through them one by one.

This card appears to be -- this is Exhibit No. 725. It appears to be Card 02 on the lower right-hand corner. Can you identify that card for me, please?

A. Yes, I can. That's a photograph of a fingerprint taken from Item No. 317-L, which is a "Finally Legal" magazine, December 2000 issue, and that's from -- the latent print is from page 31, Quadrant 15, Latent 1.

Q. Okay. Showing you Exhibit No. 726, itemized as 03 in the lower right-hand corner. Similar card?

A. Yes. This is a photograph from Item 317 Lincoln, L, "Finally Legal" magazine, December 2000 issue, page 126. It was in Quadrant 9, and it's identified as "Latent," the number "1."

Q. Exhibit No. 728, identified as 05 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. Yes. This is from Item 317-R, which is a Hustler "Barely Legal Hard-Core," prior -- it was -- it was printed prior to October 2000, page 54, Quadrant 6, Latent 1-N. That would be a ninhydrin print.

Q. Exhibit No. 729, identified in the lower right-hand corner, 06.

A. This is Item 317-R, as well, Hustler, “Barely Legal Hard-Core,” and again, prior to October 2000. Page 92, Quadrant 1 and 2, Latent 1.

Q. Exhibit No. 730, identified in the lower right-hand corner 07.

A. This is Item 317-R, Hustler “Barely Legal Hard-Core,” prior to October 2000. Page 92, Quadrant 2, 6 and 7 is the intersection, and it’s labeled as Latent 2.

Q. Exhibit No. 731, noted as 08 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is from Item 317-R. It’s a Hustler “Barely Legal Hard-Core” prior to October of 2000, page 92, Quadrant 6, Latent No. 4.

Q. Exhibit No. 732, identified as 09 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is Item 317-S. It’s a “Penthouse,” page 63, Quadrant 15 and 20, and it’s identified as Latent No. 1.

Q. Exhibit No. 733, identified as “10” in the lower right-hand corner.

A. Yes, this is Item 317-S. It’s a Penthouse, page 87, Quadrant 7, Latent No. 1.

Q. Exhibit No. 734, identified as 11 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is Item No. 317-T, “Visions of Fantasy, 3506 a Hard Rock Affair," September '93 issue, page 3, Quadrant 4 and 5, Latent No. 1.

Q. Exhibit No. 735, identified as No. 12 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is Item 317-U, "Visions of Fantasy, Sam Jose's Black Starlett," April 1993, page ten, Quadrant 16, and Latent No. 1.

Q. Item No. 736, identified as 13 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is from Item 317-YY, "Al Golstein's 100 Best Adult Videos," page A, Quadrant 15, Latent 1.

Q. Exhibit No. 738, identified as 14 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is Item 321-A, "Playboy, Special Editions, Girlfriends," August 2003, page three, Quadrant 15 and 20, Latent No. 1.

Q. Exhibit No. 738, identified as 15 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is Item 321-A, "Playboy, Special Editions, Girlfriends," August 2003, page 29, Quadrant 15 and 20, Latent No. 1.

Q. Exhibit No. 739, identified as 16 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is Item 321-E, "Girls of Barely Legal," page one, Quadrant 2 and 3, Latent No. 1.

Q. Exhibit No. 740, identified as 17 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. This is Item 321-E, "Girls of Barely Legal," page seven, Quadrant 15, Latent No. 1.

Q. And Exhibit No. 741, identified as 18 in the lower right-hand corner.

A. Yes, this is Item No. 321-F, “Finally Legal,” February 2003, page 11, Quadrant 15, Latent 1.

Q. All right.

THE COURT: Counsel, would -- I think you have two 738s.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m sorry.

THE COURT: You identified two exhibits as 738. I don’t know where the error is, whether you have two --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’m sorry. 736, 738, I’m sorry, that was my mistake. 14 -- that is a seven. So why don’t we repeat that.

Q. What is Item No. 321-A?

A. Item 321-A, “Playboy, Special Editions, Girlfriends,” August 2003, page three, Quadrant 15 and 20, Latent 1.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. That is 737.

And 738, just so we’re clear, is Item 321-A, “Playboy, Special Editions, Girlfriends,” August 2003, page 29, Quadrant 15 and 20, Latent 1; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Sorry for that.

Detective, I’m going to leave these up here with you.

Did you participate in the location and identification -- just for purposes of analysis, but not that you had analyzed them yourself, did you participate in the location of latent fingerprints on these particular magazine pages?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And there is some information at the bottom of those various cards. Have you reviewed those cards for accuracy in terms of who the individual members of the protocol team were that participated in those various tasks?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And are they accurate?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Okay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, by stipulation, we are going to -- well, actually, if there’s no objection, I would ask to move these items into evidence at this time.

THE COURT: That would be --

MR. SANGER: Just so it’s clear, there was not a stipulation. I don’t know what “that” meant.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

MR. SANGER: Which items are we talking about?

THE COURT: I think he’s talking 722 through 3509

741. Is that right?

THE CLERK: No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.

MR. SANGER: That would be all of the --

THE CLERK: There was 725 and 726, and there was no 727.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We have three that will be identified by other witnesses. 742, 727, and 724.

THE COURT: Okay. Otherwise, 722 through 741, with the exception of those three.

MR. SANGER: Okay. The -- we're talking about the --

THE CLERK: 725, not 722.

MR. SANGER: With regard to the poster boards that were shown to the witness, and identified, I have no objection to those coming in.

THE COURT: Okay. That's 725 through 741 with the three exceptions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Yes.

THE COURT: Those are admitted.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Could I have the projection again, Your Honor, "Input 1"?

Q. All right. Detective, can you help us out with the exhibit number of that particular exhibit? I'm sorry. And I am going to move back one. There we go.

Please look at the cards in front of you, and tell me, what is the exhibit number of this particular image?

A. Exhibit 725.

Q. Okay. And how did you participate in the location of this particular fingerprint?

A. I was doing the Scenescoping analysis at the time that this print was identified.

Q. All right. And you located this print?

A. I located the print. I marked the print, and put -- took the photo of the print.

Q. There is a little black outline that we can see on the upper midsection of the photograph, and it appears to disappear behind the ruler and then continue down to the lower midsection of the photograph. What is that?

A. That is the outline of the permanent marker.

Q. Did you put that marker there?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. All right. And you made this photograph. And what did you do with it?

A. The photograph was made and subsequently placed on our forensics computer, and then a copy of that was made and sent to our Santa Barbara examiner.

Q. And after taking this photograph, did you and Detective Torres do any further processing of this particular page in this particular magazine?

A. Once the -- this particular latent print, Latent No. 1, if there were additional prints, we would then continue through the page and mark those, and also photograph.

Q. And did you do ninhydrin processing of this page?

A. We did after we were completed Scenescoping.

Q. So did you super glue this page?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did it come to you already super glued?

A. Yes, all the items came to us super glued.

Q. And I believe you previously stated that was all done in Santa Barbara?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that was done in Santa Maria, this photograph?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. Let's go to 317-L, "Finally Legal," December 2000. Can you share with us the exhibit number of that image?

A. This is Exhibit No. 726.

Q. And what did you do in -- concerning the protocol to locate fingerprints on this particular magazine?

A. Again, I was using the Scenescope at this time, and located the fingerprint. I marked the fingerprint with a permanent marker. Took a photograph. And it was subsequently downloaded onto our computer and a copy forwarded to our Santa Barbara office.

Q. And subsequently, you did the ninhydrin on this page and --

A. That’s correct.

Q. And for what it was worth, located other prints as well, but were not concerned about those at this time?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Same question on this. This would be 727; is that correct?

A. I show 728 right now.

Q. All right.

A. I believe 727 is one of the other displays.

Q. Okay. Let me just go back one here. Okay, yes. Actually, I’m sorry. I’m sorry, my mistake, Detective.

This will be -- that one will be introduced through another witness. We’ll deal with that later.

Okay. Let’s go to 728.

A. Yes. 728 is the 317-R, Hustler “Barely Legal.”

Q. All right. Tell me what you did to locate this particular print.

A. On this particular page, this was a print that was the result of a ninhydrin process. After we had done our Scenescoping, the entire magazine was placed in a ninhydrin bath, dried, as we mentioned before, and this particular print had 3513 developed as a result of the ninhydrin process.

Q. Okay. And I see the black line there. Is that the line you drew around the fingerprint?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you photographed this? Or, actually, I guess you scanned these images?

A. Yes, this was scanned.

Q. All right. Let’s look at 729, Exhibit 729. What did you do to participate -- or how did you participate in locating this fingerprint?

A. Again, I was Scenescoping at the time this print was located. I did the Scenescope photography. I marked the location of the latent. It was downloaded onto our computer, and then forwarded off to our Santa Barbara examiners. And also a ninhydrin bath was done on this particular item, as well, after.

Q. But this item is a fuming Scenescope latent?

A. This is a super glued and Scenescope item, yes.

Q. Let’s look at 730, I believe. We should do that. Is that right?

A. That’s correct. Again, this is off the same 317-R. This is a Latent No. 2. I was Scenescoping this page. I located the print, marked the print with a permanent marker. Again, it was downloaded onto our photographs and downloaded onto our computer and forwarded to Santa Barbara.

Q. All right. 731?

A. 731 is also from the 317-R, Hustler “Barely Legal,” page 92, Latent No. 4. I also was Scenescoping at the time this was taken. It was from the same page as the previous. I marked the image, photographed it, downloaded it to our computer, and a copy was forwarded to our examiners in Santa Barbara, and thus, along with all the others on the same page, were part of the ninhydrin process after this was done.

Q. All right. 732?

A. 732 is the Item 317-S, “Penthouse.” This latent print was also Scenescoped by myself. I marked it. Photographed it. It was subsequently downloaded and forwarded to our examiners in Santa Barbara.

Q. Okay. And the quadrants -- I don’t think I’ve asked you, but the quadrants notated on each of these cards, are they an accurate depiction of the quadrant you located that fingerprint in?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Did you bring with you an example of a quadrant?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Okay. Could you -- do you have that with you?

A. It’s in my notes. Can I get that?

Q. If you can pull it out.

A. It’s marked up.
Q. Do you need some back?
A. No.
Q. All right.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, I have what appear to be a clear piece of plastic with various crosshatch and grid on it, and numbers. I’m marking it 768.
Q. I show you Exhibit 768, Detective. Is that one of the quadrant labeling devices that you used to locate fingerprints?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. You actually used that in this case?
A. That’s correct.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Move to move that exhibit into evidence at this time.
MR. SANGER: No objection.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. So I believe we are now at 733. Tell us what you did in terms of locating this fingerprint.
A. Actually, this particular fingerprint was Scenescoped by I.D. Technician Torres. I assisted with that.
Q. Okay. So is -- whose writing is that in the left portion of the Scenescope photograph?
A. That would be my writing.
Q. Okay. So you would write when Technician 3516

Torres was using the Scenescope, and she would write the little post-it note when you were doing it; is that fair to say?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Let’s look at 734. What did you do to assist in locating this latent?

A. Again, I was with I.D. Technician Torres when she was using the Scenescope on this particular item.

Q. And again, you wrote the card?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And participated in the ninhydrin process of this particular exhibit?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. 735. What did you do to assist in locating this fingerprint?

A. On Item 735, I did the Scenescoping, and marked the location of the print, and photographed the item, and was downloaded onto our computer and forwarded to Santa Barbara, and also worked on the ninhydrin process after this process.

Q. 736.

A. Item 736 was an item that was Scenescoped by I.D. Technician Torres, and I assisted her with the ninhydrin process after that.

Q. Okay. Same questions for Exhibit 737.

A. Item 737, I did the Scenescope locating of the print. I marked the print with a permanent 3517 marker, photographed it, and then downloaded it onto our computer and forwarded it to Santa Barbara. Also, the ninhydrin process was completed again on this particular item after the fact.

Q. All right. And how did you help find Item No. 7 -- or Exhibit No. 738?

A. 738 was also an item that I Scenescoped, located the fingerprint. I, excuse me, downloaded the item onto our -- marked it, photographed it, and downloaded the item onto our computer to be forwarded to Santa Barbara.

Q. 739?

A. 739 was also an item that I did the Scenescoping on, locating the prints, marked the print, photographed the print, and downloaded it onto our computer, and it too was forwarded to Santa Barbara.

Q. 740, same question.

A. Item 740 was Scenescoped by I.D. Technician Torres. I assisted her with that. And we both worked on the ninhydrin process following that.

Q. And this was photographed and downloaded, as was the other prints; fair to say?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay.

A. And it is my writing there.

Q. 741?

A. Item 741 is also an item that I Scenescoped, and marked the photograph, photographed the item, and download it and saved it onto the forensics computer.

Q. Okay. Now, I notice a disparity on this particular card. It appears to say, in the upper left-hand corner, upside down, “321-D.” Is that accurate?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And the title of this card at the top of the page says “321-F”?

A. That’s correct.

Q. How do you explain that disparity?

A. Prior to us receiving the items from Santa Barbara, the items were, as was mentioned, placed in binders. The binders were marked with just some placards with just the number of the items, not the actual title of the item. And we discovered that the magazine covers had been -- the placards had been reversed on two magazines.

Q. Okay. And of these prints that I’ve shown you today, how many prints did that affect?

A. That affected this particular print on this magazine.

Q. Only one?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Who caught this error?

A. I did.

Q. Okay. And is it -- is the card as it is 3519 noted above Item 321-F, “Finally Legal,” is that the correct magazine that that print was obtained from?

A. That is correct.

Q. And it was obtained from page 11, Quadrant 15, and it’s Latent No. 1; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. After noting this error, did you go back and check all the other prints that I’ve just shown you?

A. That’s correct. I.D. Technician Torres and I went through every one of our processed items to make sure that no other mislabeling errors had occurred.

Q. Okay. Were there any other mislabeling errors?

A. No, there were not.

Q. Detective, I’d now like to run you through some more photographs, and ask you some particulars about the exact location of these prints.

And I think what I’d like to do, Your Honor, is to have you black out the screen for a moment while I change presentations.

Thank you.

MR. SANGER: And, Your Honor, I’m going to object to showing this next presentation. It’s cumulative, and unnecessary to the presentation. If we could approach, I could explain it.

THE COURT: What is it?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It is a run-through of 3520 showing the exact location on the exact page that these prints were found.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

MR. SANGER: There’s a 352. I don’t know if I expressly said that, but as the Court will see when it starts, perhaps Your Honor will understand what I’m saying.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: This will take just a moment.

THE COURT: Your 352 objection is the undue use of time?

MR. SANGER: Well, it’s that, and the subject matter of the pictures is to simply put up more pages of magazines for no apparent reason. They’ve already been identified coming out of certain magazines.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: These are graphic images, Your Honor, and the Court should be aware of that, but they are also graphic images with the fingerprints which we will ultimately show are particularly relevant to this case. And I think it’s important that the --

THE COURT: All right. The objection is overruled.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you.

Q. All right. We’re going to go through this relatively quickly, but I’m going to ask you if the 3521 item -- I’m going to start with 317-L, which is No. 2, and ask you if this is the location where that print was found that you located. Okay?

A. All right.

Q. Okay. If I could have just one more moment. All right. If I could have the “Input 1” put on.

Detective, there is a fingerprint image, Item No. 317-L, with an arrow drawn and a circle. Is that where you found that fingerprint?

A. That is correct.

Q. There is a fingerprint with an arrow drawn, and it’s rather blacked out, but the arrow is to a particular location on that photograph. Is that where you found the fingerprint on Item 317-L, page 126, Quadrant 9, Latent 1?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Let’s see. There is a fingerprint noted on that page. It appears to be a ninhydrin fingerprint. Is that the fingerprint you found on Item 317-R, “Barely Legal Hard-Core,” prior to October 2000, page 54, Quadrant 6, Latent 1-N?

A. That’s correct.

Q. There is a fingerprint with an arrow to it. Is that the fingerprint that you found on Item 317-R, Hustler, “Barely Legal Hard-Core” prior to October 2000, page 92, Quadrant 1 and 2, Latent No. 1?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. There's a fingerprint noted with an arrow to it. Is that the fingerprint that you found on Item 317-R, Hustler, "Barely Legal Hard-Core," prior to October 2000, page 92, Quadrant 2, 6 and 7, Latent No. 2?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. There's a fingerprint with an arrow to it. Is that the fingerprint that you found on Item 317-R, Hustler, "Barely Legal Hard-Core," prior to October 2000, page 92, Quadrant 6, Latent 4?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. There is a fingerprint with an arrow drawn to it. Is that the fingerprint that you found on Item 317-S, page 63, Quadrant 15 and 20, Latent No. 1?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. I'm going to skip the next two. I'm sorry.
There is a fingerprint noted on Item 317 --
I'm sorry, on Item 317-U, "Visions of Fantasy, Sam Jose's Black Starlett," April 1993, page ten, Quadrant 16, Latent No. 1.
Is that the fingerprint that you found on that page?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Skipping one more.
There's a fingerprint noted with a green arrow. Is that the fingerprint that you found on 3523

Item 321-A, “Playboy Special Editions Girlfriends,” August 2003, Quadrant 15 and 20, Latent 1?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. All right. I’m sorry. There’s a fingerprint located with a green arrow to it. Is that the fingerprint that you found on Item 321-A, “Playboy, Special Editions, Girlfriends,” August 2003, page 21, Quadrant 15 and 20, Latent 1.

A. Yes, it is.

Q. There’s a fingerprint noted with a green arrow. Is that the fingerprint that you located on page one of Item 321-E, “Girls of Barely Legal,” Quadrant 2 and 3, Latent No. 1?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. All right. And finally, there is a fingerprint located with a green arrow. Did you find that fingerprint at that location, Item 321-F, “Finally Legal,” February 2003, page 11, Quadrant 15, Latent 1?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Thank you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Counsel, cross-examine?

MR. SANGER: Can I have a moment with counsel?

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

MR. SANGER: May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. I’m going to start at the end, because unfortunately you’re going to have to come back tomorrow, I think. But since we have the technology hooked up, we’ll do that.

Would it be all right to have the screen --

And this was -- this was -- this was presented to you earlier. And this reflects the same photographs that you have in the set of hard board exhibits in front of you; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. Now, when you look at these photographs, all of the photographs in this set are super glue fumed and Scenescoped with the exception of one; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And that one is No. 5 here.

For the record, could you find that in the set of boards there in front of you?

A. Certainly, yes.

MR. SANGER: All right. And just so the jury is oriented, Your Honor, could the witness just hold it up so they can get an idea of what we’re looking at?

Okay. Same thing.

Q. All right. Now, that particular image was developed by virtue of the ninhydrin process, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you showed everybody - and I think everybody’s become an expert in this - you take the thing, dip it the ninhydrin solution, you hang it up on the clothesline, and it dries in a couple of days, if you don’t use artificial heat, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. When it dries, you come up with purple prints?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. The other thing about the ninhydrin print is that it is scanned into the computer; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Now, with the super glue, you -- first of all, you do the super glue fuming, put it in one of those fish tanks?

A. Correct.

Q. And then once the super glue fuming is concluded, you then use the Scenescope, and that’s where you come up with these green digital images; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. So those are digital images taken by a digital camera through a Scenescope, through a 3526 scope, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Whereas this one, whatever number it is, the ninhydrin print you just showed us, 317-R, page 54, Latent 1-N, that ninhydrin print is readily visible to the eye, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And, in essence, the picture that you have there is what you see is what you get. You would see that on at page, if the page were here?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. Now, the issue with regard to producing these particular images when you’re dealing with the Scenescope and the super glue fuming, you have to be careful in super glue fuming not to overfume, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Because if you overfume, then you can lose a lot of the detail in the print itself?

A. That’s true.

Q. And in the course of the Scenescope, you are taking a picture through a digital camera; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Now, the reasons you gave us for a digital camera --

And we can now turn this off, I think, if that’s all right.

Thank you, Counsel, for letting me borrow it.

The reasons you gave for using the digital camera are primarily reasons of convenience, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you're aware that the company Spex that manufactures the Scenescope recommends that you use a film camera; is that correct?

A. Actually, I'm not aware of that. I understand that they offer -- I don't know if they still do, but they actually offered a camera package with their Scenescope, which is a digital camera, and they do also offer a 35-millimeter camera.

Q. So do you know whether or not Spex, the company that makes this device, recommends that you use a 35-millimeter-film camera?

A. That was not expressed to me, no.

Q. Do you know that -- and what you might do - I know it's the very end of the day - but if you could turn a little more towards the microphone, because you're fading out just a bit there.

Are you aware of the studies and literature in the area that suggests that a digital camera will not capture some of the detail that a film camera will capture?

A. That's correct.

Q. You use a digital camera because it is easier to scan. In other words, rather than taking a whole bunch of film pictures, you can scan on your monitor and hone in on what you want before you click the picture, true?

A. There would no way that we could accomplish the task of going through the photos that we have by using a single-lens reflex camera in the time span that we had.

Q. Okay. The question was, though, that you used the digital camera because it allows you, I think you told us on direct examination, to scan with the monitor --

A. Correct.

Q. -- right?

So, in fact, in real time, as your Scenescope goes around the page and you find something you like, you can make sure you got it centered, and once it’s centered, based on what you’re looking at in your monitor, you can click the picture?

A. That’s correct.

Q. If you were going to use a film camera, you would either have to take pictures of the entire page, or you’d have to look through the Scenescope, figure out what you’re going to take a picture of, and then click the picture; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. All right. You also said that the digital camera is a mid-range camera as far as the definition; is that correct?

A. That’s correct. At the time that camera was purchased, it was the top of the line that our agency would be able to -- be able to afford.

Q. Okay. And like everything else, after 18 months, you need to buy a new one; is that right? Everything else electronic, it seems. All right. But in any event, it’s about mid-range as far as the definition; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you also indicated that it was a matter of convenience that you could take the digital pictures and then you could simply download them to a disk, correct?

A. They were downloaded to a hard drive and then a copy was made, correct.

Q. So the first step is, you downloaded it onto the hard drive for your forensic computers that you have there?

A. Right.

Q. And then you would make a disk from the hard drive?

A. Correct.

Q. So it’s a matter of convenience. Now, you’re aware that there are some aspects -- let me back up just one second. I’m 3530 trying to do a two-minute subject here without going into detail at the moment. Are you certified as a latent print examiner?

A. I am not certified.

Q. Okay. And do you do latent print examinations yourself?

A. I do latent print examinations which are verified, that’s correct, with another examiner.

Q. By somebody else. You did not do these latent print examinations or comparisons yourself?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. But in other cases, you’ve done that from time to time; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And how long have you been doing latent print comparisons?

A. Approximately a year. Well, a year where I’ve been doing it with another examiner. I’ve been doing comparisons before that were then reviewed by other, more senior technicians.

Q. All right. So, are you considered a latent print trainee at this point, or latent print examiner?

A. I don’t know the status.

Q. You don’t have any organization that certifies you one way or the other, that examines you --

A. No.

Q. Do you belong to SWGFST?

A. No, I do not.

Q. All right. Now, in the minute remaining, let me just ask you about this, about the digital camera issue.

As -- I know you didn’t do examinations or comparisons in this case, but when you’re developing prints, you are doing that with the intention of developing something that a latent print examiner can compare, is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. So you want to try to get the best product you can for your examiner, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And in that regard, you know that you -- that it can be very helpful to an examiner to look at pores, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And also to look at the shape of ridges, if possible; is that correct?

A. Third-level detail, correct.

Q. Yeah, third-level detail. So we’re not just talking about where they go and how they’re laid out, but the actual shape of the actual ridge; is that correct?

A. If needed, yes.

THE COURT: All right. Counsel, let’s take 3532 our break.

MR. SANGER: I have one more.

THE COURT: Do you want to ask one more?

MR. SANGER: Yes. Then I don't have to start over tomorrow.

I made everybody mad in the whole courtroom at once, all right.

Q. With the digital camera, you tend to not be able to pick up the pores and the shape of the ridges as well as a film camera; isn't that correct, sir?

A. Actually, we were able to get several prints with this camera that did show pore detail.

Q. In general, a film camera is better at getting the pores and the ridge shapes than the digital camera, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Object as to foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. SANGER: Ahh. There you go.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, could the Court and counsel remain just one more moment after the jury's excused?

THE COURT: Yes.

//

//

//

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

MR. ZONEN: Thank you, Your Honor.

I just wanted to notify the Court, we were able to resolve one of the issues that was pending before the Court.

Over the last break, I spoke with Mr. George Blancarte, who is George Lopez’s attorney, and we are agreeing they are withdrawing their opposition to the subpoena that had been issued by the defense.

In fact, Mr. Lopez will be testifying for the prosecution, we expect, on Monday.

THE COURT: Who’s going to testify tomorrow?

MR. ZONEN: We do have a list. Would you like to know the list for tomorrow?

THE COURT: Yeah, I’d like to know.

MR. SNEDDON: Well, we’ll finish this witness’s testimony, Your Honor, and then perhaps Miss Romero, and then Detective Spinner with the fingerprints. And we figured that would take us through the day. And I think we talked in chambers about if we didn’t have all the way through the day, that that was okay with you.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We also have some other fingerprint techs that will be testifying.

MR. SNEDDON: They’re minor. They’re short witnesses.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:30 p.m.)

THE COURT: You may proceed, Counsel.
MR. SANGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

TIMOTHY SUTCLIFFE
Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Okay. Good morning.
A. Good morning.
Q. How are you doing?
A. Good.
Q. I just have a few more questions for you. At the end of the day yesterday, you testified, and there was a slide presentation wherein 19 prints were shown, latent prints; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Just to remind the jury, you had the big charts on poster board, and then a Power Point presentation was presented to the jury on the screen, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Those were 19 --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll just object as misstates the evidence; that this witness was shown only 16 cards, exhibits.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. All right. You’re aware that there were 19 prints, you looked at some of them and you did not identify them; is that correct?

A. That’s correct. Those were processed by another investigator.

Q. You had a total of 19 prints up there, and you were able to identify 16 as something you processed?

A. I had a hand in processing 16 of them, yes.

Q. There you go. Of the 16 you processed, and the other three that you’re aware of, totaling 19, those are from a collection of how many usable latent prints?

A. From what I understand, there was --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as lacks foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. Your unit was responsible for processing the prints; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And by that we mean trying to locate all of the usable prints, the prints that looked like they might have enough detail to use them for comparison purposes, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And who is in charge of your unit? Who was in charge of this process?

A. As far as looking at the --

Q. As far as developing the prints so that you get to the point where you have visible prints.

A. Well, I.D. Technician Torres and I were involved in the process in Santa Maria. And Detective Wittenbrock and I.D. Tech Shelly were involved in the process in Santa Barbara.

Q. All right. And did you confer with Detective Wittenbrock and I.D. Tech Shelly to determine the status of their work?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you look at the materials that they had accumulated?

A. No.

Q. You haven’t looked at them at all?

A. I have seen some of the prints that were displayed, but not all of the prints that they submitted as useable.

Q. Okay. And so the team was -- the team was comprised of the four of you, two in Santa Maria, two in Santa Barbara?

A. Correct.

Q. And did you ever have a final -- well, let’s not put it that way. Did you ever have any kind of a meeting where you sat down, and you said, “Okay, this is the body of material that we have, we’re going to turn it over to the latent print examiners to take a look at it”?

A. No.

Q. How many prints did you come up with in your operation in Santa Maria, that being the operation between you and I.D. Tech Torres? How many prints?

A. We submitted, I believe, a total of about 600, approximately. I think there was 600 that we submitted.

Q. And so I guess what you’re saying is, you have no idea how many were submitted by Detective Wittenbrock and I.D. Tech Shelly in Santa Barbara?

A. I’m not sure of the exact amount. I know there was, I think in the neighborhood of a total of 700, but I’m not sure of the exact figure.

Q. Total of 700 from them, or 700 --

A. 700 total.

Q. Okay. So you submitted the bulk of them. They came up with a smaller number?

A. Correct. We had the bulk of the items.

Q. So out of the 600 prints or so that you developed, the 600 or so usable prints that you developed, there were 16 that you have shown us yesterday; is that correct?

A. Correct.
Q. And out of the approximate other hundred, apparently the other three were the result of that; is that correct?
A. That's my understanding.
Q. Now, of all those usable prints, most of them were negative for the -- is that your understanding?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Okay.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object and move to strike as ambiguous, vague, "negative."
THE COURT: Sustained, stricken.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: The process that you used involved a Scenescope.
A. Correct.
Q. And reminding everybody - they've probably got that by now - you talked about the ALS also in your testimony yesterday, and I want to clarify this. ALS is different than Scenescope when you're using those terms; is that correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. And you mentioned that there had been an ALS evaluation of the materials in Item 317 that occurred before you had begun to look at them for prints; is that correct?

A. That's my understanding. I don't believe I did Item 317 ALS, but I know I did ALS on certain items, and I'm assuming that was done on others.

Q. You understand that somebody else did that?

A. That's my understanding, but I don't believe I said specifically I did that one.

Q. And that ALS -- whatever ALS process was done either by you or anybody else, did that do anything to affect the ability to obtain prints?

A. No, it did not.

Q. Now, you indicated that in your process, you did the super glue fuming first, then you did the Scenescope, then you did the ninhydrin process; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. So therefore, you did not use the Scenescope before doing the super glue fuming; is that correct?

A. Not in our process, no.

Q. Now, you're familiar with the Scenescope technology, I take it, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you're aware that you can use the Scenescope before you do any chemical alterations to the paper; is that correct?

A. That's correct. We had not used in our process protocol, but we had used the Scenescope to look at pages prior to doing our protocol to see if we could observe any images. And we did not have what I would consider sufficient results that way, so we went to doing the super glue technique.

Q. So how -- in other words, before you tamper with it, and I don’t mean that in a bad way, but before you chemically alter with super glue, it is possible to use a Scenescope and try to find prints in their more or less natural state, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you’re saying you tried that on a few pages first?

A. We did some test pages.

Q. About how many test pages did you do?

A. Just a few. I don’t know exactly how many.

Q. And how many pages did you have overall?

A. Of --

Q. That you ultimately examined?

A. Over, I don’t know, a thousand.

Q. All right. So it was -- it was your determination not to do a thorough Scenescope examination of the thousands of pages before doing the super glue fuming as a result of that test; is that correct?

A. That’s correct. And one of the things that’s mentioned in the Scenescope literature, and also in talking to their specialist, is that if you cannot visualize prints, your best method is to then move to the super glue, because it will have the best results, especially with the Scenescope. Best results are with super glue process.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to move to strike that as hearsay and nonresponsive after, "Yes, I think it was" -- or after, "That's correct."

THE COURT: Stricken after, "That's correct."

I wonder if you could try to speak a little louder or lean a little closer. I can hear you, but it's -- go ahead.

MR. SANGER: And I have no further questions at this time.

(Laughter.)

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Detective Sutcliffe.

A. Good morning.

Q. I believe Mr. Sanger used the word "chemically alter." Is that an accurate description of what happens when you fume a page with the super glue?

A. The super glue fumes are adhering to the residues that are left on the page, so --

Q. Okay. Does the fingerprint itself get altered?

A. No --

MR. SANGER: Objection. That's leading.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: This is an expert witness.

THE COURT: The answer was, “No.” Next question.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Now, in your experience as a forensics detective, how many times, if you can estimate, have you been asked to look for fingerprints on a given item?

A. Daily.

Q. Okay. Hundreds of times?

A. Thousands of times.

Q. Thousands of times, in hundreds of cases or more?

A. Yes.

Q. When you look for a fingerprint on an item, do you always find it?

A. No.

Q. Do you always find some fingerprints on an item you’re looking for fingerprints on?

A. No, we do not.

Q. If you were asked to characterize the percentage of items that you looked for fingerprints on and you actually find a usable fingerprint on, what percentage would you say?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Relevance; improper foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained; relevance.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: This is offered not only for the magazines, but for other evidence in this case.

THE COURT: You may proceed.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Not relevant? All right.

Q. Mr. Sanger asked you some questions yesterday about the use of digital cameras with the Scenescope.

A. Correct.

Q. And have you had a chance to do some research on that topic as to whether or not a digital camera is sufficient or adequate to use with a Scenescope in capturing fingerprint images?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. What did you do?

A. I contacted the Spex Corporation this morning and talked with a representative there.

Q. Have you -- did you find out whether or not Spex Corporation actually offers their Scenescope with a digital camera, as you mentioned you believe it did yesterday?

A. Yes, they do.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Asked and answered; and also for hearsay, for that matter.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It goes to -- it’s expert testimony, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Hearsay; sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know, based upon your training, education, and experience, including any training you’ve received from the Scenescope 3550

Corporation, as to whether or not a digital camera is sufficient to capture fingerprint images using a Scenescope?

MR. SANGER: Objection. That calls for hearsay; and it’s also vague.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer that question.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And do you know if a four-megapixel camera is sufficient, pursuant to Scenescope recommendations, to capture such images?

A. Yes. And actually, they had offered originally a three-megapixel --

MR. SANGER: Move to strike after the answer, “Yes.”

THE COURT: Stricken.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Do you know if Scenescope has even recommended a lesser resolution camera, such as a three-megapixel camera, to capture fingerprint images?

A. Yes, they do.

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s his training.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: When you use the digital camera, what -- does the camera itself have different levels of resolution that you can set the camera to?

A. Yes.

Q. And what level of resolution do you use on this four-megapixel camera?

A. We use JPEG, the highest resolution, lowest compression.

Q. Okay. And does that capture the clearest images?

A. Yes, in JPEG format.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: One last bit of housekeeping, Your Honor. I provided counsel with a copy of what I have marked as People’s Exhibit 769. These are the images that I have provided, showed on the Power Point, but I didn’t introduce yesterday. And I’d like to just ask the witness a couple of foundational questions concerning this exhibit.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Well, I’m going to object. It’s beyond the scope of direct. Beyond the scope of cross.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I believe there was some questions about the testimony yesterday concerning given images. And if there is a problem, I would ask to reopen for that limited purpose.

MR. SANGER: Does Your Honor know what pictures he’s talking about? They’re the ones subject to the 352.

THE COURT: No, I don’t.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ve got a copy.

THE COURT: These are the pictures he showed yesterday.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s correct.

THE COURT: I’ve already ruled on the 352.

MR. SANGER: Well, my objection is that this is beyond the scope of cross. I didn’t ask about these pictures. I was just referring to the 352 so Your Honor would know what we were talking about.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

The questions that you wanted to ask him are foundational questions that you omitted to ask on direct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Well, just concerning this particular exhibit. I just want to tie this particular exhibit up with the presentation that we gave yesterday.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll allow that.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

THE COURT: Whose is this?

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Detective, I show you Exhibit 769. It is a notebook which appears to have 19 pages in it, and I want you to look particularly to page number two. I’m going to -- I’m going to name some different page numbers.

Let’s do it this way. I’ll provide with you page numbers, and I’ll ask you if these page numbers correspond -- if the fingerprint on these particular pages correspond with the 16 print cards that you identified yesterday as being prints that you located.

A. Okay.

Q. All right. And I'll do it serially. Well, we can do it one at a time. Does page number two correspond to the print card noted as Exhibit No. 725, 02?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Does page number three correspond with the Exhibit No. 726, Print Card 03?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. And those were prints that you found, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And these are identical photos as to what was shown yesterday as to where these prints were located on these particular pages?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. Does page number five, the ninhydrin print, correspond to the fingerprint that's noted on Exhibit 728, 05?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Does page number six of this exhibit correspond with the fingerprint that is shown on Exhibit 729, 06?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Does page number seven of Exhibit 769 correspond -- have a fingerprint on it that corresponds with the fingerprint on Exhibit 730, identified as Card 07?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Does page number eight, the fingerprint thereon, correspond with the fingerprint that’s located on Card No -- Exhibit No. 731, Card No. 08?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Showing you page number nine of that exhibit, does the fingerprint on that page correspond with the fingerprint on Card No. 9, Exhibit No. 732?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Skipping ahead to page number 12, does that fingerprint on Exhibit 769 correspond -- on page 12, correspond to the fingerprint on Exhibit No. 735, Card 12?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Skipping one page. Page 14, does the fingerprint on that card correspond with the fingerprint on the card noted as Exhibit 737, No. 14?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Looking at page 15, does the fingerprint on that page correspond with the fingerprint on Exhibit No. 738, noted as Card 15?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Going ahead to 16, page 16, does the fingerprint on that card correspond to the fingerprint on Exhibit 739, noted as Card 16?

A. Yes, it does.
Q. And lastly, showing you page 17 -- that’s not yours, sorry. I’m going to show you Card 18. Does Card 18 correspond with the fingerprint that is noted on page 18 -- does this correspond with Exhibit No. 741, Card 18?
A. Yes, it does.
Q. All right. And you located each of those fingerprints?
A. That’s correct.
Q. And this exhibit contains the fingerprint that you’ve noted with the exact page that it was located on and the location of the fingerprint on that page?
A. That’s correct.
Q. Thank you. Move to admit Exhibit 769 into evidence at this time.
MR. SANGER: I’m not sure that 769 have the other pages in it that haven’t been identified yet.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s fair. That’s fair. Actually, I will reserve that. I’ll hold off on moving to admit that into evidence. There’s additional foundation that I need to add.
THE COURT: All right.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you.

No further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Do you have 741 in front of you, Exhibit 741?

A. Is that --

MR. SANGER: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: If I can assist.

Q. That is 741.

A. Thank you.

Q. Exhibit 741 you have now identified as relating to a particular page in the book that was just marked for identification, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, that was originally attributed to a totally different magazine, a different exhibit, was it not?

A. Correct. That placard number belonged to 321-D, which was a “Hawk” magazine.

Q. Okay. And did you confer with Detective Spinner about the misidentification of that particular -- the location of that particular print?

A. I conferred with him about the misleading of the binders, yes.

Q. So there was a misattribution, in your opinion at this time, of that print to, in essence, the wrong magazine?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object as vague as to “misattribution.”

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I don’t know what that means.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. That’s a good point. When your team -- when the fingerprint team was working on this, that particular print was originally identified to - I want to get the right number here - 321-D, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And 321-D -- I’m sorry?

A. I was going to say that was based on us receiving the binder with the label, and when we opened the binder, we went to work on that particular magazine, which was “Finally Legal.”

Q. Okay. The binder was labeled as 321-D?

A. Mislabeled.

Q. All right. We’ll get to misattribution anytime now. All right. The binder was mislabeled as 321-D, correct?

A. And that was the only identifier on the binder.

Q. Okay. So there was no other way to establish, as you look at it, as to what exhibit that actually was?

A. Correct.

Q. And you would agree, based on your training and experience, that it’s important to try to label all these things carefully so that ultimately, if you’re called to testify in court, you can get it right?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Okay. And eventually it was determined, you believe at this time, that that print really came off a different magazine?

A. Oh, I know it did.

Q. Okay. That’s your testimony at this point.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And by the way, the fingerprints that you lifted, do you have any way to determine the age of the fingerprints?

A. No.

Q. So you can’t tell if one was laid down before another, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you can’t tell, just even in general, other than, for instance, looking at the date of a magazine or something like that, you can’t tell scientifically when a particular print was placed there?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Now, Mr. Auchincloss led off with a question about “chemically altered.” The fact is that super glue fuming does chemically alter the 3559 exhibit, does it not, sir?

A. It adheres to the prints that are on -- or whatever residue is left on there. I don’t believe it chemically alters the prints, the chemical the process, the super glue itself.

Q. All right. In talking about the word “alter,” then, if you -- if you put super glue on something, super glue is a chemical, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And you’re not altering the exhibit by putting super glue on something; is that your definition?

A. My understanding, yes.

Q. Okay. Now, aside from that, you do agree with me that when you put super glue, the super glue fuming causes the super glue to adhere to the page?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. And to one extent, it may help to enhance a fingerprint, right?

A. Definitely.

Q. Because it will tend to adhere to the portions of the fingerprint that correspond to the ridges on the finger that left the print, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. If you overfume, if you fume too long or too thoroughly on a piece of paper, you can actually obscure portions of the fingerprint, correct?

A. That would be true.

Q. All right. And that’s not chemically altering, as far as you’re concerned?

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. No further questions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Could I have just a moment, Your Honor? I’m trying to call up an image on my computer that I’d like to show the detective.

THE COURT: Yes.

THE CLERK: Do you have an exhibit number?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It is -- no, that’s not it. It’s --

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll do it without the exhibit.

Your Honor, could you project “Input 1,” please?

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Detective, is this the fingerprint that counsel just questioned you about?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And I believe I questioned you about it, that there was an error on that fingerprint because it said 3 -- it says “321-D”?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you said that’s incorrect?

A. That is.
MR. SANGER: Objection. Leading; calling for recitation of prior testimony.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: And in fact, that is 321-F?
A. That’s correct.
MR. SANGER: That’s leading, Your Honor.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s restating his testimony, it’s not --
MR. SANGER: Object to speaking --
THE COURT: It is leading. I’ll sustain the objection.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.
Q. What is the accurate letter for that particular item number?
A. The item number is 321-F.
Q. And you said you were certain that that item number is 321-F?
A. That is correct.
MR. SANGER: Objection; leading.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Are you certain that that is Item 321-F?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. Why?
A. A couple of things. One, when we received the magazine, and when we were doing our report at 3562

the time we were processing the magazine, we were processing “Finally Legal.” That was the magazine. Subsequently, when we noticed that the tags had been switched, we noticed that 321-D was actually associated with the “Hawk” magazine.

Q. Does the circle that you identified that particular fingerprint with have any similarities to the circle to the right that appears in the image?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. How so?

A. You can see that the -- at the edge of the ruler up in the upper right-hand corner of the photograph is the number “1,” and that is also illustrated on the actual photograph of the page.

Q. All right. So -- Detective, I show you Exhibit No. 559. It appears to be Item 321-F. Is that the magazine that that fingerprint came from?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And is there any indication or mark on this magazine that tells you that this magazine is, in fact, 321-F?

A. On the back page of the magazine there should be a number in the bottom right-hand corner, and it was identified as 321-F, and that was placed there when they were first being separated.

Q. All right. Thank you, Detective. I have no further questions.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Never trust a lawyer who says there’s only a few questions. That’s why we started 35 minutes ago.

You are in the Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Department, and you are a deputy sheriff; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you worked as a deputy sheriff before moving into the Forensics Bureau, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you went to the academy?

A. Correct.

Q. Which academy?

A. Ventura Academy.

Q. And that’s a POST, P-O-S-T, certified academy, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And in the academy, you studied the need to be very accurate in recording material in police reports and elsewhere for the purpose of investigations, correct?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And the purpose of recording material accurately is so that later, when speaking to other officers or to counsel, or testifying in court, you can present accurate testimony in a case; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. You then moved to the Forensics Bureau of the sheriff’s department; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And the Forensics Bureau is, in essence, a part of the sheriff’s department that deals specifically with evidence, sometimes the scientific processing of evidence; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And in the course of your training to become a member of the Forensics Bureau, was it emphasized that it is extremely important to make sure that all of the evidence tags and paperwork and everything else is extremely accurate?

A. Absolutely.

Q. All right. So based on your training and experience, this was not correct police procedure to have this exhibit mislabeled in this case; is that correct?

A. It should not have been mislabeled, that’s correct.

Q. And tags should not be switched; is that correct? I think those are your words, “the tags were switched”?

A. Yes, meaning not purposely, but accidentally switched.

Q. Well, tags should not be switched, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And you caught this particular one, right?

A. That was the only one.

Q. That's the only one you caught?

A. We checked them all.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: You went back and you checked them all?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There's an objection.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

It's overruled. The answer was, "We checked them all." Next question.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: "Checked them all" meaning all the fingerprints?

A. Checked every magazine to make sure it was properly labeled.

Q. I'm sorry, I meant all the materials that you had for the fingerprints.

A. Correct.

Q. Were you aware of any other tags falling off in this particular investigation?

A. Not to my knowledge.

MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you. No further questions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No further questions.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.

Call your next witness.

MR. NICOLA: Alicia Romero, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Come forward, please. You were sworn yesterday. You're still under oath. You may be seated.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Thank you.

MR. NICOLA: Good morning.

THE WITNESS: Hi, good morning.

MR. NICOLA: Would you take a look at these while I'm getting ready.

ALICIA ROMERO

Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Good morning, Miss Romero.

A. Good morning.

Q. As soon as you sat down, I handed you two envelopes, and asked you to take a peek through those.

A. Okay.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I'm going to ask for the opportunity to see what she's taking a peek at.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. NICOLA: Go ahead.

THE COURT: The audience couldn't hear you, though, when you said that.

MR. SANGER: Can I restate it, or just --

THE COURT: Yes, go ahead.

MR. SANGER: I asked if I could have the opportunity to take a peek at what she’s taking a peek at.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, could we go to “Input 1,” please, and go back to the black screen? Thank you.

MR. SANGER: That’s fine. Let me just take a look at the envelope here.

THE WITNESS: These came from this envelope here.

MR. SANGER: All right. Okay. That’s fine. Thank you.

Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead, Counsel.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Do you recognize the documents contained in both of those envelopes that you looked at?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay.

A. Are you referring to these?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

THE BAILIFF: She’s got to scoot up and speak into the microphone.

THE WITNESS: Oh, yes.

MR. NICOLA: Did you hear that?

Q. Now, before we start talking about the contents of either of those envelopes, would you please let the jury know who you are and where you're employed.

A. Okay. My name's Alicia Romero and I work at the Santa Barbara Superior Court.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Closer to the mike, please.

THE WITNESS: My name is Alicia Romero, and I work at the Santa Barbara Superior Court. I supervise the courtroom clerks, both criminal and civil, and I also am the supervisor of the exhibit clerk, and I also handle the exhibits also.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: With respect to your duties as handling exhibits for the Superior Court, were you involved in handling the exhibits lodged in the grand jury proceeding in the case of People vs. Michael Jackson?

A. After the grand jury they were delivered to me, and I've had them in my possession in a vault all this time.

Q. Okay.

A. Except for certain orders to release.

Q. Okay. That's where we're going next.

When the grand jury exhibits came to you, what did you first do with them?

A. Since it was after hours, we received them, and I locked them right away in the exhibit room, which has a vault that -- it’s real thick, with a combination lock, until the next morning.

Q. Okay. Did you conduct an inventory on the exhibits after that?

A. First thing the next morning.

Q. Okay. And you made sure that all the exhibits that had been entered into the grand jury were accounted for in your vault, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And is that part of your official function?

A. On grand jury exhibits, there’s times where I would get orders from Gary Blair to handle them myself.

Q. Okay. And in this particular case you were ordered by Gary Blair?

A. Correct.

Q. Did anybody have access to the grand jury exhibits that were lodged with you?

A. The only other person would have been my exhibit clerk at the time, but she was also informed that anything to do with this grand jury exhibits, that she was to contact me and I would handle it. And I also had the -- my other supervisor, Flota Pritchard, in my absence, if it was an emergency need, that she could have access to it also. Other than that, it was just her and I that were to handle them.

Q. Do you know whether any emergencies came up where somebody other than you had to get in there?
A. I believe --
MR. SANGER: Calls for hearsay, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Did you keep records of every time that the grand jury exhibits were accessed?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And were those records kept within the scope of your employment as a public employee?
A. Yes.
Q. And were you under a duty to record whenever the grand jury exhibits were opened?
A. Yes.
Q. And if another clerk, another public employee working for you, had access or needed access to the grand jury exhibits, it was part of your duty to record who entered the grand jury exhibits?
A. Yes.
Q. And when?
A. Yes.
Q. And get some kind of identification from who had access to the grand jury evidence?
A. Yes. Unless we knew who that person was. Uh-huh.
Q. Okay. Do you have a record sitting in front of you who had access to the grand jury exhibits?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. In your review of those documents, can you please tell the jury the first time that the grand jury exhibits were accessed and viewed by people other than the Superior Court clerks?

A. Stephen Dunkle and Amy Cassel.

Q. Did you take some form of identification from Mr. Dunkle?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Okay. Is that noted on your log?

A. I have their business cards attached to this.

Q. Okay. And Stephen Dunkle works for Sanger & Swysen?

A. Correct.

Q. Attorneys at Law?

A. Correct.

Q. And Amy Cassel works for Mason Investigative Group?

A. Yes.

Q. An investigator?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And what date did they come look at the exhibits?

A. June 9th, 2004.

Q. Okay. And how long -- what time did they come in and what time did they leave, if that is noted on your log?

A. Yes, it is. They came in at 2:53, and they left at 3:45.
Q. Okay. And which grand jury exhibits did they look at?
A. This one I just put that they had viewed most of them. I didn’t specify particularly which ones they viewed.
Q. Okay. Just most of them?
A. Uh-huh. Correct.
Q. And do you have an indication there that they used gloves?
A. On this particular one, yes.
Q. Okay. Now, prior to anybody coming to view the grand jury exhibits, was a court order required?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. When is the next time somebody came to view the grand jury exhibits, please?
A. July 20th, 2004.
Q. And that was Detective Craig Bonner?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And that was pursuant to a court order as well, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Now, was his role that day to take pictures of certain items?
A. Yes.
Q. And that’s what the court order spelled out, 3573

correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And one of those items was Grand Jury Exhibit No. 53?
A. Yes.
MR. NICOLA: May I approach the witness, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I’ve placed before you Exhibit No. 470.
A. No. 470?
Q. When we do the trial, we renumber all the exhibits.
A. Oh, okay.
Q. You’re looking at a grand jury exhibit sticker on the back of that briefcase, are you not?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. Is that exhibit -- Grand Jury Exhibit No. 53?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Okay. Is that the exhibit that Detective Bonner opened in your presence and took photographs of everything that was in there?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And were you present with him at the time that he did that?
A. Yes, the entire time.
Q. Did you ever leave grand jury evidence -- for example, on the June 9th date, did you leave the grand jury evidence unattended?

A. No.
Q. Okay. So you observed everything that would happen with the exhibits?
A. Yes.
Q. And that’s how you were assured there would be no tampering, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you watch Detective Bonner remove the contents of the briefcase and begin photographing page for page?
A. Yes.
Q. And Detective Bonner was wearing gloves on that occasion as well, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. When he was finished photodocumenting all the contents of Grand Jury Exhibit 53, also known as People’s Exhibit 470, did he replace all the items in the same order that he removed them and close the briefcase again?
MR. SANGER: Objection. Compound; and leading.
MR. NICOLA: Should I rephrase?
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Okay. When he finished taking the pictures, he put it all back together again?

A. He placed them back in the suitcase. Whether they were in the same order that they were taken out, I do not know.

Q. So he may have shuffled them, as far as you know?

A. Correct.

Q. Did he close the briefcase and hand it back to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he examine other exhibits on that same day?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Okay. And did he, in your presence, take care to handle only one exhibit at a time?

A. Yes.

Q. You made sure of that, I take it?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. When Detective Bonner left, left from taking pictures of the exhibits, where did Exhibit No. 53, also known as Exhibit 470, the black briefcase, where did that stay?

A. Once he left? It was given back to me and I put it back in the vault.

Q. Okay. Did you have occasion to pull Exhibit No. 470, the black briefcase, marked Grand Jury Exhibit 53, out from the evidence vault again?

A. Do you mean at a later time? Or the same day?

Q. Later time.
A. Yes.
Q. Would you turn to your log of exhibits and confirm for us whether somebody entered to view exhibits on July 21st?
A. Yes.
Q. Who was there on July 21st?
A. Mr. Sanger and Stephen Dunkle.
Q. Stephen Dunkle would be the attorney who first came to view?
A. Yes.
Q. And “Mr. Sanger” being Mr. Sanger seated to my right?
A. Yes. Robert Sanger.
Q. And did they examine Exhibit No. 53 as well?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they do that in your presence?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they open it?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you recall whether they looked through all the contents?
A. I do not recall if they looked through all of it. I -- I seem vaguely to remember that they viewed some of it, and just saw that they were magazines.
Q. Okay. When they were finished with Exhibit No. 53, also known as People’s 470, the black 3577 briefcase --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- what did you do with it?

A. After they finished viewing all the exhibits, I put everything back in the vault.

Q. Okay. Do your records show whether Exhibit No. 53, People’s 470, was viewed again prior to its release?

A. Yes.

Q. When was it next looked at?

A. July 27th, 2004.

Q. And by whom?

A. Stephen Dunkle and Susan Watts.

Q. That’s a third trip by Attorney Dunkle?

A. Correct.

Q. And Susan Watts, did she leave you some kind of identifying business card?

A. No, she did not.

Q. Did Mr. Dunkle just vouch for her?

A. Yes.

Q. Which exhibits did they look at?

A. Looking at this list, it looks like all of them. I could read out each number, if you like, but I have a whole list of numbers.

Q. Most, if not all the exhibits?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Was Exhibit 53 viewed by Mr. Dunkle and Ms. Watts?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall if they were wearing gloves when they went through the exhibits?

A. The procedure was to wear gloves.

Q. Okay. Was there --

A. I’m sorry.

Q. Let me back up to the date that Mr. Sanger and Mr. Dunkle reviewed the exhibits on July 21st. Were they wearing gloves?

A. Mr. Dunkle was. I believe Mr. Sanger was letting Mr. Dunkle handle them on that date, from what I recall.

Q. And how long were Mr. Dunkle and Miss Watts viewing the evidence on July 27th of 2004?

A. About one hour and ten minutes. They came in at 1:10 p.m. and left about 2:40 p.m.

Q. Okay. Do your records show anyone else coming to look at Grand Jury Exhibit No. 53, also known as People’s 470, prior to the date of its release?

A. No.

Q. Okay. What is the procedure for releasing a grand jury exhibit prior to trial?

A. I’m sorry, what was that question again?

Q. Let me rephrase it. What is the procedure to release a grand jury exhibit to one of the parties prior or before the trial starts?

A. The parties would have to get a stipulated 3579 order signed by the Judge.

Q. Okay. And what would you require from the person who would come to pick the item from you?

A. Identification, and I would have the original -- a copy of the order from the clerk.

Q. Okay. Would you take any precautions in preserving either digitally or on some kind of copy the contents of the exhibit that were removed by one of the parties?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay, you would. And in the case of Exhibit No. 53, also known as 470, the black briefcase, was that exhibit removed by Detective Craig Bonner pursuant to a Judge’s order?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Okay. And on what date was that exhibit removed from your custody?

A. On October 1st, 2004.

Q. Did you make Mr. Bonner, excuse me, Detective Bonner, leave you a record of the items that he removed?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did he leave that with you?

A. He left me a disk.

Q. Is that in one of your envelopes there?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Okay. I’d like to put an exhibit sticker on that, please.

That would be Item 770, next in order. Could you please describe the Item 770 that I just marked the sticker on? Show the jury what is on the front and on the back; tell them.

A. This is a disk. These are a disk of the exhibits that were released per court order. I also made a notation, by a post-it, of the date that the court order was ordered and the date of the receipt.

Q. Is there a list of exhibit items that are contained on that CD?

A. Yes, there is.

Q. And what does that list say?

A. They have Exhibits 33, 34, 52, 53, 73-A, 73-B, 73-C, 80, 82, and 91. These are all grand jury numbers.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. I'd like to admit 770 into evidence, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor, it's not relevant. There may be a part of it that's relevant to what just happened. But there's a great deal of irrelevant material on it.

THE COURT: At this time I'll sustain the objection. I'll take it up later, if necessary.

MR. NICOLA: I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Miss Romero, how are you?

A. I’m fine.

Q. Okay. We let you talk today. First of all, is there anything unusual about a defense lawyer coming to -- or a defense lawyer and investigator coming to look at grand jury exhibits?

A. No.

Q. And at the time that Mr. Dunkle from my office came, and the one time that I came to look at the grand jury exhibits, was the grand jury process completed?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, the grand jury had already looked at everything, they’d returned their Indictment, and you were now safekeeping the exhibits?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And in particular, we, that is, the defense, who’se representing Mr. Jackson, had to have a court order in order to look at the exhibits; is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. When Mr. Dunkle and Ms. Cassel came -- Miss Cassel being an investigator and Mr. Dunkle being a lawyer in my office. When they came, did they ask you if they could take photographs of the exhibits?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. And you told them that they could not; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So it was necessary for us to go back and get a further court order in order to be allowed to take photographs; is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. Now, you remember that Miss Watts came with Mr. Dunkle on the third occasion, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And at that time, had they received the court order to allow photographs to be taken?

A. I have to check my notes here.

Q. Sure, take your time.

A. This was with Miss Watts, right? And --

Q. Yes. I'll let you take a look. If it's too much trouble, I can ask you another question, which is, did Miss Watts take photographs? Let me try that.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. So I would assume that you would not have allowed her to take the photographs unless you had an order permitting that; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And do you recall Miss Watts being an investigator for our law firm?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, in between Mr. Dunkle and I came in and looked at the exhibits. At that time we were still not allowed to take photographs; is that correct?

A. Correct. I don’t seem to have an order allowing you to take photos yet at that time.

Q. At that time?

A. When you came, uh-huh.

Q. All right. Now, just to do the whole thing at once so we can break it down, during the time that Mr. Dunkle was there from my office, the one that I was there and the two investigators, in other words, those three times, did all of the personnel from my office, including myself, follow all of your directions with regard to preserving and avoiding any contamination of the evidence?

A. As I recall, yes.

Q. And you were sitting there at the table each time taking the evidence out and allowing whoever it was, whether it was me or any of the others, to look at it, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And none of us touched the evidence in any way that you did not want us to do; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And by the time that we did that, by the time these inspections by the defense occurred, were you told to wear gloves and to preserve the evidence?

A. Yes, we were. From the very first visit, Mr. Dunkle, and I think it was Cassel, were told to wear gloves at all times.

Q. And we all complied with that, right?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, prior to that, on the day that you got the materials from the grand jury, my understanding is all you did was take them in a box or so?

A. Yes. Gary Blair and Christie Russell, that was the courtroom clerk, brought them about almost six o’clock that evening. And Christie and I, we put it in the vault immediately.

Q. All right. Were anybody -- was anybody wearing gloves?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And after you put them in the vault, you locked it up, and then you came back the next day, correct?

A. First thing the next morning, yes.

Q. And who assisted you in inventorying the material?

A. The courtroom clerk that took the Indictment.

Q. And the courtroom clerk was?

A. Christie Russell.

Q. So you and Miss Russell then took the boxes out, and you went through each exhibit to catalog and make sure it was all there; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And did you -- did each of you wear gloves?

A. No, we did not.

Q. And you were not instructed by law enforcement or other court personnel or anybody else that you should wear gloves; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Okay. Thank you. I have no further questions.

MR. NICOLA: Just a few, please.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Go ahead.

A. I'm doing my work. Okay.

Q. Essentially there was nothing improper in the way that the exhibits were handled by other parties in this case, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay.

A. Correct.

Q. When you did your inventory of the exhibits for the first time, did you open up item -- Exhibit No. 470, which is the black briefcase that you know as Exhibit 53?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And did you look at every single page that was in there?
A. No, we did not.
Q. How did you handle that? Could you explain that for the jury, please?
A. Okay. When we were inventorying, we had this black suitcase. We have to account for every exhibit, so when we got to the black suitcase, our procedure is, “Is there anything in there that was overlooked that we should make a note on the exhibit card?”
So we looked in it, and all we saw was magazines, and we just sort of like -- I think it was myself rather than Christie, we just sort of moved it, just magazines, and then we just closed it, but we didn’t touch all the exhibits.
Q. You don’t work for law enforcement, do you?
A. No, I don’t.
Q. And law enforcement doesn’t get to tell court clerks what to do, right?
MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for speculation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. NICOLA: It’s rebuttal to his question. I’ll rephrase it, Your Honor.
Q. When Mr. Sanger asked you whether you were told what to do with the exhibits by law enforcement, is that a common procedure for you?

A. It wasn’t necessarily by law enforcement. It was from Gary Blair.
Q. Okay. So my question is, does law enforcement generally direct you how to handle exhibits once they’re lodged with the Court?
A. No, they do not.
Q. They become court property at that point, correct?
A. Correct.
MR. NICOLA: Okay. I have nothing further.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Okay. But law enforcement did tell you that -- after you had inventoried everything, at some point before my office came to look at the materials, somebody told you that everybody should wear gloves when dealing with this material, correct?
A. It was Gary Blair. And I believe Detective Bonner at one time did mention, “You clerks” -- I mean, “You should really wear gloves when you’re handling it.” It wasn’t an order. It was more like a request.
Q. All right.
A. But I took my instructions from Gary Blair.
Q. Gary Blair is the court administrator?

A. Yes, he is.
Q. So he would be your boss as it were?
A. Correct.
Q. When you say you don’t take direction from law enforcement on handling exhibits -- well, I don’t know what you said, but let me -- I don’t want to put words in your mouth. Let’s put it this way: The fact is, that you’ve been a courtroom clerk in the past, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And the fact is, if law enforcement is handling something with gloves and they indicate there may be some reason to check something for fingerprints, you would act accordingly, correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. So if law enforcement were to tell you -- if they had told you before you took possession of these items that you shouldn’t go through them because they may be checking them for fingerprints, you would have honored that request, right?
A. Yes, I would have.
Q. Okay. And that has happened before, has it not?
A. Correct.
MR. SANGER: Okay. All right. Thank you. No further questions.
MR. NICOLA: No redirect, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We’ll call Nancy Torres as our next witness.

THE COURT: All right.

Come forward, please. When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing. Face the clerk over here. And raise your right hand.

NANCY DIANA TORRES

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Nancy Diana Torres; T-o-r-r-e-s.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Miss Torres.

A. Good morning.

Q. Who do you work for, please?

A. I work for the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department, Forensics Unit.

Q. And what do you do for the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Forensic Unit?

A. I’m an identification technician in the Forensics Unit.

Q. What is an identification technician?

A. We basically do the same thing as a forensics detective. We go out to a crime scene and process it. We also do fingerprint work.

Q. How long have you been an identification technician?

A. I have been employed as an I.D. technician for five years.

Q. Have you received any training that qualifies you for that position?

A. Yes, I have gone to basic fingerprint pattern-type recognition courses, latent print comparison and techniques courses, as well as basic forensic ridgeology courses. And I have a bachelor’s of science degree in chemistry.

Q. Have you had some experience in the field that has helped you learn your craft in fingerprint identification procedures?

A. Yes. Every day we do fingerprint comparisons.

Q. And what techniques are you familiar with in terms of finding fingerprints?

A. Well, we use a lot of various chemical techniques, and -- as well as visual techniques that we use.

Q. Did you participate in the location of fingerprints on a series of magazines for the case of People v. Michael Jackson?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I'd like to show you some exhibits at this time, and begin by asking you, did you participate in the procedure of attempting to locate prints on these items with another I.D. technician?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And who was that?

A. It was -- my partner was Detective Sutcliffe.

Q. Okay. And was he present with you during the entire time that you did the examination of these magazines?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. All right. Showing you People's 725, Card 02, did you help in the processing of this particular magazine?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was your duty on this magazine?

A. I helped with the ninhydrin processing portion of it.

Q. Okay. Exhibit 726, 03, did you help process this particular magazine?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was your duty or what did you do on this particular magazine?

A. I helped with the ninhydrin processing of them.

Q. Exhibit 728, Card 05, same question, did you help in processing this?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do?

A. A ninhydrin processing as well.

Q. Same question for 729, Card 06?

A. Yes. With the ninhydrin processing.

Q. Exhibit 730, Card 07, same question?

A. Yes. And the ninhydrin processing as well.

Q. 731, Card No. 8?

A. Yes. With the ninhydrin processing as well.

Q. All right. 732, Card 09?

A. Yes. Ninhydrin process.

Q. All right. Now, calling your attention to Exhibit 733, Card 10, what did you do in processing this particular latent?

A. I photographed the latent with a Scenescope and I also helped with the ninhydrin processing.

Q. Okay. Were you the finder of this particular print?

A. Yes, I was.

THE COURT: All right. We'll take our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Counsel?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. All right. Miss Torres, where I left off, we were at Item No. 10, and I believe 733, and you said you identified that particular fingerprint with the Scenescope?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Have you had training with the Scenescope?

A. Yes, we had training with the Scenescope.

Q. And have you used it, had some experience using it before this case?

A. Before this case, we only had the training that we received, and that was basically it.

Q. You say “we,” or “you”?

A. We as a unit --

MR. SANGER: I can’t hear the answer.

THE COURT: I didn’t either.

THE WITNESS: We as a unit received training using the Scenescope.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay. And who did you receive that training from?

A. Spex.

Q. Okay. The manufacturer came out and trained you?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, moving on to Exhibit 734, Card No. 11, how did you help in the processing of this fingerprint?

A. I photographed the latent print with a Scenescope and I helped with the ninhydrin processing.

Q. Okay. Now, when you say you helped with the ninhydrin processing of these items, this would be not for this particular print that is green. Is it fair to say that a green print indicates it’s a Scenescope print?

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: I’m sorry. Objection; leading.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: It’s expert testimony.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. What does the green indicate?

A. It indicates that the latent was photographed using a Scenescope.

Q. All right. Thank you.

Moving on to Exhibit 735, Card No. 12.

A. I helped with the ninhydrin processing.

Q. On that particular latent?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you assist in processing Exhibit No. 736, Card 13?

A. Yes, I photographed using the Scenescope and helped with the ninhydrin processing.

Q. All right. Looking at Exhibit 737, Card 14, did you assist in processing this print?

A. Yes, with the ninhydrin process.

Q. So that would be just on this page? This print wasn’t a ninhydrin print, was it?

A. No, it was photographed using the Scenescope.

Q. All right. As far as the particular exhibit on 738, Card No. 15?

A. I assisted with the ninhydrin processing.

Q. Of this page?

A. Of that page.

Q. Exhibit 739, Card No. 16?

A. I assisted with the ninhydrin processing on that page.

Q. Exhibit No. 740, Card No. 18?

A. I photographed the latent print using the Scenescope, and assisted with the ninhydrin processing.

Q. And Card 741 -- or I’m sorry, Exhibit 741, Card 18.

A. I assisted with the ninhydrin processing.

Q. Thank you.

Your Honor, if we could have “Input No. 1” at this time?

All right. Miss Torres, calling your attention to only those prints in which you said you were the identification technician who found the prints, I’m now asking you -- I’m showing you Card No. 10, which is Exhibit 733. Were you the finder of this particular fingerprint?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And where did you find that print?

A. On Item 317, Sam, a “Penthouse” magazine, page 87, Quadrant 7 and labeled as Latent 1.

Q. And that “Latent 1,” what does that indicate?

A. That that was the first latent that we located using the Scenescope.

Q. All right. Calling your attention now to Card No. 11, which is Exhibit 734, did you locate that print?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And where did you locate it?

A. On Item 317, Tom, T, “Visions of Fantasy, A Hard-Rock Affair”, September 1993, page three, Quadrant 4 and 5, and labeled as Latent 1.

Q. All right. Moving on to Card No. 13, Exhibit No. 736, did you find that fingerprint?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And where did you find it?

A. On Item 317-YY, “Al Golstein’s 100 Best Adult Videos,” page A, Quadrant 15, and labeled as Latent 1.

Q. And lastly, Exhibit No. 740, Card No. 17, did you find that fingerprint?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And where did you find that?

A. On Item 321-E, “Girls of Barely Legal,” page 3609 seven, Quadrant 15, and labeled as Latent 1.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Could we have the lights, please?

Q. All right. Taking those four fingerprints in order, I now show you Exhibit 769, page ten. Does that show the fingerprint and the location on the page where you found that fingerprint, Item 317-S, “Penthouse”, page 87, Quadrant 7, Latent 1?

A. Yes.

Q. Showing you now Page no. 11 of this exhibit, does that show the fingerprint that you found on that page and its location on Item 317-T, “Visions of Fantasy, A Hard-Rock Affair,” September 1993, page three, Quadrant 4 and 5, Latent No. 1?

A. Yes.

Q. Calling your attention now to page 13, does that page show the latent fingerprint that you located on Item No. 317-YY, “Al Golstein’s 100 Best Adult Videos,” page A, Quadrant 15, Latent 1?

A. Yes.

Q. And lastly, page 17. Does page 17 show a fingerprint and its location on a page of Item 321-E, “Girls of Barely Legal,” page seven, Quadrant 15, Latent 1?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If I could have “Input 1” again, Your Honor. I’m going to bring those images up on the screen right now.

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object, Your Honor. This is cumulative and 352.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We haven’t shown these images yet.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Is this the fingerprint that you located on Exhibit No. 733, Card No. 10?

A. Yes.

Q. Next, does that picture, fingerprint, indicate the location of the fingerprint that you found on Exhibit No. 734, Item No. -- Card No. 11?

A. Yes.

Q. The next slide, does that slide show the location of the fingerprint that you found on Exhibit No. 736, Card No. 13?

A. Yes.

Q. And lastly, does that fingerprint indicate the location on the page where you found the fingerprint on Exhibit 740, Card No. 17?

A. Yes.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. No further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Miss Torres, how are you?

A. Good, thank you.

Q. How long have you been -- I think you said you were with forensics for five years with the sheriff’s department; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you have any prior law enforcement training?

A. No, I don’t.

Q. And you’re not a deputy sheriff or a sworn peace officer; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And in your five years, have you worked exclusively on fingerprints?

A. I’ve worked on fingerprints and crime scene investigations.

Q. Okay. So the answer would be no, you have not worked exclusively on fingerprints, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You’ve done a number of other tasks with regard to crime scene investigations?

A. Correct.

Q. And you’re familiar with the need to properly label and preserve evidence; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, are you a latent print examiner?

A. I am a latent print examiner in training.

Q. Okay. A trainee. How long have you been in that capacity?

A. I would say for the last four years.

Q. Okay. And are you certified by any organization?

A. No.

Q. So you're gaining your experience as a -- let me withdraw that.

You're gaining your training to be a latent print examiner from your work at the sheriff's department?

A. From work and through training courses.

Q. You're also taking some courses?

A. Exactly.

Q. All right. In this particular case, you did not do any comparison of the fingerprints; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And your job was to pretty much bring the prints up, best you can, and preserve them so that they can be looked at by other people, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, you indicated that you used the Scenescope, which we've heard about before in this case, all right?

And how long -- let me withdraw that.

You're here in Santa Maria; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. How long has the Santa Maria office of the sheriff’s department had a Scenescope?

A. We had had it only for a couple of months prior to us receiving this case.

Q. Okay. When did you receive this case?

A. We were assigned to process the items on, I believe -- if I may refer to my reports.

Q. Okay. If you can’t recall, you may do that.

A. The first item that we processed was -- we began processing on September 16th of 2004.

Q. Okay. So when you say, “When we received this case,” you mean when your forensics unit received an assignment in this case, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And you recall having the Scenescope for about two months before September 16th?

A. Several months.

Q. Okay. About when did you receive it?

A. I would say about five months prior.

Q. Five months prior. Okay. Had you ever used the Scenescope before you received it?

A. We had had one training day on it, but our Scenescope had a malfunction, so it had to be sent back.

Q. When was that training day?

A. That was -- I don’t recall.

Q. Now, the Santa Barbara office of the sheriff’s department also had a Scenescope; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Did they get theirs at the same time?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you have training together?

A. On the same day.

Q. On the same day. And you’re saying -- forgive me for asking again, but you’re saying you don’t recall the training day?

A. I don’t recall the exact date of the training day.

Q. Roughly when was it?

A. I don’t recall the exact month, if that’s what you’re asking for.

Q. So you got the machine about five months before September. So April?

A. About that time.

Q. Okay. Could have been May?

A. It could have been.

Q. All right. And did you have your training day about the time you received the machine?

A. No, we had the training day before we received our machine.

Q. Okay. And then at some point, the machine didn’t work, you sent it back, got another machine. When did you get the machine that worked?

A. When did we get the machine to work? I believe about a month or two before we began to process the items.

Q. Okay. So July or so of 2004?

A. I would say.

Q. Okay. And did you process any prints in any case for the purpose of testimony in court -- I mean a real case. Did you process any prints in a real case, before you started working on this case, using the Scenescope?

A. No.

MR. SANGER: All right. I have no further questions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: No further questions.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: My mistake, I should have let the bailiff know to have our witness already here.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Our next witness we will be calling is Michelle Shelley. And she’s on her way down.

And if I could get a “Black Screen” again, Your Honor, please.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Come to the front of the courtroom, please. Remain standing when you get to the witness stand.

Face the clerk here and raise your right hand.

MICHELLE SHELLEY

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Michelle Shelley; M-i-c-h-e-l-l-e, S-h-e-l-l-e-y.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Miss Shelley.

A. Good morning.

Q. In 2004 --

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Get the mike closer.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you.

Q. In 2004, who were you employed by?

A. Santa Barbara County Sheriffs.

Q. And what did you do for the sheriff’s department?

A. I was an I.D. technician. I worked for Criminal Records, and then I was brought over to work for the Forensics Division, this particular case, due to my background.

Q. And was this case the People v. Jackson case?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Tell me about your training to become an I.D. technician.

A. I went to Western Mellon College majoring in criminal history, concentrated in forensics, and I worked for the Delaware State Police for two years. Moved out here to California, and became employed by Santa Barbara Sheriffs. I also have a diploma from the American Institute of Applied Science in forensics.

Q. And have you had any specialized training in the location of latent fingerprints?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right. Have you had any on-the-job training in the location of latent fingerprints?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you describe that for me, please.

A. Just general working practice with a latent examiner I worked with in Delaware, as well as here with Santa Barbara Sheriff.

Q. Okay. Did part of your forensics training include locating latent fingerprints and different processes -- well, let me break that question up, it's compound -- locating latent fingerprints?

A. Yes.

Q. And did some of your general training in forensic science include processing various items to make visible latent fingerprints?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. All right. Have you had experience with cyanoacrylate ester fuming?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Or super glue fuming?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Prior to this case?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions?

A. Specific numbers, I can’t remember. Quite a few times.

Q. Quite a few times?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. All right. Can you tell me, what were you called in to do? What were your duties with regard to the case of People v. Michael Jackson?

A. I was brought in for extra help. I was assisting Detective Spinner and Detective Wittenbrock on processing some of the evidence, splitting it up, putting it in plastic sleeves, super gluing it, and then hydrating it.

Q. Who was it that was in charge of splitting up the magazines initially and placing them in sleeves?

A. Detective Spinner.

Q. Did you assist Detective Spinner in that task?

A. Yes.

Q. And who was also charged with the initial fuming -- super glue fuming of all the magazines?

A. Detective Spinner.

Q. And did you assist Detective Spinner in that task?

A. Yes.

Q. At some point did you team up with I.D. Tech Wittenbrock to assist him in his look -- in his analysis and checking for latents on some of these exhibits?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was your assignment with Detective Wittenbrock?

A. I was assisting him in pulling out the pieces of magazine. Basically to speed up the process, because we had such a vast volume, I would pull them out, pass them over to him. He would then scan them. I would assist in writing labels if we found a print. I would also directly type in our findings into our computer for our reports.

Q. All right. And did you assist him or anybody else in the ninhydrin processing of some of these magazines?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Have you had previous training in using ninhydrin?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And previous experience in using ninhydrin?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions have you used it, if you can recall, approximately?

A. Again, the super glue, numerous occasions. I can’t exactly recall.

Q. All right. All right. I’m going to ask you some specific questions about -- there I’ve done it. About specific exhibits. And we’ll go through these fairly rapidly, but I’m going to show you each exhibit, and I want you to tell me if you assisted in the processing of this particular fingerprint or assisted in the processing of the page that this fingerprint came from.

A. Okay.

Q. As in a ninhydrin that had previously been found to be --

THE BAILIFF: Can’t hear you back there.

THE WITNESS: Oh, sorry.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. So, let’s look first at Exhibit 1 -- I’m sorry, Card 1, Exhibit 724. Did you have any part in the processing of this particular page or fingerprint?

A. Yes, sir, I did the ninhydrin on that print.

Q. Okay. Looking now at Card 727 -- I should say Card 4, Exhibit 727.

A. I did the ninhydrin on that as well.

Q. Okay. And I should mention that neither of these prints is a ninhydrin print; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Moving on to -- moving on to Card 737, also is Card 14.

A. I assisted with the fuming on that particular card.

Q. Okay. Assisting Detective Spinner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Moving on to Card 15, Exhibit 738.

A. That is the same. I assisted Detective Spinner in the fuming or -- yes, the fuming of that card.

Q. All right. Exhibit 739, Card 16?

A. As well, I assisted Detective Spinner on the fuming of that card.

Q. Exhibit 740, Card 17?

A. I assisted on the fuming, Detective Spinner, of that card.

Q. Exhibit 741, Card 18?

A. I assisted on the fuming with Detective Spinner on that card.

Q. And Exhibit 742, Card 19?

A. I worked on the fuming, with Detective Spinner, on that card. I also did the ninhydrin with Detective Wittenbrock on that card.

Q. But this is a fuming and Scenescope identification on this?

A. Yes, sir, it is.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. I have no further questions.
THE COURT: Cross?

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Hi.
A. Hi.
Q. You are not employed by the sheriff anymore?
A. No, sir, I'm not.
Q. How are you employed now, just in general?
A. I'm currently in the process of returning to my previous job with the Delaware State Police.
Q. Okay. And what was your previous job?
A. I was an I.D. technician for them.
Q. All right. So you went to college and studied criminal justice?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Criminal history, I think you said?
A. Criminal justice.
Q. Criminal justice, okay.
Did you, while you were in college, do any actual fingerprint work?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. And were you employed by the State of Delaware while you were in college?
A. No, sir. I was employed with them after graduation.

Q. Oh. So while you were in college, did you do work on actual cases, or did you do work in a class?

A. I did work in a class, but it was on case studies.

Q. Case studies. So it was part of classwork?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you were with the Delaware State Police for two years?

A. Yes.

Q. And were your duties to do things other than fingerprints?

A. No, sir. I specifically concentrated on fingerprints.

Q. Just did fingerprints, okay. And you came to Santa Barbara, and you worked in records for the sheriff’s department; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And records has nothing to do with chemically enhancing fingerprints or that sort of thing; is that correct?

A. No, sir, it was to get my foot into the door, hopefully to transfer back into my field.

Q. Okay. I’m not trying to be rude to you.

A. No, not at all.

Q. But in other words, the work that you were doing at Santa Barbara Sheriffs had nothing to do with what you wanted to do, which was be an I.D. tech?

A. It was a means to an end, yes.

Q. And you applied for a position as an I.D. tech in Santa Barbara?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And other than working on this case as extra help, you did not get that position; is that correct?

A. No, I have since then moved back to Delaware.

Q. But in any event, the answer to the question is, you did not get the position in Santa Barbara, other than working as extra help on Mr. Jackson's case?

A. Correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'll object as assuming that she applied for a position.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Did you apply for a position as an I.D. tech in Santa Barbara?

A. After the Michael Jackson case was over, I applied, and in the process moved to Delaware.

Q. Okay. Now, having said all of that, have you used the Scenescope before you used it here on the Michael Jackson case?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection, assumes facts not in evidence, that she used the Scenescope.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I've had some experience with it. It's not my specialty.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. What experience have you had?

A. I have worked getting general education from a previous latent examiner that I worked with in Delaware.

Q. Are you a latent print examiner yourself?

A. No, I'm not.

Q. And you mentioned somebody in Delaware?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that person have a Scenescope?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how many times did you actually use the Scenescope in a criminal case?

A. Not personally on a criminal case. I would look at it, getting general education.

Q. All right. So the first time you ever used the Scenescope in a criminal case was in the Michael Jackson case?

A. Correct.

Q. And were you making decisions as to how the various items of evidence should be processed?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were pretty much helping and doing as directed?

A. Correct.

Q. And the people directing you were?

A. Detective Spinner and Detective Wittenbrock.

Q. All right. Is there anybody else on your forensic unit, in your forensic unit, in Santa Barbara doing this?

A. We have -- are generally headed by Sergeant Julio Santana, who would give general direction, but he’s the head of our department.

Q. Okay. Was he giving general -- I guess my point is, was he working on this case?

A. He was heading the case.

Q. All right. Did he do any actual physical work on this case?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Okay. And the direct -- the directions that you received came directly from either Detective Wittenbrock or Detective Spinner; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Did you receive training on the Scenescope from the Spex company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you aware that there was a training day held on the -- with regard to this instrument for the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s personnel?

A. No, sir.

MR. SANGER: All right. No further questions.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just one question.

THE WITNESS: Sure.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Miss Shelley, were you the finder, photographer, for any fingerprint of these 19 prints that we’ve talked about or that have been presented in this case?

A. No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. No further questions.

MR. SANGER: No further questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Call Detective Jim Wittenbrock.

THE COURT: When you get to the witness stand here, please remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

JAMES WITTENBROCK

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is James Wittenbrock; 3628

W-i-t-t-e-n-b-r-o-c-k.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Good morning, Detective Wittenbrock.

A. Good morning.

Q. Who are you employed by?

A. I'm retired now.

Q. All right. And who were you previously employed by?

A. Santa Barbara Sheriff's Department.

Q. And what did you do for the sheriff's department when you worked for them?

A. 28 years total. Out of -- the last four years I was assigned as a detective in the Criminal Investigations Division, Forensics Unit.

Q. All right. Have you had any training that qualifies you for such a position?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And can you describe that for us?

A. May I refer to a list?

Q. Sure, if it would help refresh your recollection.

A. Limiting to more or less the fingerprints and that part of the forensics detail, I had 40 hours of basic crime scene investigation in 2001. 24-hour fingerprint pattern recognition class put on 3629 by the Department of Justice. Another eight hours in basic crime scene investigation. In 2002, 40 hours DOJ class on latent techniques. And again in 2000 at the DOJ, a latent print comparison class.

Q. And have you had some experience, actual hands-on experience in this area?

A. Yes, sir. Even in patrol, we frequently searched for prints and collect prints. Daily duties while I was with the forensics detail, we’d be searching, documenting, recording and looking at prints on a very regular basis.

Q. Have you had training in the use of super glue fuming techniques to enhance fingerprints?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had training in the use of ninhydrin as a chemical process to reveal fingerprints?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you had training in the use of the Scenescope in using it to attempt to view latent fingerprints?

A. I had some training when I was brought back to assist. I went to the Santa Maria lab and spent a day up there with the technicians and went through the process, information on the Scenescope. I also referred to the manual.

Q. All right. Is the Scenescope difficult to use?

A. No.

Q. Why do you say that?

A. It’s -- it’s a lens. You turn the switch on and you focus it and you search. In this case, it was searching a page, and it’s quite simple.

Q. So the Scenescope has how many parts to it?

A. It’s got the front filter and lens assembly. It has an intensifier tube that attaches to that. And in our case, we attached the digital camera above that tube.

Q. So you’ve got a camera, the Scenescope and something else. What did you call it?

A. The Scenescope is in two parts.

Q. Okay.

A. There’s -- the first part is similar to a lens with a filter. The second part’s an electronic intensifier, amplifier-type apparatus, and above that we had the digital camera attached.

Q. All right. Is it any more complicated than moving the different pieces around and focusing it to get a clear image?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Vague; compound; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you want the question read back?

THE WITNESS: Yeah, please. Please.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Okay.

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry, a little hard of hearing.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: No. It's -- the focusing would take a few seconds, a few moments, but it wasn't difficult.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Did you participate in a search for latent fingerprints on a number of magazines in the case of People v. Michael Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was your assignment?

A. My assignment was to use the Scenescope and search, in my case, several magazines for latents or developing prints on the magazines. And after that, they were processed with the ninhydrin, and then another search of all those magazines I did all myself.

Q. Had the magazines that you searched with the Scenescope been previously processed in any fashion?

A. Yes, they had.

Q. In what fashion?

A. They'd received a cyanoacrylate fuming process, which is commonly referred to as super glue fuming.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. If I may approach, Your Honor.

Q. I'll show you a few exhibits. Three, to be specific. I show you Exhibit No. 724, Card No. 1. Can you identify that for me, please?

A. Yes, I can.

Q. What is it?

A. That's an image from the Scenescope I photographed on Item 304-D.

Q. Using the Scenescope?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you tell me -- well, I'll get to that in a moment.

Showing you now Exhibit No. 727, Card 04, can you identify that for me, please?

A. Yes, it was Item 317-OO. It was a latent from using the Scenescope from page two.

Q. And did you locate that latent fingerprint?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Finally, Exhibit No. 742, Card 19, can you identify this for me, please?

A. Yes. This was Evidence Item 363-M, and this latent I photographed off of page 57.

Q. All right. Also a Scenescope photograph?

A. Yes.

Q. While I am here, I will show you page one of Exhibit No. 769. Can you identify that for me, please?

A. Yes. That, again, shows the Scenescope photo from Item 304-D, page 52, and it indicates where it was photographed on the actual page, where 3633

I circled it.

Q. And that's where you located that particular print, where the green arrow points?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Showing you Page No. 4 of Exhibit 769, can you identify that?

A. If you could turn it so I could read the tag there.

Yes, that's Item 317, page two.

Q. Is that a latent fingerprint that you located on that particular page where the green arrow points?

A. Yes, it is, and where I circled it.

Q. And showing you Page No. 19, please identify that for me.

A. Okay. That's Item 363-M, page 57, and it's circled where I photographed it with the Scenescope on that page, circled.

Q. And that shows the location with a green line where you found that particular print?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. All right. Detective, I'm going to ask the Court at this time to go to Input....

Well, if you could just give me a moment, Your Honor, to download the proper Power Point.

All right. Could we go to "Input 1," please, Your Honor?

THE BAILIFF: Hit the "PC" button.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Detective, is that Card 724 -- Exhibit 724, Card No. 1, that I just showed you?

A. I believe so. I --

Q. Okay. I'll leave them up here with you.

A. Okay.

Q. So you can refer to them, if you please.

And is that the fingerprint that you found on Item 304-D, "Barely Legal," July 2003, page 52, Quadrant 12, Latent 1?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Showing you Card No. 4, Exhibit 727, is that the fingerprint that you located on Item 317-O, Hustler, "Barely Legal," August 2003, page two, Quadrant 11, Latent 1?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Showing you Exhibit No. 742, Card 19. Is that the latent that you found on Item 363-N, "Club International," March 1998, page 57, Quadrant 15, Latent 2?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Going back to the first latent again, does this page -- does this exhibit -- this is page one of -- I believe 769 is the exhibit. Is this where you located the latent identified on Card No. 1, Exhibit 724?

A. I believe this is page 52?

Q. Yes, page 52.

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. And does this exhibit -- that is identical to page four of Exhibit 769. Does this show where you found the latent identified on Card No. 4, Exhibit 727?

A. Yes. This is page two, yes.

Q. Yeah, well, it's -- it's -- it's known as -- it's on page four of that particular notebook that I showed you out of, but it's on page two of Item 317-O; is that correct?

A. Correct.

MR. SANGER: I'm going to object to counsel testifying. It's not a question.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right.

Q. And finally, showing you page 19 of the notebook exhibit that I showed you, does this fingerprint show the location of the fingerprint that is on Card 19, Exhibit 742?

A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. That's the location on the exact page that you found that print?

A. Yes, on page 57 of that item.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. No further questions.

THE COURT: Counsel?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Detective, how are you?

A. Good morning, sir.

Q. I guess now you're Mister; is that right, retired?

A. Trying to.

Q. Trying to. Okay. Can I still call you Detective; is that okay?

A. Certainly.

Q. Having done that for some time. You were 24 years in the sheriff's department before you went into the Forensics Bureau; is that correct?

A. Approximately.

Q. And then you spent the last four years doing forensics?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And you told us about your training. Did you have any training on a Scenescope other than what you received from the I.D. tech in this case?

A. No, sir. I was retired during that time. I believe it was a four-hour demo they had.

Q. Okay. They had a demo from the manufacturers?

A. Yes.

Q. And you missed that one?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you went up to Santa Maria, if I understand this?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you met with who?

A. Detective Sutcliffe and Detective -- Tech Torres.

Q. I.D. Tech Torres, Miss Torres?

A. Yes.

Q. And they told you how to work the Scenescope?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Now, you told the District Attorney that it wasn’t particularly hard to do, I think.

A. I don’t think it is.

Q. Were you familiar with the issues regarding there should be a film camera used or a digital camera used?

A. Actually, I -- I actually called the factory and inquired into some of the different cameras. They sell it with digital cameras, and you can use a film camera.

Q. When did you call?

A. This was back when I was doing this processing, right at the very first or second day.

Q. Were you aware that they recommend that a film camera be used?

A. They sell this camera with low-resolution digital cameras. I'm not aware that they recommend the 35-millimeter or any film camera.

Q. That was my question. Are you aware that they recommend a 35-millimeter film camera?

A. No.

Q. Are you aware that the reason for using a film camera is that there is a better resolution, a better result in the actual photograph?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Assumes facts not in evidence, that they recommend a different camera.

MR. SANGER: That's in evidence.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. Do you want the question read back?

THE WITNESS: Try the question one more time, please.

THE COURT: Read it back.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: I'm not aware of that. I would not agree with that.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Do you know whether or not a digital camera is likely to wash out some of the detail in a print that would otherwise be captured on 35-millimeter film?

A. Could you qualify the digital camera a little bit? It's a very -- covers a lot of digital cameras.

Q. Okay. Well, without talking about 3639 particular digital cameras, have you heard of this being a problem in developing latent prints?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any training with regard to the interrelation between the process of super glue fuming and the use of the Scenescope?

A. I had some -- I’m sorry, I don’t quite --

Q. That’s fine. Let me ask you this: Were you aware that with the Scenescope, if you overfumed the super glue, you could lose detail?

A. You could overfume separate from using the Scenescope. You can overfume that process to where you lose detail on the print.

Q. You can over -- if you really overfume, you can pretty much just obliterate the print, blot it out; is that correct?

A. Absolutely, and it would be useless.

Q. Were you aware that with a Scenescope, you can decrease the amount of fuming and enhance the print more efficiently with less fuming?

A. I think that’s a fair statement, yes.

Q. Did you know that at the time you were doing this?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Did you have any input to Detective Spinner -- let me withdraw that. Detective Spinner is the one that did the fuming?

A. He did some of the fuming.

Q. Did you do any of the fuming?
A. No.
Q. Did you have any input into the fuming process to whoever was doing the fuming?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you explain to them that they should use -- they should decrease the amount of fuming because you were using a Scenescope?
A. Yes.
Q. And who did you tell that to?
A. That was both Detective Spinner and Michelle Shelley. Michelle Shelley.
Q. Okay. And what you want to do -- now, are you a latent print examiner?
A. I examine latent prints. I am not -- I was not trained for the comparison part, but as an examiner I do examine prints.
Q. So you don’t do comparisons?
A. Training -- I did a lot of comparisons, but I was not at the level, the top level to actually do the -- I was training in comparisons.
Q. All right. So you were a latent print trainee?
A. Comparison trainee, yes.
MR. SANGER: All right. Thank you. No further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Detective, if you overfume a print, what is the result?

A. It’s a degradation of the clarity of the print, as has been said. It fills in between the ridges.

Q. Is it visible?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you had an opportunity to look at all the prints, these 19 prints on these cards that we have presented here?

A. I’ve had the opportunity. I haven’t really looked at them in detail.

Q. Okay. But you have looked in detail with the three that you testified about?

A. Yes.

Q. Any of them overfumed?

A. No.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. No further questions.

MR. SANGER: No further questions.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Call your next witness.

MR. NICOLA: Sergeant Bob Spinner.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, at this time I would like to admit into evidence People's Exhibit 769 and People's Exhibit 724, 727 and 742.

MR. SANGER: 742 is the book?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: 769 is the book.

MR. SANGER: I'd object to 769 on two grounds. One -- well, three. One, it's cumulative; two, 352; three, at least one of the pages has not been properly identified.

THE COURT: Which page?

MR. SANGER: There was an objection sustained, and there was no testimony regarding that page.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm unfamiliar with that.

THE COURT: Other than for -- I'll withhold ruling based on that one objection. The other two objections are overruled, and the 352 specifically is overruled.

I'll ask you to consult with each other so you can -- you know you're talking about the same page, so that you're on the same page.

MR. SANGER: There you go.

THE COURT: Can we do that at the break?

THE CLERK: Are the other exhibits received?

THE COURT: The other exhibits are received.

Would you raise your right hand?

ROBERT SPINNER

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Robert Spinner; S-p-i-n-n-e-r.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. NICOLA: Just a moment while we put something in the computer.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. While I’m fiddling, why don’t you tell the jury what you do for a living.

A. At the present time, I am working as a part-time employee of the Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Department in the Forensics Unit. I retired from the sheriff’s department in July of 2000 -- or August of 2003 after a term of service of 32 years.

During that time, I spent from 1986 to my retirement date working in the Forensics Unit at the sheriff’s department.

Q. Is it true that nobody ever really retires from the sheriff’s department?

A. Obviously, that’s very true.

(Laughter.)

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: How long did you work in the Forensics Bureau with the sheriff’s department?

A. From about the middle of 1986 to my retirement date in 2003. It would be approximately 13 years, I believe.

Q. Okay. During that period of time, did you receive any training or education in the field of forensic investigation?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Why don't you walk the jury through that, please?

A. I started my training in basic fingerprints in 1987 when I attended two classes put on by the California Department of Justice, which were latent pattern techniques, and latent fingerprint techniques, or latent pattern recognition and latent fingerprint techniques.

I then attended a three- or four-day school, I don't remember the exact time, down at Cal-State Long Beach on an advanced evidence technician course.

I had previous experience in crime scene investigation from my time on patrol and did not go to the basic crime scene investigation course when I came into the unit.

I then attended the palm print identification class put on by Mr. Ron Smith.

Subsequent to that, I attended a basic fingerprint class put on by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

And back to back with that I attended an advanced fingerprint class put on by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, both went a week long, which were conducted at Rio Hondo College in Los Angeles.

Subsequent to that I attended an advanced latent fingerprint comparison class taught by Mr. Pat Wardheim. I've taken a fingerprint seminar, fingerprint development and comparison seminar, at Orange County Sheriff's.

I became a member of the Southern California Association of Fingerprint Officers in 1995, and I have attended their two-day training seminar, which is held every October, since then, except for the seminar which was held in 2001 due to the 9/11 incident.

I have attended and monitored one of Mr. Wardheim's classes that we had at the sheriff's department, kind of in and out of that one, so I didn't really list it, but it was on problem latent print identification.

I attended the three-week advanced -- the advanced latent fingerprint school held at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Virginia, in the year 2000.

And I recently attended, in January of this year, a basic forensics ridgeology class put on by Mr. David Ashbaugh.

I've also attended another seminar conducted by Mr. Ashbaugh, I believe it was 1997.

Q. Do you have any other education?

A. I have attained initially an associates of 3646 arts degree in business, I have an associates of science degree in police science, and I have a bachelor’s degree in administration.

Q. At the time that you retired, what was your position with the Forensics Bureau of the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Office?

A. When I retired I was the sergeant and supervisor in the unit.

Q. Does that unit encompass both North and South County offices?

A. Yes, it does, sir.

Q. And you were in charge of all the forensics people?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you have any professional affiliations you have not mentioned?

A. Encompassing along with the Southern California Association of Fingerprint Officers, which has the acronym SCAFO, I’m also a member of the International Association of Identification, California State Division.

Q. Over the years, how many fingerprint comparisons would you estimate that you have done?

A. I would say approximately in the vicinity of 80,000.

Q. Okay. Approximately how many came just from the Michael Jackson case?

A. I believe it was close to 21,000 comparisons.

Q. Have you ever testified in court as an expert witness regarding fingerprint identification?

A. Yes, I have, sir.

Q. On approximately how many occasions?

A. It was approximately -- approximately 10 to 15 times. I’m not really sure of the exact number, both in Santa Barbara and in Santa Maria court systems.

Q. Does that mean that you’ve only done comparisons in approximately 10 or 15 cases?

A. No, sir. We’re very rarely called to testify in fingerprint cases, and it’s -- when we do get to testify, it is a rarity.

Q. Okay. Is there a requirement by the sheriff’s office that you be certified in order to hold your position?

A. No, there is not.

Q. So you’re not a certified fingerprint examiner?

A. No, sir, I’m not.

Q. Do you know other fingerprint examiners in other jurisdictions working with other law enforcement agencies?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Is it uncommon for some of them or many of them to be noncertified?

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor.

Relevance and foundation.

THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Is it uncommon in the State of California for -- let me phrase it another way so it’s not leading.

Do you know whether law enforcement agencies, as a rule, require certified fingerprint examiners to be employed?

MR. SANGER: Objection; foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. NICOLA: Okay.

Q. Can you explain for the jury, please, what a latent fingerprint is?

A. A latent fingerprint is a fingerprint which is created when your friction ridge skin comes in contact with an object and there’s a transfer of the contaminants, sweat and sebaceous oils which are on the top surface of those friction ridges, to the object which is touched. That print may be invisible until it is mechanically or chemically enhanced or processed.

Q. And what is a known fingerprint?

A. A known fingerprint is an intentional recording of an individual’s fingerprints, not only on a marked fingerprint card, which would have ten squares across the top and four squares on the bottom. One -- the bottoms would have the flat prints and thumbs; the tops would have the complete left finger recordings and the complete right finger recordings. It's only done in ink. However, now, with the advent of better digital electronics, it's done with what we call the Livescan method, which is basically an electronic recording of the fingerprints.

Q. I'd like to approach and show you Exhibit 767. Do you recognize that exhibit?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And what is that?

A. It is the ten-print fingerprint card for Mr. Jackson which was created on 11-20-03.

Q. Is that an example of the Livescan image that you just explained to the jury?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Okay. I'd like to show you Exhibit No. 743. Do you recognize that?

A. Yes, sir. This is an expanded version of the original item, which is the fingerprint card.

Q. Okay.

MR. NICOLA: I'd like to move 743 into evidence at this time, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: Actually, I don't think I've been shown this. I understand I've seen the original, but if I could just see the --

MR. NICOLA: They're on your Power Point, I'm sorry.

MR. SANGER: Let me just see the boards, if

I could, quickly.

MR. NICOLA: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

MR. NICOLA: Once again, Your Honor, I would like to move Exhibit 743 into evidence.

MR. SANGER: I have no objection.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I have placed in front of you also Exhibit 744 and 745. Do you recognize 744, sir?

A. Yes, Item 744 is a blown up copy of the ten-print fingerprint cards for Star Arvizio.

Q. Do you have a hard time with the name “Arvizo”?

A. Arvizo, yes.

Q. Okay.

A. Short on letters.

MR. NICOLA: Can we move Exhibit 744 in evidence, Your Honor?

MR. SANGER: No objection.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: And 745, is that one of the fingerprint cards from Gavin Arvizo?

A. Yes, sir. This is the -- one of the ten-print cards for Gavin Arvizo.

MR. NICOLA: We’d like to move Item 745 into evidence at this time.

MR. SANGER: No objection.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. NICOLA: I’m going to leave these right here.

Q. Detective Spinner, Sergeant Spinner, can you explain for the jury, please, what the basic premise of the use of fingerprints for making identifications is?

A. Yes. Fingerprints are formed during the first and second trimesters prior to birth, during gestation. They are permanent. In other words, they will last from when they’re formed, prior to birth, to well after death; and three, that they are unique, that no two persons have never been found to have the same exact fingerprint formations.

Q. Okay. What sort of protocol do you use when you’re conducting a fingerprint comparison?

A. We, the sheriff’s office, conduct a fingerprint comparison. We use the accepted methodology known as ACE-V, which is an accepted method in the fingerprint community.

Q. That’s A-C-E?

A. A-C-E, dash, V. It’s an acronym. It means analyze, compare, evaluate and verify.

Q. What are the initial steps of the analysis process?

A. Okay. During the analysis process, after the ACE-V methodology, we examine -- or the latent fingerprint is examined and -- for quality, clarity, 3652 and determine what information is available within that particular latent fingerprint; can the class type be determined; how much level -- how much detail is available; how clear is it; is it smudged or smeared; can it even be used for a latent fingerprint comparison. Sometimes this can be done fairly rapidly, and sometimes it takes some time.

Q. When can it be done fairly rapidly?

A. When it is -- when they're clear and when there is -- the apparent detail is clear and very highly visible. Some latent prints are very badly smeared sometimes and it takes a while to work through them to determine whether they can even be used for a latent fingerprint comparison or not.

Q. Is there a level called Level I class characteristics?

A. Yes, sir, the Level I class characteristic would be the type of fingerprint pattern it is, be it a whorl pattern, an arch pattern, or the ridge pattern.

Q. Did you bring a small diagram with you?

A. No.

Q. You left it upstairs?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Okay. And that's just a piece of paper with the different kinds of patterns on it?

A. Yes, sir. It had what's known as -- two loop patterns. Loops are broken down into two particular styles of patterns. It used to be called the ulnar loop and the radial loop. In other words, the loop on the ulnar loops would open towards the little finger, and the radial loop would open towards the radial bone or the thumb.

Q. Is there anything about a fingerprint that can tell you whether a person is left-handed or right-handed?

A. No, sir.

Q. And anything about them that can tell you age?

A. No, sir. Well --

Q. Except for little tiny babies, right?

A. Except for little tiny babies. Or when people get aged, when they get quite old, sometimes they lose the fat pad under the print, and the ridge structure gets very worn and very hard to see.

Q. Okay. And a fingerprint will never tell you when it was left?

A. No, sir, you cannot tell when a fingerprint was left.

Q. Okay. Is there a higher level of individualization within a fingerprint that you look for as a fingerprint examiner?

A. Yes, sir. There's Level II detail and then Level III detail.

Q. Beginning with Level II detail, can you please tell the jury what it is that makes a fingerprint unique, Level II?

A. Okay. Well, basically fingerprints are unique, starting with Level I. They’re either arches, loops or whorls.

Then breaking down into Level II, we have three basic Level II types of details. We have the bifurcation, which happens when two running ridges either split and form -- or one running ridge either splits and forms two running ridges, or vice versa happens, when two running ridges come together to form one ridge.

And you have what we call an ending ridge, where a ridge stops, and the ridges on both sides of it continue on.

Then there is a dot, which a dot is one ridge unit which should be about as wide as it is long and has one pore structure in it.

Q. Is there something you look for in a fingerprint at the Level II stage that helps you on your way to determining whether you can make a match or exclude a fingerprint as being made by a particular individual?

A. Well, you look for -- in Level II detail only, after you confirm the Level I, you look for sufficient Level II details in sequence, the same spatial relationships and friction ridges in sequence to allow an identification to be effective.

Q. Okay. So you look at the detail and the 3655 sequence that it is on the ridge?

A. Yes, sir. You have to take everything into consideration.

Q. What if you were comparing two fingerprints and you come across a detail that exists in one on a ridge that doesn’t exist on the other on the same ridge?

A. If one positive Level II detail is found within a latent print and it is not reproduced in the known print, or vice versa, and it cannot be explained by distortion, then it would automatically take the fingerprint out of contention as being an identification.

Q. That would be the one-dissimilarity rule?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to the fingerprints collected in this case and the ones that you analyzed, can you please explain to the jury where you became involved in the process that we’ve heard much about so far?

A. When I was called back into the Forensics Unit for part-time assistance due to personnel staffing levels, I believe it was the last part of July in 2003, I was asked if I would assist with the evidence processing in this case.

Q. Okay. Were you involved in setting up the protocol for how the large volumes of magazines and other items of paper would be processed?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Okay. Did you have a clear understanding of what that protocol would be?

A. It was shown to me and I read through it, yes. I understood what they were -- what was being required and requested.

Q. Was it an acceptable process from your point of view?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. What was your role in the handling of the magazines and other items of evidence that were processed for fingerprints?

A. My role started when I obtained the magazine item numbers from the property room. I returned them to the Forensics Unit, where the evidence bags were then opened.

And then what I did was, I first initially took each individual magazine and photodocumented that magazine page per page. I then took the magazine and cut the magazine or separated the magazine down the spine or the middle to separate each page into its own individual page.

Then the magazine was recorrelated to maintain the page order. The magazine was then subjected to cyanoacrylate ester fuming, which is known as super glue fuming, in an effort to develop and stabilize any latent fingerprints which may or may not be on each individual page.

After this was done, the pages were then either recorrelated or immediately placed into plastic sleeves, which were then placed into binders, and then the binders became the magazine, or book, or pamphlet.

Q. So, were you the individual responsible for slicing the magazines up and subjecting them to the fumes from super glue?

A. I cut and processed the grand majority of the magazines. Michelle Shelley processed a few of them at my direction toward the end when we got very busy.

Q. Were you working under some kind of time crunch?

A. Yes. We were told we had to have this project completed by December 17th of 2003.

Q. Once the items had been subjected to the super glue fuming, did you repackage them?

A. They were -- after the super glue fuming was completed, each individual page was placed into a plastic page protector, which was then placed into a three-ring binder.

Q. Okay. And then those binders would go where; do you know?

A. The binders were either kept in the Santa Barbara lab for processing there, or they were sent to the Santa Maria lab for processing there, due to the length of time it was going to take to do the additional processing for latent fingerprints.

Q. Okay. The deadline you had was in December of 2004, correct?

A. I’m sorry, 2004. That is correct.

Q. My astute colleagues here.

The teams that were responsible for further developing or examining the magazines and their contents for latent fingerprints in the North County would have been who; do you know?

A. They would have been Detective Sutcliffe and I.D. Technician Torres.

Q. And in the South County, who did you use?

A. Detective Wittenbrock and Michelle Shelley.

Q. And what was the procedure from that point forward, if you know?

A. Once I was through assembling the magazines back into the binder, in the individual page protectors, they were either sent to Santa Maria or they were kept in-house and then processed for latent fingerprints using what’s known as a RUVIS Scenescope to look for, develop and stabilize super glue prints on the pages. The pages were then subjected to a ninhydrin process to attempt to further develop any fingerprints.

When these two processes were completed, the magazine pages were then reinserted into the plastic sleeves, placed back into the binders, and the binders were then correlated by myself, accounted for, and then booked back into the evidence room.

Q. Okay. If a latent fingerprint was identified by one of the teams, meaning Detective Sutcliffe's team or Detective Wittenbrock's team, what would they do with that image?

A. Okay. All images which they found, either using the Scenescope or the ninhydrin process, were photodocumented. Those photographs were then either placed on a CD disk in Santa Maria and sent down to Santa Barbara for evaluation, or if Detective Wittenbrock photographed the images, he would take the photo card out of the digital camera, go to the Santa Barbara computer, download images in the Santa Barbara computer system.

Q. Were those images saved by file number?

A. Yes, they were. Each individual item number, or each individual magazine, pamphlet, page, whatever, each had an individual item number. The fingerprints which were -- photographs on those were marked. And when the photographs were taken, and they were saved under a particular -- under the file number for that particular item of evidence.

Q. How many total images of latent prints did the teams of Sutcliffe -- Detective Sutcliffe and Detective Wittenbrock provide you for a comparison?

A. Approximately 706.

Q. And out of those 706 potential latent prints, how many did you find were usable to make fingerprint comparisons?

A. 178 were found to be usable for latent comparison purposes. However, some of those were latent palm prints, not fingerprints.

Q. Okay. Of the latent fingerprints -- generally, could you explain for the jury what it is that, in your opinion, makes a latent fingerprint usable for a comparison?

A. A latent fingerprint needs to have sufficient quality and clarity to locate and identify a sufficient amount of Level II detail, and it also has, in my estimation, and what I would like to see is sufficient detail to at least show basic Level I details so the pattern type can be determined.

Q. Turning your attention back to Exhibit 743, 744 and 745, did you use the fingerprints cards from the individuals listed, Michael Jackson, Gavin Arvizo and Star Arvizo, to compare against the 178 fingerprints that were recovered that you felt were usable?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Okay. And out of the 178 usable prints, did you find matches on a number of latent prints?

A. We were able to identify 19 of the 178.

Q. And you categorized those as positive identifications?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Were there a number of fingerprints that you did not come to a conclusion about?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. And approximately how many, please?

A. I believe there were seven.

Q. When you initially began your comparison process, could you describe for the jury the different steps that you took?

A. When --

Q. Let me rephrase that. That will take you somewhere else.

When you initially began comparing a latent print to some of these known prints from the three individuals we named, did you look at them with the intention of going back through the material over and over again?

A. When we first did the -- when we first went through the first ones, what we did was we went through an initial evaluation and located prints which we felt could be an identification, and we marked those.

And when we finished going through all the prints that came down on an individual CD disk for that day or the two days, then we would go back to the ones that we were interested in and re-review those fingerprints.

Q. Okay. So they would get a first look, and then a more thorough look at a later time?

A. Yes, sir, they would.

Q. You keep saying “we.”

A. Myself and Identification Technician Lisa Hemman.

Q. When you finally sat down to compare a fingerprint to -- a known fingerprint to a latent fingerprint that you were examining, how did you and Lisa Hemman coordinate that?

A. Well, initially, during the initial evaluation, we were both watching or both looking at a computer screen where the disk -- the images were being brought up one at a time. And we each had individual copies of the ten-prints -- ten-prints for the three individuals involved in this case, meaning Gavin Arvizo, Star Arvizo and Mr. Jackson.

As we went through the latent fingerprints, again, as I said before, we identified some which could be identifiable to one of the three people. We would note that, and then -- for a later evaluation.

What would happen, during the later evaluation process, I.D. Technician Hemman would take the latent fingerprint, which we felt was a usable and comparable latent to a particular inked fingerprint or known fingerprint, and make a side-by-side comparison set up on a computer screen. We would then go through that side-by-side comparison independently, looking for Level II details and marking that detail with one of us being outside of the room when the other was doing it. After we were both finished, we would then compare our results and see if there was a problem or whether the identification was valid or whether it was not valid.

Q. Is that the “V” part of the ACE-V process?

A. It would be -- yes, it would be the “V” process, the verify. What we did initially when we looked at the fingerprints on the computer screen, we were just looking for latents alone with the ten-print fingerprint cards.

Q. How is it that Senior I.D. Technician Hemman could mark on the computer where she thought points of comparison were and you would come in later and not see those marks?

A. We were using a program called Adobe Photoshop, and in that particular program you can create what they call layers. She would make two layers. One layer would be her layer, one layer would be my layer. And she would turn her layer on and put the marks down on where she thought the appropriate Level II detail was located to make an identification, or nonidentification as the case may be, for this particular fingerprint. She would then turn that layer off, turn my layer on. I would go in, I could not see her marks. I would then put my marks down. When I was finished, I would advise her of what we did -- that I was finished, rather, and we would both get together. She would turn both layers on and we would see if we were in agreement.

Q. Is that a fairly standard way of doing things these days in the field of fingerprint comparison is using the computer?

A. Yes, sir. We used to use what they call a fingerprint comparator. It’s a visual projection-type device where you would do basically the same thing, but it was more mechanical. You’d work on a plastic screen with a water-soluble pen. Here we just basically use a computer and a dedicated program, like Adobe Photoshop, to do the same thing.

Q. I’m going to approach you with an exhibit.

THE COURT: Let’s take our morning break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: All right. Counsel, go ahead.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Detective Spinner -- Detective Spinner, I’ve put a number of boards up here. Can you reach the ones closest to your right, and on that first board, can you read the exhibit number, please?

A. 735.

Q. Do you recognize the latent image in that picture?

A. There’s an item listed as being taken on 3665

Item 317-U, union, Latent No. 1.

Q. Did you make a comparison of that print in this case?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Did you come to any conclusions when you made your comparison of that fingerprint?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Can you turn to the next exhibit, please. Are you looking at Exhibit 757?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And what is depicted in that exhibit?

A. It is a charted latent fingerprint comparison between the photograph from Item 317-U, union, page ten, Quadrant 16, Latent 1, against a known fingerprint of Gavin Arvizo's right middle finger.

Q. So you were able to identify Gavin Arvizo's right middle finger on Exhibit -- a magazine labeled 317-U?

A. Yes, sir, we were.

Q. Okay. Coming to your opinion that that is his fingerprint, did you present our office with a Power Point presentation to help explain that to the jury?

A. Yes, we did.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, if I may have "Input 1," please. I'd like to show it to the jury, please.

Q. Take a look up at the screen.
THE COURT: What's the exhibit number on the presentation?
THE WITNESS: 757, Your Honor.
MR. NICOLA: Did you -- I left them with the court reporter for some strange reason, Judge. It's going to be next in order, Exhibit No. 772.
Q. I'm going to go right to -- thank you -- this image.
That was the latent fingerprint that you compared.
A. That's affirmative, sir, yes.
Q. Okay. And I want you to guide me through this. What is this?
A. That is the known inked impression from the right middle finger of Gavin Arvizo.
Q. And what does this image depict?
A. Okay. This is where -- an identification of 12 charted points of identification which we found within this particular fingerprint which we compared to the latent fingerprint.
Q. Is that what's shown on the screen?
A. Yes, sir. That -- No. 1 is an upward moving ending ridge.
Q. Okay. Did you compare an entire finger pad against an entire finger pad when you made your comparison?

A. No, sir. In this case, we had the right -- or the left side of the completely rolled finger, which included from a little bit inside the delta area, which is the area I just pointed to, to this area, up into the top and down below the delta area.

Q. Okay. Can you explain what's on this next slide, please?

A. That is where the second characteristic is located and charted, and that is also an ending ridge, and it's a downward thrusting ending ridge.

Q. And this image?

A. No. 3 is also a charted ending ridge. It would be an upward thrusting ending ridge.

Q. No. 4?

A. Four is another ending ridge, again in the same spatial relationship to the other three, and it's also an upward thrusting ending ridge.

Q. No. 5, please?

A. Five is another ending ridge, again in the same spatial and ridge count relationship with No. 4, 3, 2 and 1, and it's also a downward thrusting ending ridge.

Q. No. 6?

A. Six is also an ending ridge, downward thrusting, in the same spatial relationship as the first five.

Q. No. 7?

A. Seven is a bifurcation, which again is two ridges flowing into one. It’s an upward moving bifurcation, in other words, opens downward, and it’s in the same spatial relationship as the first six items.

Q. Okay. And eight?

A. Eight is an ending ridge. It’s an upward thrusting ridge, again in the same spatial relationship to 1 through 7.

Q. Nine?

A. Nine is a bifurcation. It’s a downward opening, upward moving bifurcation, again in the same spatial relationship with the previous items.

Q. Ten?

A. Ten is another bifurcation, opening downward, in the same spatial relationship as 1 through 9.

Q. 11?

A. 11 is an ending ridge, coming up just inside of the delta area. It’s an upward flowing ending ridge and having the same spatial relationship as the previous mentioned items.

Q. No. 12?

A. 12 is a bifurcation. It’s just above the delta area, and again with the same spatial relationship, having -- with the other items. 1 through 12 all have the same spatial and ridge count relationships.

Q. Okay. Is that essentially the procedure you went through to create Chart 757?

A. Yes, sir, it is.
MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, I'd like to move 757 into evidence.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: The next two exhibits I'd like to show you are 726 and 748. Do you recognize 726?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. And what is that, please? Explain to the jury.
A. It's a latent fingerprint that was photodocumented from Item 317-L, page 126, marked as Latent No. 1.
Q. Okay. What's the next board? 748?
A. 748, yes, sir.
Q. And is that your comparison between the image in 723 (sic) and somebody's fingerprint?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Tell the jury what that comparison is of, please.
A. This is a latent fingerprint comparison between the latent fingerprint photodocumented on Item 317-L, page 126, marked Latent No. 1, and the right index finger of Star Arvizo.
Q. Okay. Did you prepare a Power Point presentation as an example of that one as well?
A. Yes, sir, one was prepared.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. The Star Arvizo Power Point, Your Honor, is Exhibit 773. While that is loading -- there it is. Yes, it’s taking its time.

Q. This was the latent fingerprint of Star Arvizo found on Item 317-L, the magazine “Finally Legal”?

A. Correct.

Q. And is that --

A. That is the latent fingerprint from Item 726, which is the latent fingerprint we photographed on page 317-L, page 126, marked as Latent No. 1.

Q. Okay. And this is?

A. That is the right index fingerprint, as photographed, of Mr. Star Arvizo.

Q. And is it where your comparison began?

A. That’s where we started making the chart, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. I’d like you to explain whether these images are to scale relative to the normal human being and relative to each other.

A. No, these are cropped and expanded. And the scaling between the fingerprint or the known print on the left and the latent print on the right is -- the one on the right is slightly smaller.

Q. Okay. Is that the same for the previous presentation? The scaling is different between the two?

A. It could be, yes, sir.
Q. The board is right there if you want to look at it.
A. The scaling on this one would be just slightly reversed. The latent is a little larger than the known inked print.
MR. SANGER: When you say “this one” -- Your Honor, could we have a clarification as to what exhibit the witness is looking at?
THE WITNESS: The 757.
MR. SANGER: Thank you.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Could you describe what Point No. 1 is, please?
A. Point No. 1 is an upward thrusting ending ridge.
Q. Okay. You mentioned earlier something about a feature being in sequence, ridge sequence?
A. Ridges in sequence. That would be the number of ridges basically between the two details, such as we have an ending ridge at that location and an ending ridge at that location, or bifurcation. You follow this one down, the ridge line down, and then you go over one to that, and here, starting at “1” again, work your way up, and you have two ending ridges flowing in the opposite direction.
Q. Okay.
A. So --
Q. Go ahead, you were going to finish.

A. I was going to say, so you have to find the same relationships in both the known print and the latent fingerprint.

Q. Okay. Point No. 2?

A. Point No. -- Point No. 2 is a downward flowing ending ridge three ridges up and over from Point No. 1.

Q. Okay. And that’s the same on both images?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And a third area of similarity?

A. That is also an ending ridge, which is two ridges above Point No. 2.

Q. Okay. Area No. 4?

A. Four is another charted ending ridge, which is at the other end of the short ridge starting at Point No. 3.

Q. And as you’re examining these points, you’re looking for the feature, the ridge sequence and the spatial relationship between the two?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. No. 5?

A. No. 5 is a bifurcation. This ridge actually has a slight space here, but actually bifurcates into this one, and then it comes out in this direction. So 5 is the location of the bifurcation of the two ridges actually split off from each other.

Q. Okay. No. 6?

A. Six is the ending ridge created by the short ridge, which flows off the bifurcation underneath the main ridge.

Q. And No. 7?

A. Seven is another ending ridge flowing across the top from left to right, one ridge above the previous ending ridge of six.

Q. And No. 8, please?

A. Eight is another ending ridge following the furrow, or the white area, downward from 7 to 8. And then it shows up there.

Q. The lines on the latent fingerprint, the image on the right, the white areas correspond to the dark areas on the image on the left?

A. Yes, sir. That’s what happens when you develop a latent fingerprint using cyanoacrylate, or super glue. The super glue polymerizes with the latent fingerprint moistures and turns the print ridges actually white, and the furrows are actually a darker color.

Q. Okay.

A. Just reversed from your normal fingerprint.

Q. So a light area on the image on the left would be a dark area on the image on the right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. No. 9, please?

A. No. 9 is an ending ridge at this location four ridges down from No. 6.

Q. No. 10, please?

A. Ten is a bifurcation where two ridges fuse together to form one, six ridges down from No. 9. And the same spacing as this one.

Q. How about No. 11?

A. 11 is another bifurcation. It's a downward opening bifurcation on the second ridge down, just above the re-curve forming the core.

Q. And No. 12?

A. 12 is an upward thrusting ending ridge and the furrow just to the right of Item No. 11.

Q. Is it common nomenclature to call these "points of comparison," or is there some other term you refer to them refer to them to?

A. I refer to them as "identifiable characteristics." Some people refer to them as "Galton details." Some people refer to them as "unique details." They're all synonymous.

Q. With this particular fingerprint match, did you find only 12 -- what did you call them?

A. Characteristics.

Q. -- characteristics of individualization?

A. Yes. There were additional characteristics located.

Q. Approximately how many?

A. 25.

Q. There were 25 points that matched?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I'm going to end this one and start loading the other, so....
Do you have a fingerprint comparison up there where you found a match on one of Michael Jackson's prints?
A. Yes.
Q. Would you please state for the record what the latent print exhibit number is?
A. It's Item 727.
Q. And the print comparison chart corresponding to that item is?
A. 749.
MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, I request Item 748, the charts depicting the match of Star Arvizo, be admitted into evidence.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Item No. 727, where was that latent taken from?
A. This item was from Item 317-O, ocean, page two, Latent No. 1.
Q. And did you prepare a Power Point presentation for that as well?
A. Yes, sir, one was prepared.
THE COURT: Is it ready?
MR. NICOLA: It is. Thank you, Your Honor.
Q. And is that the latent fingerprint image that you used for your comparison?
A. Yes, sir, it is. And that is Mr. Jackson's known left thumbprint.

Q. And this is a side-by-side comparison?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Again, issues of scale remain the same?

A. The scaling is not totally accurate as far as the -- totally the same exact size.

Q. Okay. And what is this identifying characteristic?

A. That identifying characteristic is a ridge ending which is one ridge above the re-curve forming the core area of the fingerprint or the thumbprint.

Q. No. 2?

A. No. 2 is a bifurcation. If you follow No. 1 upward and to the left, you see where it fuses and joins into the above ridge, forming the bifurcation which opens from left to right.

Q. No. 3, please?

A. No. 3 is a ridge ending. Seven ridge counts over from No. 2 that the Ridge No. 2 actually ends on.

Q. No. 4, please?

A. Four is a bifurcation located above the bifurcation for No. 2.

Q. No. 5, please?

A. Five is a ridge ending located in the upper part of the print eight ridges above the ridge that No. 3 is located on.

Q. No. 6?

A. Six is another ridge ending located one ridge above No. 5 and forward.

Q. No. 7?

A. Seven is a bifurcation which opens to the right four ridges below No. 5.

MR. NICOLA: This is Exhibit 774, Your Honor, the Power Point.

Q. Eight?

A. No. 8 is an ending ridge which is the lower fork of the bifurcation marked at No. 7.

Q. No. 9?

A. Nine is a bifurcation which, if you count down four ridges and go slightly forward, it fuses into the ridge one ridge below.

Q. And No. 10?

A. Ten is a bifurcation. Count down one ridge and then go to the right, and you find where two ridges fuse together forming a bifurcation that opens to the left.

Q. No. 11?

A. 11 is an ending ridge which is just below the bifurcation at 10.

Q. And No. 12, please?

A. 12 is an ending ridge, which is the other end of the short ridge from 11 to 12.

Q. Okay. And on this particular positive identification, did you find more than 12?

A. We found a total of 17 total points.

Q. Okay. And are those the red dots that you put on the exhibit?

A. Yes, sir, they are.

Q. They’re very difficult to see in here. Are they on your chart?

A. Yes, they are. And I can point them out with a laser pointer, if you’d like, sir.

Q. Go ahead, please.

A. We have two ending ridges at this location. An ending ridge at this location. Bifurcation at this location. Another bifurcation at this location.

Q. Is there a reason why not to chart more than 12 individualizing characteristics?

A. When I’m building a chart, and we don’t build that many of them, I don’t like to put too many lines in to mark every point because of the probability of confusing people and have too many lines running back and forth through the chart and possibly crossing lines to get to all the points, which then makes it very difficult to follow backwards. So it was done for clarity.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. I think we’re done with our slide show, Your Honor.

Q. Exhibit 749 is the exhibit that contains the Power Point we just saw --

A. Yes, it is, sir.

Q. -- in chart format?

I move 749 into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Do you recognize Exhibit 746, Detective Spinner?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. And what is depicted in Exhibit 746?
A. It is a fingerprint chart showing the latent comparison between the latent fingerprint photographed on Item 304-D, David, page 52, marked Latent No. 1, and the left little finger of Mr. Jackson.
Q. Did you make a positive identification?
A. Yes, we did.
MR. NICOLA: Move 746 into evidence.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit No. 747, do you recognize that?
A. Yes, sir. That is a chart created showing the identification made on the fingerprint which was photographed on Item 317-L, Lincoln, page 31, marked Latent No. 1, against the left middle finger of Star Arvizo.
MR. NICOLA: Move 747 into evidence.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit No. 750?
A. Okay. No. 750 is item -- latent fingerprint photographed on Item 317-R, Robert, page 54, Latent 1-N. And "N" indicates this is a 3680 ninhydrin-developed fingerprint, not a super-glue-developed fingerprint.

MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, we’d move 750 into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Oh, I thought you did.

THE WITNESS: It’s a comparison against the left thumb of Mr. Jackson and a positive identification was made.

MR. NICOLA: Now we’d like to move it into evidence, Your Honor, 750.

Q. Exhibit 751, do you recognize that?

A. 751 is a photograph of the latent fingerprint photographed on Evidence Item 317-R, Robert, page 92, marked Latent No. 1, with the left little finger of Gavin Arvizo.

Q. Is that a positive identification?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Exhibit No. 752, please?

A. 752 is a chart of the fingerprint comparison made from the picture -- or the fingerprint photodocumented on Item 317-R, Robert, page 92, marked Latent No. 2, and it is -- it was compared and identified, the left ring finger of Gavin Arvizo.

Q. Is that a positive identification?

A. Yes, it is, sir.

Q. Exhibit 753, please?

A. 753 shows a photograph of the latent fingerprint located on Item 317-R, Robert, page -- excuse me, page 92, marked Latent No. 4. This latent fingerprint was compared against the left index finger of Gavin Arvizo and a positive fingerprint comparison was completed.

MR. NICOLA: Move 751 in evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 754?

A. Exhibit 754 shows a photograph of a latent fingerprint photographed on Item 317-S, Sam, page 62, Latent No. 1. This item was compared against the right thumb of Mr. Jackson, and a positive identification was completed.

MR. NICOLA: Move 754 into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted. It’s admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Did I move 752, Judge?

THE COURT: I don’t think so.

MR. NICOLA: Move it now, please.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 755?

A. 755 shows a photograph of a fingerprint photodocumented on Item 317-S, Sam, page 87, Latent No. 1. It was compared and identified against the left ring finger of Mr. Jackson.

Q. Is that a positive identification?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

MR. NICOLA: We’d like to move 755 into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit No. 756, please?

A. 756 shows a charted comparison using the photograph of the fingerprint photographed on Item 317-T, Tom, page three, Latent No. 1, against the left thumb of Mr. Jackson.

Q. The result of that comparison?

A. It was a positive identification.

MR. NICOLA: Move 756 into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 758?

A. 758 shows a charted comparison between a latent fingerprint photographed on Item 317-YY, or yellow-yellow, page A, marked Latent No. 1. And it was compared against the left index finger of Gavin Arvizo.

Q. And the results?

A. It was a positive identification.

MR. NICOLA: Move 758 into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 759?

A. 759 shows a charted comparison using the fingerprint photographed from Item 321-A, Adam, page three, marked Latent No. 1, against the known fingerprint of the right thumb of Mr. Jackson.

Q. And the result of that comparison?

A. It was a positive comparison.

MR. NICOLA: We'd like to move 759 into evidence.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 760?

A. 760 shows a charted comparison between a latent fingerprint photographed on Item 321-A, Adam, page 29, marked Latent No. 1, and the known fingerprint of Mr. Jackson's right thumb, and it was a positive identification.

MR. NICOLA: Move 760 into evidence.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: 761, please?

A. 761 shows a latent fingerprint photographed on Item 321-E, Edward, page one, marked Latent 1, and the known fingerprint of Mr. Jackson's left thumb, or left thumbprint.

Q. And the result of that comparison?

A. That was a positive comparison.

MR. NICOLA: I'd like to move 761 into evidence.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 762, please?

A. 762 shows -- is a charted comparison. It shows a photograph of a latent fingerprint photographed on Item 321-E, Edward, page seven, marked Latent No. 1, compared against the known right thumb of Mr. Jackson.

Q. And the result of that comparison?

A. It’s a positive comparison.

MR. NICOLA: Move 762 into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 763, please?

A. 763 is a charted comparison showing a latent fingerprint photographed on Item 321-F, Frank, page 11, marked Latent No. 1, and the right thumb of Mr. Jackson.

Q. And the result of that comparison?

A. It’s a positive comparison.

MR. NICOLA: Move 763 into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 764, please?

A. 764 shows a latent fingerprint, which was photographed on item -- correction, 363-M, Mary, page 57, marked Latent No. 2, against the right -- known right thumb of Mr. Jackson.

Q. And the result of that comparison?

A. It was a positive comparison.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. Move 764 into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. NICOLA: At this time, Your Honor, I would like to publish, via Power Point, Exhibit 746 through 764.

THE COURT: All right.

THE CLERK: Judge, he hasn’t moved 751 into evidence.

MR. NICOLA: Did I miss 751?

THE CLERK: You just didn't ask to have it received into evidence.

MR. NICOLA: If I missed 751, I would like to move it into evidence at this time.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Judge. If I may have "Input 1" again, Your Honor.

Q. If you could please compare what is on the board to the exhibit in front of you and read the exhibit number for the jury, please.

A. This exhibit number is Exhibit No. 746.

Q. Is that the positive identification you made with Michael Jackson's left little finger on page 52 of the magazine entitled "Barely Legal"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Move to the next exhibit, please. Is that Exhibit 747?

A. That's correct.

Q. Would you look at the screen, please? Does that accurately depict the positive identification of Star Arvizo's left middle finger on page 31 of the magazine entitled "Finally Legal"?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Are there additional points of comparison on that aside from the 12 that you've marked?

A. Yes, sir, there are.

Q. How many total comparison points are on that exhibit, if you know, off the top of your head? You may refer to your notes, if you wish.

THE BAILIFF: Mr. Nicola, you haven't pushed the appropriate button down there to magnify the --

THE WITNESS: 20 points of comparison.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: And the next exhibit, please?

A. 750.

Q. Does this show --

A. They're out of order.

Q. Are they out of order?

A. (Nods head up and down.)

Q. Sergeant Spinner, do you remember those exhibits I showed you earlier? Is the next one 748?

A. That's correct. 748.

Q. And that would be a comparison --

A. Between the fingerprint found on Item 317-L, Lincoln, page 26, Latent No. 1, comparing the photographed latent fingerprint against the right index finger of Mr. Star Arvizio.

Q. Arvizo?

A. Arvizo.

Q. And how many individualizing characteristics did you find in that comparison?

A. 25.

Q. Would you please proceed to Exhibit 749?

A. I have it.

Q. Does Exhibit 749 show the identification of 3687 the defendant’s left thumb on the magazine entitled Hustler “Barely Legal”?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. How many individualizing characteristics on this exhibit?

A. 17.

Q. I’d like to go to Exhibit 750 next. Is this the identification of the defendant’s left thumb -- or did I miss -- is that it?

A. 750 is a ninhydrin print.

Q. That’s a ninhydrin print, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay.

A. It’s 750.

Q. And is that the identification of Mr. Jackson’s left thumb on the magazine Hustler “Barely Legal Hard-Core”?

A. Right. 317-R, page 54 --

Q. How many --

A. -- Latent 1.

Q. How many points of comparison in this exhibit?

A. 18 total points.

Q. Exhibit 751, is this Gavin Arvizo’s left middle finger in the same magazine, Hustler “Barely Legal Hard-Core”?

A. Page 52, marked Latent 1.

Q. And how many individualizing characteristics did you find there?

A. We had 21 detailed.

Q. 21?

A. 21.

Q. 752, please. Is this Gavin Arvizo’s left middle finger found on the magazine Hustler “Barely Legal Hard-Core,” Sheriff’s Item 317-L?

A. That’s correct, Latent 2, page 92.

Q. How many individualizing characteristics did you find in that?

A. 13.

Q. 13?

A. 13.

Q. Exhibit 753, please. It appears to depict Gavin Arvizo’s left index finger, Sheriff’s Item 317-R, Hustler “Barely Legal Hard-Core.”

A. Correct. Page 92, marked Latent No. 4.

Q. And how many individualizing characteristics did you find on that print?

A. 14 total.

Q. Proceed to Exhibit 753, please -- 54, please. Is that next in order? Does that depict the defendant’s right thumb on the magazine Penthouse, Sheriff’s Item 317-S?

A. Correct, page 63, Latent No. 1.

Q. And how many individualizing characteristics are in that?

A. 16 total.
Q. 16?
A. One-six.
Q. Exhibit No. 755, please. And is that also the defendant’s finger in Item 317-S, Penthouse?
A. Yes, sir, page 87, latent -- marked Latent No. 1.
Q. And how many individualizing characteristics in that print?
A. 21.
Q. Exhibit No. 756, please?
A. I have it.
Q. Okay. Is that the defendant’s left thumb in the magazine “Visions of Fantasy”?
A. “Visions of Fantasy, Hard-Rock Affair,” page three, marked Latent No. 1, and we had again 21 points.
Q. Okay. Item 757, please. Is that Gavin Arvizo’s right middle finger in the magazine “Visions of Fantasy,” or did I not --
A. I don’t think you changed it. We need 758.
Q. That’s where we are.
A. Item 317-YY is “Al Goldstein’s 100 Best Adult Videos.” It was from page A, marked Latent No. 1. And it’s the left index finger of Gavin Arvizo. We had 18 total points.
Q. Is 757 right under that exhibit?
A. It’s right here.

Q. Okay. Let’s do 757, then.
A. Okay. 757 is from Item 317-U, union, page ten, marked Latent No. 1.
Q. That would be Gavin Arvizo’s right middle finger?
A. That’s correct, sir.
Q. And how many individualizing characteristics in Exhibit 757?
A. 20.
Q. 20. Is 759 next on that stack?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And is that the defendant’s right thumb on page three of Item 321-A, “Playboy Special Edition, Girlfriends”?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. And how many individualizing characteristics in that exhibit, please?
A. 26.
Q. 26. Proceed to Exhibit 760, please.
A. I have 760.
Q. Is that also the defendant’s right thumb in the same magazine at page 29?
A. Yes, it is, sir.
Q. And how many points of comparison in that exhibit?
A. Approximately 30.
Q. Can we go to Exhibit 761, please?
A. I have it.

Q. Exhibit 761, is that a positive identification of the defendant’s left thumb on the magazine “Girls of Barely Legal”?

A. Correct. Item 321-E, page one, Latent 1.

Q. And how many individualizing characteristics in that diagram?

A. 24.

Q. Exhibit 762, please. And is that also the defendant’s right thumb in the same magazine at page seven?

A. Page seven, marked Latent No. 1.

Q. How many individualizing characteristics in that?

A. 19, 1-9.

Q. Exhibit 763, please.

This is Mr. Jackson’s right thumb on the magazine “Finally Legal”?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how many individualizing characteristics on that exhibit?

A. 16.

Q. Is this also the exhibit that got switched into a different binder when it left your lab?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

MR. SANGER: Well, I would object and move to strike as being a leading question.

THE COURT: Sustained. Stricken.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Why does the picture say 3692

"321-D"?

A. The picture says "321-D" because when it left the Santa Barbara lab, it was evidently switched and mismarked with Item 321-F, Frank. When it got to Santa Maria, they relied on that identification when they did the photodocumentation placard, so the placard would show on the whole picture the Item No. 321-D, not F, Frank.

Q. Did you verify that you made the right comparison?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And this is a photograph from which magazine, which page?

A. This would be a photograph from a magazine which was originally 321-F, Frank, and the one that was mislabeled, and the one that Detective Sutcliffe and I depict was relied on that label when they did the photography.

Q. Is there a woman's face in that Scenescope image? Do you see the side of her face?

A. No. It must be the angle, sir.

Q. Is Exhibit 764 next?

A. That's correct. 764.

Q. Okay. And is that Mr. Jackson's right thumb on the magazine "Club International," March '98?

A. Correct. Item 363-M, Mary, page 57, Latent No. 2.

Q. And how many individualizing characteristics in that one?

A. 19.

Q. 19.

That’s the end of the exhibits, Your Honor.

Sergeant Spinner, on how many occasions did you review the fingerprint identifications that you made in this case?

A. Several.

Q. And why did you do that?

A. I usually review my work after it’s completed to make sure there’s no problem, something that was either missed, just to make sure that there’s no problems in the future. And I’ll again review them before I go to court.

Q. Okay. If there is an issue in your mind about an identification, what is your habit and custom?

A. I will correct -- if there is a problem, I’ll make every effort to correct that problem.

Q. And how would you do that?

A. Write a report describing the issue at hand and what should be done, or what action should be taken or was taken.

Q. Would you testify to a fingerprint that you had issues with?

A. No.

Q. In this case, did you have issues with a fingerprint?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you recall which one it was?

A. I believe it was off of Item No. 317-O, ocean. It was a thumbprint belonging to Mr. Jackson which was fraught with problems.

Q. Okay. Is that the thumbprint that you testified in court today matched Mr. Jackson’s thumb?

A. No, it is not.

Q. With respect to the other print, what did you do to remedy the situation that you had with it?

A. The thumbprint?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir, I wrote a report changing the classification of the print from an identification to an inconclusive identification.

Q. Did you engage in a peer review of the fingerprints that you’ve identified today in court under oath?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And how many people reviewed those findings?

A. Two additional people.

Q. Please explain to the jury what the function of a peer review is.

A. A peer review is basically an extension of the ACE-V protocol methodology for fingerprints. It’s also something recognized by a group known as SWGFST, which is a scientific working group for fingerprint work, and they have published guidelines in the past. And it’s basically a way to verify what an individual has done and to kind of like -- in a way, it would be like a blind test to see whether any problems were encountered, or whether there was a different way of doing things, or whether the identifications which were made are correct, and get any feedback from that individual, maybe a different way of doing something or different way of handling a situation.

Q. And -- you mentioned it’s sort of a blind test. How does a peer review function?

A. The latent prints and the purported matches would be sent to an individual without any marks on them whatsoever, and just questions asked, “Do you agree or disagree?”

Q. Okay. And who did you use for the peer reviews in this case?

A. Initially -- I.D. technician Hemman was off on maternity leave at the time we did this. I used Identification Technician Mike Allmeyer from the Santa Barbara Police Department for the initial.

Q. Have you known him for some time?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. What does he do with the Santa Barbara Police Department?

A. He’s an identification technician in their lab.

Q. How long were you professionally affiliated with him?

A. Since he came to work for the sheriff’s office initially, and then he went from the sheriff’s office to the police department. I was going to guess about 13, 14 years.

Q. I’m going to start going through some magazines with you, if that’s all right.

Did you process - and I’m talking “process,” photograph, slice, and direct to be bagged - all the magazines that came to you during the Michael Jackson case?

A. That’s correct, sir.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. I’m going to go through these exhibits. And hopefully we’ll do it very quickly, Your Honor.

May I inquire from the well, Your Honor? It’s quite a bit.

THE COURT: It’s a problem for people to hear. So you can try it, but if they can’t hear --

MR. NICOLA: May I try that, Your Honor?

THE COURT: You can try.

MR. NICOLA: Okay.

THE BAILIFF: Don’t get it too close to that other one.

MR. NICOLA: Do you have a paper clip or something that I could....

Q. I’m going to hand you Exhibit 542, marked 3697

Sheriff’s Item 363-M. Is that one of the magazines that you processed and had placed in plastic sleeves?
A. Yes, it is, sir.
MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, we’d move this exhibit into evidence.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 541? And I apologize, these are not going to be in order. What is that magazine?
A. It’s Item No. 360-L, and it’s a Plumpers magazine.
Q. Is that one of the magazines that you processed, cut, placed in plastics sleeves?
A. Yes.
MR. NICOLA: We’d move 541 into evidence.
THE BAILIFF: You’re going to end up getting feedback if you put that microphone too close to that one.
MR. NICOLA: He did it.
THE BAILIFF: You can use it, but not that close.
MR. NICOLA: Okay. 541’s been admitted, Judge?
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 540?
A. Yes, sir, this is Item No. 363-K, king.
Q. Is that one of the magazines you processed, super glued, placed in --

A. Sliced and diced, yes, sir.

MR. NICOLA: Move 540 into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 539, Item 6 -- Item 363-J. Did you process, super glue, fume, place in plastic sleeves that exhibit?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

MR. NICOLA: Move 539 in evidence, sir.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 538, Item 363-I. Similarly, did you process that magazine, Sergeant?

A. Yes, I did.

MR. NICOLA: Move 538 into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 537, which sheriff’s item is that?

A. That is 363-H, Henry.

Q. Did you process -- did you look at it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you process that item as well?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 536, Item 363-G, as in “golf,” did you process that item?

A. Yes, I did, sir.
MR. NICOLA: Move it into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I’m handing you Exhibit 535.
A. It’s 363-F, Frank.
Q. Did you process that item?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
MR. NICOLA: Move it into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 534, please.
A. 363-E, Edward.
Q. Did you process that item?
A. Yes, I did.
MR. NICOLA: Move it into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 532?
A. 363-C, Charles.
MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence, Your Honor.
Q. Did you process this?
A. Yes, I did.
MR. NICOLA: May we move it into evidence, Your Honor?
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: 533, did you process that 3700

item?
A. Yes, I did. 363-D, David.
MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 531?
A. It’s 363-B, boy.
Q. Did you process that item?
A. Yes, I did.
MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Next I’m handing you Exhibit 530.
A. 363-A, Adam.
Q. Did you process that item?
A. Yes, I did.
MR. NICOLA: Move it into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
MR. NICOLA: May I have just a moment to restack?
Q. Picking up with Item Exhibit No. 543.
A. Item 363-N, Nora. I processed this.
MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 544?

A. It’s Item 363-O, ocean.
Q. Did you process that one?
A. Yes, I did.
MR. NICOLA: Move it into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 545?
A. Item 363-P, Paul. I processed this.
MR. NICOLA: We’d move that into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Why don’t you pull that out for just a second. Inside the front cover there’s a little placard, isn’t there?
A. This is the photo slip I used to mark it, mark the magazine when I took the original photograph.
Q. Just hold that up for the jury.
A. I created this little slip when I took the original photographs of it so they could -- the photographs could be filed correctly, the correct item number, when they were put in the computer and retained as evidence.
Q. And that’s kept loosely in the binder?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Is that how 321-D and F got switched at some point?
A. I would --

MR. SANGER: I’m going to object. That’s a leading question.
MR. NICOLA: I’ll withdraw it.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 546?
A. This is Item No. 636-Q, queen. And I did process this item.
Q. You did the same thing I did.
A. 363, excuse me.
MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: 546 is admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 547?
A. 363-R, Robert. Yes, I processed this.
MR. NICOLA: We’d like to move that into evidence as well, Your Honor.
THE COURT: 547 is admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 548?
A. This is Item No. 363-S, Sam.
Q. Did you process that item?
A. Yes, I did.
MR. NICOLA: We’d like to move that into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: 548 is admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: 549 is next.
A. Item No. 363-T, Tom.
Q. Did you process that exhibit?
A. Yes, I did.

MR. NICOLA: We’d like to move that into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 550.

A. Item 363-U, union, processed.

Q. By you?

A. I did process it, yes.

MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 551?

A. 363-V, Victor, and I did process this item.

MR. NICOLA: We’d like to move that into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. NICOLA: If I may take a moment.

Q. I’ll show you Exhibit 580.

THE COURT: All right. We’re going to take our break, five minutes early.

(Recess taken.)

THE BAILIFF: Remain seated and come together.

(Laughter.)

THE BAILIFF: I don’t think you can top that.

THE COURT: She must already be at Easter service.

THE BAILIFF: I’m going to sit down right now.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Judge.

Q. I’ve placed in front of you a bag marked Evidence Item 716. Do you recognize that?

A. Yes. This is the magazine, Sheriff’s Evidence Item 1002, along with the original evidence bag which it was received in when I got it, and I rebooked both items under 1002 and 1002-A.

Q. Can you take the contents of 7 -- 716, the contents, each have individual exhibits numbers, please?

A. That’s correct. One is 587 and 586.

Q. And what is Exhibit 587?

A. 587 is Sheriff’s Evidence Item 1002, which I processed.

MR. NICOLA: We’ve move 587 into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: And Exhibit No. 586, that is what, Detective Spinner?

A. This is the original evidence bag this item was in when I obtained it from the property room.

MR. NICOLA: We would move that into evidence.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. NICOLA: And we would also move 716 into evidence.

THE COURT: What is that?

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Would you describe 716 one more time for the Court?

A. Item 716 is a brown evidence bag containing Sheriff's Evidence Item No. 1002 and 1002-A. The 002 item is the magazine itself, and the 002-A is the original bag that it was -- that I received it in when I got it out of the property room to process it.

THE COURT: All right. That's admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Next we have Exhibit 174, which is a bag that contains Exhibit 585 and Exhibit 584. Sergeant Spinner, do you recognize these items?

(Laughter.)

MR. NICOLA: You missed it.

THE BAILIFF: That's why you don't go in the well.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Okay. What is Exhibit 714?

A. 714 is an evidence bag in which I returned Item 1001, which is Exhibit 585, back to the property room, along with the original bag, evidence bag, that I got the evidence item from, and I checked it out of the property room, which is Evidence Item 584.

MR. NICOLA: We'd move those into evidence, Your Honor.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: They’re admitted.
MR. NICOLA: We’d also move 714 into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
MR. NICOLA: Thank you. Too much sugar at lunch.
Q. Exhibit 580, please.
THE COURT: Now you know why the rest of the attorneys stay behind counsel table.
(Laughter.)
THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.
MR. NICOLA: Yes, I do.
Q. Do you recognize --
A. This is the original evidence bag in which I got Item -- Sheriff’s Item 306 out of the property room, and I started processing. And this is the item, magazine, that was inside this evidence bag when I got it out of the property room. Both items were returned in the plastic evidence bag.
MR. NICOLA: Okay. Your Honor, we would move, excuse me, 580 into evidence, please.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Okay. Showing you Exhibits 563 and 564.
A. 563 is Sheriff’s Evidence Item 304-C, Charles.
Q. Did you process that item?
A. Yes, I did, sir. And Exhibit No. 564 is 3707

Sheriff's Evidence Item No. 304-D, David, which I also processed. Both items were returned to the sheriff's property room by myself in this bag.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. We'd move both of those exhibits into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: 563 and 564 are admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you.

Q. Take those out one at a time, please. Exhibit 567 is?

A. Sheriff's Evidence Item 309-B-2, which I processed.

MR. NICOLA: We'd like to move that into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Next is Exhibit 566?

A. 566 is Sheriff's Evidence Item No. 301-B-1, which I did process.

MR. NICOLA: We'd move that into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: 566 is admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you.

Q. Exhibit No. 554?

A. This is Sheriff's Evidence Item No. 321-A, Adam.

Q. You processed that item?

A. I processed it or it was processed at my direction.

MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence.

THE COURT: 554 is admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 555?
A. 555 is Sheriff's Evidence Item No. 321-B, boy. And it was processed in the lab at my direction.
MR. NICOLA: We'd move that into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: 321-C?
A. 321-C is Sheriff's Evidence Item No. 321, and 556 is Item No. 321-C, Charles.
Q. Processed --
A. Processed at my direction.
MR. NICOLA: Move that into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It's admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 557?
A. 557 is Sheriff's Evidence Item No. 321-D, David.
Q. Did you process that item?
A. I did or at my direction.
Q. Okay. I'd like you to take that back out for a moment, please, and find the placard that was used when you photographed it. I think it's behind the actual label on the front cover. The front cover. It's behind that label.
MR. SANGER: One of the problems is we can't see the witness if he's going to be doing something.

MR. NICOLA: How’s this?
MR. SANGER: Thank you.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: You could just put that back in the front part.
Is this an item that was processed by you or at your direction?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
MR. NICOLA: We’d move this into evidence, Your Honor. It’s 557.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit No. 321 -- excuse me, Exhibit No. 558?
A. 558 is Sheriff’s Evidence Item No. 321-E, Edward.
Q. And was that processed by you?
A. By me or at my direction.
MR. NICOLA: Okay. Move 558 into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit No. 559?
A. 559 is Sheriff’s Evidence Item No. 321-F, Frank.
Q. Did you process that?
A. Yes, I did.
MR. NICOLA: We would move 559 into evidence, Your Honor.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit No. 560, please?

A. 560 is Sheriff’s Evidence Item No. 321-G, George.

Q. Did you process that item?

A. Yes, I did, or at my direction.

MR. NICOLA: We would move 560 into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

MR. SNEDDON: The label must have come off.

THE CLERK: Judge, each item is marked inside the book that they’re looking at. They’re looking for an exhibit tag.

Mr. Nicola, that notebook, each item is marked inside the notebook.

MR. NICOLA: Are they?

Q. Sergeant Spinner, for the record, we have a black three-ring binder, with the numbers “317” and the lettering “Combined Items” on the spine. Inside are a number of individual pages with the exhibit numbers. Can you please flip to the first exhibit number, read it out?

A. Exhibit No. is 7 -- or correction. 471.

Q. Can you flip to the very last page, the last exhibit number?

A. This is Exhibit 508.

Q. Okay. Can you flip all the way through that binder, tell us whether or not you processed those items? Did you actually make this binder?

A. Yes, I compiled this compilation myself in 3711 an attempt to not have one binder just for one page. So I put all the individual pages into one binder and marked it as such with the evidence items that were in that binder. And I did that with the front.

Q. Okay. Just flip through that. Confirm it’s accurate as to what you’ve done.
Your Honor, while he’s doing that, may I move Exhibits 774, 773 and 772 into evidence? They were the three Power Points regarding the print comparisons.
THE COURT: All right. They’re admitted.
MR. NICOLA: We would also like to move Exhibit No. 529, which was testified to yesterday by Char Marie, containing Evidence Items 317 and booked into the DOJ Lab, I’d like to move that into evidence.
THE COURT: It’s admitted.
MR. SANGER: With regard to the description of that item, that’s just the bag; is that right?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. NICOLA: Yeah.
I’m going to show him these next.
Q. Are each of the items, Exhibit Nos. 471 through and including 508, items that you processed?
A. Yes, they are.
MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, we’ve move Exhibit Nos. 471 through 508 into evidence at this time.
THE COURT: They’re admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Handing you Exhibit 511.

A. Sheriff’s Evidence Item No. 317-I, Ida, and I did process this.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. We would move Exhibit 511 into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 527?

A. 527 is Sheriff's Evidence Item No. 317-EEE, or echo-echo-echo, and I did process this item.

MR. NICOLA: We'd move 527 into evidence.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Exhibit 528?

A. Sheriff's Item 5-2-8, or 528, is Sheriff's Item No. 317-FFF, or Frank-Frank-Frank.

Q. Did you process that item?

A. Yes, I did.

MR. NICOLA: We would like to move 528 into evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It's admitted.

MR. NICOLA: We admitted 529?

THE CLERK: Yes.

MR. NICOLA: Good. It's a wrap for that.

Q. I'd like to show you Exhibit No. 775; ask if you recognize what's depicted on Exhibit 775?

A. On 775, there are pictures of fingerprint basic patterns: A plain arch, tented arch, a left slant loop, a right slant loop, a plain whorl, a central pocket loop whorl, double loop whorl, an accidental whorl.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. We’d like to move this into evidence, Your Honor, and publish it for the jury.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. NICOLA: Can we have “Input 4,” Your Honor?

Q. Can you explain to the jury what’s in the first six boxes up there?

A. In the box where the laser pointer is pointing now is a pattern known as a plain arch pattern. It’s a class characteristic. And the ridges in a plain arch will flow in from one side, go through the arch pattern and out the other side. They do not re-curve or turn in any way.

Q. What’s next?

A. On the next one is what we call a tented arch pattern. In this pattern, the ridges again will come in, flow through the pattern and come out. However, there will be some ridges which will come in either from the left or the right and will go into a vertical, or a near vertical, and the ridge end at that point, causing a tent to occur and the ridges that flow over that particular ending ridge.

Q. Okay. Another example of a Class I characteristic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What's next?

A. Next is a loop, where the ridges come in, in this case they come in from the left, go up through the pattern, re-curve, and go back out to the left. There's -- and then you have ridges that start on the other side, come all the way through and go through to the left. And then you have ridges that come through the left and go under the re-curving pattern. And you have in this position, about right here, what they call a delta or a tri-radius, where the ridges flow up and over. They flow around and they come under, so it's what they call a tri-radius, but it's what they refer to also as a delta.

Q. Okay. Is there another kind of Class I characteristic up there?

A. If you go to the -- let me explain one thing. As far as the loop goes, I use the term "left slant." Prior to computers and computer matching, loop patterns were called "ulnar" or "radial" if they opened toward the thumb or the little finger, for the bones in the arm, ulnar bone, radial bone.

Now computers won't recognize bones, so the people who have built the programs, we now call them "left slant" and "right slant" so everybody's talking about the same thing, because there's no way to tell without seeing four, five patterns in a row to know which way the arches actually flow or the loops actually flow.

Okay. On top we have a plain whorl. In this case, you have a delta at this location and a delta at this location. Whorls have two deltas, and then the center ridge flow goes in a circular manner or angle, something like what I refer to as a hurricane. They just go around.

And the next one down, we have what we call a central pocket loop whorl, in which we have a delta inside the pattern area, about where my laser pointer is, and we have another delta at this particular point creating the two-delta requirement for a whorl. To have a central pocket loop whorl, you have to have a re-curve under the center core area, but that re-curve could not be cut by a line which is drawn between the left-hand delta and the right-hand delta.

On the bottom right, we have what we call a double loop whorl, in which case we have two re-curving patterns, one right here and we have one right here. Two separate patterns. We have two loops. So we call it a double loop whorl, because you have two loops within the pattern, plus the two deltas.

Q. There are two more examples on this exhibit.

A. On the bottom left, we have what we call right slant loop, again because the ridges come in from the right, flow in, re-curve, and flow out. We have the ridges coming in on the left going up over the re-curve and out the other side, and then we have our delta right at this location where the ridges come down and separate. And there would be more ridges under it if the picture was complete.

Q. Okay.

A. On the right side, we have what we call an accidental whorl, which has, in most cases, three delta areas. You have one right here, one right here, and one right here, and we have two distinct pattern types. This, if I could, it looks like it has either an upthrust or a re-curve, and we have a re-curve here. So you'd have delta, delta, delta, possibly tented arch, and then you would have a looping pattern, or you have a looping pattern and a looping pattern.

Q. Okay. Are there more kinds of Class I characteristics that are just not on this sheet of paper?

A. No, those are the basic Class I characteristics for fingerprints. There's four whorl types, two arch types, and two loop types.

MR. NICOLA: Okay. Thank you, Sergeant Spinner.

Your Honor, I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Counsel?

MR. SANGER: Thank you.
THE COURT: You don’t need to start. I can’t take any more.
(Laughter.)
A JUROR: Good.
THE COURT: Good. Let me -- just before I release you, remember, tomorrow morning we’ll --
THE JURY: (In unison) Tomorrow?
THE COURT: I mean Monday morning. Do you want to work tomorrow?
THE JURY: (In unison) No.
THE COURT: Monday morning, 11:30.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Your Honor, I’m sorry. There was just one exhibit that we wanted to admit, 769.
THE COURT: Let’s do it later. We’re past that. We’re on our way.
I want to give you another special admonition at this point. I’ve tried to remind you as we go along through the week, but it’s important.
It’s extremely important that you don’t read any newspaper accounts or watch television or listen to the radio concerning this case. We’re at a point in the case where the news media is not restricted anymore from reporting pretty much almost entirely. There’s just a few restrictions. So there’s a lot of things they could report that’s not for you to know about.

That’s frankly what it’s about. There’s things that jurors are not to know when they reach their decision. And those are the things that we discuss out of your presence, and it would be extremely unfortunate if you got that information from somewhere else. But I trust you not to do that, and that’s why the restrictions don’t exist anymore, because I do trust you not to do that. And I did mention to you to have some family member collect those items. You know, they can collect the newspaper articles, and they can record television programs, and you’ll be, you know, very interested, I’m sure, when it’s over to read all that and have that. So I hope you have somebody doing that for you, but they’re not to relate those things to you now.

Again, you can’t talk to anybody about the case, including each other. It’s extremely important that you not do that. I’ve said before that the community is watching. I don’t mean people are spying on you. That’s not the case at all. But the community is watching to see how the Court and the jurors, the attorneys, the witnesses behave in this case.

And in that regard, I want to address particularly family members, because, you know, family members feel that they have an exception to the rule. You know, “Well, you’re not supposed to discuss the case with anyone but me," you know.

And I like to joke about that and say, this is the one time that you have the opportunity to hold something over your spouse, you know, your special other, your children, and say, "No," you know, "I'm not going to talk to you about this and you're not to talk to me about this. And I know you're watching television when I'm not here, and I know you're getting this information, but that's for you to keep to yourself."

And it's been important that you draw this hard line with your family, because that's the place. It's not some stranger that's going to walk up to you and say, "Did you know what they had on T.V. the other day?" It's going to be someone close to you.

So if they do that, you know, you need to demonstrate your strength and tell them, "No, don't talk to me about this. The Judge has said we're not to talk about it, and I don't want to hear it about it, and if you keep doing it, I'm going to kick you out of the house" -- no, don't say that. But you know what I mean. Be firm with them.

And I do like to hear laughter in the courtroom. I'll see you all Monday morning.

THE JURY: (In unison) Thank you.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:15 p.m.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Good morning.

COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'll say that again. Good morning.

MR. SANGER: Good morning.

THE COURT: Let's see, the moving party here is the People.

MR. SNEDDON: Good morning, Your Honor.

What I would like to do in my presentation this morning is to proceed by setting a little bit about the legal framework for which the discussion on the 1108 motion in particular, and begin with the 1108 motion.

And I think the simplest way to begin with this discussion is the fact that in 1995, the legislature, in enacting Penal Code Section 1108, significantly changed the law in California and the practice of criminal law in California. It's clear from the legislative intent of Section 1108 that it was a recognition that crimes such as child molestation are secretive, they’re serious, children are particularly and uniquely vulnerable, and that oftentimes, and in most cases in fact, it’s the credibility of the victim that is at issue.

The Supreme Court in Falsetta that upheld Section 1108 against the constitutional attacks made it very clear that these types of crimes are committed in seclusion, without third-party witnesses, and without substantial corroborating evidence. And it’s precisely for that reason that the legislature enacted Penal Code Section 1108.

Secondly, there was a legislative finding that has been repeated over and over and over again by the courts of this state in recognizing the validity of that particular -- this particular legislative finding; that is, that the willingness to commit sexual offenses is not common to most individuals, and therefore propensity evidence is uniquely probative and necessary in determining the credibility of witnesses.

There’s a further legislative intent reflected in 1108 that has again been repeatedly confirmed by the courts of this state, and that is that Evidence Code Section 1108 evidence should be liberally admitted. Indeed, cases now recognize that it’s established principle that it is presumptive to be admissible in criminal cases.

We feel for this reason that the evidence, and the pro-offer of proof that we've indicated to the Court we intend to present would be in this case, is consistent with the legislative intent and consistent with the judicial interpretation of Section 1108 and be uniquely admissible as to corroborating the victims in this particular case.

Now, in that connection, Your Honor, the Court is in a much better position now than it would have been to hear this motion before trial started because the Court's now had an opportunity to see the testimony and the evidence of Gavin Arvizo, that of the sister and of the brother.

But more importantly, the Court has had an opportunity to hear Mr. Mesereau's opening statement and Mr. Mesereau's cross-examination of the family members in this particular case, and including Gavin Arvizo. There's no question that they have presented squarely the fact that the issue -- that the family's credibility, and Gavin Arvizo's credibility, and in fact indeed the mother's credibility, is central to the defense case, and that is precisely -- precisely the reason that 1108 was enacted.

Pursuant to their theory, I don't think it's been any secret, it's been a scorched-earth process, there's a take-no-prisoners approach to these children and to this mother who is going to testify in the next couple of weeks. And while this approach is hardly unique, it’s hardly unexpected and it’s hardly novel, the point is that these are precisely the kind of tactics that the legislature recognized where propensity evidence should be admitted in order to balance the scales in situations where an accused has exhibited propensity to commit similar types of crimes.

Now, I don’t intend to go through the offers of proof in detail, because the Court already has the information before it. But I would like to summarize what it is for the Court that we’re seeking to admit.

First, we’re asking the Court’s permission to allow us to have one prior child victim testify to three separate incidents of molestation by the defendant. The molestations are very similar in nature. They involved the genitalia of the kid -- of the child, and they involve instances where -- two instances outside the clothing of the child on a prolonged basis, and a third incident where the child -- where the hand was thrust up inside the pants of the child, onto the skin of the child.

We’re seeking to admit no less than five third-party witnesses of inappropriate molestations and touchings by the defendant as to four separate children. Again, the conduct is similar in nature. Some of it is kissing, hugging. And other parts of it involve, again, insertion of the defendant’s hand into the genitalia of the particular children involved.

I think it’s noteworthy to bring to the Court’s attention, as I will also cover in certain parts of my other presentation to the Court, all of these children are basically between the ages of 10 and 13 at the time that the offenses occurred or were observed by third parties.

Thirdly, there is -- there are some witnesses who have direct observation by third-party witnesses that involve multiple incidents involving the same child. So we not only have witnesses that are multiple, but we have multiple incidents involving observations of the third party.

We have an additional incident -- an additional witness who will testify to incidents involving the defendant with children, four other children, observing the defendant in bed with four other children, and on three of those occasions observing the child and the defendant in bed, and that the child and the defendant’s underpants were lying next to the bed.

We have a sixth incident that involves the same child that has already been observed by at least two other witnesses that are on our list to be called as being -- that observed acts of molestation by the defendant. And this witness observed the defendant licking the head of a child in the identical manner to that described by Star Arvizo, as will be described by Janet Arvizo. We think this is particularly probative in light of the defendant’s contention filed by papers in this court that this is an example of Janet Arvizo’s delusional state that she saw this, when, in fact, we have another witness who saw this very conduct occur by the defendant as to another child about the same age as Gavin Arvizo.

Lastly, we have two witnesses that will testify to the fact that the defendant encouraged children to call him “daddy,” children other than the children in this case, and that he talked about, with the mother of one of the children, how it was important that the mother think of him and the children and them as being all one big family, and they were like family together. Again, conduct and statements which have been, to this point in the trial, alleged to have been uniquely responsible to the Arvizo family, when, in fact, there’s evidence indicating that the defendant has used this approach with children and families prior to the commencement of the trial of this particular case and in other instances involving families that are not -- have not have been a party so far.

With regard to the 1108, of course, the central issue is the balancing of the probative value versus the substantial undue prejudice to the defendant. I think that it is -- it is important to keep in mind what the courts have said about undue prejudice and what the courts have said about a substantial prejudice, because these are concepts that are unique in the legal profession and they are unique to cases such as this.

And I think the first starting point for us in this regard, Your Honor, is the language that is found in cases that recognize that the unique stigma of a child sexual abuse case, the danger is one that all propensity evidence -- it is the same in all propensity evidence in such trials. It is for this reason that the evidence was previously excluded but is precisely the reason now that it's admitted into evidence.

So simply the fact that it is a child molest prior charge or uncharged offense in and of itself doesn't answer the question as to whether it's prejudicial. In fact, the language that we've quoted to the Court in our moving papers of the Branch court, the Branch case made it very clear that where the conduct of the defendant in the case before the Court and the conduct of the defendant in the charged or uncharged acts is very similar in nature, that that is found not to be what the courts would consider inflammatory or prejudicial under the concept of 1108.

And that is precisely the situation that we have here. The conduct is very similar, if not identical, in many of the instances, and therefore in the balancing of the 352 criteria, under the doctrines of those cases that have analyzed the balancing process, that has not been found one that would cause the Court concern in allowing this evidence to come before a court.

I think it’s also important, Your Honor, to recall the language in the Soto case that we cited to the Court with regard to prejudice. And if the Court would allow me, I’d like to read just a little bit from that decision at page 989:

“Prejudice, as contemplated by Section 352, is not so sweeping as to include any evidence the opponent finds inconvenient. Evidence is not prejudicial, as that term is used in Section 352 context, merely because it undermines the opponent’s position or shores up that of the proponent. The ability to do so is what makes evidence relevant. The code speaks in terms of undue prejudice. The prejudice referred to in Evidence Code 352 applies to evidence which uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against a defendant as an individual which has very little effect on the issues. In applying 352, prejudice is not synonymous with damaging.”

I think that’s important in this case, 3735 particularly in light of what I’ve just said about how the Branch case and the Falsetta case and some of the others have applied the principle that when the case is similar in nature and the conduct is similar in nature, that that doesn’t rise to be inflammatory under the balancing process.

The second balancing issue for the Court as outlined in the cases is remoteness. This particular case -- in this particular case, at the time that the charges were actually filed two years ago, the incidents involved would have been somewhere between 10 to 12 years prior to this case.

We have cited to the Court in our moving papers a number of cases involving remoteness. And of those cases, there are 11 of them that I believe -- at least 11 that have been indicated, been cited to the Court. Some, like Branch, are 30 years old. Seven of the cases involve uncharged prior offenses. Four of the cases involve charged prior offenses where there was either a trial or an admission -- a trial finding of guilt or an admission of guilt. In those cases, we have cases like Frazier, which is 15 and 16 years old. Soto case, uncharged, 20 years old. Davis case, 13 years, uncharged. Branch, 30 years, uncharged. Fitch, the case was seven years, uncharged. Waples, W-a-p-l-e-s, 20 years, uncharged.

And some of the charged ones, again, like 3736

Pierce, they were 23 years old. And Falsetta, they were 14 and 12 years old. And in Britt, the priors were 13 and 22 years old. And in a murder case, where they admitted evidence under 1101 where remoteness was at issue in a murder case, the uncharged crime was 17 years old.

So I think the Court can see that with regard to the remoteness issue, the balance on the scale is far in favor of admissibility of the charges of the uncharged cases and priors that we seek to admit. The cases make it very clear that this is not something that would cause a Court concern in allowing the admissibility of prior uncharged acts.

Now, I think where the problem arises in this area, Your Honor, is with the Harris case. And I think the Court is familiar with the Harris case. It’s been cited by both sides. And it is the only published case that we have found that actually deals with a situation where a lower court was reversed on an abuse of discretion where they allowed 1108 evidence in. There are several other cases that reversed, but most of those were for instructional error before the Court came down with guidance as to what instructions to be given to the jury with regard to these particular issues.

But Harris is the only case that I’ve been able to find and it’s the only case that’s been cited by either side where a Judge was reversed on appeal. And I think Harris illustrates the difference here between remoteness and the connection between remoteness and the confusion, which is the third factor that the Court has considered with the jury.

The problem with the Harris case was, it involved a tremendous amount of violence. As you may recall from that case, Your Honor, the victim was attacked. She was mutilated in the genitalia area. She was stabbed multiple times. The knife was left in her body at the time. There was evidence at the time that the defendant, Harris, was found, that he had blood on his private parts and in a size that, in essence, the woman had been raped as well as mutilated. And the charging offense was a 288 without any violence in it at all.

And the Court found on appeal that that case simply was one of those cases where the Court should have exercised its discretion and not allowed it in because of the fact that the conduct was so dissimilar and the conduct was inflammatory because of the nature of the violence involved.

And the other factor that the Court pointed out was how, in attempting to try to balance the inflammatory nature, the Court basically redacted the way the crime was committed in such a fashion that it was absolutely impossible for the jury to understand what really happened.

And of course that’s not -- that’s not a problem that this Court is faced with. We’re not faced with a Harris, because the crimes are not different. We’re not faced with a Harris, because we’re not dealing with violence. We’re not faced with Harris, because there’s no reason for this Court to redact anything, because of the very, very, very similar nature of the conduct involved with the defendant and Gavin Arvizo and the ones that we’re attempting to put in as uncharged prior acts.

So I say to the Court that the confusion to the jury in this case is simply not present. And for whatever -- whatever hay that the defense wants to make of it in their argument to the Court, the fact of the matter is, it is clearly distinguishable from the instant case.

Now, the last factor we want to talk about is undue consumption of time. And we’ve indicated to the Court in our moving papers what our estimate of the direct examination of the witnesses would be; that basically almost all of the cases, the direct examination would be less than an hour, and in some cases significantly less than that. That’s not accounting for the defense’s right for cross-examination.

But I will indicate to the Court to the Court, as pointed out in the Frazier case, and this is a 2001 case, 89 Cal.App.4th, at page 42, in that particular case, 182 pages of the transcript, in other words, 27 percent of the trial, in other words, the Court said in the decision, one quarter of the trial was devoted to the priors, that that was not, in their opinion, undue consumption of time.

Now, given the length of time of this trial, and given what we're seeking to admit, and the tightness of the issues that we're talking about, clearly our case is not even going to come close to consuming 25 percent of the trial time in this case.

And the second one that the Court -- if the Court wants to review another case that alsO examined the same issue of undue consumption of time is the Mullens case, M-u-l-l-e-n-s. And that's a 2004 case. It's a very recent case, 119 Cal.App.4th, 648 at 661, where the defense in that particular case made the same or similar remarks as the defense in this case; that we'll end up with a series of mini-trials over the uncharged acts.

Well, that of course, is exactly what happened in the 11 cases that we cited to you where multiple uncharged or charged offenses were admitted into evidence. And the Court, in those cases, as well as this recent case, indicated that's really not an appropriate reason in and of itself to reject 1108 evidence in light of the very, very strong legislative intent that this kind of evidence be admitted in trials of this very nature.

So I indicate to the Court that all of the balancing factors that have been traditionally looked to by courts for the issue of 1108 admissibility not only tend to favor the prosecution in this case, but I think on balance favor, in a very strong way, that this Court should admit the evidence that we seek to bring before the jury in this particular case.

Let me just say one last thing in that connection, Your Honor, and that is one of the things that the Court has looked at in factors of admissibility in this area in terms of the probative value. And I've talked a lot about the prejudicial effect. But the probative value, that there are three principles I think that can be distilled from the cases in this area.

From the Ewoldt case, E-w-o-l-d-t, which is one of the leading cases on 1101 evidence, but clearly the language is probative on this particular issue, and that is the probative value of uncharged offenses increases when the source is of independent evidence. And by the way, that very language has been cited in some of the 1108 cases, and so that's the reason I went back to the seminal case on it.

But the fact of the matter is, that's exactly what we have here is uncharged offenses which are of an independent source and independent witnesses.

In the Yavanov, Y-a-v-a-n-o-v, case, which is cited in our brief, and the language is found at page 405, another factor on the probative value is the frequency of the uncharged acts bolsters the relevance. And again, we have -- as I’ve indicated to the Court, the frequency and the number of individuals involved who observed things as well as the different number of victims that were observed.

And lastly, the Frazier case at 89 Cal.App.4th, page 30 at page 41, indicated insofar as 1108 evidence goes that the pattern as to the same type of children is significant in the balancing process.

And we submit to the Court that in this case, of course, the pattern in the similarities; that the victims are similar in age, the manner in which the victims were cultivated is similar, and the crimes are similar. And under these doctrines, I think, are all the more reason why this evidence should be admissible.

At this point, Your Honor, I’d like to just shift gears, if I might, to deal a little bit with the 1101 issue before the Court. And again, I’ll try not to go over things I’ve already covered and that have been briefed, but I want to highlight some of the things that are more relevant to the Court’s decision here this morning.

I think it's important to start again with the cases that are responsible for developing the guidelines under Section 1101 of the Evidence Code. And, you know, those two cases are -- came down at the same basic time, and that was Ewoldt and Balcom, B-a-l-c-o-m. Balcom's at 7 Cal.4th, and the language I'm citing is around 424. But they make it very clear -- that decision made it very clear that when Courts are faced with evidence admissibility under 1101, that they are usually and traditionally divided into three camps. There's the identity, the modus operandi and intent. And there are different standards for the Court with regard to reviewing the admissibility.

And we have indicated to the Court that we are seeking to admit the evidence that we put in our offer of proof under at least three, if not four, separate exceptions that are noted in 1101(b) of the Evidence Code. And the first, of course, is the intent. And by intent, we're talking about the lewd and lascivious act and the sexual gratification for which the acts were done in this case. And particularly I think if you look at the language in the Branch case at 91 Cal.App.4 at 274, you'll see in an analysis of that case how the intent or the sexual gratification is a key issue in cases of 288(a), which is the kind of offense that we have before the Court here.

Again, we indicated to the Court a second reason for the admissibility is the motive. And the motive has been recognized by the Thompson case, which we also cited to the Court, is the incentive to criminal behavior. And here it’s a propensity, proclivity for the defendant to be involved in relationships with children between the ages of 10 and 13.

And lastly -- well, in addition to opportunity, we indicated the modus operandi, and I want to point out just a couple of things on modus operandi. Modus operandi on the scale of the issues on both the Ewoldt and Balcom cases is in the middle. And when it’s intent, there needs to be less similarities. When it’s identity, there needs to be almost like a hand print. And for modus operandi, it’s sort of in the middle. But both Balcom and Ewoldt make it very clear that when you’re dealing with modus operandi, it does not have to be distinctive necessarily, nor does it have to be unusual.

Now, I would submit to the Court, on the other hand, in this particular case we have both a distinctive one and an usual one, and that is that we have a series of acts involved on male children between the ages of 10 and 13. And we have pointed out to the Court in our points and authorities a number of cases that have found, in evaluating the admissibility of 1101 evidence, critical similarities that are far less unique than the ones I’ve suggested to the Court here.

I won’t go through the whole litany, but I’ll direct the Court to page 46 of our brief between lines 20 and 28, and we indicated to the Court there are no less than, looks like, eight cases in which the courts of the state have admitted evidence under 1101 where the similarity involved things just like I have suggested to the Court. Victims: Close relatives, white, young, females, all white males between the ages of 18 and 25. I mean, how close can you get? Two 12-year-old children. So I think the Court is on very firm ground in evaluating the admissibility of evidence that we seek under 1101(b) to rely on those cases and rely on the distinctive nature of the uncharged offenses in this particular case.

Of course in the 1101 field, the balancing test, the four factors that were outlined in 1108 also apply to 1101(b), and I -- without reiterating them -- and I won’t reiterate the factors that I’ve gone through, but I see nothing in the evidence that we seek under 1101(b) that my remarks to the Court would be any different than the remarks I made under 1108. And, in fact, probably, in many cases, would follow even stronger in the area of admissibility than they would have been in the 1108 area.

I would like to point out to the Court, however, the case of Dancer, D-a-n-c-e-r, which is a case that we cited in our brief, and in particular we cited -- that's at 45 Cal.App.4th 1677. And on page 486 -- 485 of our brief, we indicated in the Dancer case they found something like 12 or 13 items of similarity in that case. And we contrasted that and compared that to our particular case where we identified for the Court at least 17 similarities, much of the same -- paralleled the same kind of information that was available in Dancer. And it's for those reasons, Your Honor, we believe that that case is very pertinent to the admissibility of the evidence presented here.

I would like to reiterate that I think there's a couple of things that need to be said here. The defense has made a big thing about the fact that the defendant -- in fact, Mr. Mesereau stood up in his opening statement and read off a list of things that the defendant, Michael Jackson, has bought the mother of the victim in this case.

And I think it's illustrative of the fact that this is not unique to the mother in this particular case, but that -- to other mothers involved with other children, that we intend to put evidence on that this was a rather standard procedure for the defendant to buy gifts and to do things for the mothers in those cases to keep them preoccupied so the defendant would have free rein with the child involved.

And again, the other part of the 1108 is to establish that the nature of the relationship with these children, that there was nothing unique about the relationship that was developed between Gavin Arvizo and the defendant in this case, that it was precisely -- precisely like the kind of relationship that he developed and had with a number of special friends over a period of a number of years that were witnessed by the witnesses that we’ve indicated to the Court, that have observed that kind of relationship between the defendant and children between the ages of 10 and 13. And by “that kind of relationship,” I want to make it clear to the Court what I’m talking about. It’s a relationship different from that, from kids who are visiting that ranch for purposes of riding the rides, going to the movies, enjoying the facilities, and then leaving, on a day basis.

These are relationships that were developed on an ongoing basis where the children came, they visited, oftentimes they visited without their parents. They visited other locations where the defendant was living at other times, and developed the kind of relationship that we have heard testimony about with Gavin Arvizo. And I think, again, that this is the kind of evidence precisely that this jury ought to hear, that this is not the first time that the defendant has approached a child in this manner and in this respect and think that it’s a unique experience for Gavin Arvizo. That, in fact, this is the way that the defendant operates. And that’s precisely why I believe that the modus operandi exception is uniquely applicable to this particular case.

I’m assuming, Your Honor, that just about, I think, wraps up what I wanted to draw the Court’s attention to. Of course, I don’t want to repeat the things we put in our brief. And I’ll reserve, of course, my remarks.

I think the Court would like to -- I’m assuming the Court would like to handle the admissibility of the evidence of the civil settlements after the Court finishes this evidence, and I’m not addressing that now.

THE COURT: That’s fine.

MR. SNEDDON: I’m open to any questions that the Court has at this point, if you have any.

THE COURT: No.

MR. SNEDDON: Thank you very much, Your Honor, for listening to me.

MR. MESEREAU: Good morning, Your Honor. Your Honor, my approach is going to be quite different from that of the prosecutor. And my approach is based upon comments made by this Court at a prior hearing on this issue.

When the issue initially surfaced in open court, this Court very courageously and honorably described a prior incident where Your Honor was the trial judge in a case brought by prosecutors against a defendant alleging child molestation. The defendant pled not guilty. The Court used all of the cases, I'm sure, that Mr. Sneddon has cited to justify the admission of 1108 evidence. The Court heard that 1108 evidence, then the Court heard the underlying case, and as I interpreted what the Court said, Your Honor, you found the underlying case so lacking in credibility and substance and so problematic that you declared a mistrial, even though you had, under the technical law cited by Mr. Sneddon repeatedly this morning, allowed in 1108 evidence.

THE COURT: Counsel, that -- actually, I granted a new trial after conviction, but the same point.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: Based on that point.

MR. MESEREAU: I have no doubt that every case and authority cited by Mr. Sneddon could have been used to justify the admission of that evidence. But the Court did not just rely on those cases. The Court did not just rely on those authorities. The Court had a concern for justice, and fairness, for which we commend the Court. And the Court was not going to allow the 1108 statute to supersede fairness, justice, the presumption of innocence and the burden of proof.

And I think the Court crystallized the issue before it this morning when you related that event. What I believe the Court was concerned with, and I'm putting it in slightly different terms, is that this Court, despite that statute, did not want to see either the burden of proof or the presumption of innocence reduced or eliminated by the introduction of that evidence. And what I believe the Court said, in different words, was the following: The weaker the case, the more problematic the 1108 evidence. The stronger the underlying case, the less a possibility of prejudice and injustice by admitting it.

And indeed, no matter what the prosecutor may cite in his arguments to the Court, the statute does allow the Court to exercise discretion under Evidence Code 352, and that discretion is significant.

That gets us to the question, what has the Court seen in this courtroom? Is the case strong on credibility and substance or is it weak on credibility and substance? If it's really powerful, the Court probably is less worried. If there are credibility problems with their case and their 3750 witnesses, the Court has great concern to worry because the potential for lessening the burden of proof on the prosecution in this case would be great.

Now, the Court is dealing with some unique situations. First of all, you have a celebrity. A celebrity who has been subjected to all kinds of innuendo, scandalous reporting and rumor, and a celebrity who has attracted all kinds of claims for money, who has developed a lifestyle at Neverland which he has advertised to the world, which he believes and contends, and many believe, is a benefit to society. The prosecution has come in to try and turn all this on its head and suggest that Neverland is some magnet for molestation and criminal behavior. Well, that’s going to be an issue for the jury. But certainly at this point the Court knows, based on the evidence alone, that Mr. Jackson has developed Neverland as a Disney-like type of world that he uses to help children from the inner city, children around the world, et cetera.

There’s a bigger problem than the uniqueness of the case, and none of the cases cited by Mr. Sneddon deal with celebrities or anyone remotely close to Mr. Jackson in terms of notoriety and attraction for greed and misuse of the legal process.

The Court has seen three witnesses who the Court -- who the prosecution suggests are victims.

And without going into a lot of the details, which I don't think the Court wants me to give a closing argument at this point, but there is no question all three of those witnesses have been riddled with problems in their testimony. All have agreed they lied repeatedly. All were caught lying on the witness stand. All were caught in notorious and repeated inconsistencies and all contradicted themselves repeatedly. Every witness was a problem.

Now, if the Court agrees there are significant credibility problems with Gavin Arvizo, Star Arvizo, and Davellin Arvizo -- and I believe the Court does, because I don't see how anyone watching the cross-examination could disagree with that. If the Court thinks there are issues to worry about, I would ask the Court to add to that concern the following: Gavin alleges two acts of alleged molestation. There is no eyewitness to either one. And there is no DNA to support it. In fact, there's no forensic evidence at all to support it. Star, along with his credibility problems, alleges -- it changes, the number. But he appears to allege two acts of molestation, separate from those of Gavin that he watched. There is no eyewitness. There is no DNA. There is no forensics to support it.

So as the Court looks at the evidence so far, what do you really have? You have what, in effect, is a very problematic case, and I submit the prosecutors know that. It’s extremely problematic. It’s filled with credibility issues. And those credibility issues I submit to the Court at this point are compounded by the evidence they’ve tried to introduce so far about conspiracy.

Now, I realize we’re talking this morning about the molestation claims, but certainly the Court, and any jury, when gauging credibility, if the Court thought the conspiracy claims were problematic, filled with credibility issues, that would most certainly and rationally spill over into other claims and vice versa.

Now, the Court at this point has heard the prosecutors talk about the mother. You’ve seen the rebuttal tape. You’ve seen the demeanor of the witnesses. You’ve seen the three witnesses get up and say, “We all were lying repeatedly.” The Court at this point has its own conclusions about what that rebuttal tape suggests and whether these answers were spontaneous or whether they were scripted and rehearsed. And I don’t think anyone looking at that tape is even going to imagine that these are all rehearsed answers. The Court knows that the family were sending cards to Mr. Jackson way before they made their glowing statements on the rebuttal tape calling him “daddy” and how he had helped Gavin with his cancer, et cetera.

The Court has seen witnesses come in who have tried to downplay what Mr. Jackson did for them and get caught in notorious lies repeatedly. The Court has seen notorious differences between what’s said on the witness stand, what’s said in police interviews, et cetera.

Now, the Court hasn’t seen the mother yet. And we wish the Court would see the mother before it makes its decision, because everything I’m arguing to the Court is going to be magnified a million times when she testifies.

What the Court has seen the prosecution do is the following: They have desperately tried to prove to this jury why their witnesses would tell repeated lies, why they would contradict themselves, why they were caught in numerous inconsistencies. They are reduced, as prosecutors, not to just proving a case beyond a reasonable doubt, but trying to prove to a jury why their witnesses lied. And they’ve gotten so desperate they’re now trying to differentiate the mother from the ex-husband, which is simply not going to work, because one of their witnesses, Louise Palanker, when she wrote her first check for $10,000, was asked by the husband to write it to Janet Arvizo. It was received by Janet, endorsed by Janet into her mother’s account. And of course, as the Court knows, the next check which Ms. Palanker wrote, because she didn’t want to pay a gift tax, wanted it to go to another individual, was written to David. It was then also endorsed by him and deposited into Janet mother’s account.

The prosecution is reduced now to trying to prove that Janet Arvizo did not always directly ask for money, and yet the overwhelming proof is going to be that she didn’t directly ask for it, she indirectly did, and received it. And that’s going to be absolutely proven beyond any doubt when the case is finally to the jury. Because we have witnesses coming in our case that nobody has seen yet.

I submit to this Court that the introduction of 1108 evidence is very problematic, given the weak nature and the contradictory nature of their case.

I submit that the introduction of 1108 evidence could easily reduce the burden of proof the prosecutors have, could easily jeopardize the presumption of innocence in this case and could render an unfair trial.

Again, I understand what the cases say and what they cite, but this Court has very honorably suggested its concern for fairness, as it was in another case, and that’s why the Court waited to see what some of their witnesses looked like. I wish we would defer it, because every time they put a witness on, it gets worse. But nevertheless, here’s where we are.

Now, what is 1108 evidence essentially? Essentially it’s character evidence. And when the debate was going on in legislature about whether or not to create an exception, tremendous concerns were raised about allowing the prosecution to simply introduce evidence of -- what appears to be evidence of bad character.

Now, they can phrase it in any terminology they want, they can say it’s evidence of modus operandi, intent, blah blah. But the reality is, they’re trying to bring in character evidence to bolster a separate charge. And any time you do that, the Court has to be concerned with the possibility of prejudice.

Now, I don’t need to recite the cases to the Court on prejudice. I know the Court’s familiar with them. But every time they define prejudice, they define it in terms of emotion. Will it have an emotional effect on the jury that is improper? Will it have an emotional effect on the jury that results in unfair prejudice to the defendant? And if, in fact, that emotional effect is there, will it also spill over into the other factors like confusion of issues, et cetera?

The evidence they’re trying to introduce is evidence of a highly inflammatory and emotional nature. There’s no question about that. But I think the Court also has to look at the substantive part of the evidence that they want to introduce, because from what we can see in the cases that we’ve looked at, every time they’ve introduced 1108 evidence in a case like this, they have had a separate alleged victim describe something similar.

Nowhere can we find they are just willy-nilly bringing in third-party witnesses to say they saw something without bringing the alleged victim in. Yet that is exactly what 99 percent of the evidence they plan to bring in is. And I submit the potential for prejudice there is overwhelming.

They probably couldn’t win a civil case if they were pursuing a civil case based on nothing but third parties. Yet they want to do it in a criminal case without any of these alleged victims coming in, with the exception of one, who is problematic, and I will explain that to the Court.

So I submit the very substance of what they’re trying to do is wrong, and it’s potentially very prejudicial to Mr. Jackson particularly given the weak nature of the case.

Now, let’s look at what they’re trying to do. They have an alleged prior victim named Brett Barnes who tells us he never was touched improperly. They want to bring in four witnesses to talk about Brett Barnes. They don’t want to bring him in. Because the moment they bring him in, they’re done. So they want to bring in allegedly four honest witnesses - I guess they're vouching for their credibility - to testify that Mr. Barnes was improperly touched.

Who are their main witnesses? Their main witnesses sued Mr. Jackson in the mid '90s, and for the first time Mr. Jackson decided, "I'm tired of settling these stupid cases, I'm actually going to defend this one." It resulted in the longest civil trial in the history of this courthouse. And the Court, I'm sure, knows a lot more about that case than I do. At numerous times during that six-month trial, the trial Judge made findings that the plaintiffs were lying, not being candid, changing their stories, even leaving the bench on a couple of occasions. And when the dust settled, the jury returned a verdict for Mr. Jackson, awarded Mr. Jackson damages, because the plaintiffs had stole from him. The Judge then awarded not only costs, but legal fees, and in the end Mr. Jackson obtained a judgment for over a million dollars against these lying plaintiffs.

They want the Court to allow these lying plaintiffs to come in now again and try and testify to improper acts, when there is no alleged victim they intend to call. That's just plain wrong. And if they suggest it wouldn't be time-consuming to litigate that issue, all the Court has to do is look at the six-month trial and its length to know that's not true, because they sold stories to tabloids, they were caught lying, and they had a big judgment against them.

Then we have Jordie Chandler, who everyone tells us, and apparently was announced on television this morning, is not going to testify. So who do they want to bring in to testify to that? First of all, Your Honor, I would note that in their motion they mention someone named Bob Jones. And in very graphic -- in a very graphic manner they told the Court that Mr. Jones had worked for Mr. Jackson for years, had traveled internationally with him, and would testify to all sorts of improprieties with children. We just were produced a police report by the prosecution where Mr. Jones flat out denies virtually everything they said in their motion. He has told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs, with counsel, that he never saw anything inappropriate happen when Mr. Jackson was in the company of any of these children.

They haven’t told that to the Court in any of their papers, to my knowledge, but they just gave us that report.

Now, what happens if you allow third-party testimony about Mr. Chandler without allowing Mr. -- forcing them, or ordering them, or requiring them to have Mr. Chandler, the alleged victim, testify? You then have people come in to say what they saw without any victim to confirm it.

And what happened back in those days? In summary, this is what happened: Chandler’s parents had been divorced in 1986. The father had given up custody of the child. When these alleged events happened, the father jumped on the bandwagon and wanted to become a multimillionaire, and he fueled litigation. And all of a sudden, you had the parents suing Mr. Jackson, you had -- the mother’s new husband then decided to sue Mr. Jackson for allegedly interfering with his business. He had an auto company, and he claimed that the publicity had interfered with his business. He wanted millions.

After the settlement, the father then filed a new lawsuit against Mr. Jackson wanting 30 million more dollars. That was litigated and he lost. You have all sorts of collateral litigation, and eventually Mr. Chandler filed papers in Superior Court seeking legal emancipation from his parents.

Where is the justice in this case of allowing parents to come in who collected lots of money because Mr. Jackson wanted to get this case behind him and pursue his music career? And indeed, all kinds of advisors were telling him to do that.

You have parents playing each other off with the child and pursuing collateral litigation, all of that will obviously have to be explored, because the potential for financial interest, financial bias in a situation like that, is enormous, the motives for financial gain were enormous, and indeed, there never any criminal prosecution despite Mr. Sneddon’s noble efforts to try and do one.

So there’s no alleged victim with Brett Barnes. There’s no alleged victim with Jordie Chandler. Then we come to Macaulay Culkin, who has repeatedly made statements that he’s a friend of Mr. Jackson and has never been molested. But they want to bring in evidence that he was molested. And they want to bring in witnesses who also were part of the gang that sued Mr. Jackson, and lost, with findings that they had lied and with enormous damages awarded against them.

Now, the fourth alleged victim is Jason Francia. Jason Francia and his mother were interviewed by the sheriffs and a deposition of the mother was taken. Money was paid to settle that case, again because Mr. Jackson didn’t want the press, didn’t want his family going through it, and wanted to pursue his music career. There never was a criminal prosecution, even though the alleged victim was interviewed by the Los Angeles District Attorney and the Santa Barbara District Attorney together. And after their interview with Jason Francia - which was so wishy-washy about what happened, they never decided to pursue a criminal case, because there wasn’t one. We have that taped interview - the mother, in a civil deposition in the Chandler litigation, began by saying she saw something and ended by saying she saw nothing. And indeed, stories were sold to tabloids, and money was paid to settle. He appears to be the only alleged victim they want to bring in.

Five, Wade Robeson, who tells us nothing ever happened to him. And they don't propose to bring him in as an alleged victim. They want to bring in the gang that basically has tried to accuse Mr. Jackson and get money from him for years, generally unsuccessfully, with the exception of Miss -- Mr. Francia's mother, and I've just talked about the problems in her sworn statement in discovery. The deposition is clear, she begins by saying, "I think I saw something." She ends by saying, "I didn't see anything."

Six, Jimmy Safechuck, who we are informed says nothing happened. They don't propose to call him as an alleged victim either, but they've got the same old gang again coming in to try and capitalize on the case, people who have been adjudged to be liars, and they are. People who asked for money from tabloids, who've asked for money from Mr. Jackson, et cetera.

Seven, Jonathan Spence, who we are informed says nothing happened and doesn't intend to come in to support them at all. What do they want to do?

Bring in the same crew again. Third-party witnesses with an axe to grind, all of whom have wanted money in the past, none of whom can substantiate that anything happened because the alleged victim says nothing happened.

The bulk of their 1108 evidence, Your Honor, are third parties with axes to grind, and who have tried to get money, and gotten money, and had the problems I just identified. Where is the fairness in allowing that kind of testimony, that kind of evidence, when their underlying case looks so weak and so problematic?

I submit that the Court's concern for fairness has to be squarely addressed in this situation.

If the Court saw witnesses who the Court felt had complete integrity, had never lied, never told inconsistencies, never contradicted themselves, never contradicted each other, if there were forensics to support any of them, or eyewitnesses to support any of them, the Court might say to himself, you know, "I'm really not giving Mr. Jackson an unfair trial if I let some of this in." But it's just the opposite.

And I submit the weakness and the problems in their case have made the Court's decision much more difficult.

There is an issue, Your Honor, that Mr. 3763

Sneddon has raised by proposing to call third-party witnesses without the alleged victims. And that has to do with what is an offense. Because the statute, 1108, talks in terms of an offense. And every definition we can find of an offense talks in terms of a crime.

And I submit to the Court that if you look at what the legal definition of an offense is, or you look at what the legal definition of proving a crime is, how can you just allow a parade of third-party characters to come in without any alleged victim? How can you do that? Because even though they didn’t charge it as a crime, they still have to prove an offense. And I submit this Court, in the interests of fairness, given the problems with their case, I think has a duty to say to itself, “Can they really prove some type of offense, or some type of uncharged crime, based on what they’ve told us?” And the Court knows they can’t. They can’t do it.

According to the statute, and I’m talking about 1108, sexual offense means a crime under the law of the state or of the United States. How do you prove a crime in these cases without any alleged victim? And maybe that explains why there never was a criminal prosecution in those cases, because the alleged victim say it didn’t happen.

I submit, Your Honor, that Evidence Code 352 3764 is extremely broad. Just because Mr. Sneddon parades a lot of cases where the introduction of 1108 evidence has been upheld, doesn’t mean there haven’t been many instances where trial judges didn’t use their discretion and either eliminate or whittle down what the prosecution would allow, because 352 is very, very clear. The Court must be concerned with all the issues raised in 352.

And I would like to just briefly talk about the People v. Falsetta case, where the California Supreme Court upheld Evidence Code 1108. Here are the issues the Court said the trial judge must consider: Possible remoteness. Now, if you listen to Mr. Sneddon, the words “possible remoteness” mean nothing. They don’t require any common sense approach. They don’t require any common sense consideration. If you listen to Mr. Sneddon, he cites appellate cases which basically say possible remoteness just doesn’t have any meaning, and that’s not what the California Supreme Court said. The fact is, the issue of possible remoteness is in the discretion of you, Your Honor. And they can’t eliminate it by citing what other Appellate Court decisions have done.

Now, they’re trying to bring in evidence of many, many years ago, ‘92, ‘93. This is the year 2005. The statute is clear and the Supreme Court’s language is clear. If the Court thinks that these alleged acts are too remote in time to really create real evidence of a pattern, and particularly if the Court says, “I think their case has enough problems, to bring in evidence of a remote nature is going to tip the scales away from their burden of proof, away from the presumption of innocence,” I think the Court has every right and every duty to consider if these acts appear to be remote. And acts from the early ‘90s, uncharged, unproven, where everyone had their hand out for a buck, and where alleged victims aren’t even willing to come forward and say anything happened, in fact, they’re saying the opposite, I think all of that put together gives the Court a good basis to use its discretion in deciding whether or not these alleged acts are too remote in time.

In People v. Falsetta, our Supreme Court then talked about the degree of certainty of its commission. How can they possibly stand before this Court and say, “We can establish a degree of certainty of the commission of these alleged offenses,” when no alleged victim is even willing to come forward and say it happened? How do you possibly convince this Court that their claims are certain when there is no victim to say they’re certain? I submit this Court must consider not only the possible remoteness in time, but the degree of certainty of its commission, particularly when they have no alleged victims to come forward.

Then there's the issue of the likelihood of confusing, misleading or distracting the jurors from their main inquiry. Obviously the evidence they want to bring in has nothing directly to do with the Arvizo family, who, yes, Mr. Sneddon is correct, by the time the trial ends, their reputations and their fraudulent acts will be all over the courtroom. The best is yet to come, because the mother hasn't testified to her perjury in depositions, and her perjury on welfare applications, and her defrauding disability, and her defrauding welfare and not telling either one what they're doing, where she put the money, what she said to newspapers, what she said to certain celebrities, et cetera. The best is yet to come.

But nevertheless, why allow them to bring in disgruntled employees who lost their lawsuit and actually were found by a jury to have stolen from Mr. Jackson and found by a Judge that they must pay over a million in legal fees and costs? Why allow them to come in when there is no alleged victim to support anything they say? That would be highly prejudicial and highly improper, Your Honor. And to say it would prolong this trial is an understatement. Because every time one of these people comes in, we not only cross-examine them, we have to bring in our own witnesses to contradict what they say. And let's look at the numbers.

One, Brett Barnes, who they say is not coming in. They want to bring in four witnesses. Two, Jordie Chandler, they want to bring in five witnesses. Three, Macaulay Culkin, they want to bring in four witnesses. Four, Jason Francia, they want to bring in himself and his mother. Five, Wade Robeson, they want to bring in five witnesses. Six, Jimmy Safechuck, they want to bring in one, two, three, four, five, six, seven -- eight witnesses. Seven, Jonathan Spence, they want to bring in three witnesses.

How can they possibly suggest this is not going to prolong this trial interminably, because as the Court knows, under the law, the defense has a right to defend these allegations like it would any other case. And there’s no reason to think these alleged offenses would not be defended as vigorously as the case before the Court is being defended, because you can’t deny a criminally accused in a situation like this the right for a full-blown opposition and a full-blown defense to these types of allegations. So how Mr. Sneddon can look at the Court and say, “Oh, it will just take maybe 25 percent of our time,” is absurd. It’s going to prolong this trial interminably because we have to defend our client’s reputation and life in this very serious situation.

I’ve talked about prejudice, and prejudice again is always defined in terms of emotion. And with a problematic case like this, the problem with the emotional effect of 1108 evidence is vastly increased. So I think the Court, again, has to come back to where we started. We start with the Court's concern for fairness and justice, particularly with respect to what their case looks like, and I submit it looks real bad and it's going to get worse.

The Supreme Court, in People v. Falsetta, Your Honor talked about the Court considering less prejudicial alternatives to its outright admission. Well, how to fashion a less prejudicial alternative obviously sounds problematic, because again, you can't hamstring the defense and not let them put on a full-blown defense to any allegation, no matter how flimsy it may seem to be. And when I say, "put on a defense," I do mean exactly that. Anything which impeaches the credibility is open season. If their character or reputation for trustworthiness, as it is in this courthouse, given the trial judge's rulings in that civil case is certainly fair game. Their financial motive is certainly fair game. Who they sold their stories to is fair game. You're talking about a full-blown trial where prior statements, prior testimony, prior transcripts are all open season for the defense to defend and protect itself.

I think the Court should never allow them to bring in any of this evidence if they don’t have an alleged victim to support it. And they just don’t. They want to bring in people to say, “I saw something. I heard something.” That simply is not acceptable. The potential prejudicial impact of that is far outweighed, far outweighs the benefits to our justice system, or any benefits the Court might think they’re entitled to under the law, particularly in a weak case.

The Court talks about excluding irrelevant though inflammatory details surrounding the offense. Well, they’ve already -- Mr. Sneddon’s argument has already suggested an avalanche of time-consuming litigation in this courtroom, because what he’s saying is that if Mr. Jackson spends money on someone like a mother - and indeed, Mr. Chandler’s mother flew to Europe with him, stayed in luxury hotels, Monte Carlo, France; big events; buying jewelry at Cartier, clothes, gifts - yes, indeed, Mr. Jackson has done that to certain families. He also has spent millions on children with AIDS. He has gone to hospitals all over the world and contributed money to sick children. He even has a habit of doing that before a concert. He will go to hospitals and meet injured and sick children. Yes, he spends lots of money on people.

But they want to suggest that because he spends money on somebody, that he somehow is doing this with a malevolent criminal, molester's type of purpose. And we can drown them with examples of where Mr. Jackson has been so benevolent, so generous, so charitable, so giving for good causes, that it will make their theory look silly.

The Court is already faced with a long trial, Your Honor. You really are. We're talking about probably months more of testimony. They haven't essentially, I think, from what I've heard, really gotten to the crux of their conspiracy allegations. They've alluded to it by having the Arvizo children testify that they were falsely imprisoned three times at Neverland and went back every time and then just went home. They've alluded to it by having the Arvizo children testify to what they knew about a proposed Brazil trip. And of course when nobody wanted to go, they went home. And they've already alluded to the Arvizo children being falsely imprisoned while they went to shopping centers, while they were at their home where Miss Arvizo's boyfriend was in the United States Army, while they had access to phones, while they went into federal agencies, while they went into a Brazilian consulate, and nobody ever says, "We have a problem," or calls the police, or does anything. Unless -- and I don't think --

MR. SNEDDON: Excuse me, Counsel. I'm going to object, Your Honor. This is way off the issues that are before the Court in this particular hearing. Counsel is just making his final argument in front of the Court or the media.

THE COURT: All right. We'll take our morning break.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: The objection was sustained. Go ahead.

MR. MESEREAU: I didn't hear you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The objection was sustained. Go ahead.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I just have a few more points to make, and I will sit down.

On the issue of undue consumption of time, I'd like to give the Court an example of what I'm talking about.

One of the plaintiffs in that civil case against Mr. Jackson where the plaintiffs lost and were awarded -- Mr. Jackson was awarded over a million dollars in legal fees and costs. But someone named Adrienne McManus, her deposition, I am informed, was taken eight times in that case.

That's just one witness. And apparently in her trial transcripts, which we have, she is changing her testimony so often that she gets back and forth, the testimony is prolonged, and the point I'm making is that’s just one witness. Eight depositions plus six months of trial testimony.

In the Jordie Chandler civil case, you had approximately five months of litigation before the case settled. You had numerous depositions and numerous pleadings in civil discovery that would be relevant and usable.

Now, I want to emphasize something we said in our papers. The testimony that the prosecutor wants to introduce concerns seven alleged victims with only one scheduled to testify. This testimony has been presented to two criminal grand juries in Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, neither of which ever returned an Indictment, and it’s been rejected by one civil jury in the longest civil trial in the history of this courthouse.

Now, I know the prosecutor likes to say, “Well, those grand juries were purely investigative only.” But obviously the purpose, from Mr. Sneddon’s point of view, to the degree he controlled anything, was to see if they could bring criminal charges. And neither grand jury brought a criminal charge. And many of the witnesses who -- not “many,” some of the witnesses who sued Mr. Jackson in the civil case also testified in these grand juries where no criminal charges were ever brought.

Now, there is evidence -- excuse me, there is case law to the effect that if one is acquitted of a prior sexual offense, the evidence of the acquittal is admissible. I haven’t seen anything about whether or not you can bring in the fact that a grand jury refused to indict, but certainly the fact that they went to two grand juries, there was no Indictment, they went to a civil jury, they lost, and the fact that they don’t have alleged victims with the exception of one, plus you’re talking about lengthy civil litigation, numerous depositions, numerous pleadings, numerous witnesses, plus the fact that the defendant has a right to defense as if it were a separately charged crime, and that means every type of defense imaginable, including rebutting the character nature of the evidence, which would mean opinion evidence, reputation evidence, and maybe specific instances of conduct, will unduly prolong the trial.

Finally, Your Honor, I will get back to where I started. Evidence Code Section 352 is sacrosanct in this courtroom. It is a fundamental component of the statute of 1108. It gives this Court enormous discretion to eliminate potential for prejudice, for bias, for a prolongation of the trial that would be unproductive and not in the public interest. It allows this Court enormous discretion to make sure issues aren’t confused. It enables this Court enormous discretion to make sure that the burden of proof is not fundamentally changed, that the presumption of innocence remains intact, and that Mr. Jackson has a fair trial.

For the reasons I've articulated, we're asking that the prosecution's motion be denied in its entirety.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Counsel? Rebuttal?

MR. SNEDDON: Your Honor, I think that what we've heard here this morning is something akin to a pattern that we've seen in this case, and that is reckless, exaggerated and misleading statements on the part of counsel with regard to what he believes the evidence and the testimony has produced so far in this case, and similar to ones he's made in opening statement, and I say this for this reason. I'm not going to get into a contest of saying what we believe the evidence has shown or what the credibility of the witnesses are to this Court, because this Court's been here and you've seen it for yourself. But I am going to point out that since Mr. Mesereau stood up in his opening statement and made certain assertions to the jury in this case, we've blown massive holes in his theory of this case; the witnesses that he said was -- Janet was going to do that and Janet was going to do that.

The fact of the matter is they're now shifting gears from the original hypothesis to say, well, "She wasn't directly involved," like I said in my opening statement, but now she’s indirectly involved. Because we’ve proved otherwise.

Similarly with the fingerprint evidence, you know, the fingerprints were on there because the kids touched it at the grand jury. Now we have the evidence from the people to show that those fingerprints were on magazines that weren’t even in the grand jury, so they couldn’t have been put on in the grand jury. Those magazines were at the Department of Justice being examined for trace evidence at the very time that the defense alleged somebody put their fingerprints on them.

It’s this kind of stuff that bothers me about Mr. Mesereau’s statements to the Court. But rather than get in a point-by-point recitation, I’m going to rely, as I have before, and we will to the end of this case, that the Court can make up its own mind about what the Court feels that the evidence has produced in this case.

I will only say this, and this will be the only thing I will say: Gavin Arvizo sat on that witness stand for almost three days. The first day he was on there for almost 40 minutes, and Mr. Mesereau was as abusive, was as mean-spirited, and was as obnoxious, frankly, as you could be to a child witness in a case. He spent the next two and a half days with binder after binder after binder coming up here and asking things. That kid didn’t have a piece of paper in front of him. Not a single piece of paper. And I think it was a remarkable job that that child did. He was never once tripped up about the fundamental fact that the defendant in this case molested him.

We produced evidence that have blown holes in the defendant’s case, from Palanker to Coleman, and we’ll have some this afternoon when the Lopezes testify; that the defense has consistently exaggerated, and misled the jury in this case, and the Court.

With regard to the second part about the civil case, I think, again, this is a case where many of the things Mr. Mesereau said are completely misleading. The first thing to understand is that the issue in that case had nothing -- nothing, zero, zilch, nada, nothing to do with child molestation charges. That evidence was specifically excluded by the Court. The depositions that make reference to that information contain pages of probably less than 100 pages in that deposition devoted to that part of it. The deposition mostly, and the trial, was entirely devoted to issues of harassment, intimidation, of illegal surveillance and monitoring of conversations. It had nothing to do with the facts of this case, as we’re attempting to put before the jury the uncharged offenses. Nothing. It lasted six months because the defendant in that case persistently did not show up for long periods of time. And unlike this Court, which took a very firm rein on the defendant’s inability to show up on time, that Court did not. And that’s why that case lasted six months.

I think it’s also important for this Court to know that the information that we’re putting before this Court from the witnesses that are going to testify is information that was produced before that case was filed. And in fact, part of the intimidation and the harassment allegations involved in that lawsuit were the product of what happened when these people cooperated with the Santa Barbara District Attorney’s Office and the Santa Barbara Grand Jury. But the fact of the matter is that the statements that were made, were made prior to the time of the lawsuit, and were made at or about the time of the investigation, and to law enforcement officers.

I think once and for all, I would like to -- because I was the one involved in it, to put to rest the thing that Mr. Mesereau keeps saying over and over and over again, as if he says it enough times that somehow it’s going to become the truth. It isn’t the truth. It isn’t factually correct. And it’s simply false.

The grand juries -- there weren’t two separate grand juries. They were a grand jury impaneled to hear some witnesses, for the convenience of those witnesses, in Los Angeles, and there were some witnesses that were heard in Santa Barbara County. None of those witnesses, nor were there any indications to either one of those grand juries that an Indictment was being sought. And never was there any request for an Indictment, or any charges, or any information in any smallest scintilla of a way presented to those grand juries. The fact of the matter is, the grand juries never considered it simply because at that point in time, Jordan Chandler decided that he was not going to cooperate any further with the law enforcement agencies. And at that point, the grand jury, with regard to most of those witnesses, was completely shut down. Which brings me to another one of counsel’s points, that somehow we can’t prove a case because we don’t have a victim. Well, then I guess we would never be able to prove a murder case then, would we? Because we sure as heck can’t put the victim on the stand. And yet on the one hand, the defense attorney tells me that one of the reasons we have a real problem here is because we have Gavin Arvizo on the stand and we have no corroboration and we have no eyewitnesses. Yet when we have an eyewitness, it’s no good anymore and we can’t call them. Well, you can’t have it both ways. You simply can’t have it both ways. And you simply can’t ignore the fact that the very things that the defense attorney’s talking about in this case, there’s no DNA and there’s no eyewitnesses, are the very reasons that the legislature says specifically that 1108 evidence is admissible.

And what would you expect, nine months later? Of course, they never bother to say that. Oh, there’s no DNA. Nine months later? There’s no underpants found nine months later? The very underpants that the child left there because the defendant asked him to leave them there. Would you reasonably believe that nine months later that that stuff would be there? That they didn’t wash the sheets for nine months on that bed? That’s preposterous, and yet this is a reason why this evidence shouldn’t come in.

Somehow we’re to be penalized because victims don’t want to show up. They don’t want to go through what Gavin Arvizo went through. It takes a lot of courage to do what that young lad did. And I don’t think -- as Urquiza said in his testimony, most children don’t ever, in their entire life, disclose. And it’s not a far stretch to believe that the reason they don’t disclose is for the very reasons that we’ve seen in this courtroom; that no family and no child wants to go through what you have to go through to be vindicated when you’re molested by an adult, by somebody you trust and somebody you loved at one point in time, as somebody you cared for. They put it behind themselves and they move on with their lives. Their lives aren’t always the same, but that’s what they do.

With regard to Mr. Jones, counsel is correct, Mr. Jones has now recanted what he said. However, Mr. Jones is in the unenviable position of the fact that we have two witnesses to whom he made the statement, and more importantly than that, we have his own writings where he describes the incident in detail. So it’s true, I don’t know what he’s going to say when he takes the witness stand, but the fact of the matter is, he’s pinned down pretty strongly to what he saw, who the circumstances were, and who the children and the family involved were.

I guess I want to just end by saying one other thing. I’m just not going to get involved in debating the issue of where we are in this case. I think as far as we’re concerned, we’re very pleased with where we are in this case, and pleased with the way the victims have held up and the family’s held up.

And I know Mr. Mesereau has made a lot of allegations about what’s going to come with Janet Arvizo when she takes the stand, but I hope he does a better job than he has with the assertions he made in his opening statement with regard to certain witnesses who claim she’s running around with her hand out all the time, because not one single witness in this case has said that yet.

But the fact of the matter is -- if you notice, Mr. Mesereau talked a lot about facts. But we’re lawyers. And the fact of the matter is, when a Court in your position is asked to make decisions of law, decisions of admissibility, decisions on the application of laws of the State of California as enacted by the legislature, the fact of the matter is, that the primary thing for this Court to look at is what other courts have done, and even more important than that, what have the higher courts in this state done in cases of a similar or like nature?

And the reason that I think that the defense position not only in their written briefs to this Court, but in Mr. Mesereau’s recitation to you is empty, totally empty of any evaluation or analysis of the cases that we have cited to you probably 50 cases, in our brief, is the fact that none of them support them, as a legal matter. None of them. And I have not heard one word in this an attempt to distinguish as a legal matter any of those cases that we cited to this Court.

Why aren’t any of those cases on remoteness applicable here? Why aren’t the issues on undue consumption, why is the law on inflammatory, on prejudicial, why the cases we cited don't apply here?

And I say to the Court that in the decision-making position that you're in, this is more than simply a factual analysis, it's the applying of the facts that the Court knows them to the legal principles that have been enunciated by the state and the judiciary of the State of California, that's the position that this Court is in. And unfortunately for the defense, they're in the position that they can't find a single case that supports their position, and that is the bottom line on everything that's gone on here this morning.

THE COURT: The arguments presented by both sides here were very good arguments, and they're arguments bringing up the law and the factors that I've been working with trying to reach a decision in this matter, which is of such great importance in this case for both sides.

The arguments didn't really bring up new material, but they definitely emphasized the concerns that I've had. You know, the weighing of the case as I've heard it, the remoteness of the alleged charges that would come under 1108.

But ultimately the decision I've reached, and which I'll now announce, is that I am going to permit the testimony with regard to the sexual offenses, and the alleged pattern of grooming activities, which is 1101 material, leading up to the sexual offenses against Jason Francia, Wade Robeson, Macaulay Culkin, Jordan Chandler, and Brett Barnes.

The witnesses that would be permitted to testify under this order would be Jason Francia, Blanca Francia, Charlie Michaels, Phillip LeMarque, Adrienne McManus, Ralph Chacon, June Chandler, Bob Jones, and Charmayne Sternberg. The evidence of alleged grooming of the other children will not be permitted. Evidence as to Jimmy Safechuck and Jonathan Spence will not be permitted.

The witnesses that would be precluded under this ruling would be Jolie Levine and Mary Coller. And there was only one part of Bob Jones' testimony that I would consider admissible, that relating to the one physical act that he observed. And some of the testimony of Blanca Francia and June Chandler and Charmayne Sternberg would not be admissible.

But I think if you can see the way I've divided that up, the grooming testimony is limited to those cases where there's actual physical sexual conduct that's been observed by somebody. That really is where I've drawn the line.

And just to give you an example, Mr. Jones' observations over a long period of time were conclusionary and opinions that I wouldn't allow based on what he didn’t see.

All right. Now, the next item I want to take up is the settlement issues of whether or not the settlements are admissible. In the one case, the Chandler case, I’m going to rule that the evidence that there was a settlement may come in, the amount may not.

The second issue on the other child, I’m not sure -- Mr. Sneddon, in your papers, you related to that. In your points and authorities, you related to a claim that was settled. Was there a lawsuit or not a lawsuit in that case?

MR. SNEDDON: There was not a lawsuit. It was settled prior to the commencement of -- it was settled in lieu of filing of a civil complaint.

THE COURT: It was settled under threat of lawsuit type of settlement.

MR. SNEDDON: That’s my understanding from talking to the lawyer, yes, sir. Lawyers.

THE COURT: Well, again, the amount won’t be admissible except -- I say that it’s not admissible by the prosecution to prove anything. The defense, if they want to raise the amount to prove something -- it’s not the same side -- it’s not two different sides of the same coin. It’s in the Court’s opinion, the amount doesn’t prove anything. The settlement leaves inferences. For the defense, though, the amount may prove something if they choose to use it. So I’m making a ruling that applies one way to this side and the other way to this side. That doesn’t mean you have to, it just means I’m not taking that away from you. I’m taking it away from them.

Now, having said what my intended ruling is, if anyone wants to address that, you may.

MR. MESEREAU: I think we’re going to submit at this point, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

MR. MESEREAU: We may --

THE COURT: They can’t hear you. They’re all waving. Either they can’t hear or they just want you to wave to them.

MR. MESEREAU: (Indicating).

I think we’ll submit at this point, Your Honor. We may ask for leave to revisit the issue in the future.

THE COURT: Yes, you may. It probably won’t come up for a while. But sort of a secondary issue here today, and -- okay, I don’t think there’s any Other issue pending.

If we have nothing else, then we’ll recess until 11:30 when the jurors will be here. We’ll start as soon after 11:30 as we can, because we’ll have already had our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE WITNESS: George Lopez; G-e-o-r-g-e, L-o-p-e-z.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: May I proceed?

THE COURT: You may.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Lopez, good morning.

A. Good morning.

Q. Sir, what is your current occupation?

A. I'm a comedian/actor.

Q. And do you have a television show at this time?

A. I do, named "George Lopez," on ABC.

Q. How long has that show been in progress?

A. The show has been on for four years.

Q. You're expected to go on for another four?

A. I'd like three more, and then to retire.

Q. Mr. Lopez, prior to going on television, what were you doing professionally?

A. I was a host of a radio program in Los Angeles, which was on 92.3, Mega 92.3, in the morning.

Q. For what period of time did you do that?

A. From November of '99 to August of 2000.

Q. Have you been a stand-up comic for some period of time?

A. 25 years.

Q. Are you familiar with The Laugh Factory in Los Angeles?

A. Yes, sir, I am.
Q. And where is The Laugh Factory?
A. It’s located on Sunset Boulevard --
Q. Is that --
A. -- in Hollywood.
Q. Is that a nightclub that features comedians?
A. It is.
Q. And have you performed there?
A. Many times.
Q. Over what period of time have you performed at The Laugh Factory?
A. I’ve probably performed there over the last 15 years.
Q. Do you know Jamie Masada?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. What is Mr. Masada’s association with The Laugh Factory?
A. He’s the owner of The Laugh Factory.
Q. Are there other Laugh Factories other than the one on Sunset in Los Angeles?
A. I understand he opened one in New York.
Q. Have you ever appeared at the one in New York?
A. I have not.
Q. What is the comedy camp that’s associated with The Laugh Factory? What’s that?
A. Well, Jamie Masada, for years, has had a program where they took underprivileged youth and used comedians who worked the club as kind of mentors to the kids, and they would teach them stand-up, and also, you know, give them something to do, you know, with writing jokes, and performing, and stuff. And it was available during the day when nothing really was going on at The Laugh Factory.

Q. Do comedians periodically come by and assist with mentoring the children?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What's the criteria for being a child attending that club?

A. I think Jamie puts it out, and all -- you don't really need to pay anything, it's just whether you're interested and have, you know, a way to get to The Laugh Factory, you can sign up.

Q. Do you know if these are children that are either at risk or disadvantaged in some fashion?

A. Most of the time they're at risk and underprivileged youth.

Q. Do you know how many years Mr. Masada has been running the comedy camp?

A. It seems, to me, he's been doing it for about seven or eight years.

Q. Does he periodically solicit the assistance of the comedians from the entertainment community?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are you one of them?

A. I am one of them.

Q. How many times -- and perhaps “times” is not quite the right way to ask it, but on which occasions have you assisted in working with the kids at comedy camp?

A. Over the years I’ve been asked several times. And I’ve only performed -- participated one time, and that was in the fall of ‘99.

Q. And by “one time,” does that mean one single occasion, or one camp?

A. One camp.

Q. And that’s for a period of time of how long, then?

A. Probably -- probably seven weeks.

Q. All right. Were you there for the bulk of those weeks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the Arvizo family?

A. I do.

Q. And do you know the children who are members of the Arvizo family?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How do you know them?

A. Jamie asked me if I would participate in the camp; that there was a special Latino family that was underprivileged and they had requested me, and, you know, it was a sister and two brothers. And I said yes.

Q. What are their names?

A. Davellin, Gavin and Star Arvizo.

Q. And for what period of time did you work with those three kids?

A. I worked with them in the fall, probably from the middle of November through the end -- the middle of October till the end of November.

Q. What year was that; do you recall?

A. I think it was ‘99.

Q. Okay. How old were the kids, as best you recall?

A. I think Davellin was probably 15. Star was, I think, nine or ten. And Gavin was 11.

Q. How did they do in the comedy camp?

A. They were pretty good. They were fearless. So, you know, they talked about a lot of things that I talked about, coming from an underprivileged background. And, you know, they were fearless in their performing. And they were kind of very sweet, you know, and very kind.

Q. Did you work with them the entirety of that time?

A. I did.

Q. Did you work with other kids, or just those three?

A. I did not. Just those three.

Q. How many sessions do you think you had with them?

A. You know, probably like seven. On Mondays, from like 3:00 in the afternoon to about 5:00. Just two hours a week.

Q. Did you get to meet their mother?
A. I did.
Q. What is her name?
A. Her name is Janet.
Q. All right. Over the same period of time, did you see her?
A. You know, I only saw Janet during the period of time that we spent at The Laugh Factory.
Q. Was she there every time?
A. She was there.
Q. With the kids?
A. Every time.
Q. Do you know how they got there?
A. They took the bus.
Q. Did that impress you in some way?
A. Absolutely. I mean, you know, anybody that rides the bus in Los Angeles is a hero to me.
(Laughter.)
Q. Do you know from how far away they were coming?
A. They came from -- from East Los Angeles.
Q. To Hollywood; is that correct?
A. To Hollywood.
Q. During the period of time that you knew the Arvizos in association with The Laugh Factory, did Janet Arvizo ever ask you for any assistance in any way?

A. No.

Q. Did she ever ask you for money in any way?

A. No.

Q. This went on for a period of how many months, to your knowledge?

A. Well, the whole time that I’ve known the Arvizo family, it was probably eight months.

Q. Did you ever meet the kids’ father during the time that the kids were at the comedy camp?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is his name?

A. His name is David.

Q. At some point in time, did you become aware of the fact that one of the children became ill, seriously ill?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did that come about?

A. I got a phone call from Janet on my cell phone, and, you know, as any mother would be, completely distraught and was asking for help. And I went to the hospital as soon as I found out that Gavin was as sick as he was.

Q. The call then came from Janet?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you then go to the hospital?

A. I did.

Q. And what did you find when you got there?

A. Well, I found Gavin in dire condition. I mean, he was really just clinging to life. And that’s when I met David. I had never seen him before until I showed up at the hospital.

Q. You didn’t meet him during the time -- maybe I’m wrong about this. During the time that the kids were at the camp, at the comedy camp, that period of a couple months --

A. Right.

Q. -- did you meet David Arvizo?

A. I did not.

Q. You met him for the first time at the hospital?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know approximately how long after the completion of the comedy camp it was that Gavin became ill?

A. Probably six weeks.

Q. When you went to the hospital, did you go by yourself or with somebody else?

A. I took my wife with me.

Q. And your wife’s name is?

A. Ann.

Q. Did you return to the hospital on other occasions to visit with Gavin?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Over what period of time do you believe you went to the hospital?

A. Over the next four months.

Q. Did you ever visit him at other locations besides at the hospital?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you visit him?

A. I visited him at his home in El Monte.

Q. All right. Do you know this to be his home or his grandparents’ home?

A. I think it was his grandparents’ home.

Q. Can you describe that home in El Monte for us?

A. It was a tract home in El Monte that -- it was one of those places where -- probably a two-bedroom house where the living and kitchen blend into the same room, and it probably had every stick of furniture they’d ever owned in it. And it had this one room that looked like a suite out of the Four Seasons.

Q. And what room was that?

A. That was Gavin’s room.

Q. And the rest of the house?

A. Reminiscent of my own childhood. Very -- you know, kind of plastic over the couch, and plastic runners on the floor, and birds, and dogs, and things like that.

Q. Modest?

A. Modest, to say the least.

Q. All right. And the one room that Gavin was in, describe that for us, as best you can.

A. That room was prepared for Gavin because he was coming out of the hospital. I think Jamie had made it so that he could get a hospital bed. And it was -- the carpet was removed, and it was kind of like a cleanroom, like a place you'd go and it was sanitary. I think you even had to wear a robe to get in.

Q. For the entirety of that time that Gavin was ill that you were visiting him, did you have contact with his father?

A. I did.

Q. Did you have contact with his mother during that time?

A. I did not.

Q. Can you explain that? Do you know why?

A. You know, I don't know why. When Gavin was at The Laugh Factory, I dealt with the mother. And as soon as he got sick, the mother -- I never saw the mother again, and the only person I saw was the father.

Q. Did you ever speak with her on the telephone?

A. I did not.

Q. Did she ever contact you other than the initial phone call to tell you that Gavin was sick?

A. No.

Q. Did she ever ask you for money?

A. She did not.

Q. During your dealings with the father at that point, during the number of months that Gavin was ill, did he ever ask you for assistance in any way?

A. Yes.

Q. And when do you think was the first time, if you know?

A. Probably the first time was maybe February or March of 2000, approximately. Yeah, around there.

Q. But this was after Gavin became ill already?

A. Yes.

Q. And in what way did he ask for assistance?

A. Well, you know, he made it known that he was, you know, strapped for cash. And at that point, I would help him with whatever I had on me. You know, I'd give him, you know, $40, $50 if I had it. Whatever I had, you know.

I would bring things to the hospital to try to get Gavin to eat, you know, different kind of drinks and stuff, energy drinks and things like that.

Q. On the two occasions that you went to the house in El Monte, did you see Janet on either of those occasions?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ask where she was?

A. You know, I did not. I just assumed that she was working. I think she was a waitress, so when I didn’t see her around Gavin, I just assumed that she was working.

Q. Did you ever ask David why Janet wasn’t at the hospital?

A. I did not.

Q. During the period of time that Gavin was at the hospital, did you ever see Janet there?

A. I never saw her at the hospital.

Q. Okay. Now, the requests for money from David, was that a frequent request from him?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you give him money on a fairly regular basis?

A. Yes. Well, I wouldn’t call it fairly regular. On occasion, I would say.

Q. How much would you give him?

A. You know, 40 here. Whatever I had. 30, 20. I bought him a pair of shoes one time. Stuff like that. But never, you know, a check for $10,000.

Q. Did you become aware of the fact that there was a fund-raiser, or maybe a couple fund-raisers, being organized at The Laugh Factory?

A. I was aware that there was a single fund-raiser.

Q. Is this a fund-raiser that you participated in?

A. You know, I -- I have to say I don’t recall.

Q. Have you participated in fund-raisers at The Laugh Factory before?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that something that’s frequent at that location?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. When fund-raisers are held at The Laugh Factory, or any of the other entertainment clubs in Los Angeles, is there a way in which they do that? Is there kind of a traditional way that they raise money?

A. Well, the way they do it is Jamie would ask comedians to perform, and really that’s your only obligation. You show up, you perform, and that’s it. You’re not -- really don’t understand where the money goes to or any of that aspect of it. You’re just there to really give your time. And then whatever they collect goes to whoever the beneficiary is of the fund-raiser.

Q. And by “what they collect,” what is it that they’re actually collecting?

A. The donation at the door, whatever the price of the ticket is.

Q. All right. And can that vary?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. They can make it whatever they want?

A. Whatever it is.

Q. All right. Did David talk with you about 3805 doing a fund-raiser on his behalf, or, rather, his child’s behalf?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was the nature of that discussion? What is it that he was asking you to do?

A. He was asking me to take care of a fund-raiser for Gavin, which I was more than happy to do. But then it became apparent to me that it wasn’t about Gavin anymore. I was about how Gavin was and how he was feeling. I wasn’t about money for Gavin. And it seemed to me at that time that David Arvizo was more interested in the money than he was about his son.

Q. All right. Was David working at the time, to your knowledge?

A. To my knowledge, I don’t think he was working.

Q. Did he ever express to you any concerns about insurance, medical insurance?

A. I was always led to believe that they had no insurance whatsoever.

Q. All right. And that was from David?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never had a conversation with Janet about that subject?

A. Never.

Q. She never asked you for money?

A. Never did.

Q. All right. Did you come to an understanding with David that you would assist in some kind of a fund-raising effort?
A. Yes.
Q. And -- go ahead. That --
A. Okay. Thanks.
THE BAILIFF: You have to -- there you go.
THE WITNESS: (To the court reporter)
Hello.
Uh-huh.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What was the nature of the fund-raiser that you were going to do, and where?
A. I was going to do a fund-raiser and use the radio to raise money for Gavin and I was going to do it at The Ice House in Pasadena. And I was going to take care -- I was going to do it myself. I was going to plan the whole thing. And because of my schedule at the radio, we kind of got a little behind. And David became, you know, pretty aggressive about when it was going to happen and how much he thought we could raise and that kind of stuff.
Q. What do you mean by “pretty aggressive”?
A. A lot of phone calls. A lot of, “When’s it going to happen?” And, I said, you know, “I’m working right now, man. We’re trying to put it together. We’re trying to get guys to perform.” And every call was about the same thing.

Q. Did he always inquire about the money that you would raise?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Did he ask about specific amounts?

A. Yeah, he did. He asked about how much I thought we could raise.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him that with those things, you never know. I mean, you never know how much you're going to raise. And really, when I do fund-raisers, it was never about, "How much money do you think you could raise?" It was about getting it off succesfully. It wasn't about the bottom line. It was about doing a fund-raiser.

Q. Did he ever talk to you about doing a blood drive on behalf of his son?

A. Yes.

Q. And when was that going to be?

A. When -- when we -- when we found out Gavin was -- was ill and needed blood, my wife was instrumental in kind of arranging a smaller blood drive for Gavin.

Q. Okay. Was that something that involved David Arvizo --

A. I don't believe so.

Q. -- or did that involve your wife?

A. My wife.

Q. That wasn't requested by David?

A. It was not.
Q. Do you know if Janet Arvizo had anything to do with that?
A. I don’t think so.
Q. Okay. Was that done at The Laugh Factory, or someplace else?
A. You know, I think it was done at the Red Cross. And you just say that the blood is going to a certain person. That’s how they do it.
Q. Now, as the -- as time went on in preparation for this benefit at The Ice House, did you get more and more calls?
A. I did.
Q. More and more frequently?
A. I did. Yes.
Q. Was he asking pretty much the same thing?
A. Always.
Q. You’ve dealt with other benefits for other people in need, have you not?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. Was there something unique about David’s behavior as compared to the others?
A. Yeah. I mean, the guy was like -- you know, he was -- it was more than one call, and it was always about the same thing. And he’d call while I was on the radio, while I was working. I couldn’t talk to him. And after a while, it became -- I told my wife that it was -- I told my wife Ann that it was becoming apparent to me that it wasn’t a good idea to have the fund-raiser. I -- I decided not to do it because I didn’t like the way it was kind of turning out.

Q. Was there a particular event that occurred that put you over the top on this, made you decide not to do it?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that?

A. On May 5th of that year, I think 2000 -- whatever the year -- 2000 -- I think, to the best of my knowledge, it’s 2000. I was doing a show at the Acapulco Restaurant on May 5th from 5:00 to 10:00 in the morning in El Monte.

And at ten o’clock, he approached me outside of the restaurant, right in front of the restaurant, and asked me aggressively what was the deal with the fund-raiser.

And I told him that I didn’t think it was going to happen. And he said, “What do you mean it’s not going to happen?” And I said, “It doesn’t look like it’s going to happen.” And then he -- his tone changed, and we had words, and that was the last time I ever saw him.

Q. Did he ever call you again thereafter?

A. No.

Q. All right. Was there an event that preceded that that affected your decision?

A. Yes. There was a situation with a wallet at my house.

Q. All right. Let’s talk about this. Let’s start with, first of all, did you ever take Mr. Arvizo and any of the kids, or Gavin, out shopping?

A. I did.

Q. All right. Did that begin with a visit to your home?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. And your home at that time was in what area?

A. In Sherman Oaks, California.

Q. Have you moved since then?

A. I have.

Q. Who came to your home with David Arvizo?

A. Gavin.

Q. Only Gavin?

A. I think Star might have come also.

Q. Okay. Do you recall if Davellin was there?

A. She was not there.

Q. Where did you go that day? What did you do?

A. Well, I picked them up in El Monte. I brought them to the house, and they played in the backyard for a little bit. And then I took them to Pizza Hut and I took them to the mall, and we walked around the mall a little bit. And then I brought them home, brought them to the house and they used the rest room, and then I drove them back to El Monte.

Q. All right. Was Gavin still ill at this time, or had he already gone into remission?

A. He had kind of gone into a little remission. He was out of the hospital.

Q. But he was still going back and forth for treatment?

A. Yes.

Q. How was his appearance at that time?

A. He was kind of energetic. I think he was -- you know, he was okay. He was walking around. He wasn’t, you know, as frail as he was when he was in the hospital. He was doing okay.

Q. All right. And David was there; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you notice anything unusual about their behavior when they were in the stores?

A. Well, you know, like any kid in the mall, you know, Gavin wanted everything, and David kind of was off to the side, a little bit in the back, kind of conspicuously out -- just out of the way. He wasn’t really with us. Kind of off to the side.

Q. Was Gavin asking for things?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you purchasing things for him?

A. Not everything, but a few things.

Q. Okay. Did David’s behavior strike you as unusual?

A. Yeah, I think so.

Q. In what way?

A. In that he was, you know, a little -- he was a little, you know, distant. He was distant but yet, you know, always a little tense, you know. He was a little -- not as relaxed as somebody would be, I guess.

Q. Did you feel he should have been a little more responsible as a parent while his child was asking you for things?

A. Yeah. He wasn't anywhere around.

Q. All right. Now, when you finally got back home, and David left, what did you notice in the house?

A. Well, I took them home, and I came back. And we had this room that really a lot of people have. It's very popular with Mexicans. We have a room that's no one's allowed to sit in, and everything stays -- everything stays put. And it was my -- our house, and even I wasn't allowed in that room.

So on the mantle, there's nothing on the fireplace mantle except this brown and black wallet. So as I walk in the house, your eyes immediately go to the mantle. It's the first thing you see.

So I see this wallet, and I pick it up and it's not mine, and I open it up, and it has an I.D., Gavin's I.D. And I look, and there's a $50 bill in it, one $50 bill.

So I go to the kitchen, where my wife is, and I say, “Ann, Gavin left his wallet.” So we call Gavin, tell him that he left his wallet. They say to drop it off at The Laugh Factory. We end up sending it in the mail so that we can get rid of it.

And then sometime later, I understand through Jamie Masada at The Laugh Factory, that David Arvizo told Jamie Masada, who owns The Laugh Factory, that I had taken $300 out of Gavin’s wallet.

Q. Okay. Janet Arvizo never accused you --

A. No.

Q. -- of taking money from her son’s wallet; is that correct?

A. No. That’s correct.

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with Janet Arvizo about the wallet?

A. Never.

Q. All right. Did Janet Arvizo ever ask you for money?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered three times.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Following this event, the conversation with Mr. Masada --

A. Yes.

Q. -- about the wallet, did you ever have another conversation with David Arvizo?

A. I never did. Oh, after the wallet -- after the wallet, I had the exchange on May 5th.

Q. Now, when you had the exchange on May 5th, did you already know -- had you already had the conversation with Mr. Masada about the wallet?

A. My wife did.

Q. All right. Did you know about it at the time --

A. I did.

Q. -- of the conversation?
Was that one of the reasons that you no longer wished to be associated with them?

A. You know, that might have put me over the top.

Q. Were you involved in any fund-raisers for the Arvizo family at all?

A. You know, I can’t recall.

Q. The one that was at The Laugh Factory, you don’t have a recollection of having been there?

A. You know, I think early on I may have. But I really -- I can’t remember. I think -- I think the one that Fritz Coleman hosted was the one that I performed at. But it was early on, so I really can’t say.

Q. Other than the one that you organized, or began to organize at The Ice House, were you organizing any other fund-raisers for the Arvizo family?

A. No.

Q. Did you give any money to any other member of the family of the Arvizo family, other than David Arvizo?

A. I did not.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; misstates the evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was -- is in. Next question.

MR. ZONEN: Let me have just one moment, please.

Q. In Janet’s telephone call to you when she announced that her child was ill, did she ask for your assistance at that time in that conversation?

A. You know, other than --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Can I answer?

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Yes.

A. Other than just finding out her son was gravely ill and didn’t know what to do, that’s what I got from the call.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, please, Your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Lopez.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. My name is Tom Mesereau, and I speak for Michael Jackson.

We've never spoken before, right?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you interviewed with the Santa Barbara Sheriffs on -- last Friday, correct?

A. I did.

Q. And who did you interview with?

A. I interviewed with the gentleman who was just asking me the questions.

Q. That's Prosecutor Zonen?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And how long did you meet with Prosecutor Zonen?

A. Me personally?

Q. Yes.

A. 25 minutes.

Q. And were you with your attorney?

A. I was.

Q. And your attorney is sitting here today, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Blancarte?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And you didn’t want that interview to be tape-recorded, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. So as far as you know, there was no tape-recording of what you said, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. Now, you told Prosecutor Zonen that you think you gave David Arvizo, in total, something less than $400, right?

A. Right.

Q. And this had to do with moneys you gave him at the hospital primarily; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you also told Prosecutor Zonen that you went shopping with David and Gavin, and Gavin kept asking you to buy him things in front of his father, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you found it kind of strange that the father never told him to stop doing that or spoke up, right?

A. Right.

Q. Okay. And did you buy him anything while you were shopping with Gavin and the father?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. What did you buy Gavin?

A. You know, we took him to the Discovery Store and bought a few -- maybe like a race car track, and a ball that extends, and things like that.

Q. Okay. And how often would you buy -- well, let me rephrase that. How often did you go shopping with Gavin and David?

A. That was the only time.

Q. Just one time?

A. Just one time.

Q. And to your knowledge, how many times, if you remember, did Gavin ask you to buy something for him in front of his father?

A. Four.

Q. Okay. Did you buy whatever he wanted every time?

A. Well, I -- no.

Q. Okay. Okay. You bought some of the things he wanted and didn’t buy other things he wanted?

A. Kind of expensive.

Q. Didn’t you also bring gifts to the hospital when Gavin was ill?

A. Yes.

Q. And what gifts did you bring to the hospital?

A. You know, cast-iron cars and things like that.

Q. Okay. But the money -- the actual money you donated was to David directly, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever give Gavin anything directly?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, do you remember signing a declaration under penalty of perjury in this case on February 16th, 2005?

A. Um, yeah.

Q. Do you remember testifying under penalty -- excuse me, not “testifying.” Do you remember swearing under penalty of perjury the following: “I never provided money to the Arvizos or any of them”?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, that wasn’t true, was it?

A. Well, at that time I couldn’t recall.

Q. So on February 16th you couldn’t recall, under penalty of perjury, if you gave any money to any of the Arvizos, correct?

A. That’s right.

Q. But when you met with the prosecutor on Friday, you suddenly recalled that you gave David money on a periodic basis, right?

A. Right.

Q. You gave him, what, no more than 40 or 50 bucks at a time, correct?

A. Right.

Q. And you thought the total was less than $400, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. Now, from what you said today -- correct me if I’m wrong, I think you said that you were involved in planning for a fund-raiser, but never went through with it?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. And you didn’t go through with it because David’s activities offended you, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. You thought he was leaning on you too hard for money, right?

A. That’s right.

Q. And was it your understanding that he was married to Janet at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Do you remember signing another declaration under penalty of perjury in this case on January 18th, 2005?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said, “I have not involved” -- “I have not been involved, appeared or participated in a fund-raiser for the minor and alleged victim in the Michael Jackson case,” right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. That wasn’t totally truthful, was it?

A. I could not recall.

Q. Okay. So on January 18th you couldn’t recall if you had any involvement in a fund-raiser, but after you signed that declaration under penalty penalty of perjury, you remembered that you were involved in some of the early planning stages; is that correct?

A. Well, I signed the -- I couldn’t recall, and then I, you know, remembered.

Q. Okay. Okay. So that’s two declarations you signed under penalty of perjury in this case, right? One on January 18th, and one on February 16th, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Okay. And after signing those declarations under penalty of perjury, you then remembered some other facts that, had you known at the time, you wouldn’t have signed the declaration?

A. Well, at the time I couldn’t recall.

Q. Okay. Okay. Let me go back to your discussion with Prosecutor Zonen. Okay? Now, you indicated to him that you first met the Arvizo children at the comedy camp, right?

A. That’s right.

Q. And that’s where you met Janet, right?

A. That’s right.

Q. And to your knowledge, Janet was always at comedy camp when you were there and saw the children, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you told Prosecutor Zonen that the 3822 children would act on stage, correct?

A. That’s right.

Q. And they would often act out little themes about their poverty, correct?

A. That’s right.

Q. They would talk about not having any money, right?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. They would talk about roaches in their home, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And Janet would be sitting there, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You also told Prosecutor Zonen that Janet told you a story about her children diving into a fountain for pennies, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Now, after you had finished coaching the kids at The Laugh Factory, did you ever see Janet again --

A. I did not.

Q. -- to your knowledge?

A. No.

Q. Okay. So after you finished coaching the kids at The Laugh Factory, there was a period of time that elapsed between your coaching the kids, and your hearing from Janet on the phone, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. She called you up very upset that Gavin was seriously ill, right?

A. Right.

Q. And asked for assitance of some kind. I’m not saying it was financial assitance, but she asked you to help, right?

A. More emotional assistance.

Q. But she also asked you to go to the hospital, correct?

A. Right.

Q. You went to the hospital?

A. Right.

Q. You went there many times to help Gavin when he was ill?

A. Yes.

Q. When you first got to the hospital to see Gavin, you saw David; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And every time you went to the hospital to see Gavin, you never saw Janet, you always saw David, right?

A. Right.

Q. Okay. How many times do you think you visited Gavin at the hospital when you saw David?

A. Approximately ten.

Q. Okay. And these are the visits when you often brought gifts for Gavin, right?

A. Right.

Q. You brought food, right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what else did you bring him?
A. You know, the car occasionally. But other times I just -- I just went.
Q. Okay.
A. You know, I didn’t bring something every time I went.
Q. Now, would David try to hit you up for money at the hospital?
A. What he would do is he would, you know, imply how bad off he was doing, you know.
Q. And that was pretty often, wasn’t it?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay.
A. Every time I saw him.
Q. And you never discussed his financial situation with Janet, because she never was around, correct?
A. That’s right.
Q. Now, after you had helped David with the cash you gave him, and after you had helped Gavin with the gifts you bought him, at some point Janet called you up and thanked you for what you’d done for the family, correct?
A. I don’t recall getting a phone call from Janet.
Q. Didn’t you tell the prosecutors that at some point Janet called you up and thanked you for the nice things you'd done for the family?

A. I didn't speak to her.

Q. You never -- she never called you and said thank you?

A. She never called me.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, you thought the family lived in El Monte, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And why did you think they lived in El Monte?

A. Because every time I went to see Gavin, that's where I went, to the -- to the grandparents' house.

Q. And why did you go to that location? Did someone tell you that's where they lived?

A. That's where David told me to go.

Q. And you assumed that that's where they lived, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. You never saw David at comedy camp, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. It was always Janet. But suddenly when he got ill, it seemed like it changed. You always saw David and you never saw Janet?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you know what time of day you often went to the hospital?

A. I usually went after I got off the radio, probably around 11:00 or 12:00.

Q. Now, when you were coaching the kids at comedy camp, you often took them to eat, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Janet would be with you, correct?

A. That’s right.

Q. And you would treat the whole family to food, right?

A. Well, snacks.

Q. Yeah. But, I mean, you did that quite often for them, didn’t you?

A. Yes.

Q. And they always appeared grateful for what you had done?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They seemed like a nice family, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. All right. You participated in their graduation ceremony at the comedy club, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was, what, about three or four months in duration?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And approximately what months were they?

A. You know, I can’t recall what month that 3827

was.

Q. Okay. Now, between the comedy camp ending and Janet calling you to talk about the hospital, how much time elapsed, if you remember?

A. Six weeks.

Q. Okay. All right.

A. Over the holidays of that year. Probably six weeks.

Q. And Janet asked you to come and spend time with Gavin, right?

A. Well, he was -- you know, he was sick, so I went to see him.

Q. But she asked you to go spend time with him, right?

A. You know, I don’t know if she particularly asked. But when -- you know, I was a fan of Gavin’s. So when he was not well, I went to the hospital to see him as a friend.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I just show you a police report where it says you told the police “Janet asked George if he would come spend time with Gavin”?

A. It could.

MR. MESEREAU: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. Lopez, have you had a chance to see that report?

A. I saw it.

Q. Okay. Does it refresh your recollection about what you told the sheriff?

A. It does not.

Q. It does not?

A. I mean, you know, if she asked me to -- you know, here's the difference. I mean, did she formally ask me? She said Gavin was ill and I went to the hospital. There wasn't a formal invitation.

Q. Okay. But you didn't tell the sheriffs that, "Janet asked George if he would come spend time with Gavin"?

A. You have to repeat the question.

Q. Yeah, okay. I'm asking you if, in your interview last Friday, you told the sheriffs Janet asked you if you would come spend time with Gavin in the hospital?

A. Well, in a sense, that's what that is. That's what that phone call was.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, you began visiting Gavin with your wife, correct?

A. My wife went the first time, and on a couple other occasions maybe. But for the most part, I would go right after I got off the radio, so I would go by myself. I would try to sneak away to see Gavin as much as I could, when I could.

Q. Right. And that's when you brought him gifts and snacks?

A. Well, not every time, but on occasion.

Q. Okay. Did you find it strange that you never saw Janet at the hospital?

A. Well, you know, I -- I mean, I knew she was a waitress, so I thought -- I really thought she was working. I'd just say that I never really -- I wasn't there all the time, so I didn't know whether she was there when I wasn't there. But every time I went, she wasn't there, so I just figured that she was always working.

Q. You really don't know if she was working, do you?

A. I don't know.

Q. Okay. Okay. And you may have thought she was a waitress, but you really don't know where she was waiting tables, right?

A. She never served me.

Q. Okay. And never told you where she was working, right?

A. No.

Q. And David never told you where she was working, right?

A. Never did.

Q. Okay. Okay. How agressive was David in asking for money?

A. You know, it was -- it was pretty aggressive. I mean -- I mean, when you're two guys talking, and the subject always comes up, it -- you know, you kind of get turned off to it. Every time we spoke, it was always about -- really about money.

Q. And he always said he had no way to pay the family's bills, right?

A. That's right.

Q. And you gave him little amounts that you had in your pocket at the time?

A. Yeah, I only had little amounts at the time.

Q. Okay. And you -- and you told the sheriffs you never turned down -- David never turned down any gesture of kindness you offered him?

A. Never.

Q. He always wanted money, didn't he?

A. He did.

Q. Okay. Okay. You thought the largest money you gave him at one point was 80 bucks?

A. Probably around there, yeah.

Q. Okay. All right.

A. I literally would give the guy everything I had in my wallet and just figured I'd get more later.

Q. Now, did he ever tell you that he was giving any of his money to Janet?

A. Never.

Q. Okay. You don't know one way or the other, do you?

A. I don't.

Q. Okay. Now, do you know Louise Palanker?

A. You know, I don't know Louise Palanker.

Q. Ever heard her name?

A. Yeah, I heard her name here.

Q. Okay.

A. And on E!

Q. Okay. You don’t know anything about her -- you don’t know anything about her giving 10,000 bucks to Janet, do you?

A. I don’t.

Q. You don’t know anything about her giving 10,000 bucks to David, do you?

A. No, I don’t.

Q. Did you ever hear about that?

A. You know, I think it’s odd when a comedian has $10,000 period, you know, so I never --

(Laughter.)

Q. All right. Okay. Now, at some point David started bragging to you about Neverland Ranch, didn’t he?

A. Yes.

Q. And you thought his attitude changed, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You thought he got kind of - what’s the word? - snooty or snobby? Would that be the right word?

A. Enamored.

Q. Enamored. That’s how you described David’s attitude after he told you the family had gone to Neverland Ranch?

A. Yes.

Q. And he told you that Michael Jackson had given a truck to his family, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. You described him to the sheriffs as “smitten” by his new-found association with Michael Jackson, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you learned at some point that Michael Jackson was calling Gavin at the hospital, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And someone told you he was calling him at -- sometimes late at night and having long chats with Gavin, correct?

A. Right.

Q. Did David tell you that?

A. I think maybe -- yeah, I think maybe David did.

Q. All right.

A. In the room, in the hospital room.

Q. At some point, you thought David was extremely engrossed with money and possessions, true?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Because when you visited them in El Monte, he showed off that room with the DVD and all the rest, correct?

A. That’s right.
Q. That’s the room that you described as like the Four Seasons, right?
A. Right.
Q. Did you ever know who paid to renovate that room?
A. No.
Q. Okay. You don’t know if the person who renovated that room was paid or not, correct?
A. I did not know that.
Q. Okay. Did David ever talk about how that room became so nice?
A. No. My assumption was that it was Jamie Masada that had arranged that.
Q. But you don’t know for sure?
A. But I don’t know for sure.
Q. And if Jamie arranged it through Louise Palanker, you don’t know about that?
A. I don’t know about that.
Q. And if the contractor who did it was never paid, you don’t know about that either?
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as speculative and testimony. The witness has repeatedly said he doesn’t know.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
Q. Now, you told the sheriffs, Mr. Lopez, you thought David Arvizo was particularly enamored with the big-screen television and the Nintendo, correct?

A. Yes.
Q. You said you noticed this to a small degree with the children as well, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. But not to the extent that David seemed like he wanted to impress you with his new possessions?
A. Very pleased.
Q. Okay. You told the sheriff that David -- everything about David seemed to be about money, right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. You went to the El Monte address about two times, correct?
A. That’s right.
Q. Okay. And David was there both times, right?
A. Yes.
Q. Who else was there during those visits?
A. The grandparents.
Q. Okay. Did you ever see the children there?
A. I did.
Q. Okay. Were all three children there, to your knowledge, on both visits?
A. You know, I can’t recall.
Q. Okay.
A. But I think Star was always kind of around Gavin.

Q. Okay. Did you see Davellin?

A. On occasion, but I don’t remember her being there.

Q. Now, who arranged your visits to the El Monte address?

A. I would arrange them with David.

Q. Okay. Okay. When you went shopping with David and Gavin, were Star or Davellin present?

A. I think Star was.

Q. Okay. But you seemed, in your interview with the sheriffs, to particularly recall Gavin asking you to buy things for him, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You never mentioned to the sheriffs that Star was asking you to buy things for him, correct?

A. No.

Q. And you thought it rather odd the father never just said a word as the son looked at you and said, “Buy this for me”?

A. It would have been nice if he stepped in.

Q. But he never did, right?

A. Never did.

Q. Did you ever talk to him about it?

A. No.

Q. Ever ask him, “Why are you letting your son just keeping leaning on me like this”?

A. He’s not my kid.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, would Gavin just typically come up to you and point at something and say, “Would you buy that for me?”

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object to “typically.” Talking about one event.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase it. No, it’s not -- Your Honor, we’re not talking about one event. It’s one day.

MR. ZONEN: Then it’s vague for exactly that reason.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You went shopping with him on one particular day, right?

A. Right.

Q. You went to a number of stores, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Gavin was with you, right?

A. Right.

Q. David was with you?

A. Right.

Q. And you think Star was with you?

A. I can’t remember, but I think.

Q. And in various stores, Gavin would point to items and ask you to buy them for him?

A. You know how a kid does in a store, “Can you buy me this?” And --

Q. Yeah.

A. -- “Oh, I really” -- it’s the old, you know, “Oh, I really like this.”

Q. Well, but he wasn’t looking at his father and saying, “I really like this.”

A. No.
Q. He was always looking at you, with the father standing right there, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Okay. And you told the sheriffs, “David seemed to intentionally stand back and make no effort to rein in Gavin’s requests”?
A. That’s correct.
Q. You thought that was strange, right?
A. Seemed odd.
Q. Did you take them to lunch that day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Okay. And did you take them to lunch on any other days; do you know?
A. No.
Q. All right. Now, where did you see the wallet?
A. The wallet was on the fireplace mantle of my house. It was the only thing on the mantle.
Q. And when you saw it, how did you think it got there?
A. You know, it never occurred to me how it got there, because, you know, they -- nobody played in that room, so it was kind of odd that a wallet would end up on that -- on that mantle.
Q. And how high up was the mantle?
A. You know, shoulder height.

Q. Taller than Gavin, wasn’t it?

A. At that time, maybe.

Q. So, did it seem peculiar to you that suddenly a wallet’s just lying there?

A. Well, being that in that room, really nothing’s supposed to be in there, yeah.

Q. Had you seen Gavin or David in that room?

A. No.

Q. And how long had they been at your house?

A. Well, the beginning -- when I first dropped them off, they played in the backyard probably about 45 minutes to an hour. And then we went to the mall and then came back. They just really came back to use the rest room, because the drive was a little far, so not much time.

Q. And you testified, I believe, there was a $50 bill in Gavin’s wallet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was also an I.D. card, correct?

A. A school I.D.

Q. That was for Gavin, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you told the sheriffs you thought it was odd that Gavin would have $50 in a wallet, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Not to mention the wallet sitting up on the mantle in that room?

A. Right.

Q. Okay. And what's the first thing you did when you opened the wallet, saw that Gavin's name was on an I.D. card, and there's a $50 bill in it? What's the first thing you did?

A. The first thing I did was show it to my wife, who was in the kitchen.

Q. And then what did you do?

A. Then we called the Arvizo house and made arrangements to get the wallet back to them.

Q. And how did you get it back to them?

A. We sent it.

Q. Did you call the Arvizo home?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you talk to?

A. My wife called, and I think she spoke to David.

Q. Okay. David said, "Just send it to the house"?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay.

A. Well, he wanted us to take it to The Laugh Factory, but we ended up sending it to the house.

Q. Who first talked to you about planning the fund-raiser for Gavin?

A. You know, at that time I was having conversations with David, so -- and being in the hospital, so I think it was between David and I and my wife.

Q. Okay. And you told the sheriffs David was particularly persistent and aggressive about how much money they were going to make, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are still never seeing Janet during any of this, right?

A. No. That’s correct.

Q. Never see her at the hospital, and she never goes to your house, right?

A. That’s right.

Q. At some point, your wife confronted David about his constant requests for money, right?

A. That’s right.

Q. Okay. And he got kind of nasty, didn’t he?

A. He did.

Q. Okay. Were you there?

A. I was not there.

Q. Okay. But you heard about it?

A. I did.

Q. And that sort of started a downhill slide in your relationship with the whole family, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At some point you cut off all relationships with that family, correct?

A. That’s true.

Q. And you called off any work that you were doing on the benefit?

A. That’s right.

Q. All right. And I think you said David tried to repeatedly call you at the radio station, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Did you take his calls?

A. I did not.

Q. Okay. Did you tell anybody to tell them, “Stop the calls”?

A. Well, he called usually when we were on the air, but I wasn’t going to take the call after his conversation with my wife.

Q. Okay. Now, at some point you told David there’s not going to be any benefit, right?

A. That’s right.

Q. And actually, that wasn’t really correct, was it? You just weren’t going to work on it anymore?

A. I wasn’t going to do the one that I was planning.

Q. There was some others being planned you knew about?

A. I think so, yeah.

Q. How did you know about them? Through Jamie?

A. Through Jamie.

Q. Did Jamie seem to be your main source of your information about the Arvizo family, other than what you saw directly?

A. Yeah, that’s how I met them. And pretty much, you know, everything was kind of going through Jamie. He was kind of the guy that everybody talked to.

Q. Okay. David tried to make you feel guilty about not helping Gavin at that point, didn’t he?

A. Um, yes. At the point of May 5th, he did.

Q. And you told him basically he’s an extortionist, correct?

A. I did.

Q. That wasn’t a pleasant conversation, was it?

A. It was not.

Q. Okay.

A. And I don’t use big words like that, you know.

(Laughter.)

Q. All right. Now, after you called him an extortionist, what happened next?

A. You know, it was pretty -- it was a pretty heated exchange. And after that, he left. And, you know, I got -- I got to be honest with you, after that, I had no conversations with Gavin or any of the Arvizos after May 5th of that day.

Q. You then learned at some point from Jamie Masada that Jamie had given David some money supposedly to make up for what he claimed was lost from the son’s wallet?

A. That’s right.

Q. And the implication was that you had taken it --

A. That I had taken it.

Q. And you never took a thing, right?

A. I did not.

Q. Were you upset with Masada that he would even pay him something?

A. I was. Yeah, I was.

Q. Did you complain to Masada?

A. I did. I said, “How could you do that?”

Q. Okay. And he basically said to you, he wanted to make peace, or words to that effect?

A. Words to that effect.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, are you certain you never performed with Fritz Coleman at a benefit for Gavin?

A. You know, I’m not certain.

Q. So you may have done that?

A. I may have.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, did anyone ever mention to you anything about a J.C. Penney lawsuit while you knew the Arvizos?

A. You know, I did not know about that until -- until after my -- all ties were broken.

Q. Okay. And how did you learn about the J.C. Penney lawsuit?

A. I think I learned about that from --

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as irrelevant and hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Do you recall, sometime after your relationship soured with the Arvizos, Janet gave you a key chain?

A. She did.

Q. And approximately when was that?

A. That might have been maybe six months after our -- my dealings with David.

Q. Okay. So six months after you pretty much severed your ties with the family?

A. Yeah, a key chain showed up.

Q. She approached you, correct?

A. You know, I can’t recall how I got it.

Q. She gave you a key chain as a way of thanking you for what you’d done for the family, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Do you know where that happened?

A. You know, I don’t. I can’t remember.

Q. Okay. Okay. Do you know approximately when it was?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Do you remember speaking to her when she gave you the key chain?

A. You know, I can’t recall.

Q. Okay. But you told the sheriffs, in your mind, it was her way of thanking you for what you had done for the family. You told them that in your interview, correct?

A. I think so.

Q. Okay. Now, obviously it goes without saying if Janet and David were discussing ways to get money from people, you weren't there?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as speculative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You spent very little time in their home, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you said they were from East L.A. Did you mean El Monte?

A. You know, I only know El Monte. So if I said "East L.A.," I meant El Monte.

Q. When you say "El Monte," you don't mean East L.A. is El Monte, do you?

A. Well, you know, any Chicano knows better than that.

Q. Well, let me ask you this: You said --

A. That's Chicano 101. East L.A. is not El Monte.

(Laughter.)

Q. Right. Well, let me ask you this: You said that when you first started at the comedy club, they were taking a bus from East L.A., right?

A. Right.

Q. But you said when you visited their home, you went to El Monte.

A. Yeah.

Q. So you never really visited a home for the Arvizos in East L.A., correct?

A. I did not.
Q. But they told you they were from East L.A., true?
A. Yeah. You know, I never really thought about their geographic location whatsoever.
Q. Okay. So did it ever occur to you that there may be two residences?
A. No.
Q. Well, if they said they were taking a bus from East L.A., but they took you to their home in El Monte, doesn't that suggest two residences?
A. I never thought about it.
Q. Well, as you think about it now --
A. I was way off. But once they got on the bus, my contact with them ended.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Okay. No further questions. Thank you.
THE WITNESS: All right.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. ZONEN:
Q. Mr. Lopez, you understood that the El Monte home was the home that had the cleanroom for Gavin in it; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And that was his grandmother's home, the grandparents' home?

A. Right.

Q. Did you ever ask how many people actually lived in that residence?

A. I never asked, but it just looked like maybe five.

Q. And it had been sometime earlier when you were told that they were coming from East L.A. was in conjunction with the kids attending the comedy camp; is that right?

A. Right.

Q. Did you have any reason to believe that wasn’t true?

A. No.

Q. Did anybody ever take you to an address -- a studio apartment on Soto Street for purposes of showing you how impoverished they were?

A. No.

Q. Did anybody say anything about a residence on Soto Street for purposes of showing you how impoverished they were?

A. No.

Q. Now, the story about the kids diving into the fountain, was that a story that was given to you by Janet?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that in the presence of her children?

A. They might have been in the room, around the room, yeah. It was kind of more of a joke than an actual admonishment.

Q. The kids were laughing at the story, weren’t they?

A. Yeah.

Q. What was it that she said about it?

A. She said she had taken the kids to the mall, and in the center of the mall there was a fountain that people would throw coins in. And she had turned her back, and when she turned back, all three kids were in the water getting coins.

Q. What did she do?

A. She told them to get out. And, you know, at that time everybody was pointing at the kids, like, “Whose kids are these?” And she told the kids to put the money back.

Q. And they did so?

A. They did.

Q. Did David Arvizo ever explain to you why Janet wasn’t in the home (sic)?

A. No.

Q. Did he ever talk to you about her having difficulty with dealing with things?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; vague.

THE COURT: Sustained; leading.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you concerned at the -- what you were finding at the hospital when you found out that Gavin had been visiting with Michael Jackson at his ranch?

A. Well, when I went to see Gavin during the day, he was, you know, asleep. He was, you know, tired, really tired and stuff.

Q. That was in conjunction with David telling you he was on the phone for hours at a time in the middle of the night?

A. Correct.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: The key chain that Janet gave you, what did she tell you about that key chain?

A. You know, I don’t really remember much about the key chain other than her giving me this thing, “Thank you.” I think it was a -- had a mustard seed in it or something.

Q. A little mustard seed amulet?

A. Yeah, something like that.

Q. Was it a new one or something that she had?

A. It was kind of pewter, so it -- it kind of looked old. Pewter stuff looks old.

Q. And she told you that was in appreciation for your help?

A. Yeah.

Q. When she called you and had that conversation about her child being ill, would you have gone to the hospital regardless of whether she asked you?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What was your intent when she called you and notified you of her child’s illness?

A. You know, when I was -- the first time I met the Arvizos at The Laugh Factory, you know, I really enjoyed their company, and the kids were great. And I had a really good time teaching them, and they were fun, you know, so -- and, you know, I’d take them and buy them things after, snacks. And I kind of invested in them, because I saw a lot of myself in their family.

So when I got the call that he wasn’t well, you know, I did what any friend would do, is go to the hospital.

Q. You said you were a big fan of Gavin. What do you mean by that?

A. He’s a great kid. I mean, he had a lot of spirit. And he was fearless and -- you know, he did little dances and stuff. It was great.

Q. Even when he was asking you to buy things for him at the shopping mall?

A. I don’t know if he danced and asked at the same time, but he was always kind of, you know, interesting.

Q. When you said you cut off the family, did that have anything to do with the rest of the family beyond David?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; vague; asked and answered.

MR. ZONEN: It’s certainly not asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Would you want the question read back?

THE WITNESS: Yeah. That would be nice. Thank you.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: It was -- it was everyone in the family. At that time I was only having conversations with David by phone. And when that happened, I never spoke to anyone in the family again.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You’re saying you cut off everybody in the family?

A. Yes.

Q. But your reason for doing so -- what were your reasons for cutting off the other members of the family besides David?

A. Was, you know, that the guy was aggressively trying to get money from me. And when I cut him off, you know, the rest of the family followed. I wasn’t going to talk to Gavin behind his father’s back, and -- you know, the altercation we had May 5th, he used that, you know, against me, because I said to him, you know, “I only” -- “I’ve only tried to help you.” And he said, “You’ve helped me?” And at that point, it was just -- you know, kind of the wind went out of my sails.

And then he said, “What am I supposed to tell Gavin?” And I said, “Tell him his father’s an extortionist.”

Q. Was there anything that Davellin, Star or Janet did to contribute to your cutting off the family or your attention?

A. No.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you. No further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.

THE WITNESS: Thanks.

MR. ZONEN: And we’ll call Ann Lopez to the stand.

THE COURT: Come to the witness stand, please. When you get to the witness stand, remain standing.

Face the clerk over here and raise your right hand.

ANN SERRANO LOPEZ

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Ann Serrano Lopez; A-n-n, S-e-r-r-a-n-o; Lopez, L-o-p-e-z.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: May I proceed?

THE COURT: Yes.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. I guess my first question is, what is it like being married to George Lopez?

A. A lot of fun.

Q. And you are married to George Lopez?

A. Yes, I am married to George Lopez.

Q. Tell me a little bit about yourself. Are you currently working?

A. I’m an independent television producer, and a mother, and -- what else would you like to know?

Q. You’ve been married to Mr. Lopez for how long?

A. For eleven and a half years.

Q. And prior to that, what profession were you in?

A. I was a television producer and a casting director.

Q. What does a television producer do? We all know the term. None of us know what they actually do.

A. We find projects to produce. So let's say I would find a property that I would want to make into a movie, and secure a writer, secure the production company that would produce it for me. Secure -- secure the actors. And just make sure the entire production gets off on budget.

Q. You've been married to George Lopez how long?

A. Eleven and a half years.

Q. And you have one child?

A. One child.

Q. At some point in time, did you become aware -- were you aware of the fact that your husband would periodically perform at The Laugh Factory?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Did you know Jamie Masada?

A. Yes, very well.

Q. Were you ever introduced to the Arvizo family?

A. Only in the hospital after Gavin got ill. I was home with our daughter, so I didn't ever go to the comedy camp.

Q. Did you know that your husband was a mentor to the three children --

A. Yes, I did.
Q. -- in conjunction with the comedy camp?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. All right. At some point in time, did you become aware that one of those three children had become ill with cancer?
A. Yes. It was around two months after the graduation.
Q. Did you visit with him at the hospital? And "with him," I mean Gavin.
A. Yes, I actually met Gavin in the hospital.
Q. All right. Had you ever had a conversation with Gavin's mother prior to his being stricken with cancer?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever meet her?
A. No.
Q. Did she ever call you prior to that?
A. No.
Q. All right. Have you ever actually met her at any time?
A. No.
Q. All right. So you wouldn't be able to recognize her if you saw her?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Did you ever have any telephone conversations with her at all?
A. Yes.

Q. When did the telephone conversations begin?

A. The first telephone conversation was when Gavin was stricken with cancer. She called our home very distraught, and George spoke to her. And then I got on the phone to comfort her about her sick child.

Q. All right. And did you get on the phone and have a conversation with her at that time?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did she tell you the extent of the illness that she was dealing with?

A. Yes. She talked about the cancer.

Q. Did she say anything to you about the description of the cancer that he had, or the diagnosis, or the prognosis?

A. Just that it was very grave; that there was a very large tumor, 10, 11, 12, something like that, pounds in his cavity, and that they were going to have to take out a kidney, I believe, and maybe a spleen; that there were -- you know, it was -- that there was spots on his lung. They had found spots on the lung. So it was, very, very severe.

Q. How often did you go to the hospital?

A. I went less than my husband. Probably six, seven times.

Q. The hospital we’re talking about, can you tell us which hospital it is and where?

A. I believe it was Kaiser Permanente.

Q. And do you know where, the location?
A. In Los Angeles, I think, towards downtown.
Q. The Sunset and Vermont hospital facility?
A. That’s where it was, uh-huh.
Q. When you got there, or any of the times that you went there, did you ever see Janet?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever talk with her on the telephone while you were at the hospital?
A. Yes. When she would call I would get on the phone and speak to her, and just try to comfort her.
Q. Were those frequent conversations?
A. No. Maybe two or three times.
Q. Okay. How often do you think it was that you visited Gavin at the hospital?
A. Between six and eight times. I’m not sure exactly how many.
Q. Was David there?
A. Always.
Q. All right. Now, David is who?
A. David is Gavin’s father.
Q. And his last name?
A. Arvizo.
Q. On each of the times that you were there, he was there?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you go on a -- when you went to the hospital to visit, was it always at a certain time frame?

A. No.

Q. Would it be at various times during the day?

A. Yes. Sometimes in the afternoon. Sometimes in the evening. It just depended on my husband’s schedule.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Arvizo, David Arvizo, where his wife was?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what did he tell you?

A. He told me that she was just distraught; that she couldn’t handle being there at the hospital; that she would break down; and that she emotionally couldn’t handle it.

Q. Did you have concerns about that?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you have conversations with David Arvizo about his financial state?

A. He had conversations with me about his financial state.

Q. And tell me the distinction.

A. Well, he would hint that they were having financial problems, and would tell me he wasn’t sure how they were going to pay their bills or how they were going to pay the rent.

Also, he told me that they were living in a studio apartment, and he didn’t know how he was going to get Gavin’s hospital bed and how Gavin could go back to that place.

Q. This is early on, I. Assume?
A. The very first visit.
Q. Okay. Did you know where they were living, where their residence was?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever go to visit them at his home?
A. No.
Q. Or did you go to visit Gavin at the time that Gavin was out of the hospital in a residence?
A. No.
Q. So you don’t know necessarily where they were living?
A. No.
Q. All right. What did you think about his initial comment on that first visit about his financial state? What did you understand was going on?
A. Well, it seemed to me that, you know, they were a lower income family. He was taking a leave of absence from his job. He told me that. And he said that one of them had to work to make money for the family.

And I found it a little strange that it would be Janet because he said that she was a waitress. And I thought, well, a waitress doesn’t make as much as he was making. And he was also -- he had told me his job was the job that had medical care, the medical insurance.

Q. Did he tell you any -- did he express concern to you about his medical insurance?

A. No.

Q. Did he have any conversation with you at all about who was paying the bills?

A. No, he just said it was covering the expenses and that his job covered the medical insurance.

It wasn't until one of the later visits that he said he was worried that the insurance was going to run out. And I told him “Then, well, you should go back to work.”

Q. Did he tell you that he was concerned the insurance would run out because he was not at work?

A. Yes, because his leave of absence was already very long, and he -- if he didn't go back to work, then the medical insurance would lapse.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him he should go back to work and get on with it, and get his insurance for his son; that that was the most important thing, that his son was covered with medical insurance.

Q. At some point in time, did you make a decision, perhaps with your husband or by yourself, as to whether or not the Lopez family would be contributing money from your own pockets to David Arvizo?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that decision?

A. No.

Q. Had you talked with David about that specifically?

A. No. I just -- from the very beginning, I saw things that just seemed very strange to me. I didn’t know them at all. This was the first meeting. David and I walked -- let George have some time with Gavin the first meeting and be in the room. And there was like a glass partition. So David and I stepped out and we were talking. And, you know, at first it was very normal. He was very concerned about his son and the medical attention. But when he walked back into the room, I noticed that the children shied away from him. And there was no -- there was no closeness, there was no touching. I didn’t see anything that would indicate that there was a bond between these children and their father, especially at such a difficult time. And then when he told me that Janet was not going -- was not going to be at the hospital, I also found that -- being a mother, I found that very strange. Here was this woman that would take the bus to take her three children to comedy camp for months on end, but she can’t be at the hospital with her sick child. That just seemed very strange to me. So I thought there was something a little off there.

Q. Did you ever have David Arvizo and any of his children at your home?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. On more than one occasion?

A. Just once.

Q. And when was that; do you recall?

A. It was -- I’m not sure exactly the time frame. I was home with my daughter who was very young. But it was one time when George wanted to visit him in the hospital, and David was -- I mean, excuse me, Gavin was out of the hospital. And so George said, “Is it okay if we bring him to our house?” And I said, “Sure.” So they came and visited.

Q. And you were living where at the time?

A. In Sherman Oaks.

Q. That’s not where you live currently?

A. No.

Q. All right. When he came to your household, what did you do that day?

A. David and Gavin -- George went and picked up David and Gavin and brought them to our home. And we have a very large swing set in the back, and they were playing on the swing set, and meeting my daughter, and Gavin.

Q. Gavin was how old at the time?

A. Ten and a half. Between 10 and 11. I’m not sure.

Q. Okay. Go ahead.

A. And it was a hot day. So I said to George, “You know, maybe we should” -- I didn’t feel it was very good for him to be in the heat. And I said, “Well, maybe we should just go take them to eat and maybe just go see a movie or something.”

So we took them to Pizza Hut, and he and my daughter played video games, and we had pizza. And then we took them to the mall.

Q. Okay. What did you notice about anyone’s behavior at the mall, either David or Gavin?

A. Well, Gavin was running in and out of stores like -- you know, we were going into stores and things, and buying him some toys and things like that.

By it got to be a little overboard where he was asking for, like, three or four toys at every store. And I kept looking over at David, and David would just walk away, like -- you know, and -- which made it -- you know, he wasn’t saying anything to Gavin like, “Okay, Gavin, that’s enough,” trying to rein him in at any point. I mean, it was like he definitely walked away and, you know, made us feel like, “Okay, buy him what he wants.” So....

Q. Give me a sense of how long after you received that initial call about Gavin’s illness did this visit occur to your home and to the shopping mall.

A. Oooh, I’m not sure exactly, but about six months, I would think.

Q. Was Gavin doing better at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he still involved in treatment?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. But at the time that he was visiting you, he was --

A. He was in remission, yes.

Q. He was in remission at that point and able to walk around?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Did he appear to you to be still frail or --

A. Yes, that’s why I didn’t want him to be in the heat. He was walking around, but he still was very pale. He didn’t have any hair. He was still a very sick boy.

Q. When you got home after the visit to the shopping mall, and Gavin and David left, did you notice anything in the house?

A. I did not. I just went straight to the kitchen. I started to get -- started to prepare dinner. And when George came home, I heard him say, “Hey, what’s this?” And I walked into the living room, which we barely used, and there was a wallet on the mantle. And I said, “Well, open it, and find out what it is.”

And it was, you know, a velcro -- normal little velcro wallet, and it was Gavin’s school I.D. and there was a crisp $50 bill in it, and we just thought that was rather strange that there would be a $50 bill in a ten-year-old child’s wallet.

Q. What did you do with the wallet?

A. I told George, “Well, I’m going to call and just send it back to them.”

Q. And did you do that?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. How did you send it back?

A. I think Federal Express. Just sent it back so that they would get it the very next day, because I figured he needed the money.

Q. And the $50 bill was, of course, still in the wallet at the time you sent it back?

A. Yes. Uh-huh.

Q. On that visit to the Sherman Oaks mall, was there anybody else there from the Arvizo family besides Gavin and David?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to meet Gavin’s brother or sister?

A. Oh, yes, at the hospital.

Q. So they were there visiting on a few different occasions?

A. Uh-huh. They were almost always there.

Q. When you went to the shopping mall, did you tell Gavin, prior to going over there, that you would buy him something?

A. No.

Q. Did --

A. It was really a last-minute thing. We had actually thought of going to the movies, and there wasn’t a movie playing, so we just decided to walk around the mall.

Q. All right.

A. We knew we would buy him something, you know, a toy or something.

Q. Now, did you ever get a phone call back from David Arvizo with regards to the wallet at any time?

A. No.

Q. Was there ever a subsequent conversation from David, whether it was a phone call or in person, where the subject of that conversation was the wallet?

A. No.

Q. At some point in time, did you hear from anybody with regards to an issue of money missing from the wallet?

A. The way we found out about that was about a month after we stopped having any contact with David, I called Jamie Masada for a completely different reason. I just needed a business number. And, you know, we were talking. He gave me the number I needed, and he said, “Listen, by the way, I want you to know that" -- "remember that wallet?" And I said, "Yes." And he said, "Well," you know, "David said that the wallet was empty when it was returned." And I said, "Jamie, it had $50 in it."

And he's like, "Well, he says there was $300 in it, and that it was empty when it was returned."

And I was just like, "Jamie, do you really think we would steal $300 from this child that we've been trying to help?" And he said, "No, I know you didn't do it. But I gave him the $300 just to get him off my back."

And I offered to reimburse Jamie $300. And he said, "No, absolutely not. Don't worry about it." I was like, "Are you sure?" And he was like, "Yeah, just don't worry about it."

Q. Did you have any additional conversations with David Arvizo after your conversation with Jamie?

A. No.

Q. In other words, at the point where you learned that Jamie had been -- had given $300 --

A. No.

Q. -- to Mr. Arvizo, no further conversations?

A. No.

Q. Were you ever working on a fund-raiser on behalf of Gavin?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us when that was, in terms of -- give us a sense of around the time that you did your shopping spree at the Sherman Oaks mall. Was it during that time? Before that?
A. It was right after that, around there. David was getting more frequent with his hints about needing money. And I said to George, you know, “Let’s just go ahead and do our own fund-raiser for him at The Ice House,” which is another comedy club in Pasadena, “and that way we’ll just get him off our back.”
Q. Have you done fund-raisers before?
A. Oh, yes. Many.
Q. That’s not unusual for a celebrity like your husband to end up being invited to do a fund-raiser?
A. Oh, no. We get asked to do many more than we possibly can do.
Q. And you have done many --
A. Yes.
Q. -- over the years?
A. Many. Many.
Q. What’s involved in putting on a fund-raiser like this?
A. We usually contact one of the comedy clubs and one of the owners, who -- they’re all our friends. And you usually do a fund-raiser on a Monday night, which is a slow night for the club. And the door -- the ticket price, which you can set any ticket price you want, will go to your fund-raiser. And then the drinks and food will go to the comedy club. So it’s kind of a win-win for both parties.

Q. Were you working with David Arvizo in putting this together?

A. No, I was doing it myself.

Q. Were you having conversations with David Arvizo about what was happening in pursuit of this fund-raiser?

A. Oh, yes. He was really hounding me, calling me and asking me a lot of questions.

Q. And tell us, give us a sense of it. I mean, how often was he calling, and what was he asking?

A. He was calling me like every other day and asking me how much money could be raised. And it was just -- you know, he wanted to know how much money, how much money can be raised. And I told him I thought we could raise probably between seven and $14,000, which was actually quite a bit for a Monday night fund-raiser. But my husband had gotten permission to announce it on the radio station that he was working at at the time.

Q. Was his behavior, David Arvizo’s behavior, different than what you would expect of people for whom you were doing fund-raisers?

A. He made me very suspicious, because I had never done a fund-raiser where someone had asked me how much money was involved. I mean, usually people are just so grateful that you’re helping them. And so this was very strange, and I got very suspicious.

Q. Did you finally decide to have a conversation with him that dealt specifically with where the money was going to go?

A. Well, what I did, was I decided to test him, and I told George what I was going to do. I said, “You know, this is” -- I just started feeling very uneasy. And I said, “You know, there’s something strange here. I want to test him to make sure that his intentions are honorable.”

And so what I did was, I called him up on the phone and I said, “Well, David, I just wanted to let you know, the fund-raiser is going to be at such and such a time, such and such a date, and I need to start getting your bills. You know, I need to get the name of your landlord, I need to get your credit card bills, your gas bills, so we can start paying them.”

And he became, you know, a little like, “What do you mean? Aren’t I just going to get the cash?” And I said, “No, we can, like, pre-pay your rent for six months. We can pay your bills.” I said, “No, that’s not how it works.”

And he said, “Well, some people that I owe money to, I just owe them money.” And I said, “Give me their names so we can pay them.” And he got very agitated. And I said, “Well, listen, this is” -- you know, “The radio station is involved, and that’s the way it has to be handled, because they need to have documentation.”

And then he got very angry at me.

Q. All right. You say he got angry at you. How did he manifest that anger? What did he do? What did he say?

A. He cursed at me.

Q. What did he say? I know this is a little embarrassing, but what did he say?

A. He called me a fucking bitch and a mother-fucking whore, and that’s when I hung up the phone.

Q. Was he angry while he was saying this?

A. Oh, he was irate. His whole demeanor changed.

Q. And loud?

A. Oh, yeah, it was -- he frightened me. I was shaking when I hung up the phone.

Q. Did he ever present like that to you before, prior to that date?

A. No.

Q. Either in person or on the telephone?

A. No.

Q. And you were frightened by that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What did you do after that telephone call?

A. I immediately picked up the phone and called my husband at the radio station.

Q. And you discussed with him what had happened; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the decision made not to engage in any more conduct with Mr. Arvizo?

A. Yes. George was very angry. And really our suspicions are true, were true. I mean, they came to light that he was just wanting money maybe for some other reason, and it wasn’t going to go to the bills. So we decided that the fund-raiser was off, we weren’t going to do it, and that was it.

Q. How many conversations do you think -- telephone conversations do you think you had with Janet Arvizo?

A. Probably four at the most. Four or five.

Q. During any of those conversations that you had with her, did she ever ask you for assistance?

A. No.

Q. Did she ever ask you for money?

A. No.

Q. Did she ever behave in any way inappropriate, in your mind?

A. No.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Good afternoon, Miss Lopez.
A. Good afternoon.
Q. My name is Tom Mesereau and I speak for Michael Jackson.
You thought it very odd that Janet was never at the hospital while her son was apparently dying, right?
A. Yes.
Q. And you noted to your husband how strange that was, right?
A. Yes.
Q. And you didn’t quite believe that she was never there because she was waiting tables, true?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you know at the time she was litigating a sexual assault case with J.C. Penney?
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as assuming facts not in evidence and argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained as to assuming facts not in evidence.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever know anything about any litigation Janet Arvizo was involved in with anybody?
A. No. No.
Q. Did David or Janet ever talk to you about their litigation with any company or individual?

A. No.

Q. Now, you learned that Janet brought her children to the comedy camp from East Los Angeles, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever visit their home?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Did you ever talk to your husband about where he thought their home was located?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Okay. You did learn at some point that he visited them in El Monte, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. But you never were there?

A. No. He went to pick them up.

Q. Okay.

A. Well, Gavin and David.

Q. When you spoke to Janet on the phone, did you ever know where she was calling you from?

A. No.

Q. Did she ever mention where she was?

A. No.

Q. Okay. When you talked to Janet, did you ever ask her why “You’re not visiting your dying son”?

A. Well, the first conversation I had with Janet was at our home, and it was just comforting, and I hadn’t been to the hospital yet. But every other conversation David was there, so, no, I did not.

Q. Okay. Did Janet ever visit your home?

A. No.

Q. Now, to your knowledge, did the three Arvizo children visit your home with David?

A. No. Just one. Gavin.

Q. Just Gavin? And how many times did he visit your home, if you remember?

A. Just once.

Q. Okay. And that’s the time where suddenly this wallet appeared on a mantle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And about how high was the mantle, if you remember?

A. Probably -- let’s see, it wasn’t as tall as I was. Probably five feet.

Q. Okay. And do you remember seeing the wallet there?

A. I don’t, because I went directly into the kitchen.

Q. Okay. And you don’t recall ever meeting Janet in person, correct?

A. I don’t.

Q. Did you visit the hospital at different times or did you typically visit at the same time of day?

A. No, different times, just depending on my husband’s schedule.

Q. Okay. And you thought you visited about six times, right?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. You thought your husband visited about 12 times, right?
A. I’m not sure how many times he visited. Sometimes he would go after his shift, without me.
Q. Okay. Okay. And you’re not sure if you’ve ever met Janet in person, right?
A. I don’t recall ever meeting her.
Q. Were you ever at The Laugh Factory when she was there with her children?
A. No, I never went to the comedy camp.
Q. Okay. Now, you did know that your husband was teaching the children, right?
A. Yes, I did. He spoke about them.
Q. Did he talk to you about what they did on stage?
A. Oh, yes. He thought they were very talented, especially Gavin.
Q. Did he talk to you about Gavin’s skit where he would talk about how impoverished they were on stage?
A. He didn’t go into specifics, no.
Q. Was it your understanding the mother would always be there watching the kids talk about their paverty on the stage?

A. Yes.

MR. ZONEN: Objection, speculation. She wasn’t there.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer was, “Yes.”

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You indicated that when David told you that Janet was working as a waitress and couldn’t be at the hospital, that red flags went up, correct?

A. Well, more that she was -- not because she was working as a waitress. I think the red flags went up that she was emotional, and the hospital would make her overcome and she couldn’t handle it. That, I thought, was a little strange.

Q. Thought it was a little odd.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. You thought that even with the emotional difficulty, a mother would likely be at the hospital with her dying son?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And you never saw her there one time?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, you described David as business-like, correct?

A. No.

Q. Did you tell the sheriffs he had a certain robotic and business-like demeanor about him?

A. I don’t believe I said “business-like.”

Robotic, maybe. He was very unemotional.
Q. Okay. And you didn’t think his behavior was consistent with a father whose son was seriously ill, right?
A. Yes.
Q. But you always saw him there every time you went to the hospital, right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Okay. So basically at that point, you thought both parents’ behavior seemed like something was off, true?
A. Yes.
Q. But David -- excuse me. Let me rephrase that.
How many times did you talk to David on the phone, do you think?
A. I’m not sure how many. He called me quite a bit when the fund-raiser -- but I really would see him more at the hospital, or the time that he came to our home.
Q. And David told you that Jamie Masada was helping him out financially, correct?
A. Yes, he did.
Q. And immediately when you met him, he began to sort of hint that he needed money, right?
A. Yes.
Q. You noticed that pretty quickly, didn’t you?
A. Yes.

Q. It went from sort of hints to direct requests at some point, right?
A. You know, I think he -- he always skirted the issue with me, because I think he knew that I wasn’t really biting.
Q. Okay. You weren’t -- you weren’t what?
A. Biting --
Q. Okay.
A. -- at his hints.
Q. When you didn’t bite, did he seem to persist?
A. He would, but I wasn’t biting.
Q. Okay. Was it your impression he began to work more on your husband than you at some point to get funds?
A. Probably, yes. I mean, there were many times I wasn’t there, so I can’t say.
Q. Now, you told him at one point he needed to go back to work and take care of his family, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And did he ever respond to that, that you remember?
A. He didn’t say anything, but his body language, he got very, like, agitated, like, oh, he didn’t like that I said that.
Q. At this time you’re suspicious as to whether his wife is really working, correct?

A. No.
Q. Did you know?
A. I didn’t know.
Q. Do you know if she was working?
A. I didn’t know.
Q. You didn’t know one way or the other, right?
A. No.
Q. Okay. You thought David was using Gavin and his other children as a tool to seek money, right?
A. I thought -- yes, I did.
Q. Okay. And you always seemed to anticipate that another hint at money was forthcoming when you were with him, right?
A. Well, he always did it, so I kind of started to expect it.
Q. Okay. Now, you told the sheriffs that during your phone conversations with Janet, she always seemed to be very grateful, right?
A. Yes.
Q. Very grateful for what you and your husband had done for the family, true?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you talk to her periodically?
A. I’m sorry. Now?
Q. Did you talk to Janet periodically -- no, no, at the time -- at the time you were interacting with the Arvizos.
A. Uh-huh.

Q. Let me narrow that better.

A. Sorry.

Q. At the time you were either visiting Gavin in the hospital or they were visiting your house, you would talk to Janet once in a while, correct?

A. At the hospital. Only if she called the hospital.

Q. Okay.

A. Yeah.

Q. Now, while you were visiting the hospital, did you know your husband was giving David money from time to time?

A. Yes, just, you know, out of his pocket.

Q. Okay.

A. You know, 20, 40, $60, something like that.

Q. Right. And Janet would call you from time to time and express her gratitude for all you did for the family, right?

A. Only -- I would only speak to her at the hospital, if she happened to call at the hospital. She never called me at home, except the first time to tell us that Gavin was ill.

Q. Okay. Okay. Were you in the mall when Gavin kept asking your husband to buy gifts for him?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. You were there too, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And how many shops do you think you went into?

A. Four or five.

Q. Okay. And as far as you recall, did Gavin ask your husband to buy him gifts in every shop?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And what kind of shops did you go into?

A. Into, like, the Discovery Store. There was a toy store there at that time. There were, actually, I think, two toy stores at that time that have since closed. And I think we went into another, like, shoe store or something like that.

Q. And did you find it odd that Gavin would keep asking you to buy gifts for him and the husband would stand -- excuse me, the father would stand there silent?

A. I didn’t find it odd that Gavin would ask for things. My daughter does the same thing. She asks for toys in every store she goes to.

Q. What about the father?

A. The father walking away and/or not putting some kind of cap on it I thought was kind of strange.

Q. Did Gavin typically ask your husband or you to buy him gifts?

A. Whichever one was nearest.

Q. He didn’t seem to ask his father to buy him gifts?

A. No.

Q. Did it appear to you he was almost prepped to do this, to go up to you and George to ask you to buy his gifts for him as opposed to going up to his father?

A. I don’t have any opinion on that. To me, kids do that, so that behavior didn’t seem strange to me. It was just David always walking away, out of the store, like, “Okay, go ahead and buy him the gifts.”

Q. What about the son never asking the father to buy him anything, did you find that strange?

A. No, because we didn’t think they had any money, so --

Q. Okay. You didn’t know, though, did you?

A. Know what?

Q. You didn’t really know how much money they had, did you?

A. I didn’t know anything about them, other than what my husband told me.

Q. Did you know whether or not someone named Louise Palanker had given them 20,000 bucks?

A. No.

Q. Knew nothing about that?

A. I had never met her. Didn’t know her.

Q. Did you know anything about Louise giving Janet a check for $10,000?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object; assuming facts not in evidence, and irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained; foundation.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know comedian Chris Tucker?

A. I know who he is. I've never met him.

Q. So you never talked to him about the Arvizos and his experiences?

A. No.

Q. All right. Now, at some point, you learned that the Arvizo family were visiting Neverland, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you learn the Arvizo family were visiting Neverland?

A. One day when we went to visit Gavin at the hospital, he had already been to Neverland.

Q. Okay. And did he seem excited about Neverland?

A. Oh, over the top.

Q. Okay. Did his father talk to you about Neverland?

A. That's all they talked about.

Q. Did his father talk to you about the fact Michael Jackson had given a truck to the family?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Gavin talk about the fact that Michael Jackson had given a truck to the family?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever hear him discuss that Michael Jackson had given a computer to the family?

A. I don't remember the computer, but I do remember the car.

Q. Did they talk about other gifts that Michael Jackson had given the family, to your knowledge?

A. They just talked about the whole experience. They were very -- you know, the movie theater, and the candy, and golf carts, and things like that.

Q. Okay. Did you notice David's attitude towards you change after he started visiting Michael Jackson?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And what was the change all about?

A. Well, all of a sudden, we -- our friendship to Gavin was not as important as them being at Neverland.

Q. Okay.

A. It just seemed like a shift; that George's time and compassion for Gavin wasn't as important anymore.

Q. Okay. And that bothered you?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Did you ever discuss that with David or Janet?

A. No.

Q. Now, did you learn at some point after you had severed your relationship with the Arvizos that

Janet had met with your husband to give him a good luck charm in gratitude for all you had done?
A. I knew about that before. It was a little key chain.
Q. Okay. Do you know about when that happened?
A. I don’t remember.
Q. Okay. Ever talk to Janet about her experiences at Neverland?
A. No.
Q. Okay. But you noticed a change in attitude in Gavin and David, right?
A. Yes, and the two other children.
Q. All of them?
A. All of them, yes.
Q. They just didn’t seem to be as interested in you and George anymore, right?
A. Well, it was just such a fantastic, over-the-top kind of experience.
Q. And they kept talking about how much Michael had given them, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you get the feeling they were sort of suggesting that maybe you didn’t give them enough?
A. Maybe, yeah.
Q. Okay. Did they talk about gifts that Michael Jackson had sent to the hospital for Gavin?
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as to vague as to “they.”

MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me, I’ll rephrase it.

Q. Did Gavin ever talk to you about gifts Michael Jackson had sent to him at the hospital?

A. No.

Q. Did David ever talk about that?

A. I think there was a basket, but I don’t remember what was in the basket. They pointed to a basket -- well, David pointed to a basket, but I can’t remember what was in it.

Q. Okay. Okay. And Gavin kept talking to you about driving golf carts at Neverland, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. They seemed to -- he seemed to be very excited by that?

A. Yes.

Q. And did David tell you they were going to keep visiting Neverland?

A. I don’t think so. I don’t think that came up in the conversation.

Q. Did he tell you about numerous visits they had made to Neverland?

A. The one that sticks out in my mind is the first one.

Q. Okay. Now, did you talk to David on the phone about Neverland, or in person?

A. In person at the hospital.

Q. At the hospital, okay. Okay.

And it was your understanding that Gavin was going back and forth to the hospital for treatment?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And was it your understanding that while he was in the middle of his treatments, he and the family went to Neverland? Is that your understanding?

A. I believe it was one of the weeks that he was feeling better and he was in remission.

Q. Okay. Okay.

A. Because he was having chemotherapy. And there were times when he felt better, and right after the treatments, he would feel very bad.

Q. You recall your husband going to El Monte and picking up David and his children, true?

A. No, just David and Gavin.

Q. Okay. And when do you recall your husband going to El Monte and picking up David and Gavin?

A. That was when they came to our house, but I'm not sure exactly when, the month or --

Q. Okay. You described to the sheriffs that it was a hot day, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did you remember that?

A. Because David was -- I mean -- "David." I'm sorry, Gavin was still ill, and I remember being concerned that he shouldn't be outside in his condition when it was hot.

Q. And about what time of day did you first see

David and Gavin on that occasion?

A. I think they came to our house around noon.

Q. Okay.

A. I think.

Q. Now, did you know your husband George was buying gifts for Gavin and bringing them to the hospital?

A. I bought them also, yes.

Q. And did David express gratitude to you for doing that?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Gavin?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Janet?

A. She wasn’t there, no.

Q. Okay. When you talked to her on the phone, though, she expressed gratitude for all you’d done for her family, right?

A. But not really -- more spiritually than -- being there with Gavin than financially, no.

Q. Okay. Now, you were trying to arrange a benefit in Pasadena, correct?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And that was a club that George had appeared at, correct?

A. Yeah, he kind of considers that his home club. That’s where he started, and it’s one of his favorite clubs.

Q. And you told David -- correct me if I’m wrong, you told David that you thought you could raise between seven and $14,000, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was his reaction to that?

A. He was very happy.

Q. Okay. You don’t know what David was doing with the money he was given by George, do you?

A. No, but it was never a lot of money. It was always, you know, money to buy lunch or to -- gas money. It wasn’t anything -- it was always less than $100. It wasn’t something --

Q. Right. But you don’t know what he was doing with that?

A. No, we did not.

Q. You had suspicions, didn’t you?

A. No, I -- not about that.

Q. Didn’t you have suspicions about the fact that he wasn’t working, Janet may not be working?

A. Right.

Q. You didn’t know where the money was going, right?

A. I was concerned that the family was working on a waitress’s -- I mean, living on a waitress’s wages, yes.

Q. But you never asked her what restaurant she was working at, right?

A. No.

Q. She never told you where she was waiting tables, correct?

A. No. Our conversations were always more, “Thank you for being with Gavin,” things like that.

Q. When did you ask David to provide you with a list of his creditors?

A. In -- I think it was in April, near when the fund-raiser was going to be.

Q. And your desire was to control where the money went, correct?

A. Well, I wanted to test him, really. It wasn’t to control. I wanted to make sure -- if we were going to actually do this and put ourselves out, then I wanted to make sure that the money was going somewhere, and I didn’t trust that it was.

Q. And did you believe that Gavin didn’t have medical insurance at the time?

A. No, he told me that he did.

Q. Okay. Did he tell you at some point it was going to lapse?

A. If he didn’t go back to work.

Q. Okay. So what did you think the money was going to be raised for?

A. To pay their rent, to pay their bills, their electric bill. Things of that nature.

Q. Did you learn that they were raising money from any other people at the same time?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as to 3892 "they"; vague.

MR. MESEREAU: I'll rephrase it.

Q. Do you know whether or not Janet was trying to raise money from any other comedian at the same time?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether or not Janet was asking Chris Tucker for any support at that time?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Do you know whether Janet was asking Chris Tucker's fiancee for a car at that time?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Do you know whether any efforts were made to get money from Michael Jackson at the time?

A. No.

Q. All right. Did you know Fritz Coleman at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know whether or not Fritz Coleman had ever visited the Arvizo home?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And did you -- did you have any knowledge of Fritz Coleman being involved with a fund-raiser for the Arvizos?

A. I do now. At the time, I had kind of forgotten about that fund-raiser, because when I think of a fund-raiser, I think about the one that I was planning that never came -- you know, came to be. But I’ve heard since then that there was a fund-raiser that Fritz did.

Q. And in your discussions with Janet, did she ever tell you that she had come across a large sum of money in a civil settlement?

A. No.

Q. She never mentioned 150,000 to you?

A. No.

Q. You told David you wanted to raise money and actually pay their rent directly; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you discuss where -- excuse me. Did you discuss what you would pay the rent for, what residence?

A. I assumed it was the studio apartment. That’s the only residence that -- I knew the grandmother had a home, but I meant their residence.

Q. And you hadn’t been there, correct?

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, your husband had not been there either, right?

A. No.

Q. He’d been to El Monte?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And David said something to you like, “I want cash”; is that correct?

A. Well, yes, when I asked -- when I told him that I needed his bills, he said, “Well, I thought I was just going to get the cash.” And I said, “Oh, no, that’s not how it works.”

Q. He didn’t like that, did he?

A. No.

Q. Okay.

THE COURT: Counsel, let’s take our break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor. Just a couple more questions.

Q. At some point did you learn that the Arvizos had divorced?

A. No, not until recently.

Q. Okay. And was it your understanding that Janet had applied for welfare?

A. I didn’t know that.

Q. And did you ever learn that she applied for disability?

A. No.

Q. And you never knew she’d obtained a big settlement of any kind?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as asked and answered, irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. When did you last see the Arvizos?

A. Let’s see, probably in the hospital. I don’t really recall.

Q. Okay. Did the visit to your home happen after Gavin was in the hospital or in the middle?

A. Kind of in the middle. His treatment was like a year long.

Q. Okay. And do you remember the last time you talked to Janet?

A. In the hospital.

Q. Okay. Not at your home?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, obviously you learned about your husband’s strong disagreement with David, correct?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. You knew that David was calling the radio station, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And at some point you basically severed all ties with the Arvizo family, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you ever see them after that?

A. No.

Q. Ever talk to them after that?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Now, did you ever discuss any fund-raising plans with anyone else at The Laugh Factory?

A. No. We were going to do the fund-raiser at The Ice House.

Q. Okay. Did you ever get involved in any efforts with The Laugh Factory to have a fund-raiser?

A. I still don’t remember that fund-raiser.

Q. Did you ever talk to Fritz Coleman about a fund-raiser for Gavin?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And you were planning the one in Pasadena, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you planning it mostly with David?

A. No, myself.

Q. Okay. Were you talking to the children at all about that?

A. No.

Q. About whatever role they would play in it?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And did you get to the point where you were actually doing invitations?

A. No. We were going to announce it on the radio. The way it works is, usually you -- the way we were going to do this one was George was going to announce it on the radio station, and then -- the price and the time, and then The Laugh -- I’m sorry, The Ice House was going to take the reservations.

Q. How -- did you ever know at any time whether or not Fritz Coleman had made announcements about another fund-raiser for the Arvizos?

A. Yes, I think there was a fund-raiser, but we weren’t involved in that one.

Q. You didn’t communicate with anybody about that?

A. No.

Q. So yours was separate and apart from anything that The Laugh Factory was having?

A. Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. No further questions.

THE COURT: Redirect?

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Ms. Lopez, you said that you thought that Janet’s gratitude was spiritual. What did you mean by that?

A. Well, she just said -- she said she was praying for us and thanking us for being with Gavin, and for giving him comfort and giving him hope and making him stronger spiritually by being at his bedside.

Q. Did she ever say anything to you about money that had been given to David by your husband?

A. No.

Q. Did she ever say anything at all about any of the gifts to the family at all?

A. No.

Q. Did she ever talk to you about that gift that she gave to your husband, the key chain?

A. I thanked her for it, because it meant a lot to George.

Q. Could you describe the gift for us?

A. It’s a -- it’s a small key chain. It has a mustard seed in it, and she said that she had had it for -- it was obviously used, and that she’d had it for a long time and she just wanted him to have it.

Q. And he accepted it?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And was grateful for it?

A. Yes.

Q. You made the statement that you thought the kids were a tool for David, or something like that?

A. I’m sorry?

Q. Were a tool of David?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell me what you meant.

A. Well, it just seemed he didn’t have a connection with his children. And to me, it seemed like he was using Gavin’s illness for gain, financial gain.

Q. Did you notice any change in David’s behavior as the months went by while Gavin was in the hospital receiving treatment?

A. Well, he just kept asking for money. I mean, it was just kind of his M.O.

Q. It was consistent?

A. Consistent.

Q. Every time you were there?
A. Yes.
MR. ZONEN: I have no further questions.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Thank you. You may step down.
MR. NICOLA: Your Honor, we’ll be re-calling Sergeant Bob Spinner.
THE COURT: All right.
MR. NICOLA: And I would ask permission to reopen my direct. I think my near fatal accident on Friday jarred my thinking process. I was traumatized.
THE COURT: You may be seated. You’re still under oath.

ROBERT SPINNER
Having been previously sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

THE COURT: Did you discuss that with counsel, so they know what -- why you’ve asked me to do that?
MR. SANGER: I don’t know why. I was just informed he wanted to do it.
MR. NICOLA: I did tell Mr. Sanger this morning at the same time that we talked about calling Mr. Lopez out of order, perhaps.

THE COURT: Would you tell him so he knows? I don’t want -- I just want you to know in case you’re --

MR. SANGER: I don’t know. Could we have a moment so I can find out?

THE COURT: Yes. Please do.

(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)

MR. SANGER: If the question -- if the question is -- if the question is, do I now know I have the general subject matter, and I have no ability to form an opinion as to whether or not it’s appropriate to reopen based on what I was just told.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Reopened)

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Detective Spinner, on Friday, you mentioned a series of 19 fingerprints that you made positive identifications on. I’d like to talk to you specifically about the items that are marked in the 317 series of sheriff’s evidence that you testified you had made identifications on.

When you examined those items in the 317 series, did all the items that you identified fingerprints on arrive at the same time?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Would you explain that for the jury, please?

A. When I was first assigned the job, I went to the property room to obtain Items 306 and 317, which were the two initial item numbers. I was told, when I got Item 306, that 317 was not available, and it would be available at a later date.

I was advised on August the 3rd that the 317 that had been -- or part of 317, which had been at the DOJ for laboratory for analysis, was back, and I went out and got it.

I was later advised that there were a number -- the remainder of 317 was brought to the forensics lab. When I came back to work on October the 5th, it was locked in the cabinet in the forensics lab and the remainder was in the black briefcase.

Q. So you got one portion of it in August?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. NICOLA: May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. NICOLA: Marked as 622.

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, I am going to object that this is not proper to reopen. It’s basically material that’s covered, and it’s elaboration on something that he brought up in redirect.

MR. NICOLA: May we approach, Your Honor, so we do not --

THE COURT: No. I’ve already given you permission to reopen. Proceed.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you.

Q. I’ve placed in front of you Exhibit 622. Is that 622?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. Okay.

MR. NICOLA: May I use your copy, please?

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: I’m just going to hold it up. It appears to be nothing more than a couple of timelines, correct?

MR. SANGER: I suppose that’s not appropriate to publish it until it’s an exhibit.

MR. NICOLA: There’s really nothing on this.

MR. SANGER: There is something on it.

THE COURT: Counsel, you’re required --

MR. NICOLA: It is just a couple of timelines.

THE COURT: Counsel, you’re required to mark the exhibit, show it to opposing counsel, and then show it to the witness without publishing.

MR. NICOLA: I understand. I apologize, Judge.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: What is on 622?

A. It appears to be two timelines for the year 2004, and one for a brown evidence bag, 529, and for 3903 a black briefcase, 470.

Q. Okay. Do you recognize Exhibit 470?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And do you recognize Exhibit 529?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Beginning with Exhibit 529, can you please open the package up, and how do you recognize that exhibit?

A. This is the evidence bag which I received the first grouping of items which were booked into evidence under Sheriff’s Evidence Item No. 3-1-7, or 317.

Q. Okay. On Exhibit 622, can you please note on the timeline?

A. Do you want me to write that down?

Q. Please write the date that you first opened that bag on the timeline, and on which date --

THE COURT: Has that timeline been marked as an exhibit?

MR. NICOLA: It’s Exhibit 622, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Is that Exhibit 622?

MR. NICOLA: Yes.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Tell the jury what you just wrote.

A. 8-3 of ‘04.

Q. And that’s Exhibit No. 529?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Can you tell the jury, please, which items from Exhibit 529 were items that you were later able to make positive identifications of fingerprints in?

A. It would have been 317, L, Lincoln; 317-R, Robert; 317-S, Sam; and 317-YY, or yellow-yellow.

Q. Do you have a list of the names of those publications?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. Can we start again, please, with the 317-L with a name?

A. 317-L is December 2000 issue of a magazine entitled “Finally Legal.”

Q. Okay. And whose fingerprints were in that magazine?

A. Star Arvizo.

Q. Was there another magazine that was in 529 that you made positive identifications of fingerprints out of?

A. Excuse me for one minute.
317-R, Robert.

Q. And the name of that magazine, please?

A. Is Hustler’s “Barely Legal Hardcore.”

Q. Could you tell the jury which fingerprints you were able to positively identify in that item, please?

A. Three fingerprints from Gavin Arvizo, and one fingerprint from Mr. Jackson.

Q. Just for the record, is 317-L - you’re too fast - Exhibit 513?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. And for the record, is 317-R Exhibit 518?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. You mentioned a couple of other publications?
A. 317-S, Sam, which was an unknown date issue of Penthouse magazine with the cover removed.
Q. For the record, is that Exhibit 519?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Was there another publication that you recovered positive fingerprints from which were contained in Exhibit 529?
A. 317-YY, yellow-yellow.
Q. And that was?
A. The name of that was “Al Goldstein’s 100 Best Adult Videos.”
Q. And whose fingerprints did you recover in that?
A. Gavin Arvizo.
Q. And does that appear to be Exhibit No. 504?
A. Yes, it does.
Q. I’ll let you package that up before I ask some more questions, okay? Don’t put that away yet.
Are each of the publications that you have just described for the jury marked on the front of Exhibit No. 529?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Okay. Are there additional items denoted by 317 followed by a letter of the alphabet written on Exhibit 529? You don’t have to read the list.

A. Yes, there are.

Q. And at the time that you received Exhibit 529, did you conduct an inventory of what was inside the bag compared to what was written on the exterior of the bag?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you find any item missing?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Did you find any item inside the bag that was not accounted for on the outside of the bag by item number?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Okay. Could you tell the jury, please, what date you began processing Exhibit No. 317-L? And “processing,” I mean the procedure that you described for us on Friday.

A. Okay. I started -- I obtained the items on 8-3 and we started the processing on 8-11.

Q. Could you mark that, please, on your Exhibit 622? Is it legible?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you using a pen now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. With respect to Exhibit 317-R, Item 3907

317-R, the Exhibit No. 518, could you tell the jury, please, when you began processing that item?

A. The same day, 8-11, August 11th.

Q. Would you please put that on the timeline as well?

Does the same hold true for Items 317-S, Exhibit 519, and 317-YY, Exhibit 504?

A. No, 317, Sam, and 317-YY were started on 8-12.

Q. On August 12th --

A. Yes.

Q. -- of 2004? Could you put those two items on the timeline as well with the date that you began processing them, please?

Just remember we'll have to read that later.

A. You've seen my writing.

Q. You mentioned that you did not have Exhibit 470, the black briefcase, at the time that you had Exhibit 529?

A. That's correct.

Q. When were you able to take custody of the black briefcase, Exhibit 470, and check through the contents?

A. On 10-5 of '04.

Q. On October 5th of 2004?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you know where the briefcase had been prior to that time?

A. I was told it had been --
MR. SANGER: Calls for hearsay, objection.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Do you want to look at the briefcase now or do you need to?
A. No, I don’t need to. It’s got seals on it.
Q. Okay. Did you find fingerprints for which you made a positive identification on any publications that you removed from Exhibit 470, the black briefcase?
A. Yes. On three.
Q. Could you please tell the jury on which magazines those were, publications, I mean?
A. 317-ocean, O, which was -- it was a “Barely Legal” magazine.
317-T, Tom, which was a “Visions of Fantasy, A Hard-Rock Affair” magazine.
And 317-union, which was a “Visions of Fantasy, Jose’s Black Starlett” magazine.
Q. Okay. Beginning with Exhibit 515, Item 317-O, whose prints did you find in that again?
A. It was Mr. Jackson’s.
Q. And Item 317-T, Exhibit 520?
A. Mr. Jackson’s.
Q. And Item 317-U, which is Exhibit 521?
A. Would have been Gavin Arvizo.
Q. And on which page of that publication was that print located?

MR. SANGER: Your Honor, this is cumulative. It's been asked and answered.
THE WITNESS: Page --
THE COURT: Yeah, what is it that you didn't do last week that you're doing now?
MR. NICOLA: Just this last part of the timeline, Judge. Didn't ask him any questions about dates of processing, or when he received the material.
THE COURT: Well, let's limit it to the dates, then, and not go through the rep -- whose prints are on what. You covered all that last week.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: With respect to those three items, what date did you process them, if they were all on the same day?
A. On 317-O, I started processing on October the 5th, and it was completed on October the 12th.
Q. Okay. Could you please put that on the timeline?
How about Exhibit 520, 317-T?
A. On 317-T, again obtained on October 5, and completed on October 12.
Q. Can you please write that on the timeline as well, Exhibit 622? And how about Exhibit 521, Exhibit 317 -- Item 317-U?
A. 317-U, again initially obtained on 10 -- or October the 5th, and it was completed on October the 12th.

Q. And could you write that on the timeline as well?
At this time, Your Honor, I’d move 622 into evidence and request permission to publish.
MR. SANGER: Before the Court rules, could I take a look at it, please?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. SANGER: May I approach to do that?
THE COURT: Yes, you may.
MR. NICOLA: Would you mind bringing it back, if you’re amenable?
MR. SANGER: Counsel’s asked me to bring it back, so if that’s all right, I’ll do that.
MR. NICOLA: Save me a trip.
(Laughter.)
MR. ZONEN: A trip.
THE BAILIFF: It’s on.
MR. NICOLA: It’s on?
THE BAILIFF: It should have been, unless somebody turned it off.
THE COURT: What input do you need?
MR. NICOLA: I believe that is “Input 4,” Your Honor. The Elmo.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Does -- Exhibit 622, does that exhibit accurately reflect the items of evidence you were able to find identifiable fingerprints from and the dates that you processed them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it also accounts for the items of evidence from which those publications came from?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you process any of -- any magazine or periodicals that came to you for fingerprint comparison in the month of September that you recall?

A. I was gone for the -- for at least three weeks in September on a trip, and I don’t believe I did much processing of anything in September. I might have done something at the tail end of September, but I can’t recall.

Q. Okay. Generally what was the success ratio in checking for fingerprints in these magazines, periodicals?

MR. SANGER: Objection. First of all, the question is vague as to which set of magazines. But secondly, that’s cumulative. The overall question has been asked and answered with specific numbers.

MR. NICOLA: I’m not sure that has, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I don’t know what you mean by “success ratio.” I think we covered that last week.

MR. NICOLA: Okay.

THE COURT: But I don’t know what you mean by that, so I’ll sustain a foundation objection.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Regarding your ability to locate latent prints on the kinds of materials that are in front of you, the 317 series, if -- if you can explain in a percentage, only if you can, please describe for the Court what kind of percentage ratio you can successfully find latent prints on these kinds of items, if you know?

MR. SANGER: Objection, foundation. And it’s unintelligible.

THE COURT: Sustained on foundation.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Why don’t we move on. Were you concerned about contamination of the fingerprints in this case?

MR. SANGER: Objection, Your Honor. This is beyond the offer to reopen.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. NICOLA: I have no further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: 622’s admitted.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor. Do you need those exhibits or.…

MR. SANGER: Just leave them. That’s fine. May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Sergeant Spinner, how are you?

A. I’m fine, sir.

Q. Good. And you’re retired?

A. Yes, sir, I think so.

Q. Okay. Not for a little while anyway. First of all, when you talk about -- when you answer the district attorney’s questions as to whose fingerprints are on something, that’s your opinion; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And fingerprint identification is subjective; is that right?

A. It falls into two categories. The initial examination and evaluation I would say is based in fact. The opinion is subjective.

Q. All right. So ultimately your opinion -- this is what I was asking, I believe. Ultimately your opinion as to whose fingerprints match is a subjective opinion, correct?

A. That would be correct.

Q. All right. Now, you indicated -- in this last bit of testimony this afternoon, you indicated that, in essence, you received materials with regard to Item No. 317 from two different locations, right?

A. Two different times.

Q. Well, okay. Two different times. They were from two different bags, right?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. All right. One bag you told us about there was Exhibit 529, which was an evidence bag, right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And the other was the briefcase, which was actually 470, Exhibit 470, court exhibit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And within 470 were a group of magazines, correct?

A. Among other items, yes, sir.

Q. And some loose pages as well?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And those materials were simply in the briefcase, right?

A. Correct.

Q. They were not separately put into plastic bags or envelopes or anything else; is that right?

A. Not till I got ahold of it, yes, sir.

Q. I’m talking about when you received it, those items were not put into separate evidence containers, whether it be a plastic bag, a paper bag or some other form, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Now, you located ultimately 19 fingerprints that you’ve talked to the jury about, and we have the comparison boards there; is that correct? That’s the right number?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Ten of the prints, including at least one that you attribute to Gavin Arvizo, came from items other than the bag, 529, that you believe came from 3915

the Department of Justice; is that correct?
A. I haven’t totaled it up, but, yeah, I’ll take your word for it.
Q. I don’t want you to take my word for it. Is that approximately correct? Or you can total it up, if you’d like.
A. It would be approximately correct, yes, sir.
Q. All right. And at least one of the prints from Gavin Arvizo came from something other than Evidence Bag 529; is that correct?
A. Correct.
MR. NICOLA: Objection. Misstates the evidence, Your Honor. The evidence is one, not “at least one.”
MR. SANGER: Objection; speaking objections.
THE COURT: Sustained. The objection’s overruled.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: Is that correct, sir? Is that correct?
He may have answered. I don’t know if the answer came in.
THE COURT: He said, “Correct.”
MR. SANGER: Okay. Thank you.
Q. Now, there were also two other prints that had been identified either as positive or inconclusive, and those two were switched or shifted at a date after your initial reports were written; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. After a review by a third party, yes, sir. That’s correct.

Q. Let’s talk about those two for a moment. You wrote final reports on the various latent print examinations that you did on a certain date in December; is that correct?

A. As the item process -- each item was finished, I had a mandate to complete a report within 24 hours of completing each item as I went, so it would -- when the report was written would depend on when the total completion date on that item was -- actually happened.

Q. I’m sorry.

A. Go ahead.

Q. What I’m asking, and maybe I wasn’t clear, as of December of 2004, you had final reports written on your identification of the various prints; is that correct?

A. December the 17th, yes, sir.

Q. All right. And then these two prints were subject to additional reports that you wrote sometime in 2005; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, that’s correct. That was due to an agreement that --

MR. SANGER: I’m going to move to strike as nonresponsive.

THE WITNESS: Okay. That’s correct, sir.

THE COURT: Stricken.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. One of the prints had been labeled as inconclusive as of December 2004; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And then in January of 2005, you wrote a report indicating that you believed that that should be positive as to Star Arvizo; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, that’s correct.

Q. The other print had been written up, as of December 2004, as inconclusive -- I’m sorry, as positive as to Mr. Jackson, and then you changed that to inconclusive; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And that was based on additional consultation that you had?

A. Yes, with Mrs. Hemman and also I.D. Tech Allmeyer of the Santa Barbara Police Department.

Q. And I.D. Tech Allmeyer is somebody that you’ve known for a number of years; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. And he worked for the sheriff’s department for quite some time?

A. I’m going to guess about four years before he went to another job.

Q. So that was not a stranger who you called upon to do a review of the work; is that correct?

A. No, but I trust his judgment.

Q. All right. Now, you indicated last week that you had examined about 80,000 prints in your career as a latent print examiner; is that correct?

A. That’s an approximation, yes, sir.

Q. 21,000 of them were in this case, correct?

A. Approximately, yes, sir, probably close to that.

Q. So over one quarter of your experience in comparing latent prints in cases occurred in the Michael Jackson investigation; is that correct?

A. It may be -- 80,000 may be slightly low. It could be -- it’s -- to say the examination I’ve done just in this case alone is one quarter of my total experience I don’t think is true.

Q. Okay. So you want to revise the number upward from 80,000?

A. I would say it would be in the -- maybe the 100 to 120 figure. Probably not much more than that.

Q. Okay. So a fifth -- if those figures are correct, a fifth to a sixth of the prints that you’ve examined in your career have been in Mr. Jackson’s case; is that correct?

A. That may be close, yes, sir. It was a large amount that we did all at once.

Q. All right. Now, you found 706 latent prints in this case that -- when I say “you found” -- let me withdraw that.

The people in the unit who you were working with ultimately found 706 latent prints?

A. That’s the number we were sent, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. So when you say “sent,” there were people in the Santa Barbara unit and there were people in the Santa Maria unit that were sending you prints?

A. They were providing us prints to examine, yes, sir.

Q. All right. So 706 of them, right?

A. Correct. At my count, yes.

Q. And you matched up 20 or so?

A. There were 19 positive I.D.s out of that amount, yes.

Q. 19 as you testify today, but you had another positive I.D. that you changed back to inconclusive; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. That’s why I say 20.

A. Yes, sir, 20.

Q. Of the 706 prints, there were 178 that you believe were sufficient to make a match if you had something to match it to; is that correct?

A. That’s correct. Part of those were palm prints, and they weren’t all fingerprints. I believe there was 13 palms mixed in that number.

Q. Okay.

A. If my memory serves me correctly.

Q. All right. So 165 fingerprints and 13 palm prints?

A. It sounds close, yes.

Q. You were asked to compare these fingerprints only -- and palm prints, for that matter, only to the prints that were presented to you for Mr. Jackson and for Gavin Arvizo and for Star Arvizo; is that correct?

A. Yes, we had a complete set of fingerprints for Gavin and Star Arvizo, but I only had exemplar fingerprints for Mr. Jackson.

Q. I'm sorry, say that -- what did you say?

A. I had no palm prints for Mr. Jackson.

Q. I see. So you just had fingerprints for Mr. Jackson?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. Now -- let me walk in between everybody here. Excuse me.

May I approach, Your Honor? I'm sorry.

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Let me show you 743, 744 and 745. And I believe that you had already said on direct examination that those are, in essence, blow-ups of the other prints that are in evidence; is that correct?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Now, two of those are rolled prints, inked prints; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one is the Livescan, which is a digital film -- I don’t want to say “digital film,” but a digital representation of the prints; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And how many sets of fingerprints did you have for Star and Gavin Arvizo to work from?

A. We had two sets of each.

Q. Okay. Now, for some reason you’ve just shown us -- or let me withdraw that. The prosecutor has shown you and you have identified one set of prints for each one, correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Misstates the actual exhibit boards. I’d like counsel to be specific here, or it’s vague.

THE COURT: Just a moment. The objection’s overruled.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Do you have both sets of rolled prints on each exhibit there?

A. One set of prints for Star Arvizo has two cards on it, and the one for Gavin Arvizo has one.

Q. Okay. Was there another set of rolled prints for Gavin Arvizo that you’re aware of?

A. Yes. But if my memory serves me correct, they were not -- they really weren’t any good.

Q. And so those -- you had those redone? Did you have those redone?

A. They were redone at my request, yes, sir.

Q. Did you also have Star Arvizo’s prints redone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you wanted to see if a better set of prints could be developed?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. Did you believe at the time you looked at it that Mr. Jackson’s prints were done appropriately?

A. They could have been done better, but they’re appropriate, yes.

Q. Okay. And the same -- well, let me withdraw that. As far as Star Arvizo’s, his first set was done appropriately but could have been better. Would that be your testimony?

A. His first set was okay, but they could have been better. As I recall, there was some smearing and areas that really couldn’t be seen into as far as the clarity.

Q. Okay. Now, we’re talking about the known prints or the rolled prints, as they’re usually called, of the particular subjects, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And one of them being Livescan, but what do you refer to them all as collectively? Known prints?

A. I call them exemplar prints.

Q. Exemplar prints, all right. And the idea is that if you do not have a good example in your exemplar prints, it makes it more difficult to determine whether or not a print, a latent print, is identifiable; is that correct?

A. You have to have -- yes, sir, it is. You have to have the same clarity to be able to see the detail in the known print that you have identified in the latent print.

Q. What sorts of things can cause known -- known prints or exemplar prints to be imperfect?

A. Deposition pressure. Torquing. When the print’s rolled, sometimes the tip will roll faster than the base and you’ll get some smearing going on.

Q. Imperfections in the paper?

A. Normally imperfections in the paper, that the card stock that’s used is what’s supplied by the state or the FBI, and it’s pretty common, standard, and we don’t get that much problem. It’s a hard cardboard-type paper and it doesn’t twist or bend.

Q. It doesn’t twist or bend, but occasionally something will not show up on the print?

A. There might be an area that’s blank. That would be deposition pressure.

Q. So in other words, there wasn’t enough pressure put on the -- on the finger to apply it to the cardboard in order to transfer the ink?

A. That could be. Or it wasn’t inked properly, if ink was used.

Q. Okay. So the finger was not inked properly; 3924 therefore, there was not ink on that part of the finger to make the imprint on the paper, correct?

A. That would -- that’s a loose definition, yes.

Q. Okay. Well, I don’t want to be too loose. Is that close enough?

A. Or there was a blank spot, or there was a bubble, or there was some other reason why there was a -- not a total recording of the friction ridge skin.

Q. You talk about torquing. Is that turning the fingers so there’s a smudge or a smear or a distortion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Are there any other -- in rolled ink prints, are there any other causes that you’re aware of of deformation in the print?

A. Well, you could have too much pressure also, which will cause the ridges to be wider when they wouldn’t normally be, or they will normally either hide some detail because the ridge is flattened out.

Q. Too much ink might just cause a blot?

A. Too much ink might just cause some pressure, yes.

Q. Now, what about the Livescan prints that you have of Mr. Jackson? Can you tell me what deficiencies there are in those particular prints?

A. They’re a little scattered, possibly because his hands were dry when they were rolled.

Q. So not all of the detail was actually transferred to the digital format; is that correct?

A. Not all of it in some areas, like below the base of the thumb, shows up, and why it’s not there I don’t want to hazard a guess.

Q. Okay. So in other words, there should be more there -- if it was done properly, there would be more of a print, more ridge detail?

A. It would depend on, again, how the prints were rolled and who did it, and how much care was taken, et cetera, et cetera, with the Livescan, because you’re not actually using ink. You’re relying on moisture, a glass platen, which is then read by the machine to record the prints.

Q. Would you agree, based on your experience, that properly rolled ink prints are a better exemplar than Livescan?

A. Correct.

Q. Livescan, however, is used because it’s more convenient; is that correct?

A. I don’t know that “convenience” would be the proper word, but it’s an overall method to get the fingerprints transferred back and forth, since it’s just a digital, for the Department of Justice purposes rather than mailing inked cards.

Q. It’s a little hard to hear. It’s the end of the day, and I think you’re trailing off.

A. I’ll move closer.

Q. In other words, Livescan is simply a way to get it directly into a computer system so you can make a disk or send it by e-mail, you can send it off to the DOJ, to the FBI, correct?

A. It’s a -- yes, sir, it’s a quicker way of getting a set of inked -- rolled ink -- rolled fingerprints for identification.

Q. One of the reasons it’s good to have rolled -- we’re going back to rolled, which I kind of like. You said exemplar prints, so let’s stick with that. We covered Livescan and inked prints, right?

A. Yes, sir. That’s correct.

Q. So it’s important to have a good set of exemplar prints so that you can look, as an examiner, to see if ridge detail matches ridge detail from the latent print to the exemplar print, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. You also need to look at the exemplar print, when comparing it to the latent print, in order to determine if there are any unexplained differences between the two; is that correct?

A. Well, you compare the two, latent to known, known to latent, and then you have to work out the discrepancies between the two, yes.

Q. All right.

THE COURT: Counsel, I'd like to stop a little early, because there's a couple issues we need to take up outside the presence of the jury.

MR. SANGER: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: I'm going to excuse you now. We'll see you at 8:30 tomorrow morning. And remember, Thursday you won't come in.

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: We need that door closed back there.

THE BAILIFF: I'll get it.

THE WITNESS: He took care of it, sir.

THE COURT: Let's see, the first issue I wanted to take up was whether or not -- the question of whether or not we should instruct the jury on the 1108 and perhaps 1101 evidence before, at the time of taking the evidence, during, after. I like to instruct juries on special points as we go along. I don't know when you intend to start your 1108 evidence, now that the ruling's been made. And you don't need to -- since I'm just putting that to you right now, you don't need to answer me now. I'd like to know tomorrow. And if you have a suggested instruction, I think there's a -- there might be a 3928

CALJIC that applies. I haven't looked. Anyway --

MR. SNEDDON: Yes, I believe they should be preinstructed. And yes, there is a CALJIC that's been approved by the courts to be given in such situations.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SNEDDON: And I would anticipate maybe in two weeks, depending on the length of cross-examination of certain witnesses.

THE COURT: So that gives everybody time if you want to submit a different instruction or a pinpoint instruction or....

MR. MESEREAU: We'd want to do that, Your Honor. There is some -- for example, burden of proof we think should wait till the end, but there are some preinstructions we would like on that issue.

THE COURT: I just put you on notice so you can start feeding me information. That gives me -- I can relax a little bit, because I know we have time to do this right.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

THE COURT: The second issue is there's a -- one of the -- one of the witnesses who's testified, Kiki Fournier, has called my secretary. And as I understand from my secretary, has contacted both attorneys and she has requested permission to travel outside the United States with her child, or children, I don’t know. And she advised my secretary that she could not get agreement from the attorneys on her ability to do that. She’s willing to be on a return call for 48 hours if someone needs her. So I need to get your position.

I think she’s basically testified and been cross-examined. I don’t think she’s been excused technically, but I don’t like to prevent people from going on with their lives when we can make arrangements to allow them to go on with their lives and still be available when they’re needed.

What’s --

MR. SNEDDON: Judge, I indicated that that was more than okay with me, that she could go. I anticipated that if we would want to re-call her, we would still have time, because we probably would not have rested by the date she plans on returning, so therefore it shouldn’t be a concern in terms of the defense calling her, because she would be available if they wanted to.

So as far as I’m concerned, she could do that. If an emergency arose, and we need her to come back, it sounds like she’s willing to come back and we would arrange that. So as far as I’m concerned, she can go and should go.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I don’t want to interfere with her travel plans at all. Our concern is there is a great likelihood we will re-call her for a lot of reasons I don’t want to disclose at the present.

THE COURT: Nor do you need to.

MR. MESEREAU: It seems to me that her plans -- I don’t know where she’s going or when she plans to leave. But her plans are to be back in the near future, is that correct?

THE COURT: Within -- within 28 days, I think. And I think she plans to leave immediately. You probably know more than I do. My secretary just said we have a problem here, and --

MR. SNEDDON: I can assist the Court and Mr. Mesereau in this regard, Your Honor. My information is she needed to book the tickets today. She was going to leave immediately and she’d be back the first week in May.

THE COURT: So that’s more than the estimated time I thought. But at any rate, if you’re not going to put on your 1108 evidence for two more weeks, I can see that -- it seems to me that’s a safe return date for her.

MR. MESEREAU: Yeah.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MESEREAU: Again, I don’t want to interfere with her plans.

THE COURT: I would require that she sign a statement like -- she’s on subpoena, and it’s not uncommon. In fact, it’s more common than not that we put these people on call, under an agreement, and the code section provides for that. And I would have her sign an agreement to return upon 48 hours’ notice if there was an emergency before her return date.

And then I would personally go to Europe and get her if she --

MR. MESEREAU: We will agree to that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Even if it took me months to find her.

(Laughter.)

THE COURT: I think it’s the right thing to do, so I appreciate that. I’ll take care of that. Then I think we’re through for the day. Thank you, everyone. I’ll see you tomorrow at 8:30.

(The proceedings adjourned at 2:35 p.m.)

Santa Maria, California

THE COURT: Good morning.
COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.
THE JURY: (In unison) Good morning.
MR. SANGER: May I proceed? Thank you.

BY MR. SANGER:
Q. Good morning.
A. Good morning, sir.
Q. All right. We were, right at the end of the day, talking about exemplars. And the question about exemplars that I was getting to is, is it important in comparing an exemplar to a known print to determine if there are any dissimilarities?
A. Yes, sir, there is.
Q. You can have quite a number of Galton points, or points that you identify as being identical, correct?
A. Among others, yes.
Q. And if you have an unexplained dissimilarity, then you have to reject the comparison; is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. All right. So therefore, it’s important to have a good exemplar, so you can see all of the features of the print, correct?
A. That’s correct.

Q. And it’s also important to have a good latent print, if possible, to compare to the exemplar, correct?

A. Yes, sir, that’s correct.

Q. All right. In other words, you -- you have what you have. Whatever shows up as a latent is what you get to compare, correct?

A. That’s -- yes, sir.

Q. But the more detail and the more of the print that you have, the better it is to compare to the exemplar, correct?

A. The more detail, the more positive the comparison.

Q. All right. Now, I think you told us that you were familiar with SWGFST; is that correct?

A. Yes, I read their guidelines.

Q. All right. And that is a working group which was created in the last few years to deal with fingerprint examination and comparison, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. One of the things that has arisen in the latent print examiner community is a question of whether or not there are adequate validation studies to support fingerprint comparisons, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And that’s one of the things that SWGFST was formed to address?

A. I’m not sure whether they were formed to address the actual lack of a validation study, but they were formed to address latent fingerprint comparison in general.

Q. All right. Now, when you’re looking at prints on paper, as you did in this case, there are some things that you can -- that you can tell from prints, obviously, and other things you can’t, correct?

A. Depends how much of the print is available, that’s a correct statement.

Q. And one of the things, though, that you can’t tell from examining fingerprints is when the fingerprints were put on the object; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.
Q. And if you have two sets of prints, for instance, on the same object, there is no way of telling which was placed before the other?
A. That’s correct.
Q. So they could be placed at totally different times, they could be placed at the same time, they could be placed at different times that are close together; correct?

A. That’s correct.
Q. Or different times but far apart?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. Now, did you have training from the Spex company, S-p-e-x?
A. No, I did not.
Q. And were you aware that the sheriff’s department had arranged for training from the manufacturer of the Scenescope?
A. No, sir, I was not.
Q. Did you have any training on the Scenescope yourself?
A. No, sir, other than about ten minutes of brief information I got from Detective Lafferty.
Q. Okay. And when did you obtain that information from Detective Lafferty?
A. I believe it was in August of 2004.
Q. All right. Were you advised by Detective Wittenbrock that it was not necessary to fume as extensively with super glue if you’re using the Scenescope?
A. He may -- he made a comment once that he thought some of the pages were coming out a little heavy, and that we, at that point, pulled back about a minute on the super glue exposure timing.
Q. When you say “heavy,” the fuming process was then obscuring some of the detail on the prints; is that correct?

A. That was his opinion, but I never got the same opinion from Detective Sutcliffe.
Q. All right. Did you form an opinion yourself?
A. I never had a chance to really look. I relied on their feedback to adjust the gluing times if it became necessary.

Q. All right. I want to clear up a couple details. I’ll make my way through here. Excuse me? May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. SANGER: These are in evidence.

Q. Okay. I have put before you Exhibit 723, 726, and 748.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on direct examination you said that 748, if you put -- take 748. I think it’s that one.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Can you hold that up - if that’s all right with the Court. It’s in evidence - so the jury can see it?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: Just so we all know what we’re talking about.

Q. 748 was a comparison board that showed your comparison of fingerprints, the exemplar to a latent print. And you testified on direct that that was the print, the image that was depicted in Exhibit 723. Would you pick up 723? That’s not 723. That’s 723. Okay. Looking at 723, does 748 depict the image in 723?

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. In fact, if you look at 726, that appears to be a similar image to 748; is that correct?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. I take it, in fingerprint examination and comparison, it’s extremely important to keep track of the exemplars and the latent prints; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don’t want to be mixing prints up, otherwise it could cause all sorts of problems, right?

A. Yes, because you probably couldn’t make an identification if you mixed them up.

Q. Would it cause problems if you mixed up your latent prints and your exemplar prints?

A. If things are not kept in the correct numerical order and name order, yes.

Q. Okay. Now, let's talk about -- a little bit about your training and experience. You had mentioned that you had -- this case accounted for, at one point you said about a quarter, and then you said maybe a fifth or a sixth of the total number of prints that you compared, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long have you been a latent print examiner?

A. I started working with latent prints in 1987.

Q. Were you a latent print trainee for some period of time?

A. Yes, sir, I worked under William Moore, who was a latent print examiner in our office at the time when I started. And that's when we also started working with CAL-ID Systems.

Q. All right. Now, Detective Moore, was he a detective or an I.D. tech?

A. He was a senior I.D. technician.

Q. Okay. I.D. Tech Moore was somebody who had pretty much learned the job of being a latent print examiner on the job; is that correct?

A. I'm not sure where he got all his training. He was in the bureau when I got there, and he was filling the position of I.D. technician and doing latent print examinations, and he was the one that I started training under.

Q. Okay. And how long did you train under I.D. Tech Moore?

A. Probably about eight years. He was in the office approximately eight or nine years before he retired.

Q. And during that period of time, did Mr. Moore do most of the latent print examination for the sheriff's department?

A. He did a great deal of the latent print exams. And also he was the CAL-ID Systems operator when it was installed.

Q. Okay. Let's not go too far afield on that. But since you brought it up, CAL-ID is -- is that a computerized system to match prints?

A. It's a computerized -- yes, that's the simple definition, yes.

Q. Okay. And now you have some other systems like AFIS?

A. Well, that's what CAL-ID originally was, was an AFIS system. We have a second or third generation of searchers and submitters now.

Q. Okay. In any event, you did not use the AFIS system or the CAL-ID System here?

A. No, sir. We had supplied exemplars for the three individuals who we were doing the latent print comparisons against.

Q. So again, not to go too far afield, but just to understand what you said, the computer system is a way to take prints, latent prints, and see if you can find an exemplar somewhere in the system; is that right?

A. It's taking -- to clarify, it's taking an unknown print, run it through a set of computer matchers to determine if there's a match in the system.

Q. You could also take an exemplar print, a rolled print, and run it through the system, right?

A. Yes, sir, you can.

Q. So if you arrest somebody and you want to see if their fingerprints match somebody else in the country, you could send it to the federal AFIS system to have a fingerprint search; is that correct?

A. No, we don't have that capability. We send it to Sacramento DOJ or Department of Justice. And I believe at that point it could be routed through the Department of Justice to the FBI I-AFIS.

Q. Okay. And the FBI system is called "I-AFIS"?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. So again, you could go to the state Department of Justice, and they may route it on to federal. But you have access, basically, to the whole fingerprint bank that exists in the country; is that correct?

A. In one form or another, yes, sir, we do.

Q. All right. Now, again, in this particular case, you weren’t doing that, you were -- you were attempting to compare exemplar prints to latent prints that were found on these various objects?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. Now, from -- in 1987, you started working with Mr. Moore. When did you become a latent print examiner as opposed to a latent print trainee?

A. I would suppose that I probably graduated into a journeyman in -- sometime in the early ‘90s. ‘91, ‘92, possibly.

Q. Okay. Now, is that -- was there some official designation? Did you get a certificate, or a letter of recognition or something, or is it just a point that you get to where you feel you’re an examiner as opposed to a trainee?

A. I believe it was a point where the other examiners in the office, Mr. Moore, and Doug Coleman was still there, they felt that I was sufficient in my job, that I could perform latent examinations and form conclusions.

Q. And Doug Coleman was also an I.D. tech; is that correct?

A. He worked for the Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Department about that time before moving to the Santa Maria Police Department.

Q. Okay. But he was an I.D. tech as opposed to a technician?

A. No, he was an I.D. technician also.

Q. Right. Now, I think you said on direct examination that you’re not certified by any organization as a latent print examiner; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. You belong to the Southern California Association of Fingerprint Officers?

A. That’s correct.

Q. That’s a membership organization, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Send in your dues, and if you’re a peace officer, you can belong to it; is that correct?

A. It’s about -- it’s more civilian than law enforcement officers or sworn officers. But it’s -- you have to make an application, you have to go to three meetings. If anybody has an objection to your membership, you will not be installed. And after the third meeting, then you’re installed. And then you’re a member until you quit.

Q. All right. Now, you mentioned that I.D. Tech Moore and I.D. Tech Coleman had indicated that they felt you were ready to do examinations on your own at some point in the ‘90s; is that correct?

A. I think that’s a correct statement, sir.

Q. Were you ever subjected to proficiency testing?

A. Not officially. However, every time we do a latent print examination we get a validation. That can be a form of proficiency testing.

Q. Sir, you know what I mean by “proficiency testing,” is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. There are agencies which send in blind tests and then you do the tests and send it back and they’re graded.

Q. Were you ever subject to proficiency testing?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Santa Barbara Sheriffs does not submit itself to proficiency testing in fingerprint examination; is that correct?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. And they’re -- are you familiar with the agencies that do proficiency testing?

A. No, sir, I don’t know any right now who are actually doing proficiency testing from personal knowledge.

Q. All right. You’ve indicated, though, that you have gone to a number of meetings and some training sessions with regard to latent print examination, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so you attempt to keep up with the literature, as it were, in the field; is that right?

A. As much as possible, yes, sir.

Q. And in the course of your training and experience, you’re aware that the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, the LEAA, federal agency, did proficiency testing; is that correct?

A. No, I’m not sure.

Q. Were you aware that Collaborative Testing Service, a private company, was contracted to do proficiency testing from 1995 to 2003?

A. I know they do proficiency testing. I don’t know who they did it for or if they were ever contracted through anybody.

Q. Okay. In the course of your studies with regard to latent print examination, you’re aware that the proficiency testing across the country turned up a number of misidentifications, a significant number, correct?

MR. NICOLA: I’m going to object, lack of foundation, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Foundation, sustained.

MR. SANGER: Okay.

Q. Are you aware that there have been issues with regard to -- let’s just take false positives coming up in proficiency testing in this country.

A. I don’t know what the rate of any proficiency testing was per agency or per test, no, I don’t.

Q. Okay. And your agency doesn’t have any percentage or rating because it doesn’t submit to proficiency testing; correct?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. All right. Now, what I’m asking about, is you’re aware in the proficiency testing, the blind testing that you have talked about, there have been a number of instances of false positives showing up; is that correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection, lack of foundation, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Are you aware of whether or not -- are you aware of any results -- I’m not talking about the specific numerical results, but generally in your reading, in your training and experience, any results of the proficiency testing over the last few years?

MR. NICOLA: Objection, lack of foundation, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: The only tests that I am aware of --

THE COURT: Just a minute.

THE WITNESS: Excuse me.

THE COURT: There's a question that just requires a "yes" or "no" answer.

Read the question back to him.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And were you aware that false positives have shown up in that proficiency testing?

A. I can't remember if there were false positives brought up or whether it was just -- they just didn't send the test back. I know there was a problem.

Q. Okay. Now, is this part of the problem -- or let me withdraw that. Is this problem that you just described part of the mission of SWGFST to try to remedy?

MR. NICOLA: I'm going to object as to vagueness, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: Let me rephrase it, because it was an odd sentence at best.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Is SWGFST attempting to remedy problems associated with proficiency testing results?

A. I don't know.

Q. You're also aware that in the last five, six years, there have been a number of particularly notable cases in which there have been false positives; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. There was one in 1999 in Scotland involving a police officer by the name of Shirley McKee; is that correct?

A. I’m aware of that case, yes, sir.

Q. And that’s a case where the Scotland criminal records office, which is their law enforcement or I.D. tech agency, formed an opinion that there was a positive match; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And the police officer, Miss McKee, was prosecuted for murder based on that print identification; is that correct?

A. No, I believe she was prosecuted for perjury.

Q. Okay. And at the -- after the case was over, 170 other print examiners looked at the print and said they didn’t match; is that right?

A. I know a great number looked at the print. I don’t know the exact number. But almost everybody agreed that it did not match.

Q. Almost everybody in the Scottish records office to this day maintains that it’s a positive I.D., correct?

A. That’s my understanding.

Q. This is part of what you described as a subjective aspect of making print identifications, correct? In other words, people form an opinion, and that’s the basis for a positive identification, correct?

A. Yes, it’s -- yes.

Q. And you’re also aware of the case last year involving Brandon Mayfield; is that right?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. Brandon Mayfield was a lawyer in Oregon, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And he was placed in custody for two months based on a fingerprint identification, correct?

A. I thought it was two weeks. That was my reading.

Q. All right. Well, he was placed in custody long enough to be an interference with his life; is that correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. That’s argumentative, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: He was placed in custody for some period of time?

A. Correct.

Q. And he was accused of being involved in the Madrid bombing; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And that was based on the FBI making a positive identification of his fingerprint on something associated with that bombing; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And they had three FBI fingerprint -- latent print examiners who compared the print and agreed that it was positive; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And they had -- they identified in excess of 16 points of identification; is that correct?

A. I don’t think it was a number quite that high, but I don’t know the exact number, sir.

Q. All right. And eventually the Spanish police identified the fingerprint to an Al Qaeda member; is that correct?

A. I know they did identify it. I wasn’t quite sure -- I don’t know who they identified it to, but I believe it was somebody involved in an organization over there.

Q. And Mr. Mayfield -- it turns out at this point Mr. Mayfield had absolutely nothing to do with it; is that right?

A. I don’t know if he did or not. I don’t know if he was totally exonerated or whether he’s still waiting.

Q. Okay. You’re aware that the fingerprint -- you’re aware that the FBI has indicated that they made a mistake and it was not his fingerprint, correct?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. And they, in part, blamed it on digital imaging?

A. Initially, yes, sir.

Q. And then they changed that opinion about digital imaging after the fingerprint community became concerned that that would undermine digital comparisons, correct?

A. I don’t know the answer to that question.

Q. You’re also aware of Judge Pollack’s decisions in the - I don’t know how you say it - Llera Plaza -- it’s L-l-e-r-a Plaza - case; is that correct? It’s an Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

A. I know -- I read about Judge Pollack, but I don’t recognize that particular case by that name.

Q. All right. In any event, there was a case in Pennsylvania that Judge Pollack had made a determination with regard to fingerprints, admissibility of fingerprints, correct?

A. In 1999, yes, sir.

Q. Are you aware of the opinions in January and March of 2002?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Relevance and calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer “yes” or “no.”

THE WITNESS: I can’t say “yes” to that. I don’t remember.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. In any event, these matters that we talked about, Shirley McKee, the Mayfield, Judge Pollack’s ruling, whenever it was, those have been the subject of conversations, debate and concern in the latent print examination community; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Now, you said that you had taken a couple of courses from Sergeant Ashbaugh; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. In fact, one course you took was actually in January of 2005, this year; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And Sergeant Ashbaugh is a sergeant with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police; is that correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. He coined the phrase “ridgeology”; is that right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. And actually wrote a book about ridgeology; is that right?

A. “Quantitative-Qualitative Friction Analysis,” yes, sir.

Q. And he calls it “ridgeology”?

A. That’s what he calls the system.

Q. All right. And his -- without going into -- you can go into as much detail as you want, but without going into unnecessary detail, his theory is to get away from simply matching Galton points to do something more sophisticated in analyzing prints; is that correct?

A. The fingerprint community started getting away from just using strictly Level II detail or Galton points some time ago.

What Mr. Ashbaugh said was that -- he coined the phrase “ridgeology” in an attempt to explain how latent fingerprint examiners do their work, because nobody had done this up to this time, because a lot more takes place in the latent fingerprint examination than just counting, as you say, Galton details.

Q. All right. So he was trying to explain how latent fingerprint examiners can come up with an opinion, an ultimate opinion, that there’s either a positive identification, or there’s no identification, or it’s inconclusive; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. It all goes back to a couple basics, though. Whether you go back to Galton in 1886 or you talk about Sergeant Ashbaugh, the first thing you’re talking about with fingerprints is the permanency?

A. That’s correct.

Q. The idea that a fingerprint is permanent from birth to death absent some of the things you talked about, I mean mutilation, or something else, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. The second is that two fingerprints -- no two fingerprints will be identical; is that correct?

A. The uniqueness theory, yes, sir.

Q. So it’s unique. Now, it turns out, based on experiences in the last few years in particular, that two prints can be quite similar, correct?

A. Two prints can be similar, but they cannot be the same.

Q. Well, that's the theory.

A. I think that's a proven fact over 100 years.

Q. In other words, over the last 100 years your position is that no two full prints have ever been found to be absolutely identical, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. But there are prints, you would agree, that match on numerous Galton points, or points of identification, and yet are not, in fact, from the same person, correct?

A. I have seen four match before. I found a dissimilarity. But there can be similarities, yes.

Q. Some of these cases involved quite a lot more than four points; is that right?

A. I'd have to see -- I have seen the Mayfield prints, and I -- I don't agree with the FBI's -- the number of prints they got. In fact, I would not even have done that examination, because I don't feel that the latent print is of enough quality to even deal with.

Q. And that's a point I was going to get to in just a minute, but let's pick it up right now. And that is, that you don't generally have a full print when you're dealing with latent prints to compare to the exemplar, correct?

A. Most of the time, no. But sometimes you get lucky and you do.

Q. In this particular case, the 19 prints that you have here, were any of them a full print?

A. Some of them were, yes.

Q. All right. When you say "full," it wasn't a rolled print?

A. It wasn't a rolled print. But if we have the pattern area, the delta area, the ridge flow behind the re-curves up from the core and down from the core, so we had quite a substantial portion of that print visible.

Q. So, what you're saying is if you had a partial print, but you thought it was a substantial partial print?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. And we'll get to some of those in a second.

Let's talk about the ACE-V process that Mr. Ashbaugh's talked about, and I believe you say you use; is that correct?

A. As far as I know, the basic -- the fingerprint community uses that methodology.

Q. All right. And when you're talking about ACE-V -- we've gone through it so I don't want to bore everybody to tears -- I'm hearing twittering behind me. It may be too late.

(Laughter.)

MR. SANGER: All right.

Q. But this is important, so we want to try to get through it as best we can.

On the ACE-V, basically "A" is analysis?

A. Correct.

Q. So you have to look at the big picture and see if there's anything there that would disqualify the latent print from comparison, correct?

A. You want to analyze the latent print for quality and quantity of detail and clarity, see whether it's even usable, how much detail is available in that particular latent print.

Q. And then you go to comparison, and that simply means that you compare the exemplar print to the latent print; is that correct?

A. That's a simplified version, yes.

Q. We're trying to be simple, but we can make it more complicated.

A. What you would do, you would find your target group in the latent print and see if it exists in the known print, and then work from the latent print to the known print.

Q. Okay. Now, after you do all of that, you get to the "E," which is evaluation, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that's a subjective part, right?

A. No, that's still your objective part.

Q. Well, when you're comparing, during evaluation, that's when you form your opinion, right?

A. At the end, yes.

Q. Okay. So when you form your -- let’s put it this way: At the end of the “E” part, evaluation, you form your opinion?

A. Okay, yes, sir, that’s correct.

Q. And that’s subjective?

A. Yes, based on what you found out during the objective form of the evaluation.

Q. So you’re basically saying, “I got to call it, it’s a ball or a strike. It’s a positive or it’s not,” right?

A. You’re attempting to determine whether there is sufficient detail in the friction ridges and sequence and characteristics to individualize that particular print to your suspect or the person that you’re comparing it to.

Q. And that is an opinion, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And people’s opinions can differ --

A. That’s correct.

Q. -- correct?

And we’ve given some prominent examples of where opinions differ, right?

A. Correct.

Q. In other words, you differ with the FBI on the Mayfield case, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. I take it you didn’t analyze it while he was still in custody, did you?

A. I saw that print initially a couple of months ago on the Internet.

Q. Okay. So you weren’t in a position to call them up, and say, “Hey, you guys screwed up on this”?

A. I’d like to have been, but, no.

Q. And in fact, in Santa Barbara, in this particular case, you decided to do this fingerprint analysis essentially in-house; is that correct?

A. That’s what I was told to do, yes.

Q. Okay. And you could have -- I say “you.” Let me withdraw that. A determination could have been made by somebody in the chain of command from the District Attorney’s Office down through the chain of command, somebody could have made a determination to send the prints out to be analyzed by some other agency, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. The Department of Justice, California Department of Justice has latent print examiners, does it not?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And you have in the past sent prints to the DOJ to do latent print comparison, have you not? When I say “you,” I mean your agency.

A. If we did, it was some time ago. I don’t recall anything recently that we -- that I know that was sent to the Department of Justice.

Q. Okay. But you’re aware that today and in the fall of last year, 2004, the Department of Justice would provide latent print analysis services at the request of the Santa Barbara Sheriff’s Department; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And you could have sent the prints to the FBI; is that right?

A. I could have. But that option was most likely available. I don’t know.

Q. Okay. And again, I don’t mean you personally. But if it was decided in the chain of command, somewhere from the District Attorney down through your chain of command, somebody could have made that request of the FBI; is that correct?

A. I would assume so.

Q. Okay. Excuse me one second.

Did you have any discussion with your superiors or colleagues about sending the prints in this case to the Department of Justice in Sacramento?

A. I, at one time, said it might be an option because of the volume of material that we were dealing with.

Q. I take it you were overruled or it was determined that would not happen?

A. As far as I know, yes.

Q. Were you involved in any discussions about sending the prints to the FBI?

A. No.

Q. Now, we had Dr. Cantu from the Secret Service come to court here a little while ago. Do you know him?

A. I met him a week ago, yes.

Q. He came out here to testify, and you had a chance to talk to him?

A. About the Scenescope, yes.

Q. Other than his coming out here to testify for this jury, did he have any other involvement or provide any other assistance to your office in evaluating the evidence in this case?

A. As far as I know, he did not.

Q. And I take it the United States Secret Service also had no role in this until Dr. Cantu came out to testify here; is that correct?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. Now, I'm not going to go through everything, but what I'll do -- let me come over here.

What I'm going to do, if the Court will permit me very loudly for just a moment, I'm going to hold up one of the boxes. Remember these boxes with the white notebooks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I think there were three or four of these boxes that you went through; is that correct?

A. I wasn't counting the boxes. I was looking at the magazines.

Q. All right. But you went through quite a number of these notebooks?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. All right. And after spending a couple of hours going through those boxes here for the Court, the fact of the matter is, that out of all of those boxes, there were 12 magazines from which you performed a comparison that resulted in your opinion that there was an identification; is that correct?

A. I'd have to look at my notes to count the number of magazines.

Q. Do you have your notes here?

A. Yes, sir, I do. I have a sheet right here.

Q. Yes. Take a look at that.

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. Okay. And before you started going through each one of those, you knew which 12 were the 12 that you actually formed an opinion that there was a positive identification; is that correct?

MR. NICOLA: I object as to vague, Your Honor.

MR. SANGER: The witness looks like he doesn’t understand it, so let me rephrase it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SANGER: Thank you.

Q. In other words, before we started going through -- Mr. Nicola got up and went through each one of those binders one at a time?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Several boxes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before he did that, you would have been able to say, “Well, look, there’s 12 of those binders in which there was a positive identification in my opinion,” would you not?

A. That’s correct.

MR. NICOLA: Objection. What’s the relevance to that question?

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, you testified on direct examination that you used Adobe Printshop to work with I.D. Tech Hemman in making comparisons of prints; is that correct?

A. The correct name of the program is Adobe Photoshop, and I.D. Tech Hemman was the computer operator.

Q. Okay. “Photoshop.”

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sorry. That’s undoubtedly very important to the Adobe company. All right.

The point of the story is, as I understand it, you’re saying that you were able to use two different layers; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And I think you referred to them as “layers”; is that right?

A. That’s what they call them in the program, yes, sir.

Q. All right. And so basically you can sit down, compare prints, find what you consider to be points of identification, and then you can leave, and I.D. Tech Hemman could come in and sit down and do the same thing and find points of identification, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And then you took your two layers and you compared your analysis with her analysis; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Did you both identify the exact same points on each fingerprint?

A. The exact same basic points were identified most. Sometimes she may have identified a point more than I did. Or I may have identified a point more than she did.

Q. And is it your testimony that you varied by one point on these fingerprint comparisons?

A. I don’t know if exactly one. It could have been several, sometimes. Sometimes we were dead-on exact.

Q. So did you save the layers?

A. I believe they may still be in the computer in Santa Barbara.

Q. So you haven’t printed them out or given them to the District Attorney or to defense counsel in this case?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right. Now, you testified to a timeline, and I’m going to ask the clerk if she has that. I don’t have the number written down right here.

Do you have the timeline?

THE CLERK: Mr. Nicola has that.

MR. SANGER: Oh, Mr. Auchincloss has it.

All right. That’s 622.

Q. And your timeline --

Can I put this up, Your Honor? I believe it was received.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SANGER: And let me see.

Q. Your timeline starts in January of -- the printed timeline starts in January of 2004, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you basically show your involvement commencing in August of 2004, correct?

A. That’s when I first -- obtained the first piece of evidence, yes.

Q. And you’re aware that the seizure of the evidence in this case was, for the most part, November 18th of 2003, correct?

A. That was my recollection from reading the newspapers. I wasn’t working at that time.

Q. All right. Is that part of the time that you were retired?

A. I believe I may have been working as a part-time bailiff a day or two a week down in the Santa Barbara courts, or I was basically retired.

Q. There you go. But you were aware that the search in this case occurred November the 18th of 2003, right?

A. I was aware that there was a search warrant served, yes, sir.

Q. Were you aware that Detective Lafferty had viewed some of the evidence in this case that you ultimately did a latent print examination on?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you aware that there was a -- well, let me ask you this: Did you review the reports of other officers?

A. No, sir.

Q. Not even people involved in -- in the print identification aspect of the case, preservation?

A. If I had a question, I went directly to the officer or the person involved and asked.

Q. All right. So were you aware that in December of 2003, that Detective Lafferty wrote a report requesting that the Forensics Bureau please do a fingerprint analysis of this same evidence?

A. No, I am not.

Q. Now, I understand that you were essentially retired and coming back and doing some part-time work during that period of time. But based on your training and experience working in the Forensics Bureau, when somebody makes a request, another officer makes a request for a fingerprint analysis, is that something that the Forensics Bureau is supposed to attend to?

A. The Forensics Unit is a more -- I would say is more of a reactionary unit than an offensive unit. So he would have run his request up the chain of command, and then it would be up to whoever’s up making those decisions, and then decide how the unit was to proceed.

Q. Based on your experience -- forget about this case for a moment.

Based on your experience, you said you worked other cases where there were fingerprints, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you actually did fingerprint analysis and comparison, correct?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. All right. And in cases where there are fingerprints on objects, or there may be fingerprints on objects that are seized, is it customary for somebody in law enforcement to say, “Preserve this so that it can be checked for prints”?

A. When prints -- I don’t know how to answer this. Not all the time, no. It depends. It’s up to the investigating officer as to what action he wants to take with his evidence, I guess would be a way to put it.

Q. All right. If an investigating officer looks at items out at the scene at the time of the seizure, and forms the opinion that somebody ought to check these things for prints, do you expect that to be communicated to the Forensics Unit?

A. Yes, sir. Normally they would write up a work request on one of our forms. Send it in. The evidence would be booked in, and then we’d deal with it.

Q. And ordinarily that would occur very early in the proceedings, correct?

A. Sometimes -- this is the first time I’ve seen it where it’s come up a year later.

Q. It came up a year later here, didn’t it?

MR. NICOLA: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Other than this case, have you seen prints analyzed by your department a year later that were intended to be analyzed at the time the item was seized?

A. I did one two and a half years later, but I don’t know what the intent was when it was seized.

But sometimes there’s a timeline that runs.

Q. All right. So I’m talking about a case where you’re investigating out in the field, the lead detective or the detective assigned to seize the evidence, says, “Yeah, we better check that for prints.” Isn’t it the policy and procedure of your office, the sheriff’s office, to have those items sent to the Forensics Unit within a reasonably short period of time to do the print analysis?

A. Again, that’s up to the investigator in charge of that particular case as to what time, when they want to run, or what they want to do, what tests, or what’s done.

Q. And you would expect that there would be some request, there would be a forensic request; is that right? Let me withdraw that so we can be clear.

There’s a form that you have in your office that can be filled out by the lead detective, or whoever seizes the evidence, to request forensic analysis of an item of evidence; is that correct?

A. That’s correct, sir.

Q. All right. Did you see any such forms in this case?

A. I received a work form filled out in, I believe it was -- July was the date on it.

Q. July of 2004?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you did not see a forensic request for fingerprints that was dated before July of 2004; is that correct, sir? In this case.
A. No. And I had very little contact with the unit prior to July of 2004.
Q. I'm asking if you saw -- I'm not asking whether or not you had contact. The question is, did you see a forensic request form that was dated anytime prior to July of 2004?
A. No, sir, I did not.
Q. All right. Let me get the --
May I approach, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: I'm going to show you 743, 744 and 745. You were looking at those.
Can I put them right here?
MR. NICOLA: Sure.
Q. BY MR. SANGER: All right. You've got 743, 744, 745, and whose prints -- these are exemplar prints, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And whose prints on are on which board?
A. Okay. On Item 743, we have Mr. Jackson's fingerprints. On Item 744, we have Star Arvizo's fingerprints. And on 745, we have Gavin Arvizo's fingerprints.
Q. All right. Now, you talked about basic class characteristics; that is, whorls, loops, and arches, correct?

A. Correct, sir.
Q. Can you tell us, with regard to 743, those fingerprints, what configuration do those fingerprints show?
A. Do you want me to read all ten off?
Q. You can do that.
A. Well, the right thumb is a right slant loop. The right index is a right slant loop.
THE COURT REPORTER: Slow down, please.
THE WITNESS: Excuse me.
The right middle is a right slant loop. The right ring is a right slant loop. The right little is the right slant loop.
The left thumb is a left slant loop. The left index is an arch. The left middle is an arch. The left ring appears to be a central pocket loop whorl. And the left little is a left slant loop.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. Go to 744. Now, that's the one where you've got two sets; is that correct?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. So you're going to pick your best set and tell us from that, correct?

A. Okay. The right thumb is a right slant loop. The right index appears to be a left slant loop, or a tented arch. The right middle is a right slant loop. The right ring is a right slant loop. And the right little is a right slant loop.

The left thumb is a left slant loop. The left index appears to be either a tented arch or a right slant loop. The left middle is a left slant loop. The left ring appears to be a left slant loop. And the left little appears to be a left slant loop, but they're somewhat hard to see.

Q. All right. All right. And then on 745?

A. On 745, the right thumb is a right slant loop. The right index is a left slant loop. The right middle is a right slant loop. The right ring is a right slant loop. And the right little appears to be a right slant loop.

The left thumb is a left slant loop. The left index is a left slant loop. The left middle is a left slant loop. The left ring is a left slant loop. And the left little is a left slant loop.

Q. All right. So the predominant feature of all of the fingerprints and cards are that these fingers are looped fingerprints; is that correct? I think you said there were a couple on Mr. Jackson's where it was an arch or a tented arch.

A. Mr. Jackson has two arches and a central pocket loop whorl. I think everything else is a loop pattern.

Q. All of the exemplar prints, except for those, are loops, correct?

A. Appear to be, yes, sir.

Q. And what percentage of the population has looped fingerprints?

A. About 65 percent.

MR. SANGER: All right. Your Honor, what I'd like to do is go to the Power Point version of the exhibits. And let me just see if I have the right number here.

All right. What this should be --

You can have that back, if you want. I think you wanted it.

With the Court's permission, I'm going to put up 758. And I'm not going to go through all of these. They're in evidence, and -- but just to do it quickly.

Q. This is No. 13 of the 19 cards; is that correct, sir?

A. It's from 317-YY. The exact number I'm not sure. Oh, 13 at the bottom, yes, sir.

Q. Down at the bottom.

Basically, so we don't get any more confused than we need to, there are 19 of these cards?

A. That's correct.

Q. And these are the 19 cards where you showed your comparisons, your points of comparison, and -- correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. So I'm just taking this one.

Now, if you look at 317-YY, if you look at the latent print that's contained in this exhibit, that is a partial print, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And it appears that there may be some torquing or there may be actually another print involved in the latent; is that correct?

A. There's distortion and it could actually -- yes, there's distortion in the print, which has caused it to distort somewhat, yes.

Q. All right. Now, in order to rule out the dissimilarities, you have to account for the dissimilarities as distortion, correct?

A. There is a difference between a dissimilarity and a distortion.

Q. Precisely.

And you have to make that determination,

right?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Because if something doesn’t look the same, putting it in very basic terms, it either is going to eliminate that print from the comparison, or you have to explain it as a distortion, correct?

A. Yes, sir. But at the same time, you’re looking for dissimilarities that come up in the wrong spot in regards to ridge flow and spatial alignment.

Q. Okay. I’m going to go to 759. Now, here you have another partial print, 759. And it actually looks like whoever did the location of this print actually wrote over part of the ridge detail with a black marker; is that correct?

A. There is a black marker pen on the lower right of the latent print, yes. However, whether it obliterated any usable ridge detail, I’d have to examine that print closely to determine that.

Q. Now, either I’m looking at it backwards or something.

A. Lower left.

Q. Lower left and then across the top; is that right?

A. Correct. There’s a ruler on the right side.

Q. And I’m going to go to 762, which I believe is that. Once again, there you have -- somebody has used a black marker pen to note the location of a print, and has actually obliterated a part of the latent print; is that correct?

A. They’ve marked through it. But, again, it doesn’t appear that they have, for the most part, disturbed any usable friction ridge detail.

Q. Well -- and that’s because the usable friction ridge detail is only what you can see. If you can’t see under it, you don’t know what’s under there, right?

A. Well, in that blurred area on the right would be an unusable area anyway.

Q. Let’s talk about that. The blurred area on the right is not shown in the exemplar print, correct? In other words, that is not identical to the exemplar print, the blurred area on the right?

A. I can't tell.

Q. Okay. As you look at it, you cannot identify it as being identical to the exemplar print, correct?

A. Yes, sir, but -- go ahead.

Q. Okay. And can you tell what caused the blurred area on the right?

A. It was probably either distortion, or there was a slippage when the print was laid on the paper, or something else touched the paper. Not knowing what exactly happened to this, I can only make some assumptions.

Q. All right. And similarly here on No. 764, there are some marks, striations, or whatever they are, at the top of the print that are not shown in the exemplar print, correct?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And you account for that as distortion; is that correct?

A. That would be slippage at that point.

Q. And that's your assumption, is that that's slippage?

A. Yeah, it appears that the finger had touched the page and pulled down slightly, and then the rest of the finger sat down on the page, creating a latent fingerprint.

MR. SANGER: All right. Okay, Your Honor, we can turn the screen off, if that's all right. All right. And I have no further questions at this time.

THE COURT: Counsel?

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor. May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. NICOLA:

Q. Detective Spinner, I'm going to approach you with Exhibit 726, Exhibit 748. Do you recall examining both of those exhibits on Friday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And during that examination, which I believe I conducted, did I ask you to check the fingerprint depicted in Exhibit 726 and compare it to the fingerprint board, which is Exhibit 748?
A. Yes, sir.
MR. SANGER: I'm going to object as hearsay as to what was asked.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Now, Defense Attorney Sanger showed you Exhibit 723 this morning.

A. Correct.
Q. Do you recall that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you recall ever being shown this exhibit during your testimony on Friday?
A. I don't believe I was, no.
Q. Could you take a look at Exhibit 723 and describe what it is for the jury, please?
A. Item 723 is a printout of the Power Point demonstration created by the sheriff's department for protocol for latent fingerprint processing.
Q. Would you flip through all the pages, please?
Do you have a recollection whether you presented that information to the jury on Friday?
A. No, I did not.
Q. And when was the first time you were asked any questions about testifying as to that exhibit?
A. This morning.
Q. By Mr. Sanger?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you recall ever pointing to a fingerprint in Exhibit 723 and saying, "Well, that's the same one that's in Exhibit 748"?
A. No, sir.
Q. Okay. I think what we'll do is try to work backwards.
Your Honor, if I may have "Input No. 4," please.

Dim the lights, please. Thank you.
I'm placing on the Elmo machine Exhibit No. 622.

Now, Mr. Sanger asked you some questions about when and if you knew when a request for forensic testing came in regarding the magazine seized from the defendant's ranch.
A. Correct.
MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. Actually, that misstates the evidence. It was fingerprint examination.
MR. NICOLA: I believe he used the words "forensic testing," Your Honor.
THE COURT: The objection's overruled.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Does forensic testing include sending items out for DNA analysis?
A. Yes, it does.
Q. Okay. And in the grand scheme of things, if you were going to do a DNA analysis on the same magazines that you would later check for fingerprints, which analysis would be conducted first?
A. The DNA analysis.
Q. And why is that?
A. Because the testing process for fingerprints and the development process could contaminate or destroy possibly any DNA.

Q. And by "contaminate" what do you mean?
A. Possibly alter the structure. Since ultraviolet light was being used, it could have damaged the DNA.
Q. And is contamination essentially destruction?
A. It can be.
Q. Okay. With respect to fingerprint analysis, if you contaminate a fingerprint, what have you done for its usefulness as a print that you can make any conclusions about?
MR. SANGER: I'm going to object. That's vague as phrased.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Let me reask. With respect to a fingerprint, if you contaminate it, what have you done to its usefulness?
A. It could possibly make it unusable.
Q. Okay. And what kind of -- forms of contamination can affect a fingerprint in that respect?

A. Any activity which would destroy the ridge detail or blur the ridge detail so it could not be observed or traced or used for a latent comparison purpose. Cloud the clarity of the print.

Q. Okay. With respect to the DNA testing, do you have experience sending items to the Department of Justice laboratory in Goleta for that very purpose?

A. I have sent a few out, but it’s been several years.

Q. Okay. In your experience, does DNA testing or screening from potential DNA testing take some period of time?

A. To my recollection --

MR. SANGER: Objection; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Sergeant Spinner.

A. Yes.

THE COURT: The objection was sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Do you have knowledge of how long the items that you’ve sent to the Department of Justice for DNA testing have taken to come back?

MR. SANGER: Objection, lack of foundation and relevance.

THE COURT: The foundation objection is sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: You have sent items to the DNA lab in Goleta, correct, for testing?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. SANGER: Asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. Next question.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: You requested that DNA examination be done on the items that you’ve sent?

A. We sent items to the DOJ at the request of detectives for DNA analysis.

Q. Okay. And in your experience, do you find the turnaround time for when you receive the items back to be a long period or a short period?

MR. SANGER: Objection. Vague and lack of foundation, relevance to this case.

THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Depending on which lab was used, it could take quite some time.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: With respect to the magazines and other sexually explicit content that you were asked to conduct fingerprint experiments, or fingerprint examinations on, do you know whether any of those items had been sent to DOJ in early February of 2004 for DNA testing?

MR. SANGER: Objection. This was asked and answered on direct. Beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: You may answer.

A. I knew that items were at the DOJ lab for testing. I don't know when they were actually sent out.

Q. Okay. So you knew the time frame they had been sent out was --

A. Prior to my attempting to --

MR. SANGER: Excuse me. I'm going to object. It's not a question. No question pending.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. NICOLA: Okay.

THE COURT: Let's take our morning break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Counsel? Go ahead.

MR. NICOLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. It's still morning. Just a few more questions, Sergeant Spinner.

With respect to the 19 fingerprint comparisons that you've testified to in court over the past few days, was there anything about the exemplars which prevented you from making the specific positive identifications that you've testified in front of the jury about?

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. And I believe Mr. Sanger asked you whether you had sent the fingerprints out for independent verification. Did you, in fact, do that?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And whom did you send those prints to?

A. Mr. Pat Wertheim.

Q. Who is he?

A. He's an internationally recognized fingerprint expert. He basically started the McKee case in Scotland when he recognized the bad fingerprint comparison which was conducted by the Scotland office. And he’s on the SWGFST committee. And he is a very learned individual, and I consider him a mentor and a teacher.

Q. Did he verify the 19 results that you’ve testified to in court?

A. Yes.

MR. SANGER: Objection. Calls for hearsay; move to strike.

THE COURT: Sustained. It’s stricken.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Did he disagree with any of your comparison work?

MR. SANGER: Objection; calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. NICOLA: Typically in a fingerprint case, the defense has the opportunity to reexamine any of the work that you’ve done by their own experts, correct?

A. That’s correct.

MR. NICOLA: I have no further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SANGER:

Q. Okay. Just a few things. You talked about 723 and 748. And it’s your position that 723 is not the fingerprint depicted in Exhibit 748, right?

A. If I remember correctly, 723 is not a fingerprint exhibit.

Q. Right. So if you testified to that earlier, that would have been a mistake on your part, correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. That question assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: And you indicated that your experience involved 80,000 fingerprints, and then you said, “Well, it may have been 120,000.” That’s a 50 percent increase in the number of fingerprints.

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Beyond the scope of redirect and it’s argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained on beyond the scope.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Now, you talked about DNA testing. My understanding is that you haven't sent anything out for DNA testing yourself for a number of years, correct?

A. The last time I was involved with sending anything out for DNA testing was prior to August of 2003.

Q. Okay. So you don't know how long DNA testing -- let me withdraw that. You don't even know what DNA testing was done in this case, if any, correct?

A. I do know that some items were sent to the Goleta DOJ lab.

Q. Do you know what testing was done?

A. They were sent for DNA analysis, as far as I know.

Q. But you don't know what testing was done?

A. No, I do not know what DOJ did with those items.

Q. And you don't know for how long they held them and for what reason?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, Exhibit 470, I'll just hold it up here. Exhibit 470 is that briefcase, right?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. All right. And the items that you formed an opinion on involving your opinion that the prints were from Gavin and Star Arvizo, all were derived from this briefcase; is that correct?

MR. NICOLA: Objection. Misstates the evidence; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Part of the items came -- of the prints that were made came from the items that we got back from Department of Justice on 8-3. And the rest of them, I believe, came out of the black briefcase, which I got on 10-5.

Q. BY MR. SANGER: Okay. They were all 317, correct?

A. They were all 317, yes.

Q. So your understanding is, based on your experience in your office, that they're all Item No. 317. They would have come out of Item No. 317, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And this briefcase was Item No. 317. It's now Exhibit 470, but it was Sheriff's Item 317, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. And you have no way of knowing if and when or whether or not Star or Gavin Arvizo opened this briefcase and looked through it, do you?

A. I have no knowledge what happened to that briefcase prior to 10-5.

MR. SANGER: All right. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Anything else?

MR. NICOLA: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.

Call your next witness.

MR. ZONEN: We'll call Jamie Masada to the stand.

THE COURT: Come to the front of the courtroom, please. When you get up to the witness stand here, please remain standing.

When you get to the witness stand, face the clerk and raise your right hand.

JAMIE MASADA

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Jamie, J-a-m-i-e; and my last name is Masada, M-a-s-a-d-a.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Mr. Masada, good morning.

A. Good morning, sir.

Q. What do you do for a living?

A. I do -- I have a Laugh Factory Comedy Club.

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Sir, I need you to speak into the microphone.

THE WITNESS: Oh, I’m sorry, I apologize.

Q. MR. ZONEN: We have to do this with everyone.

A. I’m sorry, I apologize.

I own The Laugh Factory Comedy Club. And I do a couple of different kind of charities. I’m involved with different charities to help kids and homeless people and different stuff.

Q. Let’s start with The Laugh Factory. What is The Laugh Factory?

A. The Laugh Factory, sir, is a comedy club that some of the people, well-known comic or unknown comic, they come up there, they get their break. And we bring studio people, or somebody come see them and look at them. Maybe some of them, they have a talent, they get a break on, they become famous.

And it’s people that come in, ordinary people that come, they pay admission to come in to watch the talent.

Q. How many Laugh Factories do you have now?

A. I have -- I did have another one in Hawaii, closed for temporary. Right now two, sir.

Q. Okay. One is in New York City?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the one in Hawaii is temporarily closed?

A. Yes, because of the hotel remodeling.

Q. Where in Hawaii is it?

A. In Waikiki.

Q. Okay. Now, the original one is the one in Los Angeles; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you open The Laugh Factory in Los Angeles?

A. 1979.

Q. How did that come about? How did you come up with such an idea?

A. Oh, God. Okay. Let’s see where I can start. It was -- at that point I was a comedian. There was a strike going on about comedian. And the comedian that wasn’t getting paid. And one of the comedian, John, from the Hyatt House, jump down, and he actually kill himself. And I was very disturbed and upset. And I thought, I got to do something.

So at that point, I walking down the street and I saw a place for lease, and -- I find that place, and I came up with the name “Laugh Factory.” I started Laugh Factory, and it was the first club where I paid the comedians.

Q. Mr. Masada, how old were you when you leased that space and opened The Laugh Factory?

A. I wasn’t even 16. I put it under name of Neil Israel at that point, because he was -- he backed me up and he was the person -- he actually --

Q. You were 16 years old?

A. Yes, sir. About almost 17, and a half, yes.

Q. Did you actually speak English at the time?

A. I don’t know. I’m still -- I think I still am not speaking that good English anyway.

(Laughter.)

Q. When you came to this country, did you speak English?

A. Not much. “Hello, how are you?” That’s about it.

Q. How old were you when you came to this country?

A. 14.

Q. From where?

A. Directly from Israel. Iran, Israel and here.

Q. And to the United States?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Excuse me. Tell us what the comedy camp is. Well, before I do that, let me go back to The Laugh Factory.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has been in existence for a number of years now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would it be safe to say that a number of well-known comedians have passed through The Laugh Factory?

A. I mean, the number of well-known comedians, they still come through The Laugh Factory all the time.

Q. Tell us who. Who are some of the guests who have come through The Laugh Factory?

A. Last couple of weeks, Jon Levitz. Chris Rock. Robin Williams. I could name many, many people that come.

Q. Name a few more.

A. Bob Saget. Chris Tucker. God, George Lopez sometime. Paul Rodriguez. Paul Mooney. They all stop by.

Q. Okay. Now, tell me about the comedy camp. What is that?

A. The comedy camp is for underprivileged kids, the kids that they don't -- the kids that are disturbed or underprivileged, and that's how I created for. 4000

Q. And what is it?

A. It's bringing the kid in, and bringing -- asking all of the well-known comedian to come in to teach them a little bit of confidence and give them a little bit of confidence through life. Some of them, they might become a comedian. Some of them might not become a comedian. But you give them confidence. You give them this big star teaching them how to perform, how to go through life and be confident in life.

Q. Are these principally underprivileged children?

A. Most of them underprivileged children, yes, sir.

Q. And what does that mean? I mean, what is the criteria for somebody to get into the comedy camp?

A. If -- you know, if I see the kid, for example, they are shy, they don't have -- they cannot -- like, they don't have ability to talk in public.

Or I see people that they really come from very poor family, or single family, or -- most of them they come out there, they don't even have family. They are living in group home. They live -- stay in foster homes. And that’s the type of kid we get in comedy.

But sometime, you know, you get a few of them that they are -- you know, they are -- what you call them? They’re talented and they’re kids, and their parents push them in, and you bring them in, and they are -- you know, we don’t -- we overlook that they are not poor. But most of them, they are underprivileged people.

Q. All right. Do you do the evaluation to decide who gets into the comedy camp?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you meet with every child who comes through the comedy camp?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you maintained relationships with many children who have passed through the comedy camp?

A. Most of the time. Yeah, most of them. Some of them, all of a sudden I don’t hear from them. But 90 percent of the kids always talk to -- they call me back anytime they are in trouble or anytime they are in any kind of problem, they call me. They ask me for help, you know.

I mean, like last night before coming here, one of the kids, you know, has -- he walked out of the foster home, and he comes by, you know, the place. And he was -- I don’t know if he was on drugs, whatever, whatever. You try to help him out. You try to give him direction. Give him a little bit of financial. “Hey, you got to go back. If you don’t go back to your foster home, you’re going to get arrested,” that type of stuff.

Q. Tell me how the comedy camp is structured. A child who comes into the camp, how often do they come? How regularly? Who do they work with? What do they do?

A. Most of the kids that come to the comedy camp, the structure of the comedy camp is we usually take about 30, 40, maybe -- sometime if -- we have none; sometime have gone over 40 kids; 45, 48 kids.

And they usually come in, a lot of them come in from Los Angeles County Department of Children

Family Services. They bring a lot of kids that they need they help. They bring them to me.

And they usually -- the comedy camp meet once a week, on Saturdays. We provide them lunch, and they get -- I call some of the people that -- one of my greatest -- one of the best person was coming to comedy camp that always encourage a lot of kids, it was Richard Pryor. He would come in always. He was one of the greatest. He came in, and he always encouraged kids. And he encouraged that. He came from a whorehouse. “Look at what I made, what I made of myself. You guys can do the same thing.”

Q. Mr. Masada, how many kids do you think have gone through the comedy camp since you founded it?

A. I think around -- I am not sure. I think over 400; 400 people.

Q. Is there actually a graduation ceremony of sorts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you do?

A. We prepare the comedian -- we take the kids, we gave them to one of -- another comedian, well-known comedian. Well-known comedian take that kid and coach them in last few days.

And then we have a night, and we going to try in front of real audience. They go on, and they get paid for it, and they become a real comedian. They get a flag. They get gifts. They get -- a lot of stuff they get. And they are very cheerful. We have a cake for them. And it’s kind of like a little ceremony, our own ceremony.

Q. Do kids stand up and do a comedy routine?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. For how long? How many minutes do they get to be up there?

A. They usually do three minute. Sometimes the kid is very, very talented. I seen them, they go on as much as seven, eight, ten minutes. I mean, it depends on the kid, how much talent it is.

And we try to teach them -- they have a little light. We have a red light we give them. And if the red light goes on, they got to get off, and sometimes they don’t see it.

Q. Do they write their own material?

A. They usually write their own material. Except celebrity type of comic help them out last few days, help them out to, say, punch up their lines or punch up their material.
Q. Are they encouraged to do material that they’re familiar with, things about themselves or their lives?
A. Yes, sir. We are always encourage them to talk about the pain, because I -- personally, I believe laughter is the healing. Laughter is, you know, something that could heal, and it could -- I work with a Norman Cousins quote, and he wrote a book called “Laughter is the Best Medicine,” and I believe in that.
I believe in, because this kid, they never got a chance to be a kid. So I think by expressing themself and talking about the pain they going through, they heal the whole thing. And that’s -- that’s what’s comedy camp.
Q. The child who enters the comedy camp will come how many weeks before graduation?
A. Ten to twelve weeks, sir.
Q. Is it always during the summer, or is it year-round?
A. No, it’s always in the summer.
Q. And what day of the week is it that they come?
A. Saturday, sir.

Q. Do they ever come on a Monday?
A. No. They come in maybe -- on Monday they come in if it’s -- for example, a celebrity want to meet with them on Monday before graduation.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. They might do that --
Q. Okay.
A. -- on Monday, coming in. For example, some big celebrity comes in and said, “I don’t have to come in -- I don’t have time to come in on Saturday or Sunday, but I’ll meet you Monday. Let’s go over material in the club and I help you out.” That has happened.

Q. Do you try to make sure that a celebrity is with every child?

A. Define what’s the “celebrity.”

Q. Somebody who’s a working, practicing stand-up comedian, earns a living doing that.

A. Yes, the person making a living out of it, yes. I try to find some people that they are mostly, you know, known.

Q. So it is, in effect, a mentorship of sorts?

A. Some type, yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the Arvizo family?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. And how did you become familiar with the Arvizo family?

A. I think, if I’m not mistaken, the first time

I met Arvizo family was -- was the first time we had a comedy camp at the club. And I believe, if I’m not mistaken, is a gentleman called Eric Site. He was from Los Angeles County Dis -- the Los Angeles County Children and Family Services.

He recommend them, or teacher recommended to him, and he brought them in, or he told the mother to bring them in, and they came in.

And the first time I met them, they went on the stage and I watched them, what they doing, what’s going on. And it was at that point was I believe on the time that I was doing interview. Eric Site was present, a lady called Julia Now was present. It was Robert Harper was present. It was Jo-Jo was present.

Q. Who are you talking about? These are people who evaluated their entry?

A. These are the people that sit back watching and seeing it. And it’s a gentleman called Patrick Press (sic) from FOX TV was there that year, was doing a -- what you call -- was doing a documentary about comedy camp. His name is Patrick Press (sic). And he was with his filmmaker, with a cameraman.

Q. Did you interview the Arvizo family to determine whether they should come into the camp?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And how many kids were there?

A. Three.

Q. Can you name them for us?

A. Yes. It was Star. It was Davellin. It was Gavin.

Q. Okay. Did you meet their mother?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what is her name?

A. Janet.

Q. Did these kids come for the entire camp academy, from the beginning to the end, and graduate?

A. I think they came in except one time, as I recall, because they did not have enough money to get bus to come in. They were coming in with bus.

Q. Coming with what?

A. Except one time they did not have money, or something to get the bus to come in.

Q. Oh, take the bus.

A. Take the bus to come in.

Q. So you think they may have missed one session?

A. I think I -- may I take some water, if you don’t mind? I’m sorry. I’ve got a cold. I’m trying --

Q. You’re not alone.

A. If you wanted some Cold-Eze, I have some Cold-Eze for you.

(Laughter.)

A. All right, sir.

Q. As long as we don’t give it to the jury.

A. No, I won’t.

I’m sorry, I’ll talk this way. I’m not talking that way, I’m sorry.

Q. Mr. Masada, was it your understanding that they would commute each time they came to The Laugh Factory by public transportation or by bus?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on each of those occasions, did Janet Arvizo bring the three children there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get to know them during the period of time that they were at The Laugh Factory comedy camp?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. All right. Did you develop a friendship or closeness with any of the children?

A. I usually -- you know, all of them, I look at them the same way. You know, I don’t look at one kid is better than another kid. You know, all of them, to me, they were all like my own kids. So all 38, 40 of them, whatever were there, all of them -- I looked at them the same way. I didn’t make special effort to be more friendly with them than the other different people.

Q. What year was the academy that they went to, the comedy camp that they went to?

A. The Laugh Factory comedy camp was on 1999.

Q. Do you have a sense of how old the children were when they went?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us.

A. I believe one of the kids was eight. One of them was nine. One -- no, one of them was eight. One of them was nine. One of them was 13.

Q. 13 being the daughter?

A. The daughter. Yes, sir.

Q. And who was eight and who was nine? Do you remember who was older?

A. Yeah, I believe Gavin was nine. Star was eight.

Q. All right. At some point in time, did you learn that one of the children became ill?

A. Not after I heard -- they graduated. Everything went perfect. The documentary was on FOX TV. Everything was perfect. Then I keep in touch, you know, for their birthday, or giving something, or if they need some money, or anybody needs something, they always call me they need some help. And the next time I heard, I was keeping contact with them, the mother called me, said that Gavin have cancer, and he’s sick, he’s ill.

And I kind of was in shock. “What’s happened? What’s going on? Where we going?” “Tomorrow we going to see another doctor,” this, this.

They call me. I don’t know when I was called.

And then I got another call that they going to go operate. I said, “When they go operate?” They said such and such. And I said, “I’ll be there.”

Q. Mr. Masada, who was it who called you?

A. Janet.

Q. Did she ask anything of you, any favor of you, or ask you to do anything on her behalf?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. What was that?

A. She said I should pray. She ask me if I can pray, and thank you for all of the help I did. If I can pray. And I said, “Okay, I’ll go to church tomorrow and do some prayer.”

Q. And did you go visit Gavin at the hospital?

A. Yes, I was there the time they operate, and I went there every day afterwards.

Q. Who was Gavin’s mentor while he was at the comedy camp?

A. God, the time -- the graduation you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. Or the time -- or the whole thing?

Q. If there was more than one, tell us.

A. Oh, yeah, there was -- I believe, if I’m not mistaken, Paul Rodriguez was one of them. Bob Saget was one of them. Rob Schneider was one of them. Eddie Griffin was one of them. Dave Chappell was one of them.

Oh, God. Let me think. My memory is not that great. Forgive me. Especially cold.

Who else was -- I believe Howie Mandell was one of them. And who else was it? Come on. Paul Mooney was one of them. Oh, God, come on. How many did I call? How many names I say?

Q. Well, let me ask it this way. You’ve mentioned a whole bunch of names. Are these people that came in during the course of the entire camp?

A. Yes, they came through the whole camp. And each time they came in, they become a mentor to them for that week.

Q. Oh, I see. Okay. Do you know if there was one in particular that worked with the Arvizo children on more than one week?

A. Oh, yeah, George Lopez.

Q. George Lopez?

A. Yes, I'm sorry.

Q. And you do recall that at this time?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. When you went to see Gavin at the hospital the first time, how did you find him? I mean, in what condition did you find him?

A. I -- oh, God. After operation or before operation?

Q. When was the first time? Before the operation or after?

A. Before operation. He was -- he was kind of like a -- his stomach was big. He was yellow, and his -- he looked like a -- very, very sick, like something was -- you know, all with -- his face was all white and yellow. He had no color in the face.

And after operation, I kept on going, and -- oooh, God, don't bring that memory back.

I kept on going. And anytime I go up there, I see a poor kid every day, he's deteriorating. All of a sudden, I see he lost his hair, because they were -- you know, after a while they -- the operation and everything, they gave him chemo. And all of a sudden he lost his hair. He kept on losing weight. I think -- I'm -- without exaggeration, I think he was -- one time he was -- weighed about 60, 65 pounds. He was bone and skin.

And then I would watch. I would go every morning, I would take some doughnut for the nurses up there and to go see them, and to see her -- to see him every day, every morning. And he was deteriorating to the point of -- it was unbelievable. I would go there, I would walk out tear in my eyes, because I didn't know what to do.

What do you do with a kid like that?

And at one point --

MR. MESEREAU: I'm going to object to the narrative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry. I’m sorry.

MR. ZONEN: Let me move on.

THE WITNESS: What did I do wrong?

MR. ZONEN: We have our own rules here. It’s a little bit different.

Q. When -- you were visiting him on a regular basis; is that right?

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you bring things for him?

A. I would -- I don’t -- I’m not very good -- I’m sorry. I’m not very good with giving gifts. And I give them financial. You know, I go up there, “Hey, if you eat, for example, today, if you eat, if you keep what you doing, I give you 50 bucks.”

This, this.

I kept on encouraging to give them. “If you save your money, I put all of your money together. When you get better, me and you, we go shopping. Here’s $50. Here’s that, that.” I give him every week some money, a $50 bill.

Q. A $50 bill?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you do that more than once?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. How many times do you think you gave him $50 bills?

A. Oh, God, I think about six, seven times.

Q. Was encouraging him to eat an important thing at that time?

A. Yeah, the doctor -- one time, the doctor -- you got to picture, this kid is dying. The doctor told me he has two, three weeks to live.

So me, I was trying to do everything I can in my power. And the doctor told me, “He’s -- he’s -- right now, he’s deteriorating. If he don’t eat anything, if he doesn’t” -- they were feeding him food from his wing. “And if he doesn’t eat, if he doesn’t eat - encourage him - he’s going to die.”

So what I would do every morning, I would have a comedian with me, different comic every morning, different comic would go with me and cheer him up, tell him a joke. And beside that, I would go up there in the hospital, I tried to give him food, you know, to eat, to feed him.

Q. Mr. Masada, you really grabbed comedians out of the club, took them to the hospital and said, “Start telling him jokes”?

A. Yeah, I --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE WITNESS: What did I do now?

THE COURT: It’s not leading. But it’s something. I’ll sustain it.

(Laughter.)

THE WITNESS: I’m sorry. Did you say something to me?

THE COURT: It’s not to you, no.

THE WITNESS: No? I’m okay?

THE COURT: I’m talking to the attorneys.

THE WITNESS: All right.

MR. ZONEN: Would you like me to do that differently?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Tell us how you did that, please. Tell us what you did with comedians.

A. A comedian always have -- say Bob Marley, Dane Cook, Frazier, me, I say to any of them, “Guys, meet me in the morning. We got to go to” -- each one of them, they would -- wake them up in the morning, I would drag them with me to the hospital. And they would go up, and just kind of make a little scene for him, “Bah, bah-bah,” whatever he did, little joke, like a clown, make a little smile on his face. That’s what we tried to do.

Q. Did this go on for months?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you give him other gifts during that time?

A. Not -- not gifts. The example, I give him money, you know how I give him money all the time.

Q. Was there a point when he was well enough to go home and then begin the chemotherapy treatments?

A. No, he would -- he didn’t go home right away. It was sometime we were trying -- you know, one time, point, it was almost that he was dying and he's -- you know, we were trying to feed him food. And his mouth -- because he was taking chemotherapy, when you take chemotherapy, your mouth is all bleeding. It's like your skin in mouth is gone. You -- your mouth has no skin or anything go in your mouth, it's like bleeding.

So I was encouraging, trying to give him ice cream. I chopped -- what they call it? -- cantaloupe in his mouth. "If you eat, I'll do this, I'll do this, I'll do that." And I keep on encouraging him for different stuff to eat. And I do anything I could do, clowning around, doing anything I can to make him eat. At one point he --

Q. Mr. --

A. I'm sorry. At one point he had an O negative blood, too.

Q. That's what I was going ask you.

A. Oh.

Q. Did you commence a blood drive or do something to facilitate a blood drive?

A. Yeah.

Q. What did you do?

A. He had O negative, I heard, from -- what's the name of that, the blood drive that they do? The blood drive. It's not Salvation Army. No, what's the blood drive? Come on. Red Cross.

Q. Red Cross?

A. I'm sorry. Red Cross.

I heard from Red Cross that they were -- didn't have enough blood, blood for him. So what I did, I put on my marquee, I put the sign on the door, "Anybody go give blood to the kids, they can come in and get -- come in the club, get free in the club," and they get food free.

The people, they went -- actually, I have like a one night of like a gathering for them. They come to the club and they have everything on the -- I have some good comedians, watch good comedians, all of them, for me to encourage people to go give blood.

And one time Red Cross came in the club actually and they did a blood drive in the club. At the time we encourage people, comedian, go on the stage, tell jokes at the time the people give blood.

So we got creative. And I encourage -- and I got a couple of radio station and a couple of T.V. station. Mostly T.V. station. I got ABC, I got NBC, to do a little promo about the blood, if they can get somebody with blood coming in, if they can do something about the blood.

And they did. As a matter of fact, Phil from -- from ABC came in -- he came in the hospital with a camera and he talked to me, and he showed me -- I feed him the blood -- I’m sorry, feed him the food, and -- sorry. So --

Q. Let’s move on.

Did you ever do a fund-raiser on behalf of Gavin Arvizo out of The Laugh Factory?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. All right. Were you working with anybody in particular on that?

A. What do you mean, did I work with anybody particular?

Q. Well, were you the one organizing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how many fund-raisers you did?

A. I think I -- you know, with blood drive, everything, financial one was couple of them. I think we did two, yes.

Q. And that’s separate from your efforts to encourage blood donation?

A. Yeah, the blood donations was kept another thing. We did different things for them, yes.

Q. How does it work that you do a benefit, financial benefit for somebody through The Laugh Factory? How does that work?

A. The way it works is we -- we have a person, for example, if it’s charity, if it’s not a charity, somebody else it is that they want a fund-raiser, we give them -- we say, “Here is the door. Whatever people that come in, you collect the money.” If it’s charity, they collect the money. And the money goes to them.

My employee instructions are, “Do not touch their money. Their money is their money.”

Whatever -- some poor people come in and give them $20, some people give them 50, whatever they want to give them, and that’s what we do. And they take the door. If there’s anybody -- people they want to buy a drink or they want to buy anything else, we keep it. We don’t give it back. But the rest of it all go to the charity.

Q. Okay. Mr. Masada, do you know David Arvizo?

A. Yes, I do, sir.

Q. And how did you meet him?

A. I met him in the hospital. First time I met him in the hospital.

Q. All right. You had already known Janet Arvizo; is that correct?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was it your understanding that David was Janet’s husband?

A. That’s what I was introduced by.

Q. And the father of the three children?

A. Yes. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you become involved with David Arvizo in fund-raising efforts in some fashion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Was he involved in the two fund-raisers at The Laugh Factory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Janet Arvizo there at either of those two?

A. As far as I remember, I don’t recall Janet be there at all.

Q. Do you know how the money was collected on either of those two occasions, those two fund-raisers?

A. Yes. I believe first time was David and -- David and -- David and the kids. I told them, you know, “Here is the table. Sit in here.” And I wanted somebody else sit with them. I don’t know who was it, but they sit by the door. Whatever they came in -- you know, most of my audience, they come in, they gave them money, whatever they gave them.

Q. Do you know approximately how much money would have been raised on either of those two fund-raisers based on your experience in the past?

A. Oh, God. I don't think it was anywhere -- you know, I don't think it was -- any of them was more than 2,000 bucks. I don't think so. Never to near 2,000 bucks. Maybe, eight, 900, 1200. I have no idea.

Q. Okay. Do you think that 2,000 would be the maximum they would have received?

A. Yeah, maximum. Maximum, I would think.

Q. On either of those two occasions, did you collect the money or somebody working with you collect the money?

A. No. They did it. They did it. I think one time, as I recall, David had sat down with one of the employees that collect the money. And the employee that sat down, David and the employee sat down, and David was very upset because George Lopez was supposed to be there, and George Lopez didn't come out. And George Lopez had an argument with him, whatever, and he was kind of like upset. And I took the money, I brought it up, I gave it to him upstairs.

Q. Okay. Do you know how much money that was?

A. I think it was about 800, thousand dollars, or something like that. 800, 900.

Q. During the time that you knew George -- that you knew David Arvizo, did he ever ask you for money?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE WITNESS: What do I do?

THE COURT: Just a moment.

Sustained.

MR. MESEREAU: I'll withdraw the objection. I'll withdraw it.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did David Arvizo ever ask you for money?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. How often?

A. Many time.

Q. How often is "many"? Give us a sense.

A. Anytime he was bringing the kids in, in to visit me in the office, or I would go, he would walk out with me. He said, "Well," you know, something, "We haven't had soup, we haven't had lunch." I mean, poor guy. You know, I gave it to him, because I wanted to give it to him. Poor guy, he needed money for eating, whatever. He was unemployed. And I gave him whatever. You know, anytime he asked me, I gave him some cash.

Q. Did he tell you he was not working?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Did he tell you why he was not working?

A. No, he did not. I mean, I assumed, but I didn't ask, "Why you not working?" Because his kid was sick in the hospital.

Q. Did you ever see Gavin's mother, Janet Arvizo, at the hospital when you visited?

A. Yes, several times I saw her.

Q. Okay. Was she there as often as David was there, could you tell?

A. No -- the time I was going there, no, she wasn't at often. But I was going early in the morning usually, because my days start in the morning, early in the morning. And, no -- I mean, several times I saw her, but, no, not that often.

Q. Did you maintain communications with Janet Arvizo during the time that her child was sick?

A. Yeah.

Q. You would talk to her?

A. I talked to her once a while. She call me once in a while. Yes, she does.

Q. Did Janet Arvizo ever ask you for money?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you ever give Janet Arvizo money?

A. No.

Q. But you gave David Arvizo money; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. How much money do you think you gave him during the period of time his child was sick?

A. You are going to think I'm crazy, but I have no idea. You know, I had money in my cash -- in my pocket, you know. I go out there, you know, he asked me for some money, I gave him, 50 bucks, 40 bucks, 70 bucks. And sometime he asked me for gas for car, because he had a car now. He have a "sudan" car that Michael Jackson gave it to him, and he was -- he said he was losing a lot of gas and he need more money for gas. You know, I just gave him the money.

Q. Did you ever see the vehicle he was talking about?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what was it, what kind of vehicle?

A. One time he came in the office with a kid, with his two kids, he say, "Oh, Jamie, you got to come see."

"What's going on?"

"Come on, I want to show you something."

And I went, "Okay."

And I went outside in -- on Laurel, and I saw his car was parked in front of the fire hydrant. I said, "Man, this is your car?" He say, "Yes." I say, "You're in front of the fire hydrant." And he parked there, and he opened -- it was a white car, like a -- what you call it? A su -- a "sudan" car, SUV -- what you call it?

Q. An SUV, sport utility vehicle?

A. Sport utility car.

And I remember one thing particular about the car, a T.V. was on the dashboard. A T.V. was on the dashboard. And he said -- I said, "Well, what -- why did Michael give you that car?" He said, "Michael gave me the car so I can take the kid to Neverland." I said, "Oh, that's very nice. That's very generous of him."

And that's -- that's the conversation I had with him.

Q. Do you know how long he had that car?

A. I have no idea.

Q. At some point in time, did you have a falling-out with David Arvizo?

A. Not really. I never had a fall-out with him.

Q. All right. Was there an incident that took place involving a wallet, a conversation with him about a wallet?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. What was that?

A. It was -- the first time happen, it was in my club. He came in my office one time. And I remember precisely that whole thing, because I did not have money, cash in my pocket.

He came in my office, and he ask that -- he said that Gavin went to George house and somehow he left his wallet with 300, $350 in it, in George house. He lost it in George Lopez’s house.

And I said, “Oh, really?” I said, “Gavin, this happened?” And Gavin didn’t say anything. And I just kind of like, “Gavin, this happened? He said, “No.” I said -- and David went near Gavin and he said, “Tell him that happened.” And Gavin didn’t say anything.

And I just -- my phone rang. And I tried to pick up the phone, and then I realized Gavin said, “Oh, dad,” like some -- kind of like David elbowed Gavin, or something.

And I knew that his face -- Gavin’s face got all red, like the -- the time David hit him, his face was red, and, “Dad,” and something like that.

And at that point, I said, “Wait a minute, wait a minute, wait a minute. Guys, come on, let’s -- let me -- what was it? 350?” Whatever.

I wrote him a check. I said, “Here’s the check. Go -- here.” I gave him a check for $350.

I said, “Don’t even mention it. First, the money was from me. I gave you guys the money. Don’t even get that.”

Because I got really upset, because this kid is sick. He elbowed him or something. I didn’t see what’s happened, but I could see from the face of the kid, he did something to him.

Q. Did Gavin ever say anything to you to confirm that 300 or $350 was missing from his wallet?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

MR. ZONEN: State of mind, Your Honor, and explains the behavior.

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: I answer?

THE COURT: You may answer.

THE WITNESS: What was the question again? I’m sorry.

THE COURT: I can have it read back for you.

THE WITNESS: Oh, thank you. Thank you, sir.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: No, never said that.

MR. ZONEN: May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Cross-examine?

MR. ZONEN: No, I’m not done. I said, “May I approach the witness?”

THE COURT: I’m sorry. Yes, you may.

(Laughter.)

MR. ZONEN: I’m losing my voice.

THE COURT: I was just trying to hurry it along. I’m sorry.

(Laughter.)

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: I’d like to show you an exhibit. This exhibit is marked as Exhibit 624 for identification. Not yet in evidence. Take a look at that, please, and both pages of it. I’ll leave a second exhibit here as well.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you recognize that?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. And please tell us what that is.

A. That’s a check for $350 to David Arvizo.

Q. All right. Is that, in your opinion, the check that you wrote him at that time?

A. In my opinion, yes.

Q. And the date that’s on there, what is the date?

A. 10-13-00.

Q. All right. Would that date have been written on that check accurately? In other words, would you have written the same date on the check as was the date that you wrote it?

A. I think so.

Q. Okay. Okay. There’s a second exhibit, which I think is 623, right next to you. Go ahead and grab that one and take a look at that.
A. Okay. This one?
Q. Yes, please.
A. All right.
Q. And confirm that number. That little kind of pumpkin-colored tag on the bottom should have a number on it.
A. This is 623. Case No. 1133603.
Q. That’s fine.
A. People --
Q. That’s fine. It is 623.
What is that document that you’re holding?
A. It’s a copy.
Q. Of what?
A. A copy of a check.
Q. Okay. What is that check? Is that your check?
A. That’s Laugh Factory check.
Q. Made out to whom?
A. To David Arvizo.
Q. For how much?

A. For $800.
Q. What do you believe that was for? Do you have a recollection of it?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. What was that?
A. I think it’s, again, another time he came, ask me for money that I didn’t have cash with me, so I had to write him a check for his rent.
Q. And that was what that check was for?
A. That’s what he said for.
Q. Do you have a sense of how much money you gave David Arvizo during the time that Gavin was ill?
A. Not really.
Q. On one of the two occasions that you were having a benefit at The Laugh Factory --
A. Yes, sir.
Q. -- did you have an argument with David, or did he have an argument with you?
A. Not really. I don’t recall argument.

Q. Did he ever throw money on the floor?

A. Oh. One time -- the second, I think, if I’m not mistaken, it was the second time that the money I gave -- we did a fund-raising for David. And we went upstairs, and somehow he was downstairs collecting the money.

And we went upstairs, giving the money to David Arvizo. And David all of a sudden -- we gave him the money. And I ask him about -- again, one more time about -- because Gavin was up there. Somebody was there. I can’t recall who was there. Somebody was -- few people that were up there, they ask me about the wallet. Somehow the wallet came up. And David was trying to tell Gavin to talk about the wallet. And Gavin did not want to say anything about it. He said he didn’t know what wallet he’s talking about.

And because of he wasn’t -- kid was not confirming what he was saying, and he throw the money at me. And I’m kind of like -- you know, I was kind of like insulted; I say how unappreciated person he is, so I start walking away.

Q. You walked away?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. What happened to the money?

A. I have no idea. Maybe somebody picked it up. I have no idea.

Q. You left it behind, though?

A. Yes.

Q. You didn’t pick it up?

A. No, I was upset at that time.

Q. Was this the money that was the door money to one of those benefits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. What was it that you said to Mr. Arvizo prior to him doing that?

A. I think was something to do -- I mean, again, it’s -- God, it’s five years, four years ago. I can’t remember word by word. But it was something to do with wallet.

Q. Whose wallet?

A. The wallet of Gavin, because I believe I spoke to Ann Lopez. Ann Lopez said they find the wallet and was only $50 in it or something.

And I'm trying to ask him, "Wasn't that what you told me you got a check for, 350 from me? What's going on in here? Can you explain something here? Something is not kosher in here. Hello?"

And he's kind of like -- he said -- he ask Gavin, "Gavin, confirm what's happened," and Gavin would not say anything.

Q. That's the conversation we just had already?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you have any other dealings with David Arvizo thereafter?

A. Yeah, he would come by the club once in a while. He would come in, you know. I mean, at that point after that, you know, it was kind of like, you know, you try to help people, and the time people become a little bit, you know, not truthful, you just kind of like -- you know, you're not as friendly as you're supposed to be.

So I wasn't that much friendly with him. I mean, we were still -- we still talk anytime he calls me. I pick up his phone, I talk to him.

Q. At some point in time, did you become aware of the fact that the Arvizo -- or any members of the Arvizo family were visiting Neverland, Michael Jackson's ranch?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were you involved in some way in introducing Gavin to Michael Jackson, to your knowledge?

A. To my knowledge, I don't know if it was me doing or so many -- I was in the hospital. The kid was -- you know, he needed help. And his wish was -- looking at a T.V. on the -- in the hospital, he saw Michael Jackson on the T.V., and he said he wanted to meet Michael Jackson. I didn't know Michael Jackson. I never met Michael Jackson. And I want to bring his wish through like Make a Wish.

So I say, "Okay, if you eat, I do anything you want. You want to meet Adam Sandler, all those guys you told me, I'll introduce him to."

I didn't know Michael Jackson, but at that point I made several phone calls to different places. I called Paul Mooney, David Salzman. I called Quincy Jones’ office. I called anybody I could to get some kind of number. Somebody say call some -- some -- some studio in Vine Street, called The Studio on Vine Street. I was doing that in the hospital, call The Studio on Vine Street. I tried to call -- they gave me number, they said it’s Neverland. I don’t know if it was Neverland.

So I left a message for everybody I could, “Hey, if anybody get this message, please tell Michael to watch this ABC show and this thing, and if he can watch it, please call him tomorrow. There’s this kid dying.”

And I left a message. I don’t know if my message got to him or he called next day by chance, by will of God. I have no idea.

Q. But in any event, you became aware that Gavin had started having conversations with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Gavin ever talk about that when you visited him at the hospital?

A. Yes. The next day when he was so impressed and so grateful and so happy to hear from Michael. Michael call him. And he said, “Do you have anything?” I said, “I don’t know.” I made a few phone call. I don’t know if anything came from me. Maybe somebody else call him. I have no idea.

But at that point, he was very happy, and he was very excited about it. And you could see his face, he was cheered up a little bit.

And what else?

Q. Are you aware of whether or not he ever visited Michael Jackson at Neverland Ranch?

A. Yes. Father told me Michael invite them to go to Neverland. And they were going to go to Neverland. So I said, “Oh, great. Wonderful. Have a good time.”

And father said, “Do you want to go?” And I said, “I got three other kids dying. I got to go take care. I wish I could go. I can’t go to Neverland. I wish I could. But go ahead. You guys enjoy.”

Q. At some point in time, did you view or watch the television documentary entitled “Living with Michael Jackson”? Did you ever see that?

A. Yes, I did. The second time they showed it.

Q. In the United States?

A. In United States, yeah.

Q. Were you aware that Gavin was going to be featured in that documentary prior to your viewing it?

A. I was aware of it because Janet called me about that.

Q. All right. When Janet called you, do you remember when that was?

A. No idea. The date -- I’m very bad with date. I’m telling you now, don’t go to the date.

Q. Was Gavin -- was Gavin already well at that point?

A. Gavin was not well, but he was -- you know, I mean, still have a problem with the kidney, because, you remember now, he had one kidney, and he have no spleen, and he got to take medication for his spleen, because he goes through any room that have a germ, he could get sick immediately. And he had one kidney. And at the time he have one kidney, you know, he got to go for his blood being, you know, changed or dialysis, or whatever it is. Once in a while he got to do that, all kinds of stuff like that. So he’s not still well.

Q. When Janet called you, was she upset?

A. She said -- yes, she was upset.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

MR. ZONEN: I was just asking whether --

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. And the answer was, “Yes.” Next question.

MR. ZONEN: All right.

Q. You then viewed the documentary “Living with Michael Jackson”; is that right?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you watched Gavin in that film?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were you aware of whether or not that film itself caused Gavin some problems?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Hearsay; foundation.
MR. ZONEN: The question is whether he knew.
THE COURT: I'll allow the question, but you can only answer it "yes" or "no." And I'll have it read back to you.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Please.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: Yes, it did.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What were the nature of those problems, to your understanding?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Were you told by anybody the nature of those problems?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
MR. ZONEN: State of mind. Not for the truth of the matter.
THE COURT: The objection is sustained.
MR. ZONEN: All right.
Q. Did you do a presentation of any kind or were you filmed in any way on behalf of Michael Jackson?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. All right. Tell us about that. When did that happen?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; foundation.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: When did that happen? Go ahead.
A. It was -- I don't know, again, the day. It was sometime that -- after Martin Bashir show, that film. And the people, they called -- Janet called and said they needed to do --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Just tell us what you did.
A. What I did. They came in my club and they ask me if I can talk on the T.V. And they talked to me if I can talk about Martin Bashir. I start talking about Martin Bashir, that Martin Bashir -- what I thought, that he did something wrong, because showing a kid, underage kid, on his T.V -- on a T.V.

for -- he make millions of dollar, and he put this poor kid on a tape, and he didn't even digitize his face, and people in the school, they call him "faggot" by it. And I -- I felt terrible for him. I really felt horrible about it.

Q. Who was it who asked to you do something on tape on behalf of Michael Jackson? Do you know who the person was?

A. I think, if I'm not mistaken -- I'm not hundred percent sure, maybe I shouldn't answer it, but I think it started with Janet.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; calls for speculation.

THE WITNESS: Oh, don't answer it?

THE COURT: Don't answer.

THE WITNESS: I don't recall.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did that person --

(Laughter.)

MR. ZONEN: Well, that was a more concise answer.

THE WITNESS: Well, that was bad?

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: No, no, no.

How many people showed up?

A. They showed up about, oh, God, three, four people, five people.

Q. Cameramen included?

A. Cameramen.

Q. Where did they do the filming?

A. In Laugh Factory in Los Angeles.

Q. All right. Were any of them introduced to you?

A. I'm sure they were.

Q. Do you remember any of their names?

A. None.

Q. How long was the filming?

A. The filming, they said they going to do about two, three minutes, just talk about Martin Bashir. But afterwards, they -- I understood that my mike was on, and they kept on talking to me about Michael. They talked to me about different stuff. I don't know if they tape all of that. I'm not sure. But they said, "I want to pick up the spot I talk about Martin Bashir, what he did was wrong."

Q. All right. Did you ever see the production that was done that featured you, among other people?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Do you know if it was ever shown on television?

A. I think it was, because people told me it was on T.V.
Q. To this day, have you ever seen it?
A. No, I got a tape of it, but I never got a chance. I wish I had time to go see it. I have a tape of it. And I know -- I’m -- I don’t look at myself too much.
Q. But you’ve never looked -- you’ve never viewed it in its entirety?
A. No.
Q. And you’ve never viewed the portion that you recited?
A. No.
Q. And you don’t know if it contains the part that was filmed after you thought you were done, or during the part?
A. I have no idea, but the people, they told me what they said. I says, “Well, that’s the press. Let it go.” I didn’t even --
Q. Did somebody tell you what to say?
A. The people that were there, they were encourage me to talk about Michael. If Michael helped the kid, what my thought was. Who else helped the kid, if Adam Sandler helped the kid, if anybody helped the kid. And I was very open. I was talking about it.
Q. What did you understand to be Mr. Jackson’s assistance to this child at the time that you did this video?

A. I thought Michael, Adam Sandler, everybody really -- they helped the kid. That’s my belief. Everybody, they did help the kid. At that point I believed that.
Q. Did you have any personal information at that time on what Mr. Jackson did on behalf of Gavin Arvizo at the time you did this video?
A. What -- I’m sorry.

Q. Did you have -- when you made statements on behalf of --
A. Yeah.
Q. -- Michael Jackson and other people --
A. Yeah.
Q. -- did you have a sense of what it was that Michael Jackson did on behalf of Gavin Arvizo?
A. I’m not still clear. I’m sorry.
Q. Were you encouraged to say good things about Michael Jackson?
A. Yeah. The people ask me, “Hey,” you know, “Can you say that?” And I say, “Yeah.” I believed it. I said it, yeah.
Q. Did you believe the reason for your presence on that video was to say something about Martin Bashir?
A. Yes, that’s what I believed.
Q. At some point in time did you get a phone call from Janet Arvizo calling from Neverland?

A. Yes, I did.
Q. Did she sound upset to you?
A. Uh --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did she sound upset to you?
MR. MESEREAU: And leading.
THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer “yes” or “no.”
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. What did she tell you?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
MR. ZONEN: State of mind and spontaneous declaration and excitable utterance, the last being the exception to the hearsay.
MR. MESEREAU: No foundation for that justification.
THE WITNESS: What do I do?
THE COURT: That’s true for the spontaneous declaration and the excitable utterance. There is no foundation. The state of mind, I think that would depend on a further foundation also, so I’ll sustain the foundation objection.

MR. ZONEN: All right.
Q. You said she was upset. Describe that to me. You’ve had other conversations with her prior to that.

A. I had many conversations with her. She was kind of like in a state of, you know, like crying, “Oh, my God.” You know, her voice, you could see like -- “Oh, my God, they hold” -- “They are holding me here.”
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Objection. Hearsay; move to strike.
THE COURT: The -- I’ll strike that. The foundation I was looking for was time frame foundation, because her state of mind is only relevant at a certain time, so I think you missed --
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Can you tell us approximately when that call was taking place? If you can’t tell us a date, then in comparison to other events.
A. It was -- in my recollection, it was sometime later after Martin Bashir type of stuff.
Q. Can you tell us approximately how long after Martin Bashir?
A. I have no idea.
Q. I mean, would it be measured in weeks or measured in months?
A. Few weeks maybe.
Q. All right. All right. And then you described her as crying; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And you’ve heard her crying before?
A. Yes.

Q. At the time she had that conversation with you about her child being ill?
A. The time he was ill, a couple of different times I heard her crying. It was in the hospital I saw her crying, and her voice.
Q. And describe her emotional state as you talked to her on that telephone call after the Martin Bashir screening. Describe her emotional state in comparison to those other occasions.
A. She was upset. She was crying, the same way was before. Her voice was the same as like her child was sick.

Q. And what did she tell you?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: I’m going to admit this for the state of mind only.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you.

Q. What did she tell you?

THE COURT: That means that it’s not -- I’m going to let you answer in a minute.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE COURT: (To the jury) That means that I’ve limited the use of this testimony not for the truth of the matter asserted, not for the truth of the matter of what she says, but to show her frame of mind.

All right. You may answer the question. Do you want it reread?

THE WITNESS: Please.

THE COURT: Okay.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: I mean, depends what conversation. I mean, now I have several conversations.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: This first one.

A. Oh, God, I don’t know which one was first.

Q. As best you can recall.

A. Which one was first, which one was second. Four, five years ago. I have no idea. But I could say what conversation I had. I don’t know which one was what.

Q. The one that you most remember where she was crying. That one.

A. She was -- that one was from Neverland. She said, “They are holding me here with my kid against my will. I need to get out of here. Please do something.”

I said, “Why don’t you call the police?” We talked about all kind of stuff like that.

You want to --

THE COURT: Hold it. Hold it. Next question.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Did you make an effort to introduce her to a lawyer?

A. Yes, I did.
Q. And who was the lawyer that you introduced her to?

A. Bill Dickerman.
Q. All right. Do you remember what that was?
A. It was after the Martin Bashir taping was going on. The people, they were calling Gavin all kind of bad names. And I took her to -- and the kid to -- to Bill Dickerman to stop, if they can stop. ABC was running it. VH-1 was showing his picture, MTV. All of them. The way I understood, everybody was showing his picture. And the people, they recognize him, and they would call him bad names. And he was really upset. And we were going to try to see if -- if Bill Dickerman could write a letter to those people, tell them stop using the tape of -- showing his face.
Q. All right. Were you the one, then, who took her to Bill Dickerman?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And was the purpose for that to get her child off television?
A. Yes.
Q. Was there any other reason that you took her to Bill Dickerman?
A. No, that was the reason we took her, because didn’t want to be -- her child be called “fag,” or whatever was calling.
Q. Were you present during any of those conversations?

A. I --
Q. By “those conversations,” I mean between Janet Arvizo and Bill Dickerman, Attorney Dickerman.
A. Yes, I was, on four occasion. I remember four occasion I remember I was present.
Q. Okay. And did you participate in the conversations?
A. First one, participate.
Q. I’m not asking you the content. I’m just asking if you were actually contributing in some fashion to these conversations.

A. Yes.

Q. All right. What -- where did the conversations take place? Were they at multiple locations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were the multiple locations?

A. One time was in my office. No, no, it was in the Bill Dickerman -- I took them Bill Dickerman office. And it was in Bill Dickerman office. They talk to the -- to Bill Dickerman.

And second time it was in my club. And I believe third time it was in my club.

Fourth time it was -- I was present with Bill Dickerman. We took them to -- we took -- we took the kids and the mother, they were going with Jay, they were going to play baseball, and we took them to baseball, and I was going watch the kids to play baseball. So those four times I was present.

Q. All right. There was one meeting at The Laugh Factory; is that right?

A. Two meetings at Laugh Factory, sir.

Q. Do you know if Janet was accompanied by anybody from Neverland?

A. I understood that's what she told me. I was inside the club. She said we -- came in, and she --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Did you ever offer money to Janet Arvizo?

A. Did I ever offer money to Janet Arvizo?

Q. Uh-huh.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did you ever tell her that there was somebody prepared to give her a substantial amount of money?

A. Yes, I know where you're going now. Yes.

Q. You're troubled by something, are you not?

A. Yes. Yeah.

Q. The person --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; move to strike the comments.

THE COURT: Sustained; stricken.

MR. ZONEN: All right.

Q. The person -- there is a person who was -- let me back off a little bit.

The conversation that you had with Janet Arvizo about somebody having money for her --
A. Yeah.
Q. All right. Tell us what you told Janet Arvizo.
A. It was after Martin Bashir and all of that stuff happened. And I told Janet, I said, “Janet, particular person wants to give you -- actually, offered to give me a check, as much as amount of money you want, and wants you to just take care of your kid and family, and feels bad for all of that stuff. And if you need money, whatever money you need, I know this particular person he would give you whatever money you need,” you know. “You need to buy a house, whatever you need, he would get you the money. Whatever money you need, he would give it to you.”
Q. What did she say?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
MR. ZONEN: State of mind. Particularly given counsel’s opening statement.
THE COURT: All right. The objection is sustained.
MR. ZONEN: Could we approach sidebar?
THE COURT: All right.
(Off-the-record discussion held at counsel table.)
THE COURT: All right. Would -- excuse me.

(To the jury) What I’m going to do is, again, I’m going to change the ruling that I made a moment ago, and I’m going to allow the answer to this question.
But again, I’m going to give you the cautionary instruction that this answer that is about to be given to this question is -- is offered for a limited purpose, which is Mrs. Arvizo’s state of mind only. So that would be Janet’s state of mind only, not for the truth of the matter asserted.
And I’ll have the question reread to the witness, and then he may answer.

(Record read.)

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: With regards to your conveying that comment about a person prepared to give her money, what did she say?

A. She said, “No, tell them all I need friend. I don’t need money. I just need pray. And I don’t need money. Thank you very much, but tell them we need a friend. That’s all we need.”

And I say, “You sure you don’t want money? If you need any money, you know, let me know.”

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: I’ll strike the last sentence.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: When did this conversation take place? I know your difficulties with dates, but in comparison to some other time.

A. After Martin Bashir.

Q. Do you know if Janet Arvizo was still with David Arvizo at the time of that conversation?

A. No. Martin Bashir happened, David -- they were separated. No, they were not together.

Q. Did you ever see Janet Arvizo with bruises on her?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you know where those bruises were on her body?

A. One time I saw bruises upper -- like nearby by her neck, near upper chest, like somebody tried to -- what they call -- I don’t know what was it. Looked like somebody tried to choke her or something. And there was make-up on it, and the make-up was coming off. And I said, “What’s this?” She’d hide it. She didn’t want to let me know --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

THE COURT: I’ll strike after he -- “And there was make-up on it,” from there on, I’ll strike.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you see bruises on any other occasion on her?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How many occasions do you think?

A. Another time I saw bruises was -- it was on -- one side of her face was swollen and her eyes were swollen. It was like black and blue. Again, make-up was on it.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning.

A. Good morning, sir.

Q. Mr. Masada, we haven’t met. My name is Tom Mesereau. I speak for Michael Jackson.

A. All right, sir.

Q. Mr. Masada, do you remember receiving a phone call from an investigator for the Santa Barbara District Attorney’s Office in December of 2003? He said his name was Tim Rooney. Do you remember that?

A. I don’t recall it, but if he said he did, I did.

Q. Do you remember talking to someone in December, around December 9th, 2003, from the Santa Barbara District Attorney’s Office?

A. No, I don’t recall.

Q. Do you remember telling this person that Gavin’s parents came to you and wanted financial help? He repeated, “Who asked you that?” You said, “The parents”?

A. I meant “husband.” I never said “mother.”

Q. Would it refresh your recollection to show you a police transcript of your --

A. I don’t need to see the police --

Q. You didn’t know the phone call was being recorded?

MR. ZONEN: May the witness be allowed to answer the question in its entirety before counsel steps in with his next question?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You didn’t know your phone call --

MR. ZONEN: He hasn’t answered the question.

THE COURT: He started to answer it. He’s allowed to finish it.

THE WITNESS: What was the question again?

MR. MESEREAU: I’m not sure even I know at this point.

THE COURT: The question was whether it would refresh your recollection to show you a police transcript, and you said, “I don’t need to see it,” and you were interrupted.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, because it is “parents.” I meant “father.”

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Well, you didn’t know your phone call was being recorded, correct?

A. I don’t know any of my phone call was record.

Q. No one has ever told you that that phone conversation was recorded by the District Attorney’s Office of Santa Barbara, correct?

A. I don’t know if they did. I’m not -- they never told me anything.

Q. You did tell them that the parents wanted financial help. You were then asked, “Who asked you that?” And you replied, “The parents,” right?

A. Yeah. “The parents” means “father.” Let me correct it.

Q. Oh, I see.

How many meetings have you had with anyone related to the prosecution before you testified in this case?

A. How many meeting with what?

Q. With anyone related to the prosecution before you testified in this case.

A. I had a meeting this morning. They came in, they say, “You sit in the room.”

And meaning the people that came investigating my office? What are you talking about, sir? Explain it to me.

Q. Please identify every meeting you had with anyone related to the prosecution before you testified today.

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as vague and compound.

THE WITNESS: Oh, God.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: A lot of them, right?

A. Yes. A lot of them, yes, I do.

Q. How many do you think?

A. I have no idea. They came in my office, say they want to talk. They came, I don’t know, two, three, four, five times. I didn’t write them down. They call me.

Q. And have you ever discussed what you were going to say in court today with anyone associated with the prosecution?

A. Only thing I have spoken to, I spoke to Mr. -- I spoke to you (indicating) one time. And there was a -- I believe -- no, just one time I’ve spoken to.

Q. Do you remember ever telling a Santa Barbara sheriff’s investigator that Janet wanted a watch, so you bought her a watch?

A. Janet want a watch?

Q. Yes.

A. Um, not as far as I remember.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I just show you a transcript?

A. No, because I didn’t buy a watch for Janet. I don’t know what you’re talking about.

Q. You never told them she wanted a watch and you bought a watch, correct?

A. Maybe it was something for Davellin. I got a watch for Davellin.

Q. Okay.

A. For the girl. The daughter.

Q. When did you give the watch to Davellin?

A. Huh?

Q. When did you get a watch for Davellin?

A. Davellin, she came in -- we do, at The Laugh Factory, every Christmas and Thanksgiving, we do feed homeless. And Davellin came out there to help me to do -- to help the serving the homeless. And we were giving the gifts for the kids, homeless kid, and Davellin, at that point I remember she said something about she need -- that watch was nice, was giving to the kids, and I said, “I get you one.” That’s what happened.

Q. Now, you knew that Louise Palanker had given $20,000 to the Arvizos, correct?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you knew that she had written a $10,000 check to Janet, correct?

A. I didn’t know it. What do you mean, “correct”? No, I did not know she wrote it to Janet. How would I know?

Q. Well, did you ever discuss with her where she was getting that money?

MR. ZONEN: Who is “her”? Objection; vague.

MR. MESEREAU: That’s okay. I’ll withdraw it and rephrase.

Q. Did you ever discuss with Louise Palanker who she was writing her checks to?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: You may answer “yes” or “no.”

THE WITNESS: No, I didn’t ask her who write check to, because I’m not -- I have nothing to do with her checkbook.

THE COURT: I just said “yes” or “no.” I’ll strike the balance.

THE WITNESS: Oh, sorry.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Did you know whether or not Louise Palanker wrote a $10,000 to Janet?

A. Yes, I do. For --

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Lack of foundation; and hearsay.

THE COURT: I’ll allow you to answer this question either with a “yes” or a “no.” It’s --

THE WITNESS: Yes. Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you recall ever telling anyone --

THE COURT: I’m sorry, I misdirected. You need -- I’m going to strike the question and the answer. That couldn’t be answered “yes” or “no.” Go back and rephrase. You asked him whether or not, so it can’t be “yes” or “no.”

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were you ever aware that Louise Palanker wrote a $10,000 check to Janet Arvizo?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you learn about that?

A. Oh, Gavin was going to go home, and they want him to have a kind of room that was sanitized, and that’s what hospital said. And I was looking for finding an apartment for them, to find an apartment.

And then next thing I know, I heard from David that Louise wrote the check. They going to take the money in the grandmother’s house and make one of the rooms become sanitized for the kid. I don’t need to look for apartment anymore.

Q. Do you remember ever telling any police investigator that, after talking to Janet on the phone, you wrote checks to pay for judo and karate school for the kids?

A. No, it was Jay and Janet. Yes, Jay and Janet.

Q. Jay and Janet asked you to pay for judo and karate school, correct?

A. No, they didn’t ask me to do it. I volunteer to do it, sir.

Q. After they told you they couldn’t pay for it, correct?

A. No, they were telling -- no, don’t put words in my mouth. Let me say -- if you want to know the truth, let me tell you the truth, what happened.

Q. I would like to know the truth for sure.

A. That’s what I’m going to tell you. That’s what I’m going to tell you. If you want me to say it, I say it.

They were suggesting that they were going to take the kid, because the kid was bothering -- all of the kids, they were bothering him. And they want to take him to put him on other school. They said they -- Jay said, “We don’t have enough money.” And I said, “How much you guys short?” They said, “$400.” I said, “I could help that.” I said, “I will have no problem to write the check for $400.” That’s what I did.

And the other occasion about judo you ask. Judo -- I went to their house. I went up there, and the kids were talking about they wanted protection. I suggested -- I said, “Can I go” -- “You guys should go to judo or something.”

And Jay and Janet was up there. They said, “Oh, thank you very much. God bless you. You’re helping us out.”

MR. MESEREAU: Okay

THE COURT: Okay. We’re going to take a break.

Let me tell the jury what we’re going to do. I’m going to give a little longer break to you because we need to address a couple of issues outside of your presence, so we’re going to take our regular break for 15 minutes. And then we’ll come back, and it will be about another 10 or 15 minutes longer than our normal break at this time, just so you know. So you probably won’t be back in until 12:00.

THE JURY: (In unison) Okay.

THE WITNESS: Am I excused?

THE COURT: I want to see everybody here at the end of the regular break.

MR. ZONEN: Quarter to?

THE COURT: Yeah.

(Recess taken.)

(The following proceedings were held in open court outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: Yes, I just want to take up a couple of the issues.

I was told earlier that Dr. Katz was going to be the next witness, so I thought I better clean this up before we start with him. I’ve been told now that that may not be the case, but we’ve set the time aside, so let’s just do this.

The first issue that’s before me on Dr. Katz’s testimony was a motion by Mr. Mesereau that Mr. Oxman actually wrote, which seeks to limit the psychologist from being able to testify to the ultimate fact, the credibility of the children, pointing out that that was done in the grand jury hearing.

And my ruling on that is that, in accord with the request, he is not to give his opinion as to their credibility.

I think that covers that, doesn’t it, Mr. Oxman?

MR. OXMAN: Yes, sir. And I think it also reflects --

THE BAILIFF: You have to speak up.

MR. OXMAN: It also -- it also reflects to ultimate facts, Your Honor, as to whether or not it occurred.

THE COURT: Turn on your mike.

MR. OXMAN: Also reflects the ultimate facts as to whether or not the incident occurred.

THE COURT: Yes. So he’s not allowed to give his opinion as to credibility or his opinion as to whether the actual things happened.

MR. ZONEN: Your Honor, we have no intention of asking either of those questions about his view of the credibility --

THE COURT: I don’t think your mike’s on. Is it?

Can you hear back there?

MR. ZONEN: All right. We have no intention on asking either of those questions, nor will we.

THE COURT: All right. The next issue is the -- Mr. Mesereau has submitted a limited waiver. I saw a copy of the limited waiver of 4061 confidentiality signed by Bradley Miller. Have you seen that?

MR. ZONEN: Yes, I have it in front of me.

THE COURT: And do you wish to speak to that?

MR. ZONEN: Yes.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. ZONEN: I don’t believe you can have a limited waiver of a nature like this to be able to ask a therapist two questions about a person who is presumably his patient. And, of course, Dr. Katz has never acknowledged that this person --

THE COURT: I never let him. It cost Mr. Oxman a thousand dollars, as I recall.

(Laughter.)

MR. ZONEN: Now, let’s assume --

THE COURT: You don’t have to say anything.

MR. ZONEN: Not without a lawyer at his side.

THE COURT: But so your issue is the -- he now has a waiver, Mr. Mesereau, Mr. Oxman, they have a waiver as to the very issue that I was saying they couldn’t address, which is whether or not he was a patient.

MR. ZONEN: Well, actually, it doesn’t do that. It specifically is a waiver to a conversation involving two questions. I don’t know that Dr. Katz would be comfortable even acknowledging that he’s a patient, given the limited nature of this waiver. I don’t believe that -- that’s one objection I have to it.

But the principal objection I have to it is that unless there is a more extensive waiver that would cover any related conversations -- let’s assume that this conversation did take place. And I think you’re going to find out it didn’t, but let’s assume that something similar took place to it. Would I be entitled to ask Dr. Katz questions about the nature of that communication and other communications relevant to it? And let me give you an example.

Let’s assume Dr. Katz was treating Brad Miller, assuming he was his patient, for some malady that involved honesty. Let’s assume that he was treating him for some malady that involved his workplace relationship with his employer, Mark Geragos, in which case this could be in the context of much greater conversations, conversations between Dr. Katz and Brad Miller, and even conversations between Brad Miller and Mark Geragos over a much greater period of time. How does Dr. Katz necessarily defend himself from these two statements without talking about the other conversations that may be directly related to this issue?

I also know of no authority for a partial waiver, and they haven’t cited any.

THE COURT: You can look at Brett vs. Superior Court, 1978 case, 20 Cal.3d 844.

I guess the problem I’m having -- I think

I’ve got past the partial waiver problem.

MR. ZONEN: May I add one more thing to it? And that is relevance.

THE COURT: That’s where I’m having the problem is the relevance.

What is the possible relevance, Mr. Mesereau?

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll be examining Dr. Katz, Your Honor.

There’s definite relevance, because Dr. Katz has been -- has had a financial motivation to be a celebrity psychologist. In fact, he finally got a T.V. show recently. It’s a reality show on one of the networks. Dr. Katz wants to be in a celebrity case. Dr. Katz found a way to be in a celebrity case, this one.

And according to his former patient, who has waived the privilege, this man kept telling him, “I want to meet celebrities. I want to be in a celebrity case.” That would suggest a motivation to want to see this thing go forward.

THE COURT: Let me see your copy of the --

MR. MESEREAU: The waiver?

THE COURT: What I’m going to do at this point is to agree that there is a possibility of a limited waiver and I’ll accept the limited waiver.

I’m still not convinced of the relevancy based on what you represent -- well, excuse me, what Bradley Miller represents is that Dr. Katz said he wanted to be a celebrity therapist. I’m not sure that the -- I have to think about the inference you want to have made from that.

MR. MESEREAU: It would suggest financial motivation, Your Honor. And the scope of cross-examination for financial motive is very broad. You’re talking about a Beverly Hills psychologist who has desperately wanted to be involved with celebrities for a long time. And he was very clear with his patient, Brad Miller, that he wanted to meet celebrities and get involved in celebrity cases. That’s what it really comes down to.

THE COURT: All right. I’ll give a little more thought on that.

MR. ZONEN: Is there an offer of proof that Bradley Miller will be testifying as a witness for the defense?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, there is. He will be testifying for the defense.

THE COURT: In the -- the limited waiver, as I see it, as far as the District Attorney's concerned, you were giving some hypotheticals, and before you could address that type of thing, before you could go beyond the cross-examination limited to that conversation, you'd have to have my permission. You'd have to be able to make the same sort of -- have a witness make a declaration, and I'm going to -- if I allow it in, it will be narrowly construed as to any conversations. This is a really important privilege that's being protected here. So, I'm not saying you can't do it, but you were just giving me hypotheticals; what if this, and what if that, and that's not where we are.

MR. ZONEN: I, of course, don't know, because --

THE COURT: I'm just saying, to go beyond -- there's cross-examination here that you can clearly make about this, you know, what was really said, and get the whole conversation out on that issue. Obviously you're not limited to the two statements that are represented here. But to go into why he's in treatment or any of that, you can't touch that.

MR. ZONEN: I understand that, but here's my concern. If it's true that Bradley Miller is Dr. Katz's patient, and assuming for this argument that he is, if it's true that Mark Geragos is Bradley Miller's employer, and Dr. Katz is a psychologist treating Bradley Miller, I would assume that among their discussions, perhaps multiple discussions, is his workplace relationship with his employer.

THE COURT: Well, you would assume that, but we don't know that. That's why I'm saying, whatever else you want to go into, you're going to have to provide me with some sort of statement signed, as -- as they did with Bradley Miller. Although, this is not a statement under penalty of perjury, but it gives me the information that I need to know whether I'm going to let you go into it. That's all I'm telling you. Okay?

MR. ZONEN: Okay.

THE COURT: All right. At the -- I think what you'll have to do is to file the waiver when -- the original waiver when you're ready.

I'll give it back. I've got a copy of it.

I just didn't have an original.

MR. MESEREAU: I only have an e-mailed waiver. That's all I have at the present.

MS. YU: It's been faxed.

MR. MESEREAU: A faxed waiver.

MS. YU: We'll get the original.

MR. MESEREAU: We will get the original, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. I think we're ready, then, to go forward with the testimony.

Do you want to bring in the jury, please?

(The following proceedings were held in open court in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

THE COURT: All right. You may proceed.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. Masada, when Jay Jackson and Janet Arvizo called you and --

MR. ZONEN: Objection; vague.

MR. MESEREAU: He's only testified to one call, Your Honor. Your Honor --

MR. ZONEN: And two people placing it?

MR. MESEREAU: -- I'll rephrase it.

Q. Mr. Masada, approximately when did Jay Jackson and Janet Arvizo call you and discuss the issue of the judo club or karate club, if you know?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Okay. Obviously it was your impression that Janet Arvizo was involved with Mr. Jay Jackson at that point, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that Jay Jackson was making $8,000 a month?

A. No, I didn't.

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you know whether or not Janet was collecting welfare at that point and giving it to Jay?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Assuming facts not in evidence, and hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did Janet ever discuss the J.C. Penney lawsuit with you?

MR. ZONEN: Objection, irrelevant and hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And when did you have a conversation with Janet about the J.C. Penney lawsuit?

A. After I heard it on the news.

Q. And when did you hear about it on the news?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Was it recently?

A. No, it was a couple, few months ago. I don't know how many months ago it was. It was in the news.

Q. So you're in touch with Janet these days, right?

A. Yes, sometimes I am.

Q. When did you last talk to her?

A. Before Christmas.

Q. Okay. Now, you indicated that you had a lot of meetings with either the prosecution or somebody connected with the prosecution, correct?

A. The detective -- the detective, they came to my office many times, yeah.

Q. Okay. When was the last time you had an in-person discussion with anybody associated with the prosecution?

A. This morning.

Q. Okay. And where was that?

A. It was in the room where the witnesses sit.

Q. Okay. And did you have a discussion with anybody in that room this morning?

A. The discussion, Mr. Ron Zonen, he said, “It’s going to be easy. Just relax. I’m going to go to a room and we’re going to call you in a few minutes. I have a witness on this side. I’m going to talk to them, and they’re going to bring you in.”

Q. Now, when you had a discussion with Janet Arvizo about the J.C. Penney case --

A. Yes.

Q. -- without telling me what she said, did you learn approximately when that case was resolved?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Irrelevant; hearsay; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know whether or not the J.C. Penney case was ever resolved?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Irrelevant and hearsay; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had discussions with Janet Arvizo about this case?

A. About this case, not really.

Q. And what do you mean by “not really”?

A. I mean, the only thing she -- at one time --

Q. I’m not asking you what she said. I’m just asking you if you’ve discussed this case with Janet.

A. Yeah, maybe. Yeah, maybe I did one time.

Q. Maybe one time?

A. Yes. Yes, I did.

Q. And when was that maybe one time?

A. Maybe one time about -- God, I don’t know when it’s about. The case was on the sheriffs and the District Attorney and everybody else. Was maybe about six, seven months, eight months ago.

Q. Okay. When did you last see Janet?

A. I guess, approximately, maybe about seven, eight -- six months, seven months ago.

Q. Months ago?

A. I don’t know exact -- I’m very bad with time, so don’t corner me on that.

Q. And where did you see her?
A. I saw her in her apartment.
Q. And where was that?
A. It was in West L.A. somewhere.
Q. Okay.
A. It was Jay’s apartment, or their apartment, or whatever.
Q. So you visited Janet and Jay in their apartment in West Los Angeles, correct?

A. Yes, I did.
Q. I’m not asking you the address. I don’t think that’s relevant. But West Los Angeles is very different from East Los Angeles, isn’t it?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Much more affluent, correct?
A. Some of the places. Some of the places.
Q. But generally, as an area of Los Angeles, it’s one of the most affluent areas of Los Angeles, isn’t it?
A. Yes. They have poor places and rich places, yes.
Q. It is considered one of the most affluent parts of L.A., correct?
MR. ZONEN: Objection. Irrelevant and lack of foundation. He’s not a --
THE COURT: Asked and answered.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay. All right.
Q. And who arranged for you to meet with Janet Arvizo and Jay Jackson at an apartment in West Los Angeles?
A. Nobody arranged it.
Q. Somebody must have, right?
A. No. I mean, I call up --
Q. You just ended up there?
A. Do you want me to tell you how I did? I called. I wanted to find out how Gavin -- how he’s doing. So I want to see his physical -- how his face, everything is okay. I said, “I’ll come and drop by. I have time to drop by and come see you.”

Q. Without saying what anybody told you, did you discuss this case in Jay Jackson’s apartment with Jay and Janet?

A. No.
Q. This topic never came up?
A. No.
Q. How did you know where to call to arrange the meeting?
A. I have Janet’s cell number, and I have Jay’s number.
Q. Okay. Now, in 1993, you told the sheriffs that you had introduced the Arvizos to Adam Sandler, correct?
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as vague. 1993?
THE WITNESS: 1993?
MR. MESEREAU: Pardon me, pardon me, pardon me. I’m sorry. Counsel is correct.
Q. In 2003 --
A. Yes.
Q. -- you told the sheriffs you had introduced the Arvizos to Adam Sandler, correct?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Okay. And when did you do that?
A. Now, let’s define a couple of things, because I don’t want to get in a corner again. Arvizo, what do you mean by “Arvizo”? Describe what you mean by “Arvizo.” I mean, who you mean. Give me the name of the people you want to know so I can give you direct answer, if you don’t mind, please.

Q. Any Arvizo that you introduced to celebrity Adam Sandler.
A. Gavin.
Q. Okay. And when did you introduce Gavin to Adam Sandler?
A. The date? I don’t know the date.
Q. Approximately when?
A. God, I know I drove him to Sony Studio. I talked to Adam, and he said, “Bring him over.” I took him to Sony Studios. Adam took him to lunch, took me and Gavin to lunch, and then after that we went to his office. Do you want to know more?
Q. Sure.
A. Okay.
(Laughter.)
A. I’ll go ahead.

Then we went to his office. Then we played, sit down on the couch, played basketball with Gavin. And Rob Schneider was there. And then at that point Adam Sandler gave Gavin a little T.V., a Sony T.V. with a little battery and everything on it. And Gavin said, “Oh, God, he gave me a T.V.” I said, “Go ahead and say thank you to him,” and that was it.

Q. To your knowledge, did Gavin ever see Adam Sandler again?

A. Not as far as I know.

Q. Okay. Now, you indicated that you organized a blood drive for Gavin, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that take place at The Laugh Factory?

A. We put a name on marquee. We put a sign in the door. Anybody comes in, if they have O negative, that they go give blood, they tell me they did it, we let them come in free. They can have free drinks, whatever, all of that stuff.

Q. Now, at some time did you ever learn that Michael Jackson had arranged a blood drive for Gavin as well?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence, and lack of foundation, and hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: That’s the first time I heard.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You didn’t know about that?

A. No, sir, I’m sorry.

Q. Do you know someone named Philip Palmer from KABC in Los Angeles?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And did you ever introduce Philip Palmer to any of the Arvizo family?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately when was that?

A. The time Gavin was in bad need of blood, and he came to hospital. I was interviewed by Philip Palmer, and we talk about he needed blood. And Phillip Palmer show that thing on ABC.

Q. Okay. And did you introduce any of the Arvizos to any other newscaster that you can recall?

A. Newscaster. God, there were a few of them. Maybe Patrick Press (sic), Patrick Press (sic) from FOX TV, they did a documentary. PBS, they did a documentary on Laugh Factory comedy camp. Their newscasters or producer of all of that, they were there. They were introduced.

Who else? A lady from FOX was introduced to Janet. And Fritz Coleman. I forgot his name. Fritz Coleman.

Who else? Really I'm going blank. There might be more people.

Q. You said that Mr. Press (sic) had something to do with a documentary for PBS, correct?

A. What?

Q. Mr. Press (sic) had something to do with a documentary for PBS, right?

A. No, he did not.

Q. You did mention a documentary, didn't you?

A. Yes, he did a documentary on the comedy camp for FOX, for FOX T.V.

Q. Okay.

A. And his name was Patrick Press (sic), and he did it on the family. He did it on the -- if you want to get the tape, he did the whole thing on the family, where they were living, and what they were doing, what trouble they had, all of that. He did a whole -- you could get the tape. It's a wonderful tape. I saw --

Q. This is the Arvizo family, correct?

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. And approximately what year did this documentary on the Arvizo family appear on television?

A. You're asking a question that I don't know.

Q. Just approximately.

A. Huh?

Q. Just approximately. I'm not asking for a specific date.

A. Maybe -- maybe in -- in '99, 2000. I'm not sure.

Q. To your knowledge, was Gavin ill when that documentary was produced?

A. I know PBS, the documentary they did, Gavin was sick, because PBS -- Carol Thompson went with me to the hospital and taped Gavin in the hospital. I know that. That's, what, in 2000, I think or 2001. Or 2000. Yeah, 2000. And Patrick Press (sic) -- now, let me -- I want to make sure I'm -- you know, get my date -- Patrick Press (sic)start doing the documentary in the club --

Q. Okay.

A. -- for FOX TV. And I believe he did some add-up to it later on for FOX from -- from when Gavin was sick. I'm not sure. You get the tape, you can see better than me. I'll tell you about it. Get the tape and all of you can review it --

Q. Okay.

A. -- instead of asking me about it.

Q. I want to ask you what you know about it. Okay?

A. Yeah.

Q. So the PBS documentary on the Arvizos is something separate from the FOX documentary you just discussed, correct?

A. PBS, they did a documentary, two hours documentary.

Q. Right.

A. On The Laugh Factory comedy camp that is going to be -- let me give a plug to everybody watching. It's going to be on the Comedy Central or E! TV, so watch it. It's two hours documentary on Laugh Factory comedy camp.

Q. Right.

A. And wasn't only to Arvizo, but Arvizo -- and Gavin was part of that as he was sick. And he was part of following me, what I do all day, where I go, what I do, all of that stuff, with the comedy camp.

Q. Okay.

A. And FOX TV was particularly on Arvizo.

Q. Yes, okay. Now, part of the -- of the PBS documentary included you visiting the hospital to see Gavin, right?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And it also included other material on the Arvizo family, correct?

A. No, I think you’re getting everything confused. You’re getting like me.

Q. I’m just --

(Laughter.)

Q. All right. All right. Did the -- did the PBS documentary -- maybe you should ask me questions, I think.

A. At this point I should.

(Laughter.)

Q. Did the PBS documentary --

A. Yes.

Q. -- include anything about the Arvizo family, other than your visits to the hospital to see Gavin --

A. No.

Q. -- to your knowledge?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Then you had the FOX documentary, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was filmed after the PBS documentary, right?

A. No, you’re getting confused. Before.

Q. Before it?

A. Yeah. Because the ‘99 --

Q. Yes.

A. -- Gavin and Star and Davellin, they were all in the comedy camp.

Q. Right.

A. And Patrick Press (sic) came in to do the documentary; “Let us show on the news” what I do about the comedy camp.

Q. Okay.

A. And that’s -- he start it. But I think PBS documentary started 2000. Year 2000, we were doing the comedy camp, so don’t get them confused. So PBS is different from -- what you call -- Patrick Press (sic). It happened the year the Arvizo, they were in the comedy camp.

Q. Okay. And that’s before Gavin got ill?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Okay. Did you arrange for Press (sic) to do that documentary?

A. I really don’t know how we came about. My office did. I have no idea how it came about. I really don’t know.

Q. How did the Arvizos end up in that documentary, if you know?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Did you recommend that they be in that documentary?

A. I think I have a vague idea. No, I didn’t.

Q. Do you know how many of the Arvizo family members were in that documentary?

A. It was all three of them, they were.

Q. All three of the children?

A. The children, yes.

Q. And were they performing in that documentary?

A. Yes, they were a little bit performing, as I recall. Now, don’t corner me. As I recall.

Q. You’re in the documentary, too?

A. Yes, sir. I’m the star.

Q. That’s what I figured. Okay. The second documentary --

A. Okay.

Q. Excuse me. There are a lot of documentaries going on here, because there are a few more also, right?

A. Hopefully. God willing. Why not?

Q. One of the documentaries involving the Arvizo family came about because Janet asked you to do it, correct?

A. Janet asked me to do it?

Q. Yes.

MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as vague as to which documentary he’s referring to.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I really don’t recall if Janet asked me anything. If she did, I don’t recall it.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You don’t know one way or the other?

A. Really, I don’t. At this point, I don’t recall it.

Q. Okay. Now, did Philip Palmer --

A. Yes.

Q. -- on KABC announce a blood drive only, or a fund-raiser, to your knowledge?

A. To my knowledge -- oh, God, you get me cornered again here. What -- I really don’t -- I think it was mostly blood drive. I’m not sure. Again, don’t quote me on it.

Q. And -- I would never quote you. Don’t worry about it.

A. Good.

Q. It was your idea --

A. Yes.

Q. -- to introduce the Arvizos to Michael Jackson, correct?

A. No, it wasn’t my idea.

Q. Was it Gavin’s idea?

A. It was Gavin’s idea.

Q. Okay. And because Gavin asked you, you called Neverland, correct?

A. Gavin was -- I was encouraging him to eat.

Q. Yes.

A. And he asked me -- he was watching T.V. He said, “Michael is my idol. How can I meet him? Can you arrange it?”

And I want -- at that point I want to say, “I’ll make a wish come true. Yeah, I could do anything. You want me to help, I’ll help.”

And I want to encourage him, “Eat, eat, eat.” I say, “Yeah, I’ll go do it, I’ll go do it.”

Q. And you told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs in your telephone -- excuse me. You told the District Attorney investigator in December of 2003 that you did it because Michael does good stuff for kids, right?

A. I believe so. Did I say that? If I said it, I believe him.

Q. I can show you the transcript.

A. No, I’m sure I did.

Q. Okay. Okay. And was it your understanding that you were the first person to make any contact between the Arvizos and Michael Jackson?

A. No way. I do not know was the first person. God knows who did. Maybe Michael just watched the T.V. and felt good in his heart. He call him. I have no idea.

Q. To this day, you have never met Michael Jackson?
A. No. This is the first time I've seen him. (To the defendant) How are you?
THE DEFENDANT: (Indicating).
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Now, you learned at some point that the Arvizos made contact with comedian Chris Tucker, right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And how did you learn about that?
A. I didn't -- I didn't learn about it. I introduce him to Gavin.
Q. When was that?
A. In my club.
Q. Approximately when; do you know?
A. I have no idea of the date again.
Q. Did you learn at some point that Janet and Davellin were calling and asking for Chris Tucker's car?
MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as assuming facts not in evidence, as well as relevance, as well as lack of foundation and hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know anything about any efforts by any Arvizos to obtain a car from Chris?
MR. ZONEN: Objection. Irrelevant and hearsay; lack of foundation.

THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
Q. You told the D.A. investigator in '93 that Chris Tucker took -- I mean in --
MR. ZONEN: '93?
MR. MESEREAU: I keep saying that.
Q. 2003; you kept --
A. You --
Q. Let me rephrase that.

You told the District Attorney investigator in 2003 that Chris Tucker took the Arvizos shopping, correct?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Okay. Do you know when that happened?
A. I have no idea the date. And I remember what Chris Tucker told me.
Q. How did you learn about that?
A. Chris Tucker has told me, he said, “Jamie, I love those kids” --
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
THE WITNESS: So I don’t answer it, Your Honor?
THE COURT: No.
THE WITNESS: Okay. Good.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever go on one of those shopping trips with Chris Tucker and the Arvizos?

A. No. I didn’t have time.
Q. Okay.
MR. ZONEN: Objection, assumes facts not in evidence that there were shopping trips with Chris Tucker and the Arvizos.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. ZONEN: Motion to strike the answer.
THE COURT: Stricken.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you recall Rob Schneider ever giving gifts to the Arvizos?
MR. ZONEN: That’s a “yes” or “no” question, I believe.
THE COURT: Counsel, if you have an objection, make it.
MR. ZONEN: Lack of foundation, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Foundation; sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you introduce the Arvizos to comedian Rob Schneider?
A. Arvizo -- you got to identify. Meaning Gavin?
Q. Any Arvizo.
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object as vague.
THE WITNESS: Yeah. Yeah.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you introduce Gavin

Arvizo to comedian Rob Schneider?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. To your knowledge, did any other member of the Arvizo family meet Rob Schneider at any time?

A. Yeah, I remember Louise and David, they came to -- they wanted to meet all the celebrity. They want to meet Rob Schneider and -- what was the name? Adam Sandler. They came, “Oh, can we get introduce him? And I said, “Guys, this is for the kids. That’s not for you guys. You’re grown up. Come on.”

Q. Were you ever present when comedian Rob Schneider was with Gavin Arvizo?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And where was that?

A. It was at lunchtime. We had a lunch, three of us, four of us together. And then we went to his room at Sony and we played -- we sat on the couch and played ball, basketball towards the wall. We throw balls to the wall.

Q. On that occasion, did you see Rob Schneider give gifts to Gavin of any kind?

A. I saw Adam give him. No, I don’t remember if he gave him, no.

Q. Well, that’s the day that Adam Sandler and Rob Schneider were with Gavin, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You were there. And somebody gave him a television, right?

A. I told him Adam Sandler.

Q. Did you see Rob give him anything?

A. Rob gave him a hug.

Q. Anything else?

A. I don’t know. I don’t think so.

Q. Now, at some point, you paid for the Arvizo rent on their home, correct?

A. Yes. Not Arvizo home, David’s home, yeah.

Q. Well, David was married to Janet at the time, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So why do you want to single out David and not Janet if you’re paying both of their rent?

A. I don’t single out. Because Janet wasn’t asking me. David asked me for rent.

Q. David asked you; said they didn’t have rent money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you paid rent for Janet, David and the children, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. How many times did you do that?

A. A couple of times -- a couple of times I think I gave him cash. I don’t recall. I’m not sure. A couple of times.

Q. In total, how much cash do you think you gave the Arvizos?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; “the Arvizos.”

MR. MESEREAU: Well, Your Honor --

MR. ZONEN: Vague.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll withdraw. I’ll lay a better foundation.

Q. During the time that Janet and David were married and living together --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- and during the approximate time that you paid their rent, for Janet, David and the children, how much money in total do you think you gave the Arvizo family?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; “Arvizo family.” It’s who he gave the money to.

THE COURT: Overruled. He asked for a total of all of them.

THE WITNESS: I very openly -- I don’t do charity for tax write-offs so I have a count of how much to give. I give money from my heart. I never write them as a tax write-off.

So I don’t know how much I gave him. I gave him money whenever they ask me. It’s not a tax write-off. I do it from my heart. Some people, they know how much they give to this, how much they give to that. I have no idea.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Can you estimate in total how much you gave the Arvizo family?

A. I have no idea. You know, I mean the time they come in the office, “I need money for my gas, I need money for food, I need this,” and you give them 50, 20, 30, 40, 50. Whatever you have in your pocket, you give to them. You don’t sit down, “How much was that? How much was that?” I don’t count that. I go out there, I give to another person the same thing.

Q. Obviously you were generous with them quite often.

A. Yes, I was.

MR. ZONEN: Objection as to “them” as vague.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Obviously you were very generous to the Arvizo family.

MR. ZONEN: Objection to “the Arvizo family” as vague.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, with all due respect, they’re married and are living together.

MR. ZONEN: That assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: There has been an issue drawn in this case about who asked for money and who gets money. And that’s why we have the objection. And I will sustain the objection, have you ask specifically who.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When you paid for the Arvizo rent, who did you give the money to?

A. Always to David.

Q. When you paid for the karate and judo school, who were you helping out?

A. Gavin and Star.

Q. And that was as a result of a phone call from Jay Jackson and Janet Arvizo, correct?

A. It was -- yes, a conversation with Jay Jackson, yes.

Q. And Janet Arvizo, as you’ve already testified, was in the phone call, right?

A. Yes.

Q. David Arvizo was not in that phone call, correct?

A. No, he was not.

Q. Okay. Now, you did testify that David often asked you for money, right?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And how many times, if you know, do you think he asked you for money?
A. I have no idea.
Q. Was it a lot?
A. He would come in -- you know, I mean -- you know, the people didn’t know -- you got to picture something here. The kid -- the family out of work. The kid is sick. You know, and they react. They don’t have no money, they have no mean of living, and you try to help. You don’t ask how many. I mean, if you give them -- you’ve been in that situation, the same as me, you help out, whatever it is. You don’t count them, how many time, how many year, how many this. You give help to people and that’s what it’s about.
Q. All right. And if they obtained a large sum of money from any civil settlement, you didn’t know about it, right?

A. No, I did not.
Q. Okay. The only message you were getting was these people are poor, right?
A. That’s what I got, yes, sir.
Q. Okay. Now, at any time did you learn that David Arvizo worked for the Teamsters?
MR. ZONEN: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence; lack of foundation.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever learn what David Arvizo’s occupation was?
A. He said he used to work in a supermarket.
Q. Anything else he told you about?
A. No, he said supermarket.
Q. Okay. He never told you he worked as a Teamster, did he?
A. No. What’s a Teamster?
Q. You don’t know, right?
A. I have no idea.
Q. Okay. Okay. When do you think you introduced the Arvizos to George Lopez?
A. I have no date. I have no idea.
Q. Okay. And is George Lopez a friend of yours?

A. Yes.
Q. Still?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And is Ann Lopez a friend of yours?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you last talk to them? Excuse me, let me rephrase that.
When did you last talk to George Lopez?
A. I haven’t talked to George Lopez almost maybe three, four, five months. I was in a wedding. I saw him. Martin Leasak wedding. His agent was getting married. I was the best friend for his agent at UTA, and George Lopez was there and a bunch of other stars were there. We sat down; hello, how are you; hug. The same thing.
Q. You testified that you thought someone had made millions of dollars on the Bashir documentary, but that the Arvizo family had gotten nothing, right?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And you didn’t think that was right, correct?
A. That was right?
Q. You didn’t think that was right?
A. No, my whole thing was, I saw they exploiting some underprivileged, underaged people that people in the media made a fortune out of that documentary. That was my personal belief. And they show this poor kid’s face on that documentary, and the kids in the school calling him “fag,” “faggot,”

I thought that was unfair.
Q. Right.
A. That was not fair there.
Q. You thought that Bashir did an injustice?
A. I thought that Bashir did injustice.
Q. Right. And you told Janet --
A. Yeah.
Q. -- that she should go to a lawyer because “They’re making millions and your family is getting nothing”?
A. No.
Q. Well, that’s certainly what you suggested earlier, wasn’t it?

A. No. You got to listen to me or read it back what I said, okay?
Q. Okay.
A. What I said, I want to stop the people calling him names.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. I did not say anything about money or anything. Don’t bring that up. We were talking about what was unjustice was done. He used that and showed his picture on the T.V, every newspaper, every print media, from electronic to, you know, print media, they all have his picture.
I said that was very unfair. I want to stop that, because I didn’t want the kid go to gas station, the guy in gas station say, “Here is that faggot. He slept with Michael.” I did not want that happen to any of my kid, and I think that’s unjustice.

Q. Do you remember telling a District Attorney investigator that Martin Bashir made millions and these underprivileged kids didn’t get a cent?
A. Yeah, I did. I still say it.
Q. And one of the reasons you referred Janet to Attorney Bill Dickerman was you learned she had signed some document relating to the Bashir documentary, correct?
A. It was -- maybe was later on. Don’t mix it up. Maybe it was later on that she said she signed -- the first time we went to Bill Dickerman, it was all about that kid show the picture on the documentary was unjustice. I wanted to stop newspaper, everywhere it is, we -- “Can we stop that?”
Q. Now, did you learn at some point that Michael Jackson and Janet Arvizo had sued the British company that did the documentary in England?
A. I did not know that.
Q. And did you ever learn that Michael Jackson had sued for a number of reasons, including they put his children on the documentary?
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as lack of foundation, and hearsay, and relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did Janet ever inform you that she was involved in a lawsuit with Michael Jackson against a British production company?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Hearsay, lack of foundation, relevance.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember telling a District Attorney investigator they made money and they didn't give anything to the Arvizos?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; hearsay.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Again, you got to question again.

MR. MESEREAU: Sure.

Q. Do you remember telling a District Attorney investigator in 2003 that with respect to Bashir's company, they made money, and didn't give the Arvizos anything?

A. How could I make that comment? I'm still making that comment, too. How could I?

Q. And you felt that Bashir and his company had taken advantage of an underprivileged kid, right?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I do.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Okay. How many meetings with Janet and Attorney Bill Dickerman did you attend?

A. Hmm, God. I think maybe about four or -- maybe four, five, or three. Four. I think I remember four of them.

Q. And when did you first meet Attorney Bill Dickerman?

A. When did I ever met him?

Q. Yes.

A. He became my attorney a long time ago. He represent me, and I thought he did a very good job.

Q. And how many years had he represented you before you introduced the Arvizos to him?

A. I would say over five, six, seven, eight.

Q. Had he represented you in various lawsuits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many lawsuits?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How many times have you testified under oath before today?

A. Testify under -- maybe three times. Three times, four times.

Q. Do you remember a case where you sued someone named Roy Kavin?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And approximately when was that?

A. God, that was my neighbor in my club, who came in, he did something to my club. I don't know. I can't remember the date.

Q. You testified under oath in a deposition in that case, correct?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you remember you were asked questions about when you became an American citizen?

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember your not recalling when you went to high school?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember your not knowing where you worked?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember testifying under oath you didn't know when you became a comedian?

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object to the content of this deposition in total. Irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained. No further questions unless you make an offer of proof to the Court.

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I can prove that this witness --

THE COURT: Outside the presence of the jury.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Okay.

Q. Do you recall at any time talking to Attorney Larry Feldman?

A. I don’t think I spoke to him personally. I don’t think I met him, spoke to him. I went to his office.

Q. You went to his office?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When did you go to Attorney Larry Feldman’s office?

A. One time Bill Dickerman call me. He said he have -- he and Larry Feldman, they was going to meet with Arvizo and if I would be kind enough to, you know, bring them there. I say, “Yeah, I will be more than happy to do it.”

Q. Did you participate in any meeting between any of the Arvizos and Attorney Larry Feldman?

A. No, I did not.

Q. By the way, you’ve testified about your concern that Gavin was being made fun of by schoolmates after the Bashir documentary, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. And do you remember telling a District Attorney investigator that, as a result of that, Janet wanted her kids to go to a private school, and you told her you would help send them?

A. They were thinking about to send him, the kid, to a school that they would not make fun of him. And they were -- they did -- they were deciding to do it. And I said, “What’s holding you guys back? If you guys need any money for private school, I volunteer, give you whatever you need.”

Q. Okay. But Janet at that point wanted her kids in a private school, correct?

A. Didn’t want a private school. Want him to be somewhere, the people, they don’t make fun of her son, calling him “faggot.”

Q. But you told the D.A. investigator that Janet wanted her kids in a private school, told you about it, and you said you would help send them, correct?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever help send the Arvizo children to a private school?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When was that?

A. I have no idea. After Martin Bashir, and the kids, they call him “faggot.”

Q. Was that when she was in a relationship with Major Jay Jackson, to your knowledge?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Did you know what his income was at that point?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: No idea.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever ask Major Jay Jackson, “How much do you make?”

A. No, it is not my business --

Q. Okay.

A. -- how much he makes.

Q. How long did you help with the private school?

A. I just wrote him one check. It was very little money. Very, very little money. I just give them one check.

Q. And again, that was after the Bashir documentary, right?

A. Yeah. Yes.

Q. And would it be safe to say that was in the year 2003?

A. If that’s what’s -- the year it happened, yes.

Q. Okay. Okay. Now, you talked to an investigator for the Santa Barbara District Attorney’s Office about Maury Povich. Do you remember that?

A. I don’t recall it, but if you said so.

Q. Do you recall doing that?

A. I said I don’t recall it, but if you said so.

Q. No, I’m not telling you what to say.

A. I don’t recall.

Q. You don’t recall ever discussing Maury

Povich?

A. I might have. I have hundred things going every day. Do you remember three years ago what you did, what you said, who you talked to? No.

Q. Do you want to cross-examine me?

(Laughter.)

A. No, I'm just saying reality. Let's look at reality of things. We are human beings. You don't remember what you said every day. We are human beings.

Q. I understand. But if you don't remember --

A. No, I'm saying probably I did, but I don't remember.

Q. Okay. How long were you in Larry Feldman's office?

A. Maybe about -- not even his office. I was never in his office. I was never in his office. Describe his office. What do you mean by "office"?

Q. What do you think "office" means?

A. "Office" meaning if I go to Judge office, he have his office up there. This is courtroom. This is waiting room. I was in waiting room. I never went to Judge office. That's why I call it Judge office.

That's a waiting room. I was in the waiting room. I never went to his office. That's what I meant by "office."

Q. Okay. So you were in Larry Feldman's waiting room while the Arvizos were in Larry Feldman's office, right?

A. No, they were sitting waiting with me.

Q. Okay.

A. We waited there.

Q. At some point did Attorney Larry Feldman come out and see all of you?

A. No, somebody, I don't know who, what, somebody came out, said, "We going to take you to conference room."

They take me to conference room. And after we went to conference room, I -- I told Janet that I felt uncomfortable, I want to leave, and then at that point they went -- they went to talk. And somebody came, I don't know if it was Larry.

Whoever it was, they said, “Jamie, you could leave.”

Q. Did you leave?

A. Yes, sir. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see Attorney Larry Feldman again?

A. On T.V.

Q. Did you ever personally see him again?

A. No, I never saw him personally.

Q. Okay. Now, let me just go back to your meetings with Attorney Bill Dickerman and the Arvizos, okay?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first meeting at Bill Dickerman’s office, correct?

A. Yes, sir. No, not in his office. Again, in a conference room. Let me make a correction.

Q. The first meeting is in the offices of Attorney Bill Dickerman in a conference room, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And present are Attorney Bill Dickerman and the Arvizos, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did anyone call the police at that meeting?

A. Not as far as I knew.

Q. Okay. The second meeting you had with the Arvizos and Attorney Bill Dickerman was at The Laugh Factory, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And nobody called the police at that meeting, correct?

A. No, sir. It was suggested.

Q. Nobody called the police at that meeting, correct?

A. And I said it was suggested. Not called.

Q. The third meeting between Attorney Bill Dickerman and the Arvizos was at The Laugh Factory, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nobody called the police at that meeting, correct?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say there was another meeting with Attorney Bill Dickerman and the Arvizos that you were somehow involved in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where was that?

A. That was -- I was going to -- I was going to watch Gavin and Star. They were playing on the baseball team --

MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I'd request the witness just respond to the question.

THE WITNESS: What was -- did I say wrong?

THE COURT: The question was, "And where was that?" You had another meeting.

MR. MESEREAU: Where was the -- I'm sorry, Your Honor. I'll rephrase.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Where did the fourth meeting involving you, the Arvizos and Attorney Bill Dickerman take place?

A. It was in the restaurant in Farmers Market in Los Angeles, California. And then from there, we went to baseball team behind farmers market.

Q. So the meeting between you, the Arvizos and Attorney Bill Dickerman took place in farmers market in Los Angeles?

A. Yeah. Again, can you describe what you mean "meeting"? To clarify that.

Q. Did you meet with Attorney Bill Dickerman and the Arvizo family at the farmers market in Los Angeles?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. That meeting occurred after the three prior meetings between the Arvizos and Bill Dickerman that you've described, true?

A. I think so. I'm not sure.

Q. And nobody called the police at that meeting, correct?

A. No, sir. No, sir.

Q. At some point you learned that Attorney Bill Dickerman had contacted Attorney Larry Feldman, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was because Dickerman told you --

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as speculative or hearsay.

MR. MESEREAU: State of mind, Your Honor.

MR. ZONEN: Well, again, he's speculating as to another person's belief.

THE COURT: He told you he was going to use that state of mind on you quite a bit, remember? I didn't get the whole question. So I can't tell. You interrupted him, actually.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay.

THE COURT: Do you want to rephrase?

MR. MESEREAU: Sure, Your Honor.

Q. At some point in time, you learned that Attorney Bill Dickerman, who had represented you for many years, had referred the Arvizos to Attorney Larry Feldman, right?

MR. ZONEN: Objection. Hearsay; lack of foundation; also relevance as to this witness's testimony.

THE COURT: The objection's overruled. Did you learn that?

THE WITNESS: Did I learn Bill Dickerman introduce -- was talking to Larry Feldman?

THE COURT: And introduced the Arvizos.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Okay. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Yes. Now, Mr. Masada, in one of your sheriff's interviews, you said you were involved in several fund-raising efforts on behalf of the Arvizo family, right?

A. I said -- I don't recall how many times. I said about two, three of them, yeah.

Q. Was it two or three?

A. I think it was two. After I was thinking about it, it was two.

Q. And did both of those take place at The Laugh Factory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that you made arrangements with the Arvizo family to receive door charge moneys on several occasions, right?

A. “On several occasions.” Maybe I said twice.

Q. You told them “several occasions,” didn’t you?

A. Maybe I made a mistake.

Q. Okay. And you arranged for the Arvizos to be at the entrance to The Laugh Factory and allow them to get door charge moneys, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that it was four nights in total, right?

A. I counted the blood drive and all of that stuff. It was two nights.

Q. Okay. You said on each occasion David and the children would man the front door and personally collect the entry fees from customers, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don’t know how much they collected, do you?

A. Not really. I remember one particular one, the first one it actually was. At the time they have nurses and everybody from hospital coming in, and one of the nurses came in back door, and knocked the door, and she told me, she said, “Well, I want to come to the club, but I don’t have money with me. I thought they didn’t -- I didn’t know it was going to cost money to come in.”

And I remember that I gave her some cash. I said, “Go ahead. For you, here’s some cash. Go in front and walk in, and here’s the money.”

I remember that. Some of the stuff like that stands out in my mind.

Q. You told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that the Arvizo family kept all of the money collected at the door, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said that you and the Laugh Factory absorbed the operating, employee and performer costs, right?

A. Some of the performers, they are -- most of the time they are -- if I ask them -- they are big comics, like Bob Saget, Howie Mandell, all of these guys. They come in, they don’t get money. But sometime you pay them, see the money. Pay some of the people, they need money. You know, you give them money.

But usually those -- those costs is covered by the time -- one person, you know, decide to come to the club, they are thirsty, they want to have a drink, watch the show. They have a drink, and that costs usually covers that.

Q. But just to get back to my question, you and the Laugh Factory, which you own --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- absorb the operating, employee and performer costs for those evenings, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs there was no accounting for how much money was gathered on any of the evenings in question, right?

A. Meaning Gavin, or what are you talking about? The money, how much they got?

Q. Yes. You told the sheriffs there was no accounting for what they got, correct?

A. No. Yes, absolutely.

Q. You told the sheriffs you didn’t think any of the fund-raisers exceeded $3,000, right?

A. He asked me, he said, “What do you think? A thousand? 2000? 3,000?” I said, “I don’t think it was ever more than 3,000.” That’s what I said to him.

Q. And you also told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that you thought the family may have received monetary donations from media exposure through people you knew, correct?

A. On one occasion, yes.

Q. Which occasion was that?

A. I remember Fritz Coleman, he did something on -- for blood drive, and somehow had said something about some kind of financial aid or something. It was a bank account or something. But I’m not sure. I wasn’t involved with it. I don’t know anything about it.

Q. When you say “bank account,” what are you referring to?

A. Something -- I have no idea. Some kind of thing with Fritz Coleman. I don’t know. He put it on the screen or something. I have no idea. I heard about it. I’m not 100 percent sure. I’m just talking about it. I don’t know exactly. Maybe I should say I don’t really exactly know.

Q. Do you remember telling anyone that you had gone to the hospital and paid some of Gavin’s medical bills?

A. No. There was a person from press. They did that, and I find out about it. Somebody told me about it. And I called there, she said she’s going to retract it. And she never retracted. She kind of mislead me. But I never said that.

Q. So you were misquoted by someone in the press to that effect?

A. Yeah, the press, they want to get attention to another paper or television, they say stuff like that. You are aware of, right?

Q. You’re saying you never told anyone in the press that you had personally paid for medical bills for Gavin?

A. I never -- I helped them out. I never paid for medical.

Q. Okay. And never told that to anybody in the press, correct?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that on more than one occasion Janet and Jay Jackson approached you for assistance, correct?

MR. ZONEN: Judge, I’m going to object as hearsay. Unless it’s a prior inconsistent statement.

THE COURT: I’ll sustain the objection.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Periodically, Jay Jackson and Janet would ask you for assistance, right?

A. No, only twice Jay ask me. And he didn’t ask me for assistance. I volunteered. Don’t change it around.

Q. Well, you just said he asked you, didn’t you?

A. We were talking about it. He said they didn’t have enough money to pay for the thing. And

I said, “I’ll pay for it.” He didn’t say, “Give me the money.” This is a different thing. If you ask me for money, it’s different.
Q. What do you think he was suggesting when he told you he didn’t have money to pay for these things?
A. Meaning maybe they didn’t have money. You don’t know. I don’t know. How do you know if they didn’t have money? Maybe they didn’t have. Maybe they were broke by that point. I have no idea.

Q. Did you issue checks to Gavin, Star and Davellin?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And how many checks did you issue to Gavin, if you know?
A. I think one time they performed, the time to make them become -- the only -- you know, a lot of people, they go around, they say, “I’m a comedian. I’m a this. I’m an actor. I’m a this, that, and that.” They just call themselves. They never get paid for it.
But to make performance, like Gavin, Star, and Davellin, to make them a performer, you pay them as a comic. And I did pay them as a comic one time.
Q. Now, the government prosecutor, Mr. Zonen, showed you two checks --
A. Yes.
Q. -- that you had written to David Arvizo, correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. But you told the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that you wrote a check to Janet or Jay on one occasion, correct?
A. Yeah, I think so. I did to Jay or Janet, I’m not sure which one, yeah.
Q. And you told them the check was endorsed by Janet Arvizo?
A. I never said it was endorsed. I don’t look at the back of the check, whose endorsement.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you the police report?
A. The check? The police report, I don’t care what -- I don’t look at the back of the check. I don’t look at the back of the check. Maybe you misunderstood.

Q. Let me just ask the question. You just have to answer it. It’s being recorded.
A. Sorry.
Q. Would it refresh your recollection --
A. Yes.
Q. -- about your telling the Santa Barbara Sheriffs --
A. Yeah.
Q. -- that Janet Arvizo endorsed that check if I show you the police report?
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object to references and statements to Santa Barbara Sheriffs as hearsay, unless they’re prior consistent statements.
THE COURT: The objection is overruled. He’s asking about refreshing his memory.
THE WITNESS: I don’t recall that. I do not recall that.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Would it refresh your recollection if I show you what they say you said?
A. No, it doesn’t make any difference. I know what I said. I don’t recall it. So you can say anything you want.

Q. Do you recall ever writing a check for Shana Traunfeld?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And that check was to purchase a bed for the Arvizo children, correct?
A. “Arvizo children.” Describe what “Arvizo children” means.
Q. What do you think it means?
MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as vague.
THE WITNESS: My --
THE COURT: He’s asking for more specific names, please.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever issue a check --
A. Yeah.
Q. -- to Shana Traunfeld --
A. Yeah, who was my assistant.
Q. -- for the purpose of purchasing a bed for any of the three Arvizo children?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When was that?

A. The time we went up there for Christmas. I went up there to see them, give them something for Christmas. I saw the kid, half of his face was swollen up. He had a lot of scar on his face, and they were sleeping on the floor. I felt bad. I went and told them immediately, “Buy them a bunk bed. At least get them something going.” They were living on the floor. God.

Q. Did you ever give any member of the prosecution team a copy of that check?

A. I don’t -- my office supposed to give it.

Q. Did Prosecutor Zonen ever ask you if you could give him a copy of that check?

A. Mr. Zonen himself? Never.

Q. Does Prosecutor Zonen ever ask you to give him copies of any other checks that you wrote to any member of the Arvizo family besides David?

A. Okay. No. The prosecution, Mr. Zonen himself, or all of the guys? You got to declare. Mr. Zonen you’re talking about? Only Mr. Zonen? Or of his team?

Q. Only Mr. Zonen.

A. Mr. Zonen, no, I don’t think so. I don’t recall he called me asking me that.

Q. Do you recall any member of the prosecution team ever asking you for copies of checks you wrote to members of the Arvizo family other than David?

A. Yes. They’re people, they ask me.

Q. Who?

A. I don’t remember his name.

Q. Did you give copies of those checks to them?

A. I think I -- I told my office to give them whatever they need.

Q. Do you know if that ever happened?

A. I think it happened. I’m not sure. I think it did happen.

Q. Did any of these prosecutors sitting at the table ever ask you for copies of those checks?

A. Those three people? No.

Q. Okay. They only wanted checks involving David, correct?

MR. ZONEN: Objection as to what they wanted as speculative.

MR. MESEREAU: I'll rephrase it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: In truth, Mr. Masada --

A. Yes.

Q. -- the prosecution in this case only wanted copies of checks you wrote to David?

MR. ZONEN: Objection as to what they wanted and speculative on his part.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You said you told someone at your office to give members of the prosecution checks you'd written to the Arvizos, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you ask at your office to do that?

A. I told my assistant or my accountant to find the checks and, you know, make a copy and give it to them.

Q. Now, you wrote other checks to members of the Arvizo family that you can't locate, correct?

A. I don't know what you mean by that.

Q. Do you remember telling the Santa Barbara Sheriffs that there were other checks you wrote as gifts to the Arvizos that you can't find?

A. That was the three checks of the $50, I think it was, that I did put them -- I don't know if they ever found them.

Q. Didn't you say you could not retrieve copies of those checks?

A. Yeah, I did. I ask -- I ask my accountant, and he said, "I don't know. I don't know where they are." And he said, "Wherever they are, I can't find them." And I said, "Go find them."

Q. Did you ever find them?

A. I really -- I think they did. I'm not sure. I'm not going to say something. I'm not sure.

Q. In his direct examination, the prosecutor didn't refer to any of those checks, did he?

MR. ZONEN: I'll object as irrelevant.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You indicated that you owned more than one Laugh Factory; is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And where are The Laugh Factories you own located?
A. One is in Los Angeles. One is in New York City.

Q. Any others?
A. One we building in Long Beach. One we did have in Hawaii.
Q. Any others?
A. No, sir.
Q. So how many do you own at the present?
A. Two.
Q. And you're building a couple of others?
A. No. I said --
Q. What did you just say?
A. You got to listen.
Q. Okay.
A. One we building in Long Beach. And one is -- in Hawaii is closed.
Q. Okay.
A. So we have right now, present time, two.
Q. Okay. All right.
A. Do you want the address for them?
Q. I'll talk to you after court. We can give --
A. You are there. Me and you can have a comedy team.
Q. Okay. All right. All right.
(Laughter.)
Q. When did you last talk to Jay Jackson?
A. Jay Jackson. God. God, Jay Jackson, maybe about three, four -- three months, four months ago. How am I -- Christmas was -- I will say about three, four months ago.

Q. And where did you talk to him?
A. On the phone.
Q. Okay. Did he call you?
A. He might have. I'm not sure if I call him, you know. You get on a day’s routine, you don’t remember, if he call me or I call him.

Q. Did you discuss this case?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Said nothing about it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Never came up?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Was Janet involved in that discussion?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And when did you last talk to Janet by phone?

A. I think you asked me that already.

Q. When did you last talk to Janet by phone?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.

MR. MESEREAU: I don’t know if I did ask that.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, you did, the look on your face.

(Laughter.)

MR. MESEREAU: If I did, I apologize.

THE WITNESS: You did.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When did you last talk to her by phone?

MR. ZONEN: Had there been a ruling by the Court, Your Honor?

THE COURT: I don’t remember.

(Laughter.)

THE WITNESS: You too. We just go back and forth, you know.

THE COURT: Go ahead and answer.

THE WITNESS: Three, four months ago. You know, I have no idea. Three, four months. Could be before Christmas, right before Christmas.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Let me ask you this: When did you last talk to Janet about this case?

MR. ZONEN: Assumes facts not in evidence that he ever talked to Janet about this case.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase it.

MR. ZONEN: And vague as to what “this case” is.

THE COURT: He did say that he talked to

Janet about the case a long time ago. You can rephrase it.

THE WITNESS: So where are we?

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When did you ever discuss this case with Janet?

A. It was a long, long time ago. About maybe -- I don’t know.

THE COURT: See, I told you.

THE WITNESS: I don’t recall the date. I’m sorry.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: I’m not asking you for the date. I’m asking you just to give your best estimate as to when you last talked to Janet about this case.

A. And I’m really -- I want to be as open as I can. I can’t remember. I spoke to her one time. I don’t remember when was it, what month was it, what year was it. I know I spoke to her.

Q. Okay. Do you remember discussing with David Arvizo the fact that The Laugh Factory has a charity committee?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When did that discussion take place?

A. He came to my office and he was -- keep asking me for more money, and more money, and more money, and more money, and more money.

And at one point, I said, “Well, if you need more money, what you have to do” -- because I have something, it’s called Laugh Factory Academy of Comedy and Arts. That’s a -- I put money myself into that account, and I help a -- a comedian, for example, if their father died, if comedian sick, they don’t have any money for their doctor bills or something, I write a check for them.

And I say, “If you want more money,” because I wanted to try to tell him -- I didn’t know how to say no to him. So that’s why I say this. I say, “If you want to come to the committee, talk to the committee, and we take it from there.”

Q. Can I have some?

(Laughter.)

A. If you are -- with your job, with your earnings, if you get broke. I don’t know how much you making.

(Laughter.)

Q. Okay. You’ve testified about a truck that you learned that Michael Jackson had given to the Arvizo family, correct?

A. I never said “truck.” Never used the word “truck.”

Q. How did you describe the vehicle?

A. It was what, a “sudan.” What do you call that car? I’m not too much fascinated by cars or monetary stuff. I don’t know any of those stuff. I know a car was -- the car is S -- SUV, SIV, whatever it is. And it was a white car, you know. It’s a big huge car. So it’s a white car it was.

Q. And when did you learn about that?

A. David came in my office. He was very excited. He said Michael gave him a car. And I said, “Oh, that’s wonderful.” And he said, “Come on, come on, come on, I show you.” And I said, “I’m in the middle -- I’m helping other kids,” this, this. And he said, “Come on. He waited there. And I went out outside, and we saw him. He park the car right in front of the fire hydrant, and I remember that, because I was, “You can’t do that. That’s against the law. You’re going to get a ticket already.”

And he show me, open the door, and I remember the car was white. And there was a T.V. on the dashboard. I remember that.

Q. Did you get in the car?

A. No, I looked in the car. The door, they opened the door, but I didn’t get into the car and drive it around, no.

Q. How many times did you see that car at The Laugh Factory?

A. You know, he would come to my office. A couple of times I saw him drive in that car, drive away, because he was -- he needed money for gas for this car, because he was telling me that particular car, Michael gave it to him, it lose a lot of gas, and he need more money for gas. So that’s how he was getting more money from me.

Q. Do you remember telling a Santa Barbara Sheriffs officer --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- that you wrote Janet a check for Christmas?

A. Write Janet a check for Christmas. No, I don't recall that.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I show you a transcript of your interview?

A. I mean, I'm just saying I don't recall it.

Q. Would it possibly help you recall it if I showed you a transcript of your interview?

A. I'm telling you, I don't recall. If I don't recall and you show me anything, I don't recall saying that.

Q. You don't want to give it a try?

A. First of all, I have dyslexia. I can't see very good, so you're going to read it to me. If you want, bring it over.

Q. Did you ever tell a Santa Barbara Sheriffs officer during a recorded interview, "I did write a check personally, 800, a thousand dollars, whatever, you know, not this Christmas, Christmas before that to Janet." Do you remember saying anything like that?

A. Maybe I meant David. I wrote the check for David, $800. Maybe that's -- somehow I mix up the name. That could be.

Q. You may have written a check to David for a thousand?

A. For 800 to a thousand, yes.

Q. Do you recall saying you gave Janet a check at any time?

A. I might have made a mistake, their name together.

Q. Okay. Okay.

THE COURT: Let's take a break.

(Recess taken.)

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. You know Louise Palanker, correct?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And when did you first meet her?

A. Several years ago. She's -- she comes in. She volunteers, you know. She's -- she's a lady, she volunteers, you know, sometimes for charity, different stuff, especially times at Christmas, we do for homeless. She comes in, she dish up some food for homeless people. And she comes in, we do some services for high holidays, Jewish high holidays. That's what we do.

Q. And would you call her a regular at The Laugh Factory?

A. No, she's not regular, what you describe regular, regular comics or regular --

Q. Do you see her often?

A. I haven't seen her lately.

Q. Is she a good friend of yours?

A. She's -- she's one of those ladies, she want to be a comic and you try to help her. And sometimes being -- trying to help them, you got to give them bad news.

(Laughter.)

A. Like if I tell them they're not funny, they take it very personal.

Q. I gather you told her she's not very funny.

A. Well, I -- let me tell you. I find you are more funny than she is.

(Laughter.)

Q. Could I join your comedy class? I'm in the wrong profession, I guess.

A. I think so. You got a job after this case is over. Come see me.

Q. When did you learn Louise Palanker had donated $20,000 to the Arvizo family?

A. I think I told you about it. At the time I find out, I was going to find an apartment for Gavin, because he was coming out of the hospital and he needed a sanitated -- meaning the room, it had to be sanitation room, and I find out Louise went and wrote the check. She's a very rich woman. She wrote the check.

Q. And when did you learn about that?

A. I don't remember. I don't remember the date.

Q. Did she ever come to you to talk about it?

A. No, she never talked about it. She -- I heard about it. She gave it to them, and I -- I thank her.

Q. When did you thank her?

A. I don't remember. Some -- one of the conversations we had. I don't remember.

Q. Did you learn at some point that she wrote two checks, not one?

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as irrelevant, lack of foundation and hearsay.

THE BAILIFF: Your microphone's not on.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: You want my answer? I'm sorry.

Yes, I did.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And approximately when did you learn that?

A. I cannot recall. I -- sometime.

Q. When did you last see Louise?

A. Maybe about year, year and a half ago, two years ago.

Q. Did you ever discuss this case with her?

A. No. She called me, told me she came to the court and whatever, whatever. She did say that afterwards.

Q. When was this?

A. I believe she was driving from the court home.

Q. Was this last week?

A. Last week, yeah.

Q. She called you after she left court?

A. I think so. Sometime afterwards.

Q. Did she discuss with you anything she had said in court?

A. She said that you have made this court like O.J.'s court or Robert Blake court, and you was changing the words around and you made it -- lied. You lied and you changed the words and took the stuff out of context, and she told me a bunch of stuff.

And I said, "Well, hey, you go there, you tell the truth. That’s what it’s all about,” and I didn’t want to hear it.

Q. She complained to you that she had been secretly recorded by the sheriffs calling you a pathological liar, correct?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as irrelevant and argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. Masada --

A. Yes.

Q. -- you’ve told the jury what she called to tell you about after court, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And isn’t it true that she called because she was worried that she had been recorded secretly by the sheriffs calling you a liar?

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as lack of foundation. As well, argumentative and speculative as to what she was worried about.

THE COURT: It’s not relevant. Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Your answer to that last question was not truthful, was it?

MR. ZONEN: What last question are you referring to? It was sustained, Your Honor, the last two questions.

MR. MESEREAU: I’ll rephrase it, Your Honor.

Q. Your answer to this jury under oath --

A. Yes.

Q. -- to the question about what Louise Palanker called you about after court was not the truth, was it?

MR. ZONEN: Objection; argumentative.

THE WITNESS: It was truth. I don’t know what you’re talking about. That’s what she said.

THE COURT: I’ll let the answer stand.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Mr. Masada, do you remember talking to a District Attorney investigator about what Star Arvizo had said to you about Neverland?

A. I don’t know what conversation you’re talking about. Refresh my memory, please, if you don’t mind. I spoke to them many times.

Q. Let’s go back to December 23rd, 2003. Do you remember talking to a District Attorney investigator named Tim Rooney?

A. If you said so.

Q. Remember telling that investigator that you had discussed with Star Arvizo what Star experienced at Neverland?

A. If you refresh my memory about it. I discussed it -- refresh my memory, if you don’t mind, please.

Q. Do you remember telling the District Attorney investigator that you had discussed Star Arvizo’s claims regarding Michael Jackson’s alleged abuse at Neverland?

A. I don’t recall what I have said. Can you -- what was -- again, re -- say it some more, please.

Q. Sure. Do you remember telling a District Attorney investigator named Tim Rooney that you had discussed with Star Arvizo what Star experienced with Michael Jackson at Neverland?

A. I don’t recall it right now.

Q. Remember telling a District Attorney investigator that Star told you what he saw Michael Jackson do at Neverland to he and his brother?

A. To do to him and his brother in Neverland?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I don’t recall that.

Q. Do you remember telling a District Attorney investigator, “Star Arvizo never mentioned wine. He mentioned sleeping pills”?

A. Oh, yeah. What he told me. I didn’t discuss it. You got to clarify what you’re saying.

Q. Okay.

A. Okay, let’s clarify.

Q. You told him, “Star never mentioned wine. He mentioned sleeping pills,” correct?

A. Let me explain it to you, if you want me --

Q. Did you say that? Yes or no?

A. I think I did. Yes, I did.

MR. MESEREAU: I have no further questions, Your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Were you questioning Star Arvizo about what happened at Neverland?

A. No, I did not.

Q. What was the context of that conversation you just relayed to us?

A. They got in my car, and Gavin got in the car and started to --

MR. MESEREAU: I'm going to object as hearsay, Your Honor.

MR. ZONEN: It's in response to the questions elicited by counsel.

THE COURT: You need to be more specific.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: What specifically was the context of the conversation that talked about a pill versus alcohol?

THE COURT: Are you -- relating it to Star, right?

MR. ZONEN: Yes, with regard to Star. Exactly.

THE WITNESS: Star got in my car and -- Gavin got in the car. Star got in the car. He said something about, "I've got pills and I've got sleeping pills."

And at that point I have this guilt, this Jewish guilt, I didn't want to know about it. I said, "I don't want to know anything about it."

I cut him off. I didn't want to know anything about it. And he was just trying to give me some information that -- I didn't ask him what has happened, what -- any of that. I never ask him anything.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did he give you anything more than five or ten seconds' worth of information?

A. No, because I -- I cut him off, because I felt that's not my position. I'm not --

Q. Did it appear that he wanted to talk to you about what happened?

A. I think he wanted to talk to me.

Q. Was anybody else present at the time?

A. Gavin was present.

Q. Was he talking to you about what happened?

A. Gavin? No. I remember I felt uncomfortable because Gavin put his head down, he was kind of like almost teary, because something that he said. I looked at Gavin, and I saw Gavin feel uncomfortable, and I look at Star, “Star, I don’t want to know anything. Thank you. Let’s talk about another thing. Let’s talk about baseball. Let’s talk about something else.”

Q. Was Gavin’s behavior different when you saw him after he came out of Neverland?
A. He was a little withdrawn. He was -- with me, anytime he saw me before, he hug me; he said, “I love you.” Now he was kind of withdrawn. He wouldn’t --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.
MR. ZONEN: I think it is.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: How was his behavior different after Neverland?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; no foundation.
THE WITNESS: I don’t know if it was after Neverland. I don’t know.
MR. MESEREAU: Beyond the scope.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: You mentioned three checks for $50.
A. Yeah.
Q. What were those three checks for?
A. The three checks was for the -- their performance, their endorsement, “You are a comic now.” As soon as you get a check, you are -- your first check, you become a professional. If you become a professional, anything you do, you are attorney -- if you are attorney, you could go say, “I’m an attorney” because you went and passed bar exam.

A lot of people walk around in this room, they say, “I’m a comedian” --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. But this was $50 for each of the three Arvizo children?

A. Yes.

Q. And was this for their performance?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this the graduation performance?

A. It was some kind of graduation performance, before the graduation, yes, sir.

Q. Did you give checks to just the Arvizo children or to other children?

A. No, all of the children, every children. The children, they went and perform, I endorse them as a performer. As a person, they endorse, “You are a comic now. You have a license to go out there, say ‘I’m a comic.’”

If somebody go out there, say, “I’m a comic,” and they don’t get a check, everybody going in this town, they are waiter and waitress, they are comic or they are actress or actor.

Q. All right. So you did this for all of the children --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- you didn’t just single out the Arvizo children?

A. No, I did it for all the children.

Q. I showed you two exhibits, Exhibit No. 624 and 623, these photocopies of the checks; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, you did.

Q. And you established that these are, in fact, photocopies of the two checks that you gave to Mr. Arvizo, David Arvizo?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. All right. Are these accurate photocopies? I mean, do they depict the subject matter accurately?

A. It look like, but I’m not sure if it’s accurate. It’s whatever. You know, my accountant sent them. I believe they are accurate.

Q. Well, go ahead and take a look at both of them. Let’s start with the first one, 624.

A. 624, yes.

Q. Now, that’s in your handwriting; is that right?

A. No, it’s not my handwriting.

Q. Oh, it’s not?
A. No.

Q. And have you ever seen that check before?
A. That’s my signature.
Q. But it’s -- okay. Your signature is on the check?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. But the check was made out by whom?
A. Could be made out by my assistant. It could be made out by my -- my accountant wasn’t, because if my accountant was up there, he would do it on the computer. My assistant or somebody, or somebody -- one of my -- the other co-workers that work for me. Any of the employees.
Q. Now, as to that check, do you have a recollection of that check?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. All right. Does that photocopy appear to be an accurate photocopy of the check, as you recall it?
A. I believe so.
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.
THE WITNESS: I believe so.
MR. ZONEN: I would move that exhibit into evidence. I believe it’s 623.
THE WITNESS: No, 624.
MR. MESEREAU: May I see it first, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.

MR. ZONEN: While counsel is looking at that exhibit --
Is that what you’re doing, Counsel?
MR. MESEREAU: Yes.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Let me direct your attention to 623, then.
THE COURT: Wait till he looks. Just give him a chance to look at it.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.
THE COURT: All right. It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: As to the other one, then, 623, correct?

A. 623, yes, sir.
Q. Is that a check that you either signed or had anything to do with?
A. I signed it. And then I think -- if it’s computer like that, it’s my accountant did that.
Q. Okay. But did you just say you did sign it?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Can I assume if you signed it, you looked at it?
A. I’m sure I did.
Q. Can you tell us if that photocopy is an accurate photocopy of the check?
A. It looks like exactly my check.
MR. ZONEN: I would ask to admit that exhibit as well.
MR. MESEREAU: No objection.

THE COURT: It’s admitted.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Now, the money that you gave to either Janet or Jay for private school, that was actually a tutorial program, was it not?
A. What was it?
Q. A tutorial program. Do you know what that is?
A. No.
Q. Just for private tutoring?
A. It could be. I have no idea. Something to do with a school or something; that they were talking about they want to take him out, you know, put him in somewhere that people make -- not making fun of him.
And I want -- you know, they had so much money, but they didn’t have enough money. And I said, “How much you need to make it up?” And they said that much, and I did.
Q. Did they ask you for that money?
A. No. I volunteer.
Q. Did this come in the course of a discussion about the fact that they needed some extra education?
A. It could have.
Q. Were you aware that they were out of school for a long period of time when they were at Neverland?

A. That’s what I understood.

Q. Was that in the context of this discussion?

A. I don’t recall that.

Q. Okay. The money that David Arvizo was given by you for rent, did you pay that money directly to the landlord?

A. No.

Q. You gave it to whom?

A. David. I said, “If you want me write the check for landlord, let me know who is the landlord, and I’ll write the check to the landlord.” He said, “No, no, no, write it to me.” And I said, “Okay.”

Q. Did you have any assurance that that money actually went to pay the rent?

A. I have no assurance, no.

Q. Do you --

A. No way.

Q. Do you know one way or the other?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Do you believe David Arvizo to be an honest person?

A. You know, I can’t -- you asking something that -- you know, you don’t know people in that kind of situation. They have -- a poor guy, he’s losing his kid and all of that stuff. You don’t really -- you really don’t know. I mean, you can’t read people. I wish I could read people.

The only thing I thought he ever done dishonest, was bad, that money I gave for the wallet.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: All right. Well, let me ask you this. The money you gave him for rent, was that before or after the whole controversy about the wallet and the $300 or $350 being missing?

A. I don’t know. Can I look at the checks?

Q. Would that help you?

A. Yeah, because the date’s on top.

Q. Sure. Go ahead.

A. Yeah, that was ten days before the other one happened.

Q. All right. Do you have an opinion as to whether or not that representation that George Lopez stole money from Gavin’s wallet was true?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; improper opinion.
THE WITNESS: I -- I don’t --
THE COURT: Just a moment.
Sustained.
THE WITNESS: Shall I answer it? Or --
THE COURT: No. Don’t.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Whose idea was it to put the children in a karate school?
A. It was the kids. They were talking about it, and I ask Jay and Janet, “We should do something for the kid, get their energy going,” and that and that. And they said they did not have the money. I said, “Where’s” -- “Let’s find out where it is. I’ll go take them there. I take care of it.”

It was me took them to the karate school. It was on Santa Monica Boulevard somewhere, I think, if I’m not mistaken. Maybe I’m wrong.
And we took them there and I talked to the instructor, and I talked to them and I said, “How much it is,” and they said so much money, and I said, “Here is the check.”
Yeah, that’s what I did. I give them a check and I enrolled them, so let them go.
Q. So you actually paid the money directly to the karate school?
A. Yes, sir. Yes.
Q. On the bed, did they ask you to buy a bed for them?
A. No. No, no, no, no, no.
Q. All right. What happened?
A. I went there, I saw the kid. Half of his face was swollen because his kidney, he have one kidney, one spleen. And he -- any day he could buy all of this. I don’t know what you guys do in this kind of stress. You might put him back in the hospital again. He might go to the hospital. You got to realize what’s going on. This kid have one kidney, he have no spleen, and his cancer on submission. It could come back with the stress --
Q. Tell me about the bed.

A. The bed, I went up there, I saw the face. He was all swollen. He was -- a couple of scars on his face, and he was like all swollen.

I said where it came from? He said from his kidney. The doctor said it was from his kidney.

And so I said, “Oh, my God, what’s going on? Can I do anything?” I said, “Where you sleeping?” Maybe infection or something.

They said they sleeping on the floor there.

And I said, “Where’s your bed?” They didn’t have no bed. And, oh, my God, “You kids have no bed?”

And I went -- I leave from there or I went -- yeah, I call my assistant. My assistant was at lunch or wherever it was. And I went to the office, “Go right now, take off. Go get the bed for them, deliver the bed.”

Q. Nobody asked for that bed?

A. No.

Q. Did Janet Arvizo ever ask you for money, ever?

A. No. Did not.

Q. You talked about two documentaries. There was the FOX documentary and then the PBS documentary that followed.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those documentaries about The Laugh Factory?

A. Was -- was -- one of them was about The Laugh Factory comedy camp. Another one was about Laugh Factory comedy camp, but Arvizo was featuring in it.

Q. They featured the Arvizo family?

A. Yes, I think.

Q. Was this before or after Gavin got sick?

A. They were before.

Q. So they were just three kids in the --

A. Yeah, they were three kids, and they were showing them. I think it’s a tape. You guys got to watch it. It’s a tape that --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; nonresponsive.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Just tell us what it is.

A. It was about the kids, that they were -- where is their home, where they were living, how did they take a bus to come there, and how they went to -- what they call it? How they came to comedy camp, how the comedy camp, they get -- they talk about their pain and food they don’t have, all of that stuff they were talking about. It was a documentary on that.

Q. Which one was that, the PBS or the FOX?

A. The FOX, sir.

Q. You mentioned a man by the name of Patrick Press. Do you mean Patrick Perez?

A. Patrick Perez.

Q. P-e-r-e-z?

A. My spelling is terrible, yes. I’m sorry about spelling.

Q. Did you introduce him, Mr. Perez, to the Arvizo family?

A. I don’t know if my office did or something. I know he was there. I don’t know what happened.

Q. Do you know if any of the Arvizo children got any money for this documentary?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Did you get any money for it?

A. No. I wish I should. I wish I get some money. I didn’t get anything.

Q. Did you ask for money?

A. No, I didn’t. But I should have ask. I didn’t ask for anything.

Q. Do you know the purpose of the documentary?

A. It was something -- they show a lot of people in Hollywood. The people in -- in the community, they know my charity. They know that what I’m doing with the kids, it helps the kids. The whole thing was, purpose of the documentary, to show the success of the comedy -- what does comedy do.

And again, it was -- it was all about comedian, thanks to comedians, and comedians made this whole thing happen. It wasn’t me. I don’t want to take the credit all for myself. Any of that credit goes to the comedians. The comedians, they did that. As a result of the comedians, I wouldn’t have my club. So, it’s critical to them. I’m emphasizing to most documentaries, comedians should be --

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Nonresponsive; move to strike.

THE COURT: Overruled.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Did you pay any money toward medical bills that you’re aware of for the Arvizo family, or for Gavin specifically?

A. Never.

Q. Did anybody ask you to pay medical bills?

A. Never.

Q. Did Janet ever tell you she had medical bills that she had to pay?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you. I have no further questions.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. You mentioned your computer in response to the prosecutor’s questions. Do you recall mentioning a computer?

A. I mentioned the check is computer, meaning my accountant have some kind of computer.

Q. Right. Do you remember being asked by a Santa Barbara sheriff if you could provide accounting records or books about what you had given the Arvizos? Do you remember that?

A. I’m sure they did.

MR. ZONEN: I’m going to object as exceeding the scope of the redirect examination.

MR. MESEREAU: I think it’s within the scope, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And do you remember your response was, “Those books are gone because they raise computer viruses”?

A. That could have been happened one, two -- or twice. It happened on my office computer, my accountant, yeah.

Q. That is what you told the Santa Barbara sheriffs, right?
A. I could have. I don’t know. If that happened at that time, I would have told them, yes.
Q. You said, “Those books are gone because they raise computer viruses,” right?
MR. ZONEN: Objection; asked and answered.
THE WITNESS: That check is not confusing, sir.
THE COURT: Just a moment.
The objection is sustained.
THE WITNESS: Oh.
MR. MESEREAU: No further questions.

MR. ZONEN: No further questions.
THE COURT: All right. Thank you. You may step down.
THE WITNESS: Thank you, sir.
THE COURT: Call your next witness.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: People call Cynthia Ann Bell.
THE COURT: Come to the front of the courtroom, please.
When you get to the witness stand, please remain standing, face the clerk here. Raise your right hand.

CYNTHIA ANN BELL
Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.
THE CLERK: Please be seated.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
THE CLERK: State and spell your name for the record.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
My name is Cynthia Ann Bell. C-y-n-t-h-i-a, A-n-n, B-e-l-l.
THE CLERK: Thank you.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. Good afternoon, Miss Bell.
A. Good afternoon.
Q. How are you employed?
A. I'm a corporate flight attendant.
Q. How long have you been a corporate flight attendant?
A. Just under seven years.
Q. During the year 2003, who did you work for?
A. Xtra Jet International.
Q. And you were a corporate flight attendant at that time?
A. That's correct.
Q. Have you ever personally worked on any flights where Xtra Jet provided services to Michael Jackson?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. And is he in court today?
A. Yes, he is.
Q. Okay. Would you identify him for the record?
A. Yes, I can.
Q. He's seated to my right?
A. That is correct.
Q. Thank you.
Madam Clerk, could have I have Exhibits No. 31 through 34, if you can find those.

THE WITNESS: I'm so nervous.
THE COURT: You can pour yourself some water, if you want.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
THE BAILIFF: Miss Bell, is that almost empty?
THE WITNESS: Is it what?
THE BAILIFF: Miss Bell, is that almost empty?
THE WITNESS: Yeah, it's almost empty. Thanks.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: We're zeroing in on it, Your Honor.
Q. All right. Miss Bell, I'm going to show you an exhibit marked as People's 31. Can you identify that person?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Who is that, please?

A. This woman was on a flight that I had done with Xrtra Jet International. I believe, yeah, she was definitely on that flight.

Q. Okay. Was it a flight in which Mr. Jackson was a passenger?

A. Yes.

Q. And I want -- I'm showing you People's Exhibit No. 49. I'd like you to -- we're having trouble locating the picture I'm looking for, but if you could ignore the woman in the middle.

A. In the center.

Q. And just the three children. Have you seen those three children before?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Were they also on that same flight?

A. That's correct.

Q. And do you recall where that flight flew from and where it was headed to?

A. Yes, sir. That was from Florida to Santa Barbara.

Q. Do you know the date of that flight?

A. It was either in February or March. Actually, on the trip sheets, that would tell you the exact dates, or I'm certain that --

Q. Do you have some notes that would refresh your recollection about the exact date?

A. That's correct.

Q. Do you have those with you?

A. No, I do not.

Q. All right. Now, that flight was you said -- what was the month?

A. I believe it was either February or March.

Q. And the flight started in Miami?

A. That's correct.

Q. And flew to Santa Barbara?

A. Santa Barbara.

Q. And do you recall who was on that flight other than those four individuals you've identified and Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes. Mr. Jackson's children were on board.

His head governess, Grace. His head of security. The mother of two of the children. And I believe that there were -- there was a medical doctor and two other governesses.

Q. Do you know how long that flight took?

A. Approximately five hours.

Q. And were all the seats full?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe your duties on that flight?

A. Certainly. As a flight attendant, of course, to greet the passengers and make certain, upon take-off, that their needs are accommodated. During the flight, continuous food and beverage service.

Q. And how busy were you, if you recall, on that particular flight?

A. Fairly busy.

Q. Did you ever have any breaks or downtime where you were able to relax?

A. Typically, as a corporate flight attendant, you don’t really have time. You’re typically pretty busy. It’s a smaller aircraft, with fewer passengers, and you’re typically just -- there’s never really any downtime.

Q. Okay. And how many people fly on a plane like that, in total?

A. Well, depending on the load, you could possibly have 12, depending on the configuration of your Gulfstream aircraft or your aircraft, depending on your passenger load or where they’re going. There’s times I’ve flown one passenger to London. There’s been times where I’ve flown 16 passengers.

Q. My question, on that particular flight from Miami to Santa Barbara, do you know how many people were on the flight?

A. It was a full house. It was a full boat.

Q. And how many people would that be?

A. I believe it was in between 12 and 13.

Q. Do you also provide service to the pilots?

A. That is correct.

Q. And there are how many pilots?

A. Two.

Q. And you -- would it be safe to say that pilots and yourself are the only service personnel that are on the plane?

A. Pilots do not serve the passengers.
Q. Okay.
A. Flight attendants only.
Q. So other than the pilots and yourself, those are the only Xtra Jet employees on the flight?
A. That is correct.
Q. On that flight from Miami to Santa Barbara, did you serve Michael Jackson any alcoholic beverages?

A. Yes, I did.
Q. And was there anything peculiar about the means or method that you served him alcoholic beverages?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Tell us what you mean by that.
A. Well, Mr. Jackson is a very private drinker. I went ahead and initiated serving him in a Diet Coke can.
Q. How many times in total have you flown where you were a corporate flight attendant for Mr. Jackson?
A. Probably about three.
Q. Was that with Xtra Jet each time?
A. No, sir, it wasn’t. I flew him with Pacific Jet once prior.
Q. Were you previously employed with Pacific Jet?
A. As a contract flight attendant.
Q. Was that before you worked for Xtra Jet?
A. Yes, as a full-time flight attendant, yes.
Q. Why did you serve Mr. Jackson alcohol in a Diet Coke can?
A. A couple different reasons. I serve other clients that way also. Why?
Q. Yes.
A. Because he’s a private -- he was a private drinker.

Q. Whose idea was it?
A. It was mine.
Q. Okay. And when did you formulate that idea to put the wine in a Coke can?

A. On the particular trip with Xtra Jet, I had accidentally for -- forgot and placed a wine glass in front of him.

Q. You say you accidentally forgot. Did you have some knowledge about the way that Mr. Jackson liked his alcohol served?

A. Yes, because I had flown him prior, and he had had alcohol in more of a plastic thermal, like, mug-looking thing. I don't know if that was just a Pacific Jet thing.

Q. You served him alcohol previous on the Pacific Jet flight in a plastic mug thing?

A. That's correct.

Q. And under whose instructions did you serve him alcohol in that method, and by that means, I should say?

A. I don't remember. I'm sorry.

Q. All right. But did Mr. Jackson ever tell you to serve him wine in a Coke can?

A. No, he did not.

Q. On that flight, do you know who was seated next to Mr. Jackson?

A. At different times, different parties were seated next to Mr. Jackson. For most of the time or for a lot of the time, there was a young man that was seated next to him.

Q. Okay. Was he one of the children that I showed you in the exhibit marked as People's 49?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which young man are you talking about?

A. Well, he looks a lot older than that picture, but I believe this, yeah.

Q. Okay. Indicating the boy in the blue shirt with the stripe through the middle, the one on the left-hand portion of the photograph?

A. That is correct. That is correct.

Q. The one where my finger is indicating?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. Thank you.

A. Thank you.

Q. Do you know what his name is? Do you know what that young man's name is?

A. You'd have to refresh my memory.

Q. All right. That's fine. If you don't recall, that's fine.

A. Thank you.

Q. Okay. So what type of -- what type of seating arrangement was the area where Mr. Jackson was sitting?

A. In that particular Gulfstream, it was club seating, with a dinner table, a fixed dinner table.

Q. What's club seating?

A. Club seating is two by two.

Q. Two seats facing each other?

A. Actually, it's a four-seated club configuration. So two passengers could face forward, two passengers could face aft in that particular seating of the aircraft.

Q. We don't apparently have an unmarked diagram, so I'm going to ask you just to explain it as specifically as you can.

So you have two seats that are side by side. Is that fair to say?

A. Do you want me to sort of give you a demonstration of what --

Q. No. Just two seats side by side, normal airplane seats?

A. Two seats side by side, yeah, normal -- we're not like the airliners, so it's not -- when you say "normal," like normal seats, no. I mean, they're big, overstuffed seats, leather, with armrests, you know, separated armrests, but they are side by side.

Q. Is there anything in between the two seats?

A. On that particular aircraft, you could lower the armrests --

Q. Okay.

A. -- to --

Q. So you could lower an armrest between the two seats or you could lift it up?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. And then you have another two seats. You have a table and then another two seats that are facing the opposite direction?

A. Right. It would almost be like -- seated like if you were at a restaurant. A seat here, a seat here, a seat there, a seat here.

Q. That’s fine. And you said that Mr. Jackson was seated most of the time near the young boy that you identified?

A. For -- yes.

Q. Okay.

A. Along with Prince and Paris, his children. They were always with Mr. Jackson when -- you know, on the other side or in his lap.

Q. Okay. But I’m drawing your attention at this time just to the young boy you’ve identified.

A. Okay. Thank you.

Q. And the period of time that he was seated next to Mr. Jackson, at any time during this flight, did you ever see Mr. Jackson share his -- well, let me strike that and start with the question, can you characterize how much wine Mr. Jackson consumed on that flight, if you recall?

A. It was a long flight. Yes, we went through our white wine, and so I would say a bottle or two. Perhaps even -- because I know I opened red wine, but I think I was serving red wine also to -- I was -- actually the medical doctor had rum and Coke and then went to red wine, so I was serving --

(Laughter.)

A. Well, that makes our flight sound scary.

Q. Okay. You said Mr. Jackson -- was he the only person drinking white wine; do you know?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know approximately -- you said you opened one or two bottles of wine?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Do you know if you got into a second bottle?

A. I believe that I opened -- that I -- yes, I believe that I had opened two bottles of white.

Q. Okay.

A. And one bottle of red, but they weren’t completely consumed. I know the red was not completely consumed.

Q. Okay. And the second bottle of white wasn’t completely consumed?

A. That’s correct.
Q. Do you know if you served Mr. Jackson any white wine -- or, I’m sorry, any red wine?
A. I don’t remember.
Q. Do you know if you served Mr. Jackson any mixed drinks?
A. On that -- I don’t believe so.
Q. Okay. During this flight, how much of the time, if you can recall, did Mr. Jackson have a drink at his seat?

A. An alcoholic beverage, or --
Q. Yes, that’s what I mean. I should have been more specific.
A. Okay. The can was always there. Where he was in club seating had an actual holder for the can. The can was -- was always present. I would refill the can whether or not he was drinking the beverage, consuming it the entire time. The drink was always there is I guess what I’m trying to maintain.
Q. During this flight, did you ever see Mr. Jackson share his can of wine with anyone else?
A. No.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Thank you. I have no further questions.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.

CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MR. MESEREAU:
Q. Good afternoon, Ms. Bell.
A. Good afternoon.
Q. I’m Tom Mesereau. I speak for Michael Jackson.
A. Thank you.
Q. Now, you’ve had one interview with the Santa Barbara Sheriffs, correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. And you also testified before a grand jury in Santa Barbara about this case, right?
A. That is correct.
Q. Okay. Now, how many times do you think you’ve flown with Michael Jackson?

A. I believe three; no more than six.

Q. And in none of the flights that you shared with Michael Jackson -- let me rephrase that. At no time on any flight you've been on with Michael Jackson have you ever seen him share wine with any child, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. You've never seen Michael Jackson share a Diet Coke can with wine with any child, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. You never saw the Arvizo children drinking from a Diet Coke can with alcohol at any time, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. You've never saw those children drinking from a Diet Coke can with wine, correct?

A. That is correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled. The answer is in. Next question.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: At no time did you ever see any of the Arvizo children appear intoxicated, right? Let me rephrase that. I think it's --

A. I actually served those children, but I I.D.'d the oldest girl.

Q. You I.D.'d her?

A. I asked her for her identification.

Q. Did she give you identification?

A. She did, actually.

Q. Okay. And did it show she was 18?

A. It did not show that she was 18.

Q. Okay.

A. And I served her in crystal, knowing -- knowingly served her alcohol.

Q. You did?

A. I did.

Q. You never saw Michael Jackson give her alcohol?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. And you've never seen any inappropriate behavior between Michael Jackson and any child on a flight, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you have never seen Michael Jackson caress or touch any minor child in an intimate manner, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And, now, you indicated that his children were always around him on the flight the Arvizos were on, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. You never observed Michael Jackson at any time when his children weren't around him, right?

A. I'm sorry, what?

Q. On the flight the Arvizos were on, you always saw Mr. Jackson's children around him, right?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And we're talking about three children, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And two nannies, correct?

A. Three nannies.

Q. Okay. Do you recall someone throwing food on the plane when the Arvizos were on board?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Relevance; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You saw one of the Arvizos throwing food on the flight, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know who that was?

A. Yes, the older of the children. The --

Q. Is that the female?

A. No. That was --

Q. Was it the mother?

A. No, but it could have been. No, it wasn't her.

Q. You saw one of them was throwing food?

A. Right.

Q. Do you know what that person looked like?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What did that person look like?

A. Dark hair, lighter skin. It was more sort of a playful interaction that they had going.
Q. Was this a male or a female?
A. A fe- -- a male, actually.
Q. Do you know what the male's name was?
A. I'm sorry, I don't. I'm drawing a blank on their names.
Q. You described that male as very rude, correct?
A. Absolutely. Very rude.
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevance.
THE COURT: Overruled.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Is that correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. And tell the jury what you mean by "rude."
A. The individual was unusually rude, discourteous, very -- I remember him talking about, "I got this watch from Michael, and it's really expensive," and just -- altogether just not -- just loud, obnoxious, like, "Serve me my food. This isn't warm. This isn't the way it's supposed to be." And he was just unintelligent. It was embarrassing to have him on board, actually.

Q. And do you have a picture in front of you? Do you have that exhibit in front of you?
A. No, I do not.
MR. MESEREAU: Where is that? Okay. May I approach, Your Honor?
THE COURT: You may.
MR. MESEREAU: Your Honor, I'm showing the witness Exhibit No. 49.
Q. Ms. Bell, do you see that picture?
A. I do.
Q. Do you recognize the person you're identifying as having been rude on the flight?
A. I do.
Q. And who is that?
A. This individual here.
Q. Which one is that?
A. You know, his name eludes me. I'm sorry.
MR. MESEREAU: May I have the witness point out the person to the jury, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: This individual here.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Is it your understanding that person's name is Gavin?

A. Yes, sir, that is his name.

Q. Okay. Now, you told members of the grand jury that you perceive Michael Jackson as a touchy-feely kind of person, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you said he was touchy-feely, kind of, to you, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Well, he's very soft-spoken, and typically because of -- he's very polite and very soft-spoken, I would have to kneel and gain eye contact with Mr. Jackson. And, you know, he is very, you know -- you know, would touch my arm when we were communicating. I don't mean touchy-feely like in a weird sort of manner. Just sort of a polite, gaining eye contact, you know, maintaining, you know, communication that way.

Q. You never found Mr. Jackson to be rude or impolite, did you?

A. Absolutely not, neither him or his children.

MR. MESEREAU: Could I have that exhibit?

Q. Now, just for the record, Ms. Bell, on Exhibit 49, that's the picture of four individuals I just showed you, correct? And that's the picture that you pointed the individual out to the jury who you found to be very rude and obnoxious, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you pointed out the fellow to the far left with a blue shirt, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. Thank you.

On that flight, Mr. Jackson was the only person who drank wine out of a Diet Coke can, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And everyone else that ordered wine had it served in a flute-like glass, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you described Mr. Jackson to the Santa

Barbara Grand Jury as one of the most nervous flyers you'd ever seen, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Please tell the jury what you mean by that.

A. Well, Mr. Jackson is just a very nervous flyer. He doesn't like turbulence. He -- he has been known to have -- not on my flights, but flights land if there's too much turbulence. He just does not enjoy flying. It makes him very nervous.

Q. And you discussed Mr. Jackson's nervousness on flights with his medical doctor, correct?

A. Yes. Actually, his medical doctor discussed it with me before we -- before we launched on our trip to Miami -- or from Miami to Santa Barbara.

Q. And the subject of that discussion was the fact that he, the doctor, understood that he wanted alcohol to deal with his nervousness, correct?

A. That is correct.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Assumes facts; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How did you learn that Michael Jackson was extremely nervous on air flights?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Foundation; hearsay.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you know Michael Jackson was a very nervous flyer?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Asked and answered. Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: What did Mr. Jackson like to eat on those flights, if you recall?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Relevance; beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you remember the young man in Exhibit No. 49, whom you've identified as being rude, the young fellow with the blue shirt, screaming at you that his chicken was not warm?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. You told the grand jury he's a weird kid,

correct?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Michael Jackson always sat by the window, didn’t he? Do you recall?

A. I don’t recall.

Q. Okay. Did you talk to his doctor on that flight very much?

A. I did.

Q. Did you know where the doctor was seated?

A. Yes.

Q. And please tell the jury where Michael Jackson’s physician was seated on that flight.

A. He was seated in the forward aft-facing seat.

Q. Excuse me?

A. The forward aft-facing seat.

Q. And if you can, describe what you mean.

A. As you enter the Gulfstream, if you were to make the right, and the first seat that seats aft-facing, which would be facing the back of the aircraft, that was the seat that he was seated in.

Q. And if you’re in that seat, what is your -- let me rephrase that.

If you’re sitting in that seat, what are you likely to be able to observe on that plane? I mean, what can you see as you sit in that seat, assuming you’re looking forward? What’s in front of you?

A. That would be the -- the Arvizos’ mom was seated in the forward-facing seat, facing him.

Q. Okay.

A. He would -- he would be able to see in the cabin, but not -- I mean, I probably have the best seat in the house because I’m standing in the galley.

Q. And you were in a position where you could see everything going on on that flight, couldn’t you?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And --

A. Except for the pilots, because we close the pilots off.

Q. Okay. And you would describe that interior of the plane as very close and intimate, right?

A. Very much so.
Q. You were able to see everything that went on in that plane, couldn’t you, other than what the pilots were doing?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you recall if you ever saw Mr. Jackson sleeping on the flight?
A. No, sir, he was not sleeping on the flight.
Q. Okay. Did you see him eat his meal on the flight?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you serve his children on the flight?
A. I did.
Q. What did you serve them?
MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; relevance.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Do you know someone named Lauren Wallace?

A. I do.
Q. And who is Lauren Wallace?
A. Lauren Wallace is a corporate flight attendant.
Q. And you told her about Mr. Jackson’s desire to have his alcohol in a Diet Coke can, right?
A. I did.
Q. And when you served Michael Jackson vodka drinks, they were always in a Diet Coke can, correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. What you would typically do is go into the lavatory, pour out the Coke, and put some either wine or vodka in the Diet Coke can, right?
A. That is correct.
Q. And what you typically did was go up to Mr. Jackson and say, “Here’s your Diet Coke, Mr. Jackson,” right?
A. That is correct.
Q. You both understood what was in there, right?
A. That is correct.

Q. And your understanding was Mr. Jackson didn’t want children to see him drinking alcohol, right?
A. That is correct.
Q. You were on some flights where there was considerable turbulence, right?

A. Yes.
Q. And would it be accurate to say that when there was a lot of turbulence, Mr. Jackson would drink a little more than normal?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it your impression he did that because he was nervous?
A. That is correct.
MR. MESEREAU: I think we’re through, Your Honor.
THE COURT: We are.
All right. We’ll start at 8:30 tomorrow morning.
THE WITNESS: Do I get to go home?
(The proceedings adjourned at 2:30 p.m.)

THE COURT: Good morning.
COUNSEL AT COUNSEL TABLE: (In unison) Good morning, Your Honor.
THE WITNESS: Good morning.
THE COURT: Let’s see, Mr. Mesereau, were you examining?
MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me, Your Honor. My cross-examination is completed. I believe that --
BAILIFF CORTEZ: Mike closer.
THE COURT: He said his cross-examination is completed.
(Laughter.)
THE COURT: Go ahead, Counsel.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:
Q. Good morning, Miss Bell.
A. Good morning to you.
Q. Would you please characterize the level of service -- is this on?
Would you please characterize the level of service that you provided on the flights that you handled involving Mr. Jackson?
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: Overruled. You may answer.

THE WITNESS: The level of service was A-1.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: First Class service?

A. That is correct.

Q. And how attentive are you to the guests or the individuals who are guests of the client on the plane?

A. Extremely attentive.

Q. You interact with each one of them?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you have -- I think I asked you previously, but is it fair to say that you were either interacting with the guests, the client, or you were working in the galley during the entire flight?

A. Can you repeat the question? I’m sorry.

Q. My question is, during the entire flight, are you always on your feet?

A. Yes.

Q. And during that entire time that you’re on your feet, is it fair to say you’re always involved in some level of service?

A. That is correct.

Q. Are you in the galley at times?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Are you in the pilots’ cabin at times?

A. Only briefly. Just to serve them meals on crew trays.

Q. Okay. But otherwise, you were attentive to the needs of everybody who’s on that plane?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you personally prepare the meals?

A. Personally prepare? On certain flights, yes, we do. However, on Mr. Jackson’s flights, we typically had them catered.

Q. You served hot hors d’oeuvres?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Dessert?

A. If required, yes.

Q. Meals?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many meals on a five-hour flight from Miami to Santa Barbara?

A. Depending on what we’re serving, depending on the catering requests. I mean, I like to start with cold appetizers, to roll into hot appetizers, to roll into a salad, a soup, a main course, a dessert, finish with assorted usually sorbets in between, with a drink and beverage service throughout the entire duration.

Q. And on a flight like this involving Mr. Jackson and his guests, is there one person you’re most concerned about pleasing?

A. You’re always concerned with your lead passenger.

Q. And that would be Mr. Jackson?

A. That is correct.

Q. So if Mr. Jackson doesn’t like something, do you change it?

A. Absolutely. In regards to catering?

Q. In regards to your level of service, anything that you do. If he tells you he doesn’t like something, do you take care of it?

A. Yes.

Q. If he wants something, do you take care of it?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever met Mr. Jackson outside your role as a server on one of these flights?

A. No, sir, I have not.

Q. So would it be fair to say you’ve been always in a role of pleasing Mr. Jackson, pleasing -- making sure he’s --

A. Yes. As a cabin attendant.

(Laughter.)

Q. All right. With that -- with that condition, would it be fair to say that you’re in a position where you’re always concerned about making Mr. Jackson happy?

A. As a cabin attendant, yes.

Q. Yes, we’ve got that, okay.

A. I’ll lose my job over this.

(Laughter.)

Q. You mentioned that you served an underage -- some underage girls, or an underage girl on this particular flight from Miami to Florida?

A. Yes, sir. I was unaware that she was underage. I actually did -- I did I.D. her, and I saw a positive identification which reflected that she was 21 years of age.

Q. She wasn’t underage?

A. It reflected that she was of age, 21 years of age.

Q. And were there two girls or one girl?

A. There were two girls on that flight.

Q. Uh-huh.

A. And they maintained that they were best friends and that they were on their way to Neverland Ranch.

Q. Did you card both of them?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Why not?

A. Because I assumed that -- because they were maintaining they were best friends that they were both of the same age. There was a younger boy on the flight who --

Q. I’m not going to ask about the boy. I’m just concerned about the two girls right now.

A. Yes.

Q. Why didn’t you card the other girl?

A. I was told that they were the same age.

Q. Okay. Did she look 21, the other girl?

A. They both looked young, and that’s why I I.D.’d them -- I I.D.’d the primary person who requested a cocktail.

Q. Okay. So you just assumed the other one was 21?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And did you mention this to Mr. Jackson, that you were serving these young ladies alcohol?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And how did you -- what kind of glass did you serve them in?

A. In a tall crystal Waterford glass.

Q. Okay. Was it fluted?

A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. Okay.

A. It was cut crystal.

Q. You have previously mentioned in the grand jury that all flights kind of blend together for you.

A. I fly very often.

Q. Is that true?

A. The person -- the people that I fly, or the actual flights?

Q. In terms of your recollections.

A. Flights --

Q. You stated flights kind of run together so it’s hard for you to remember, is that true?

A. They tend to, yes.

Q. How -- do you have peculiar recollections of this particular flight over others? Is your memory better about this particular flight that we’re talking about in this particular case over other flights that you’ve had?

A. Is my memory of the actual flight or --

Q. Yes. You’ve testified about a number of details about this flight --

A. I’m very clear about the flight. I’m actually very clear about the people that I fly. It’s the locations, typically, that blend together. But -- because, you know, you’re in New York a lot, you’re in Florida a lot. I mean, you’re a lot -- and it’s typically the same sort of places that we go to.

Q. Okay. Now, you mentioned that you didn’t recall if Mr. Jackson was sleeping, but you don’t think he did.

A. I’m certain that he was not sleeping.

Q. Okay. What time did this flight leave Miami?

A. I believe it was either a three or four o’clock launch or -- yes.

Q. Okay. So it would have arrived in Santa Barbara -- taking into account five hours, it would arrive around eight or nine o’clock Florida time, true?

A. They’re three hours ahead of us. You want Florida time --

Q. Yes, I said “Florida time.” Five hours. Three plus five, eight. Eight or nine?

A. I can’t do the math.

Q. Okay. So was it dark when you arrived in Santa Barbara; do you know?

A. I believe it was.

Q. And did you happen to notice whether other people slept on that flight, dozed or napped, anything of that nature?

A. The medical doctor that was on board did sleep. The child, the youngest child, slept on that flight for --

Q. Mr. Jackson’s youngest child?

A. That is correct.

Q. Just your best recollection.

A. That’s my best recollection. Thank you.

Q. Is it possible that other people napped during the flight?

A. I know it was a pretty busy cabin.

Q. Did people move around the cabin?

A. Yes.

Q. A little bit, or a lot, or something in between. You tell me.

A. I wouldn’t say unusually a lot. But the children were up and down and back and forth and the governesses were back and forth.

Q. Did many people change seats?

A. No.

Q. Did some people change seats?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have specific recollections of who changed seats and what manner the change took place, how that took place?

A. Definitely Prince and Paris. They were back and forth in the cabin, interactive with the entire cabin.

Q. So they would get up and move from their seat?

A. Yes.

Q. And I believe you testified that at one point they were in the banquet area; is that what you --

A. In the club seating.

Q. Club seating. Yeah. Okay. In the club seating with Mr. Jackson.

You also testified that during the entire fright they were around Mr. Jackson, his children were around him?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you have a specific recollection of that?

A. I do.

Q. All right.

If I may approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Miss Bell, I show you People's Exhibit 765. It appears to be a diagram of the plane. But you tell me. Can you identify that?

A. Yes, I can.

Q. What is it?

A. That is the exact configuration of November-8-7-tango-delta.

Q. Is that the plane that you used on the flight we've been talking about involving Mr. Jackson and the Arvizos?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Could I have the Elmo on, Your Honor?

THE WITNESS: Oh, wait, I'm sorry. It might have been hotel-Charlie.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I'm not --

Q. I'm not concerned about the name.

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. She hasn't completed her answer.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: There isn't a question pending.

Q. But go ahead.

THE COURT: Just a moment.

What does "hotel-Charlie" -- is that a plane designation?

THE WITNESS: It's the last tracking tail numbers of another one of our aircraft with a very similar cabin configuration.

THE COURT: All right. I will overrule the objection. Go ahead.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. So my question, though, is -- my concern is, is this a fair representation of the floor plan of the plane that was used on the flight from Miami to Santa Barbara with Mr. Jackson that we've been talking about?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: If I could have "Input No. 4," Your Honor.

Q. Now, I can't get this entire diagram on this -- on this screen, so I'm going to ask you to just help me out a little bit.

Is there a pointer that we have?

Ms. Bell, this is just a laser pointer.

A. Okay.

Q. And if you hold it down, you can help us out with identifying some locations.

A. Thank you.

Q. All right. I'm not going to ask you to mark on this exhibit, but I would ask you just to point with the laser, if you would, your best recollection of where Mr. Jackson was seated, if it's on this particular portion of it.

Okay. Indicating in the club seating, the chair nearest the aisle, and in the center of the diagram, and I believe --

A. He actually sat there of most of the time. He went to the lav, and at that time, when he came back, he was seated here.

Q. Uh-huh.

A. And Prince and Paris both shared this seat.

Q. Now, you mentioned, during most of the flight, in the grand jury that Gavin was next to him.

A. Yes, was seated there.

Q. Okay. So is that a fact, that during most of the flight that Gavin was seated next to Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said that there is a divider between those seats that can be lifted up.

A. That is correct.

Q. Was that divider down or up during that flight or did it -- let me maybe ask you -- rephrase that question. Was that divider moved during that flight?

A. The only time it was moved was when Mr. Jackson used the lav.

Q. It went down?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And when he came back from the lav, did it go back up again?

A. No, it did not. His children were seated there and it was open.

Q. Okay. What do you mean, “it was open”? It went back up or down?

A. The actual divider was -- the children were sharing the seat.

Q. Show me what we’re talking about as far as the thing that goes down. Where is that located on this diagram?

Okay. Just between the two seats?

A. That’s correct. It’s an actual armrest that divides the seats here.

Q. You have a specific recollection on this particular flight of the time that that armrest went down and up?

A. Do I have a specific -- yes, because he had to -- I had to lower it. And I remember it quite clearly because there was a hinge problem with that particular seat.

Q. Uh-huh.

A. And we had to lower it for Mr. Jackson to -- we had to -- well, there’s also a divider here with cupholders.

Q. Yes.

A. So both of those had to be lowered for him to get in and out. And also, like I said, the children wanted to sit next to him at that time.

Q. Uh-huh.

A. So instead of having the hindrance of the divider, we went ahead and lowered it.

Q. Oh, I see. Okay. All right. So going back to the time when he was -- you said there was a portion of the time that Prince and Paris were seated next to him.

A. That is correct.

Q. Then did they move again?

A. Prince was with his father most of -- a lot of the flight. Paris moved to help me bake cookies.

Q. All right. My question is in terms of not whether they were with him, but whether they were seated in that seat. Did they move from that seat? After they sat in it, how much time did they spend in that seat? That’s my question.

A. I’m not sure. I’m sorry.

Q. Okay. But is it still fair to say that Gavin Arvizo spent most of the flight in that seat seated next to Mr. Jackson?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. Do you recall where Dr. Farshshian, or the doctor, I should say, was seated?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was that?

A. You’ll need to move the diagram down in order to display his seating.

Q. I’m moving the diagram --

A. Thank you.

Q. I’m moving it towards the pilots’ cabin; is 4190

that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. We're now looking at the front of the airplane, and you're indicating in the seat that's closest to the -- I guess that would be the doorway into the aircraft; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that's in the upper right-hand portion of the diagram.

All right. Did he move at all during the flight?

A. Yes. He came back and chatted with me in the galley. But always -- typically always -- oh, no, actually, the only other time that he didn't return to his seat after the galley was, of course, to use the lav, but also he was chatting with everyone at the club seating on the credenza.

Q. Okay.

A. He sat himself there for a period of time.

Q. All right. So you at times were back in the galley chatting with Dr. Farshshian, or the doctor?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said at times you were back there baking cookies with the kids?

A. That's correct.

Q. And is it fair to say at times you were in this area that's identified by four seats attending to the needs of those passengers?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And there was a passenger in each of those seats?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. A passenger in every seat on this aircraft?
A. There may have been an open seat, but it’s -- when you have that many people, it’s a full house. I mean, it’s --
Q. So possibly a seat open, but --
A. We don’t, like, count our seats. I mean, as for emergency evacuations, we know where people are located amongst -- you know, in the aircraft. However, we don’t actually -- it’s not like airline style where you count the seats and the passengers.
Q. Okay.
A. So, I mean --
Q. No, that’s fine. You’ve answered the question.
And at times you’re dealing with -- Diagram 765. You’re dealing with people in the club seating area?
A. That is correct.
Q. Sometimes you’re turned in the opposite direction, you’re dealing with people who are in the couch that’s marked in blue on the lower left-hand corner?
A. On the divan.
Q. The divan. Is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. And at times you are turned, again, towards the rear of the aircraft where you’re attending to the needs of the persons seated directly in the aft of the club seating, true?

A. That is correct. Well, actually you’re not really turned, because you’re usually --

Q. Okay. To the side?

A. Right.

Q. Okay. And moving the diagram towards what appears to be the aft of the airplane, that shows the galley area; is that fair to say?

A. That is correct.

Q. Would you show us on the --

A. This open area here, with a --

Q. Where it looks to be marbleized?

A. That is correct. That is our galley.

Q. So you’ve indicated on the diagram that the galley comprises both the port and starboard sides of the aircraft?

A. That is correct.

Q. So sometimes you’re facing to the left of the aircraft, and sometimes you’re facing to the right?

A. That is correct.

Q. What’s that little L-shaped section in the lower portion of the diagram, if you would?

A. This here?

Q. No, above that. Yes, that little rectangular square.

A. That’s our sink.

Q. So sometimes you’re over the sink dealing with whatever you need to clean, or get water, that type of thing?

A. That’s correct. We don’t do dishes on board, so we don’t really use that sink a whole lot.

Q. All right. So would it be fair to say at any given moment your attention and focus would be on any given one of those areas we’ve just identified?

A. Yes.

Q. In terms of all the seating, the kitchen, the galley?

A. That is correct. It’s an open galley, and for specific reasons, that you can monitor your cabin while you’re preparing.

Q. See who wants something?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Someone can get your attention if they need to?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you pay whatever visits you need to the lav area?

A. The lav is actually pretty busy. We keep catering -- a lot of catering in the baggage hold or in the lav. That right there is a closet. And then our other catering storage area is here.

Q. Okay. But, basically, my question was, that lav is for your use as well as everybody else’s during the flight?

A. For everyone on the aircraft.

Q. And do you have any reason to go back in the baggage area?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What do you do back there?

A. Depending on whether or not I’ve stored -- I usually store my ice cream and my sorbets in the baggage hold.

Q. So sometimes you’re back in that area that appears to have suitcases in it in the very aft of the diagram?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what’s the area -- it looks like it might be a coat rack in the upper right-hand corner. Upper left-hand, excuse me. Do you see that?

A. In the lav or --

Q. Do you see what’s across from the lav?

A. Yes, that’s a storage area --

Q. Okay.

A. -- for coats. And I sometimes put catering there, and extra hand towels and that sort of thing.

Q. So sometimes your attention is to get something out of that area?

A. Yes.

Q. You use that area during the flight?

A. Yes, we do.

Q. All right. Now, Mr. Mesereau asked you about whether or not Mr. Jackson would sometimes have vodka in a Coke can. Do you recall that portion of your testimony?

A. Yes, I do. I do.

Q. So you would serve Mr. Jackson mixed alcohol drinks in a Diet Coke can?

A. Every beverage that was consumed by Mr. Jackson was in a Diet Coke can, that is correct.

Q. And I think you testified that that was your idea originally?

A. That is correct.

Q. Before you came up with this idea, was Mr. Jackson secretive about his drinking?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. MESEREAU: Assumes facts not in evidence.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I -- I don’t know. The only time I flew him was with Pacific Jet and --

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: That’s what I’m talking about. When you flew with him on Pacific Jet.

A. Oh.

Q. Was he open about his drinking on Pacific

Jet?

A. No, sir, he was not.

Q. What makes you say that?

A. Because I served him out of a -- I’m sorry, a -- a blue -- it was almost like a -- not a Tupperware thing. I can’t describe it. I mean, it was sort of like -- I mean, it was a cup, but it wasn’t transparent. It was sort of a Tupperware --

Q. Plastic cup?

A. Right.

Q. Anything else unusual about that cup?

A. No.

Q. Did that cup -- was that something that was provided with the aircraft or something he brought?

A. Actually, that cup I believe was on the aircraft.

Q. And why did you use that cup -- well, let me back up.

Did -- on that particular aircraft, or on that particular charter jet company, did you also use crystal to serve your clients alcoholic beverages?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell me why you did not use crystal to serve Mr. Jackson on those flights?

A. I don’t remember why, I’m sorry. I don’t remember why I did that that time.

Q. But there was something about your serving him those items that made you believe he wanted it served in the plastic cup rather than crystal?

A. Can I take a moment to think about this?

Q. Sure.

A. I really -- I mean, I don’t remember why. Because I know I served children usually in plastic. I mean, you know, small children. Or they’re like sippy cups, but I don’t remember why.

Q. Was this like a sippy cup?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever object to being served in a plastic cup?

A. No.

Q. Did he ever object to being served in a Diet Coke can?

A. No.

Q. Did you believe that that’s how he wanted his beverage -- his alcoholic beverages served, in Diet Coke cans, and in this plastic cup when you did so?

A. I assumed that’s how he wanted to be served.

Q. And did Xtra Jet adopt a policy of having Diet Coke cans of wine available for Mr. Jackson on any flight Mr. Jackson flew on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So even when you weren’t flying, he was always served with a Diet Coke can, as far as you know?

A. Yes. I would give that information to our flight attendants.

Q. So you shared that with other flight attendants at Xtra Jet?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was this information ever -- did this information about serving wine in Diet Coke cans ever appear in writing on any Xtra Jet manifest, or order, or anything like that?

A. No, sir. We signed confidentiality agreements, and that would be something that would fall under a confidentiality agreement.

Q. Okay. Speaking of that, the reason you gave for doing this was because you believe that Mr. Jackson wanted to keep his drinking a secret from his children?

A. Private from his children, yes.

Q. He didn’t want his children to know he was drinking?

A. Yes.

Q. What makes you say that?

A. Because he’s a private person, and -- I have a lot of clients that don’t drink in front -- don’t present to drink in front of their children.

Q. My question is, what makes you think that Mr. Jackson didn’t want his children to know he was drinking, specifically Mr. Jackson?

A. I don’t know why he -- I don’t know why.

Q. Okay. But you believe that was the reason?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he ever talk to you about it?

A. No.

Q. Was it ever talked about on the flight, that he was having -- that he had alcoholic beverages in his Coke can?

A. Was it ever talked to --

Q. Talked about openly on the flight, by anybody, that he’s drinking?

A. No.

Q. That he’s drinking from a Coke can?

A. No, sir.

Q. So on this particular flight that involved the Arvizo children, was it ever mentioned that he was drinking wine from a Coke can?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, I believe you previously stated that he drank wine on this flight, about a bottle, and you opened up another bottle, that’s correct?

A. There were three bottles of wine opened. Two white and one red.

Q. And do you know how much of the second white bottle -- white wine bottle was consumed?

A. I do not. I know that it was opened, though.

Q. As far as vodka drinks, did you serve Mr. Jackson vodka drinks on that flight?

A. Mr. -- no, I did not serve Mr. Jackson vodka drinks on that particular flight.

Q. In the grand jury, did you testify -- when I asked you the question, “Do you recall if you served him any mixed drinks on that flight,” and you testified, “I did” --

A. Rum and Coke.

Q. -- do you recall saying that?

A. Yes.

Q. And then I asked you what type of mixed drinks, and you said, “I served him vodka and Diet Coke.” Did you say that?

A. I’m sorry, I believe it was rum and Diet Coke.

Q. Okay. So you were just mistaken about the type of drink that he had?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Okay. So -- but you did serve him mixed drinks on that flight?

A. I served one mixed drink, which was not consumed. And I remember it being rum and Coke, because that is what the girls were drinking.

Q. All right. So would anyone on that flight have any way of knowing that there was wine in that Coke can, or rum and Coke in that Coke can, unless they took a sip of it?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Calls for speculation; leading.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Did he ever explain to you why he was hiding his -- the fact that he is a drinker from his children?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: On the flight home from Florida --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- did Mr. Jackson become intoxicated? Do you understand the question?

A. I don’t -- “intoxicated” as in like how --

Q. Did he show signs that he was inebriated or signs that -- signs of showing that he was somebody who had been drinking? Show any physical signs of it?

A. Yes.

Q. In what way?

A. Well, he’s a very nervous flyer, and he was just a lot more relaxed. By no means was he drunk. I was more worried about the two girls. I actually stopped pouring them alcohol.

Q. Okay. But didn’t you testify in the grand jury that he was intoxicated?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And on this flight home, you noticed that this young boy, Gavin we’ve called him, you know who I’m talking about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said that he was acting weird.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What -- tell me a little bit about that. When was the first time you noticed that he did something that seemed weird to you?

A. Well, he was just incredibly rude. And I find that behavior unintelligent, and strange.

Q. Okay. My question was, when did you first start noticing that he’s not being --

A. From the very beginning, the originating point of the flight.

Q. As the flight went on, was -- did he become -- well, tell me exactly what happened. What was it that made you say that?

A. Upon arrive -- upon seating himself or situating himself in the cabin, he acted like I was his maid, basically, throwing a book bag at me, and, “I want this here,” and then, “I want this there.” And just very demanding. Just unusually demanding, unusually rude.

Q. Did his behavior get better as the flight went on?

A. The only time his behavior was acceptable was when he was listening to music.

Q. Okay.

A. He had a headset with some music that he was listening to.

Q. My question is, did his behavior get better, worse, the same? You tell me.

A. It stayed pretty much the same throughout the flight.

Q. And you said that he was -- now, you -- did you know this young man from any -- in any sense from outside the realm of flying this jet?

A. No, sir, I don’t watch T.V. typically, and I --

Q. So did you have any means of gauging whether this boy acted this way normally?

A. No. I would have no -- no way to gauge his behavior outside of on the aircraft.

Q. You said something about a food fight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The boy was engaged in a food fight?

A. That is correct.

Q. And who was he engaged in that food fight with?

A. Primarily with the medical doctor.

(Laughter.)

Q. And the doctor was fighting back?

A. Well, the medical doctor was sleeping at first, when he flung mashed potatoes at him.

(Laughter.)

Q. And then what happened?

A. Then --

Q. It went back and fork?

A. Right. It was like crowd mentality. Everyone sort of joined in.

Q. More than just the doctor?

A. The girls. And it became a game, basically, on board.

Q. So it was playful?

A. The -- the initial flinging of the mashed potatoes, in my opinion, was not playful. Flinging mashed potatoes at a sleeping man?

Q. Did you have -- you mentioned that he was bragging about a watch. Tell me about that.

A. He came into my -- into my galley area requesting an orange soda, Sunkist orange soda. And he had two watches on his wrist, and was saying things like, “Look at what Michael bought me.” You know, “These are very expensive watches.” And, “He’s my best friend.” And just --

Q. You didn’t like that?

A. Well, I -- I fly Fortune 500 people. I could care less what your watch costs.

Q. You weren’t impressed by his watch?

A. He just goes on.

Q. Okay. Did he mention anything about where he got that watch from?

A. Well, he did say, “Michael bought this watch for me.” And, “He’ll buy me anything.” He was just -- just an odd bird.

Q. Did you have any reason to believe that that is the way he normally acted or if something was causing him to act that way?

A. I have no idea. The only --

Q. You have no idea whether he normally acts that way?

A. I have no idea.

Q. When he was acting up, was Mr. Jackson seated next to him?

A. He was in my -- he was in my galley.

Q. No, in general. You said he was -- you know, in general, during this flight, you said he was acting weird. Did this behavior happen in Mr. Jackson’s presence?

A. Some of the time.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson do anything to stop it?

A. No.

Q. Miss Bell, was he acting at all like he could have been intoxicated?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; asked and answered.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I haven’t asked that question.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

No.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: In the grand jury, didn't you say it was possible he was intoxicated?

A. Anything's possible. It could be possible.

Q. Did you say that?

A. I wouldn't know how to gauge it, because he acted the same throughout the entire trip.

Q. So it could be that he was reacting because he'd been drinking?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Leading; and asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. When Mr. Jackson was seated next to Gavin, was he physically touching him?

A. Did they have physical contact?

Q. Was he physically touching him in any way?

A. Yes, at times.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson, at times, cuddle with Gavin?

A. I wouldn't say "cuddle." They -- he had his arm around him listening to music at times.

Q. So how do you define cuddling?

A. "Cuddling"? I guess I'd have to show you.

(Laughter.)

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: May I approach the witness, Your Honor?

(Laughter.)

Q. Okay. So it didn't fit your definition of "cuddle," but he did have his arm around him?

A. At times, yes, sir.

Q. Did it seem odd to you that Mr. Jackson didn't do anything to stop this young boy from being what you said was rude?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection. Calls for speculation; no foundation.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer. Do you want the question read back?

THE WITNESS: Yeah, please.

THE COURT: All right.

THE WITNESS: It's just distracting when you guys like --

THE COURT: I know it is. That's why I'm asking you if you want the question read back.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: Yes. I -- because his children are so polite, I wasn't used to that.

Q. BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Does he intervene when his children --

A. Absolutely. They're very well disciplined and polite.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: All right. Thank you.

I have no further questions.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Mesereau?

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning.

A. I'm sorry.

(Laughter.)

A. Okay. What next?

Q. Okay. Gavin's mother was on the plane, was she not?

A. Yes, she was.

Q. Did you ever see Gavin's mother try to stop his rude behavior?

A. No.

Q. Did you find that odd?

A. I found that very odd.

Q. And you did say that his rude behavior began from the moment he got on that plane, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And from the moment Gavin got on that plane, you never saw his mother ever try to stop his rude behavior, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How soon after Gavin got on that plane did the rude behavior start?

A. Immediately.

Q. And when you say "immediately," where was Gavin when the rude behavior began?

A. When he came up the stairs to enter the aircraft.
Q. And what was the first rude thing he did?
A. He threw his book bag at me and started ordering me around the cabin as to where he wanted placement of his items.
Q. And how did you respond to that?
A. Polite and efficiently.
Q. Was his mother near him when he began the rude behavior?
A. Yes.
Q. And if you recall, where was his mother when Gavin began this rude behavior?
A. She entered the aircraft behind him.
Q. Was it obvious to you that she could see his rude behavior?
A. Absolutely.
Q. What's the next rude thing you recall him doing on the plane?
A. He was just very demanding throughout the entire flight, with wanting to get his needs met, whether it was, you know, more ice in his orange soda, to no cole slaw on his plate with his chicken, more mashed potatoes. It seemed like nothing -- his chicken wasn't warm. He -- you know, "I want a side of cole slaw. I don't want it on the same plate." Just unusual things, like just very -- like, you can tell that, like, he was a newcomer to these 4210 sort of flights. Either you have people who are really polite or lovely, or you have people who are really demanding, and they feel like they need to be that way to make them feel important. I’m not sure why. But he was very demanding throughout the entire flight.

Q. Do you recall where his mother was seated during the flight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you please tell the jury where she was seated?

A. She was -- if you pull down the diagram, I can show you exactly where she was seated.

A. (Indicating.)

Q. So roughly how far away was Gavin during the flight when you saw him behaving in a rude manner?

A. He was seated here.

Q. Okay.

A. And he also was seated, at times, on the divan.

Q. And the divan is where?

A. Here.

Q. Okay. Did he behave rudely when he sat on the divan?

A. He was engaging in conversation with the two girls. They had just gotten back from a shopping trip in, I believe it was New York, they were saying. New York.

Q. And these are the girls that were drinking?

A. That is correct.

Q. So Gavin spent time with the two girls that were drinking?

A. Briefly, yes.

Q. Did you have your eye on Gavin all the time while he was with the two girls that were drinking?

A. It was hard not to. He was so demanding.

Q. Did he demand things of you while he was sitting with the girls that were drinking on the divan?

A. No, he was engaged in a conversation about their shopping trip. And they were talking about going horseback riding at Neverland Ranch when they landed from the flight. They had had plans to go horseback riding or something.

Q. And you saw Gavin talking to them about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you saw Gavin talk to them while they were drinking alcohol, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Have you told the jury every rude thing you can remember he did?

A. Well, there were so many. Let’s see. Basically he was just -- I mean, very demanding when it came to customer service.

There was also an incident in the lav where we had ran out of passenger napkins, and he made comments about that.

Also, when I did my towel service - which you do continually throughout the flight - apparently his hot -- well, we do cold towels, because it was hot in Florida. And then when I served the hot towels, he was -- I mean, he wasn’t rude, but, “Why isn’t this cold? Shouldn’t it be cold?” It’s like, “No, it’s meant to be hot, because you’re getting ready for your second course.” So, I mean, just things of that nature.

Q. And how long was this flight?

A. About five hours.

Q. Was he the only rude passenger on the flight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So what he did stands out in your mind very vividly, correct?

A. It stood out very vividly.

Q. Okay. And did you ever have your eye on his mother during the flight?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what do you recall her doing?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Beyond the scope; relevance.

MR. MESEREAU: I don’t think it’s beyond the scope, Your Honor, at all, given his questions. He actually put this diagram up there.

THE COURT: Overruled. But the question is rather vague. “What do you recall her doing” is --

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Okay.

Q. Do you recall seeing the mother seated in the seat that you’ve identified for the jury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall ever seeing the mother get out of her seat?

A. She got out of her seat to use the lav, yes.

Q. And do you recall speaking to the mother?

A. Yes. She was actually very interactive with the other governesses.

Q. So she was talking to the other governesses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I think you’ve described three of them, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did they seem like they were talking to her?

A. Yes, it was a very friendly conversation that they were having.

Q. And please tell the jury, if you can, where the governesses were seated.

A. One of the governesses was seated -- oh, can you -- thank you.

I had Governess No. 1 here. Governess No. 2 here. The medical doctor. The mom. The head governess was seated most of the time on the divan.

Q. Okay. Now, from what you recall, were the governesses in a position to observe Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they in a position to observe Gavin?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were they in a position to observe Mr. Jackson's children?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said you saw Mr. Jackson's children walking around at times, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Where did you see them walking around?

A. Back and forth throughout the aisles. And typically back in this area. They were playing back in this area here, where the credenza is and the divan. Yeah, mostly in that area.

Q. And Mr. Jackson's children were well behaved, as far as you're concerned?

A. Lovely.

Q. Had you flown with them before?

A. Yes. The third child wasn't there yet. But, yes, Paris and Prince, I'd flown with them once before.

Q. And did you see Paris and Prince spend time with Mr. Jackson on this flight?

A. Very much so.

Q. What did you see -- excuse me, let me rephrase the question. Describe what you saw in that regard.

A. They always had a lot of interaction together. Mr. Jackson -- I mean, he’s -- he plays with his children, he really does. He’s very interactive with his children. And so throughout the entire flight they were playing games and spending time with each other.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson seem to be keeping an eye on his children during the flight?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Okay. Did you have a chance to observe what the governesses were doing on the flight?

A. They were governing the children.

Q. Okay. Did you often see them looking in Mr. Jackson’s direction?

A. Yes. It’s a small aircraft. I mean, it’s not a small aircraft, but it’s small. It’s not -- it would be like if -- if this entire row of jurors were on my aircraft. It’s that small. I mean, you see everything that’s going on. Except for the pilots. They’re piloting the aircraft. I don’t know what they’re doing.

Q. So it’s very small and very compact, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Would it be accurate to say that, based on what you know about that aircraft and what you observed, that people were always looking at Mr. Jackson during the flight?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the prosecutor for the government asked you about the level of service. You said it was Level I, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And would you please define for the jury what Level I service is?

A. Level I service entails a lot of things. Paying attention to details. Making sure that the catering is correct. Making sure that the aircraft is clean, and all the particular movies, and all of the specific requests are met.

As for food service -- you know, making sure that everyone is comfortable and fed, and properly looked after.

Q. Is a lot of this work done in advance of the flight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said you were extremely attentive to Mr. Jackson during the flight, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you mean by that?

A. Well, I made certain that, you know, all of his catering requests were together; made certain that, you know, the cabin was at the proper temperature; that, you know, his -- just that he was looked after properly.

Q. Were the -- were you the only person on the flight responsible for Mr. Jackson’s service?

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. You were always on your feet you said?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said something that you don’t prepare meals on that particular flight?

A. Mr. Jackson tended to prefer KFC with all the fixings, so we would go get Kentucky Fried Chicken prior. Although the children, I was instructed by the head governess to have chicken breasts, grilled chicken breasts for them, fruit, a little different fare for the children.

Q. Okay. Now, the prosecutor for the government tried to get you to say that possibly he could have been intoxicated, correct?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: You never saw Mr. Jackson drunk on that flight, right?

A. No, sir.

Q. When you discussed the possibility of being intoxicated, what you were saying was that he calmed down and didn’t seem as hyper and nervous as he normally would, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. To your knowledge, did anyone consume alcohol on the flight other than Mr. Jackson and these women?

A. The medical doctor.

Q. Okay.

A. I served the mom a glass of wine. I don’t think she had drank it, though. None of the governesses drank. And of course not the pilots. Yeah, just the two girls -- the two girls, the medical doctor, the mom, and Mr. Jackson.

Q. And do you know what kind of wine you served the mom?

A. Yeah. It was a --

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I’ll object; relevancy.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: It was a Chardonnay, Kendall Jackson, white wine.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Did you ever see Gavin with his mother?

A. Together?

Q. Yes.

A. They came on the aircraft together, yeah.

Q. Did you ever see the mom interacting with Gavin? Excuse me, something in my voice. Pardon me. Did you ever see the mom interacting with Gavin on the flight?

A. Briefly.

Q. And where -- approximately when was that, if you know?

A. When she went to the lav. She stood midway, I remember it clearly, because she was blocking my aisle. She -- oops. Uh-oh.

She came out of the lav and was standing here talking to her son.

Q. Did you find it odd that she had very little interaction with her son on the flight?

A. I did.

Q. Did you say anything about that to anyone?

A. I did.

Q. Who did you discuss that with?

A. Lauren Wallace.

Q. And where was Lauren Wallace when you discussed that with her?

A. We had a telephone conversation several days after the flight, so that I could brief her as to confidential matters, such as making certain that Mr. Jackson, on his next flight, had wine poured into a Diet Coke can, and just giving her more of a profile briefing on the specific passengers on board so that she could accommodate them on their passenger profile.

Q. Did you assist the mom at all during the flight?

A. Assist her -- yeah, I served her food and beverage.

Q. Anything else you did for her, that you can recall?

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. Now, you said something along the lines that you didn’t use the sink very much. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you mean by that?

A. We don’t wash dishes on Gulfstream aircraft, because it has a tendency of clogging the drain, and you have a problem with the flight that way. We typically use it to wash our hands, and to store -- I actually use my sink, at times, to store -- if it’s going to be a lot of champagne and white wine, to chill my champagnes and my wines.

Q. Now, the prosecutor for the government had you identify various instances where you might have been doing something other than look at Mr. Jackson, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But how would you -- putting all this together, how would you characterize the level of attention you gave Mr. Jackson on that flight?

A. The level of attention?

Q. Yes.

A. I think it was -- I think it was -- I mean, I think the flight went well. I gave everyone a lot of attention, but he is my lead passenger. I really was concerned about his needs at all times.

Q. He's the one that you were most concerned about during the flight, correct?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And would it be accurate to say that no matter what you were doing, you were always looking at Mr. Jackson to see if he needed something?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Argumentative; sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Were you periodically looking Mr. Jackson's direction throughout that flight?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection; asked and answered.

THE COURT: Overruled.

You may answer.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Would you do that no matter what activity you were involved in?

A. Yes. It's -- like I said, the aircraft is small.

Like I can see the jurors. Like I can see No. 4 writing. I mean, even if I'm not looking at them, I can still see what they're doing.

So it's pretty intimate, the cabin.

Q. Did you ever complain about Gavin's behavior to Lauren Wallace?

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Objection. Assumes facts;

hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained as to hearsay.
MR. MESEREAU: If I could just take one second, Your Honor.
Q. When did you last talk to any prosecutor about what you were going to say in court?
A. Um --
Q. Did you talk to any prosecutor last night?
A. Prosecutor last night, no.
Q. Yes. Did anyone for the government call you last night?
A. No.
Q. No one discussed your testimony last night?
A. No, sir.
Q. Okay. And before you testified yesterday, did you ever have any meetings with anyone for the government?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. When were they, if you remember?
A. Do you mean phone meetings or personal meetings?
Q. Let's start with personal meetings.
A. Personal meeting.
Q. Yes.
A. I met with an individual yesterday, just briefly, to review my grand jury testimony.
Q. Was that in the morning?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where was that?

A. It was here in -- well, not in this building, but in a separate building.

Q. Do you know who you met with?

A. Yes. The individual that is seated behind the District Attorney.

Q. Was that Mr. Robel?

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. So he brought you a transcript of your grand jury testimony?

A. We -- he didn’t bring me a copy, we just reviewed some of the items.

Q. So he sat down with you and discussed what you had said before the grand jury, correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was -- excuse me. Did you have any meetings with any representative of the government before yesterday?

A. I had some brief phone conversations with Mr. -- Gordon.

Q. Prosecutor Auchincloss?

A. Yeah. I can’t say his last name.

Q. And when did they take place?

A. Just some brief phone conversations. Most of that was about my travel arrangements and that sort of thing.

Q. Did Prosecutor Auchincloss ever show you this particular diagram before today?

A. I believe when I was at the grand jury trial, there was a diagram similar.

Q. Okay.

A. I'm not certain if it was the same.

Q. Did Prosecutor Auchincloss show that to you at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Are there any other personal meetings you had with anyone for the government that you haven't described?

A. I think Sergeant Victor Alvarez.

Q. Okay. And was that a personal meeting with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And approximately when was that, if you know?

A. That was prior to the grand jury meeting.

Q. Okay. How about phone conversations, have you identified all the ones that you can remember?

A. Let me see. Victor Alvarez, Gordon. Shaundra, I think her name is. She's the witness coordinator. I've spoken with her several times.

Q. Did Prosecutor Auchincloss ever discuss with you what questions he was going to ask you in this trial?

A. He made mention that -- some of the issues that may come up. I mean, he wasn't specific as to like, saying, "I'm going to ask you this specific question.”

Q. Right. He just told you things that might be asked?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Of a topical nature --

A. Yes.

Q. -- does that sound right?

And -- okay. And did you discuss with him what your responses would likely be if those topics would come up?

A. No, I just said that I was going to tell the truth to the best of my recollection.

Q. All right. Okay. Thank you very much.

A. Thank you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: Just a couple of questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. AUCHINCLOSS:

Q. Miss Bell, you mentioned the two girls were talking about a trip to New York that they had taken?

A. That is correct.

Q. How is your recollection about that conversation?

A. It was pretty good.

Q. Are you certain that they had both gone to New York together, these two girls?

A. That is what they had maintained in their conversation.

Q. And they talked about what shopping they did?

A. That is correct.

Q. Were they specific about the things that they shopped for?

A. No, sir, they were not.

Q. Do you remember anything else about that conversation?

A. They were just saying that -- you know, that they were best friends, you know, that sort of conversation. They were quite pleasant, actually, the two girls.

Q. Did they act like they’d known each other for a long time?

A. Absolutely. And they maintained that they knew each other for quite some time, and that they were best friends, and they were looking forward to going horseback riding.

They seemed -- I mean, really -- I mean, I was excited for them. I was excited to hear about their shopping. And they were -- they were quite nice, actually.

Q. Okay. You mentioned that there were movies on this flight; is that correct?

A. We have the capability to show films, yes.

Q. Were movies shown?

A. No, sir.

Q. And in response to Mr. Mesereau's questioning, you said that the -- that Mr. Jackson was not intoxicated on this flight; is that your testimony?

A. No, I said that he wasn't drunk. He was intoxicated.

Q. Okay.

A. Thank you.

Q. All right. Thank you.

A. Thank you.

MR. AUCHINCLOSS: I have no further questions.

MR. MESEREAU: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You may step down. Thank you.

THE WITNESS: Thank you. So I get to go, right?

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: We'll call Stan Katz to the stand.

THE COURT: Come forward, please. When you get to the witness stand, remain standing. Face the clerk and raise your right hand.

STAN J. KATZ

Having been sworn, testified as follows:

THE WITNESS: I do.

THE CLERK: Please be seated. State and spell your name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

Stan, S-t-a-n; J, period; Katz, K-a-t-z.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. ZONEN:

Q. Sir, what is your current occupation?

A. I’m a licensed psychologist.

Q. And what is a psychologist?

A. A psychologist is licensed by the State of California to perform assessment, treatment, psychotherapy of individuals, groups, families, to do clinical diagnostic treatment, and to treat, in a variety of ways, individuals who have psychological disorders.

Q. Let me start with your education and your experience --

MR. MESEREAU: Excuse me.

Your Honor, the witness appears to be reading something that I have not seen. May I request an opportunity to look at that?

THE COURT: Yes, you may.

MR. ZONEN: Is he? Or was he just looking down?

MR. MESEREAU: Yes, he was.

MR. ZONEN: Maybe we should establish if he was reading from something.

THE COURT: He has something in front of him. Some papers there.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you, Your Honor.

(To the witness) May I see this?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.

Just for the record, Your Honor, the witness appears to have a very thick file. I would like to use it during the cross-examination.

THE COURT: You may or may not, depending on what happens.

MR. MESEREAU: Okay. Thank you.

MR. ZONEN: May I proceed?

THE COURT: You may.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Your education, please? What is your education?

A. I received a bachelor’s degree from California State University, master’s degree from Boston University, doctorate from UCLA.

Q. And your doctorate is in what subject?

A. Counseling psychology.

Q. When did you receive your doctorate?

A. 1977.

Q. Are you a practicing psychologist at this time?

A. Licensed clinical psychologist.

Q. And do you have a practice that you maintain?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What percentage of your workweek is devoted to an actual practice where you care for and see patients?

A. I spend approximately 60 to 70 percent of my practice seeing patients and clients.

Q. And what do you do with the balance of your professional week?

A. I spend 40 percent as a consulting psychologist on a television show called Starting Over.

Q. What is that?

A. It’s a show that helps women change their lives, women who have a myriad of problems that range from relationship disorders to life-threatening illnesses.

Q. And how long has this show been in series?

A. This is the second year. I’ve been on it for one year.

Q. What do you do? Are you actually on the show, or are you a consultant to the show?

A. I do both. I consult to the show, and I’m actually the on-camera psychologist helping these women to formulate plans to change their lives.

Q. And the nature of the problems that you deal with on this show are what?

A. Very serious problems. They range from women 4231 who are battling cancer, to women who are dealing with grief and loss, relationship problems, career choices, problems that have stopped their lives that need to be sort of restarted, and they are with us for anywhere from 4 to 12 weeks.

Q. Are they actresses, or are they people with real problems, or are they just pretending to be people with problems?

A. These are real people with real problems, who are assessed by psychologists before they come on the show. It's unscripted. And they live in a house together for this period of time, and they receive a lot of expert help, counseling, coaching, expertise, to help them change their lives.

Q. How long have you been working as a psychologist, practicing psychologist?

A. Since 1978.

Q. And what types of experiences have you had as a psychologist?

A. Well, I spent my early years as a psychologist working with substance abuse; working for the National Institute of Drug Abuse. And then went to Children's Hospital in 1975, where I spent five years. The first year was a general pediatric clinical internship. The second year was a specialty internship in child abuse. The third year was a fellowship in child abuse. And then I became a senior psychologist working with the Suspected Child Abuse Neglect Team, and what they call the Family Development Program, which was a treatment program for families of abused children and families who abuse their children.

Q. Is that your specialty, working with abused children?

A. It’s one of my specialties. I, after that, had done -- I spent a great deal of time working with the courts, with dependency court in Los Angeles, working in child abuse cases. And later on, became more involved with family law cases, seeing a lot of family law cases for Los Angeles County.

Q. All right. In your -- in conjunction with your work with the courts in Los Angeles County, are you appointed by the Court to do evaluations?

A. In dependence court I was appointed by the court to do evaluations, yes.

Q. What does that mean, when you’re appointed by the court, and what kind of evaluation?

A. It means the Judge selected from a list of so-called experts, expert panel, to conduct a 730 evaluation, Evidence Code 730 evaluation, of a child and/or family in the dependence court.

Q. And how many times have you been appointed by the Court to do evaluations?

A. In dependence court I was appointed over 600 times.

Q. Do you have other either appointments or where you’ve been selected by stipulation by both sides to be an expert or potentially an expert witness?

A. Yes, in family court, in criminal court, I’ve been appointed about 700 times.

Q. Now, do you testify in all of those occasions?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you testify on a small percentage of those occasions?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. But you have testified as an expert witness previously, have you not?

A. Many times.

Q. Do you consider yourself to be -- do you consider a specialty of your practice dealing with abused children?

A. One of my specialties, yes.

Q. When you say “abused children,” do we mean more than sexually abused children?

A. That’s correct.

Q. So what categories of abuse do we deal with in your specialty?

A. Physical abuse, endangering, neglect, emotional abuse, and sexual abuse.

Q. Do you lecture as part of your practice?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And where, and how, and how often?

A. Well, I have lectured over the past 25 years to groups arranged from judges, attorneys, the Bar Association, judges' college. Co-chaired two conferences with the dependency court, one of them with Judge Paul Boland. I have lectured through a lot of programs for the Los Angeles County Bar Association, and a variety of programs.

Q. Do you teach and have you taught?

A. I taught at UCLA for approximately ten years.

Q. What subject?

A. I taught research methodology, thesis seminar. Taught at Antioch University for three years, where I taught research methods, ethics, law and ethics, and human sexuality.

Q. In the course of your practice, have you --

THE COURT: Counsel, let's take our break.

THE COURT: Before you proceed, I want to give the jury some dates they can look forward to.

(To the jury) Next Wednesday, the 6th of April, it will be dark. We will not be session. I have to go to a meeting in Los Angeles.

And on April the 12th, which is the following Tuesday, we will only be in session in the morning, and I have a meeting in the afternoon.

And then on April 20th, we will only be in session in the morning. I have a meeting in the afternoon.

So, just to restate that, April 6th, we will not be in session all day, next Wednesday. The 12th we'll be in session only in the morning. And the 20th we'll be in session only in the morning. So you can go ahead and make alternate plans.

All right. Counsel, you may proceed.

MR. ZONEN: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. Dr. Katz, who is Larry Feldman?

A. Larry Feldman is an attorney in Los Angeles.

Q. And have you worked with Larry Feldman?

BAILIFF CORTEZ: Microphone.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Have you worked with doctor -- with Larry Feldman previously?

A. I have on two occasions.

Q. Two occasions over what period of time?

A. 18 years.

Q. Incidentally, this television show -- if I can backtrack just for one second.

A. Sure.

Q. -- that you’re involved in. Was this your first experience in working in television?

A. No, I’ve been working with media since 1978 either as an advisor or on television films. I’ve done three book tours, so I was on a lot of shows because I was on tour for three books.

I actually was a guest on numerous occasions talking about current topics. I did 23 episodes of another show a number of years ago.

Q. As a consultant?

A. Consultant on camera.

I was the co-chairman of the first international conference on children in the media, international conference in children in the media. So I’ve been working with media for approximately 25 years.

Q. All right. This television show is perhaps a little different, but not unusual for you?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection; leading.

MR. ZONEN: I’ll withdraw that question.

Q. This television show is not the first one you’ve been involved in?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, we were asking about Larry Feldman. Larry Feldman is an attorney in private practice in Los Angeles; is that right?

A. Yes.
Q. And you indicated that you had a couple of other associations with him?
A. Yes, two in 18 years. Two others besides this one.
Q. And when were the other two cases?
A. I understand -- the first one was in approximately 1987, although I don’t have a distinct memory of that.
Q. Okay.
A. And the second one was the Jordan Chandler case.
Q. And that was when?
A. I don’t have notes on that, but I think ‘93, ‘92.
Q. Okay. All right. In this particular case, were you retained by Larry Feldman to do some evaluations?
A. I was retained by Mr. Feldman to conduct some interviews.
Q. Okay. And what type of interview?
A. Mr. Feldman came to me and said that --
MR. MESEREAU: Objection; hearsay.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Tell us what your understanding of what you were supposed to be doing was.
A. My understanding was that I was to interview three children regarding allegations that they have been either mistreated, abused, possibly molested, that they had participated in a television program without their consent, and that there were numerous allegations, and he wanted me help sort it out.

Q. All right. Did you conduct interviews?
A. I did.
Q. And the interviews were with which children?
A. With Gavin Arvizo, Star Arvizo, and Davellin Arvizo.
Q. How many interviews with each of these children?
A. Two each.
Q. When did these interviews --
A. Excuse me. Two with Gavin, two with Star, one with Davellin.
Q. Did you interview their mother as well?
A. I did.
Q. When was she interviewed?
A. She was interviewed on May 15, 2003, May 16, and June 11, 2003.
Q. So you had three separate interviews with their mother?
A. I did.
Q. And is she Janet Arvizo?
A. She is.
Q. The interview with the two boys, Star and Gavin, when were those interviews?

A. May 29 and June 11, 2003.

Q. And how long, approximately, were those interviews?

A. Each interview is usually approximately an hour, so they were probably an hour each on that day, each day.

Q. And you said you had one interview with Davellin Arvizo?

A. Yes.

Q. When was that date?

A. May 29, 2003.

Q. During the course of those interviews, did you discuss with either of the children the possibility of a lawsuit?

A. I did.

Q. What was the purpose of that discussion?

MR. MESEREAU: Objection, to the extent it calls for hearsay.

THE COURT: The question was, “What was the purpose of the discussion,” not what was said. So I’ll overrule the objection.

Q. BY MR. ZONEN: Go ahead.

A. The purpose was, excuse me, to determine what the children’s expectations were for talking to me, and what they thought would happen as a result of talking to me.

Q. At the conclusion of all of these interviews, did you contact Child Protective Services or the Department of Child & Family Services in Los Angeles?

A. I did not personally contact them. However, I did go to Department of Children & Family Services on June 12th, 2003, and made an oral report to the Department of Children & Family Services social workers.

Q. All right. Following that, did you have an interview with Santa Barbara County law enforcement?

A. The next day I did.

Q. Did they contact you or did you contact them?

A. They contacted me, and left a message, and I returned their call.

MR. ZONEN: I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. MESEREAU:

Q. Good morning, Dr. Katz.

A. Good morning.

Q. We haven’t met, right?

A. We’ve never met.

Q. My name’s Tom Mesereau and I speak for Michael Jackson.

Now, you indicated that you had a -- I think the word you used was “association” with Attorney Larry Feldman that involved two cases; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Has Larry Feldman personally ever referred any business to you?

A. He referred a total of three cases to me.

Q. Has he ever referred any clients or patients to you?

A. I don’t think so.

Q. Do you know for sure?

A. Well, I’ve been in practice 25 years, and people -- I’ve seen hundreds of people, but I don’t recall anybody telling me that they were referred by Mr. Feldman.

Q. Okay. So your statement is that other than the two legal cases you referred to in response to the prosecutor’s questions, Larry Feldman, to your knowledge, has never referred any patient to you?

A. I don’t recall, yes.

Q. Do you know whether any firm associated with Larry Feldman has ever referred any patient or potential patient to you?

A. I don’t know.

Q. You don’t know?

A. I don’t know.

Q. Okay.

A. I don’t know all the firms he’s been associated with.

Q. Do you know if any relative of Larry Feldman has ever referred any patients to you?

A. I have no recollection of any relative of Larry Feldman referring a patient to me.

Q. Do you know any of Larry Feldman’s relatives?

A. I don’t think I know any of Larry -- oh, I do know his wife. Is that a relative?

Q. I think so.

A. I’m not sure. Not blood.

Q. You’re not sure. All right.

Do you know any cousins of Larry Feldman?

A. I don’t think so.

Q. Okay. But you’re not sure?

A. I’m not sure.

Q. Okay. Do you know the name of any law firm Larry Feldman’s ever been associated with?

A. I know his current firm is Kaye, Scholer.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Because he told me he moved from his last firm to Kaye, Scholer.

Q. And when did he tell you that?

A. I think within the last year or so.

Q. Do you know a therapist named Leonora Hausner?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How do you know her?

A. I’ve known her for years through Beverly Hills Mental Health Center, through the Beverly Hills School District.

Q. To your knowledge, is she related to Larry Feldman?
A. I don’t think she’s related to him, no.
Q. In no way?
A. Not related to him, no.
Q. When you say “not related to him,” what do you mean? Does she have any connection to Larry Feldman?
A. I think she does. I think his daughter or son is married to her daughter or son.
Q. Has she ever referred patients to you?
A. Yes, she has.
Q. She’s referred a lot of them, has she not?
A. I would say yes.
Q. Is there any reason you didn’t reveal that earlier?
MR. ZONEN: Revealed what earlier? Argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: How many patients has Leonora Hausner referred to you, to your knowledge?
A. Probably in the last 25 years, maybe six to eight.
Q. And do you think she’s related by marriage to Larry Feldman?
A. I’m not sure what the correct relationship is. I already said that I think her daughter or son is married to one of his children.

Q. Okay. Do you know for sure?
A. I think so.
Q. What do you know for sure?
A. A lot of things. Not that.
MR. ZONEN: I’ll object. Argumentative.
THE COURT: Sustained.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
THE COURT: I thought you accepted that. But --
MR. MESEREAU: Okay.
Q. Dr. Katz, please tell the jury what your understanding is, as you sit here today, about the relationship of Leonora Hausner to Attorney Larry Feldman.
MR. ZONEN: Objection. Asked and answered; and irrelevant.
MR. MESEREAU: I couldn’t get an answer.
MR. ZONEN: I believe he answered --
THE COURT: Just stop talking, both of you. I’m going to allow that question. I’ll have it reread for you.
(Record read.)
THE WITNESS: I think one of his children is married to one of her children. I believe that to be the case. I never met either one of them, so I believe that to be the case.
Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: And where did you learn that information?

A. From Mr. Feldman.
Thank you.
Q. How long have you known about this?
A. Probably two years.
Q. Okay. Did you review any documents before you testified today?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And are those the documents in front of you?
A. Yes, they are.
Q. Okay.
MR. MESEREAU: May I see those documents, Your Honor?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. MESEREAU: May I approach?
THE COURT: Yes.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.
THE WITNESS: Would you like to look at the file?
MR. MESEREAU: Yes.
THE WITNESS: Oh, here.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.
THE COURT: And, Counsel, that’s not how that’s going to happen. You don’t take his notes and then start questioning about them.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay. What would the Court prefer?
THE COURT: You asked permission to see them.
MR. MESEREAU: Yes, okay.

THE COURT: I gave that permission. Now, take them back up there.
MR. MESEREAU: Okay. May I take a look at them again, Your Honor?
THE COURT: You may.
MR. MESEREAU: Thank you.
Q. Dr. Feldman (sic), when you interviewed the Arvizos, did you bill for your services?
A. I did.
Q. Who did you bill?
A. Mr. Feldman’s office.
Q. And how much did you bill for your services?
A. A total of $4,800.
Q. Did that bill comprise all of the interviews you described to the jury?
A. Yes, it did.
Q. And what was your hourly rate for those interviews?
A. $300 per hour.
Q. Have you been paid?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. By Mr. Feldman?
A. By his firm at the time.
Q. Okay. And what firm was that?
A. I don’t recall the name of the firm. He was one of the principals, so Feldman & Something, or Something & Feldman.
Q. Okay. You mentioned you have a television show, right?

A. Correct.

Q. And you’ve been doing that for approximately a year?

A. That’s correct.

Q. And without giving the amount, you’re certainly paid to do the show, correct?

A. Not very well.

Q. Okay. But you are paid?

A. Not enough. I’m paid, yes.

Q. “Not enough” you say?

A. Not enough.

Q. How much would you like it to be?

A. More.

(Laughter.)

Q. Which station is that show on?

A. It’s an NBC-Universal syndicated show.

Q. And it’s on once a week?

A. It’s on five days a week.

Q. You told the jury that you were retained by Attorney Larry Feldman in the Jordie Chandler case, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. That was a lawsuit that Attorney Larry Feldman filed against Michael Jackson, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. That was in approximately 1992, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were paid money to work with Mr. Feldman on that case, correct?

A. Well, I was paid for my time and services, not to work with Mr. Feldman.

Q. But he’s the one that got you involved, true?

A. He’s the one that retained me on the case.

Q. Okay. And did he pay you a retainer on that case?

A. I don’t think he paid me a retainer. I think he paid me for the time I spent on the case.

Q. Okay. Okay. Okay. You’ve been in contact with him ever since, correct, on a periodic basis?

A. I don’t remember talking to Mr. Feldman -- I don’t remember talking to him the last ten years. I don’t think I’ve been in contact, but I don’t recall.

Q. Well, you certainly -- you don’t recall?

A. I don’t know if he ever called or I ever ran into him, but I don’t remember doing anything professionally with him for the last ten years.

Q. Okay. I’m not asking if you did something professionally with him.

A. Contact?

Q. I’m asking if you’ve had any contact of any kind with him before he referred the Arvizos to you.

A. Well, I’m trying to explain that. I have no social relationship with him. I don’t go to dinner with him or never been to his house. I don’t have lunch with him, dinner with him.

I may have had a phone call about something. I may have talked to him in the ten years. I don’t have any other recollection, though.

Q. Now, did he call you about interviewing the Arvizos?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And is it because of his phone call that you interviewed the Arvizos?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you communicate with Attorney Larry Feldman about those interviews?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you communicate with Attorney Larry Feldman while those interviews were being conducted?

A. Are you talking about during the actual interview, you mean like telephonically?

Q. Between the first -- excuse me, let me rephrase that.

Between your first meeting with the Arvizos and your last meeting with the Arvizos, did you discuss with Larry Feldman the content of any of those interviews?

A. I did.

Q. How many times?

A. I had a meeting with him in between the two sets of interviews on June 5, 2003.

Q. That’s one meeting?

A. One meeting, yes.

Q. Did you ever talk to him on the phone before or -- or after that meeting about your interviews with the Arvizos?

A. I believe I had a brief conversation with him prior to setting up that meeting.

Q. After the interviews were finished, did you contact Mr. Feldman and discuss those interviews?

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately when was that?

A. On the day of June -- June 11.

Q. Was that a phone conversation?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did you ever have a personal meeting with Attorney Larry Feldman to discuss those interviews?

A. Yes, on June the 5th.

Q. Did you bill Mr. Feldman for the time you spent in that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you bill Mr. Feldman for the time you spent on the phone?

A. I don’t believe so. I think it was a five-minute phone call to set up the meeting.

Q. You indicated you met with authorities in Santa Barbara at some point, correct?

A. I never met with them in person.

Q. Did you ever talk to them on the phone?

A. I did.

Q. And was the subject of that phone call your actions with the Arvizos?

A. My interviews. The subject was my interviews, yes.

Q. And do you recall approximately when that phone call was?

A. I think it was June 13, 2003.

Q. And who was that phone call with, if you know?

A. Detective Paul Zelis.

Q. Did you know whether or not that phone call was being recorded?

A. I did not know.

Q. At some point you learned it had been recorded, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. How did you learn that?

A. I learned that when I saw the transcript of the -- of the phone call.

Q. And how did you get a copy of the transcript?

A. Mr. Zonen of the D.A.’s Office gave me the transcript.

Q. And approximately when was that?

A. I do not remember.

Q. And you reviewed that transcript before you testified today, correct?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you made notations on the transcript, correct?

A. Are you asking me if I made notations that are on the transcript right now, the copy you have?

Q. Well, I don’t have your copy. You have your copy now, right?

A. Yes, I have a copy.

There are notations on that transcript that I did not make, and there are some notations I made last night on the transcript for my own edification. But there are notations on the transcript which are not my notations.

Q. Whose notations are they?

A. I understand Mr. Zonen’s. And when he made the copy of the transcript, he gave me, I think inadvertently, his copy where he had made notations.

Q. Did you ever discuss -- excuse me, let me rephrase that. Did you ever discuss Prosecutor Zonen’s notations on the transcript with Prosecutor Zonen?

A. Never.

Q. Okay. Did you ever tell him you have a copy of a transcript that appears to have his notations?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Is today the first time, as far as you know, he’s ever heard that you have his transcript with his notations?

A. No, because he actually told me, he said, “Those are my” -- recently he told me, “Those are my notations in case you’re asked.” And I said, “Oh.”

Q. Okay. When you spoke to the Santa Barbara sheriffs, you talked about your discussions with the Arvizos, correct?

A. That’s correct.

Q. Who was involved in that call besides you? Was it one officer, or more than one, to your knowledge?

A. To my knowledge, it was just Detective Paul Zelis.

Q. Was that an unexpected call, as far as you’re concerned?

A. No, it was not.

Q. Okay. Was it not unexpected because you had already contacted authorities yourself?

A. I had contacted Department of Children & Family Services in this face-to-face meeting. And because I felt obliged to make this report, I told Mr. Feldman that I had to report this to Santa Barbara County authorities. And he told me that he would find out which authority to report this to, because he wanted to be sure it was confidential. And so I then heard from -- excuse me, I then heard from Detective Paul Zelis, who called me. And I returned the call.

Q. Do you remember telling Detective Zelis that the Arvizos came to you in this lawsuit?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember referring to the lawsuit more than once?
A. Probably so.
Q. You're not sure?
A. Well, I think I referred to it more than once, yes.
Q. Okay. Your belief that there was a lawsuit came from Attorney Larry Feldman, true?
A. No.
Q. He's the only attorney you had spoken to about the Arvizos at that point, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. You're not a lawyer, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. It was your belief, when you talked to the Santa Barbara sheriff, that Mr. Feldman was filing a lawsuit for the Arvizos, correct?
A. It was my belief that he was thinking about filing a lawsuit, yes.
Q. To your knowledge, does Attorney Feldman still advise the Arvizos?
MR. ZONEN: I'll object as speculative or hearsay.
THE COURT: Overruled.
You may answer.

THE WITNESS: I don’t know. I don’t know that.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: When did you last talk to Attorney Larry Feldman about this case?

A. Yesterday.

Q. Did he call you or did you call him?

A. He called me.

Q. Are you telling the jury that in that call you did not discuss with Attorney Feldman in any shape or form this case?

A. I never said that. I said he didn’t tell me that he was advising the Arvizo family.

Q. Did --

A. I don’t think he’s advising the Arvizo family.

Q. In your phone call with Attorney Feldman yesterday, did you, Dr. Katz, discuss this case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Before yesterday, when was the last time you spoke with Attorney Larry Feldman about this case?

A. I don’t have the dates here, but within the last couple weeks, we talked about the schedule, when we were going to both be appearing, and we reviewed our notes together.

Q. And you reviewed your notes with Attorney Larry Feldman regarding this case?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Would that include the file you have with you today?

A. Well, he didn’t review my file. However, we went through the process just so that we both could refresh our memories of things that weren’t written down.

Q. How long was that discussion?

A. About a half hour.

Q. Where did it take place?

A. In his office.

Q. Did you go to his office?

A. I did.

Q. So you both discussed what you were going to testify to in this case, correct?

A. No. We both talked about exactly our recollections of how this case progressed, that’s correct.

Q. Before that meeting, when was the other -- excuse me. Let me rephrase that. You talked to him on the phone yesterday about the case, right?

A. Correct.

Q. You met with him at the meeting you’ve just described about the case?

A. Correct.

Q. Did you ever meet with him before that about this case?

A. Not since June 5th of 2003.

Q. And have you ever talked to him on the phone since June 5th, 2003, about this case?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. How many times, do you think?

A. Two or three.

Q. Are you telling the jury you don't think Mr. Feldman is providing any advice to the Arvizos at the moment?

A. I'm telling the jury I don't know whether he is. He did not tell me he's providing advice to the Arvizo family.

Q. And in your phone calls and meetings with Attorney Feldman, you never asked him?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever suspect during those phone calls or in those meetings that he might be representing the Arvizos?

A. What I do know, he has told me that he hadn't spoken, I think, to the family in a while. That's all he said to me.

Q. Okay. Now, you're aware that -- excuse me, let me rephrase that.

You've been involved in your career in a number of lawsuits involving allegations of child abuse, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. How many lawsuits involving allegations of child abuse do you think you've been involved in as a professional psychologist?

A. In all venues? Do you mean family law?

Criminal?

Q. Sure.

A. Dependency?

Q. Sure.

A. A couple thousand maybe.

Q. And have you been involved as a professional psychologist in any civil lawsuits involving allegations of child abuse where people wanted monetary damages?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And were they primarily in Los Angeles?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware that if a child is abused or claims they were abused they have until the age of approximately 20 to file a lawsuit?

A. Yes.

Q. And you're aware that, what is called a statute of limitations, meaning when the time period begins to commence --

MR. ZONEN: I'm going to object as exceeding the witness's expertise.

THE COURT: Sustained.

Q. BY MR. MESEREAU: Have you had any experience, Dr. Katz, in the relationship between criminal proceedings and civil proceedings when it comes to allegations of child abuse?

A. Well, I'm not sure how to answer that, except to say that I’m currently working a number of civil cases regarding victims of the Catholic church, alleged victims of the Catholic church. Those cases, some may end up being criminal, some may be civil, depending on the statute of limitations, as you pointed out.

Q. Have some of them concerned criminal proceedings?

A. My work does not concern criminal proceedings with those cases.

Q. Have you ever testified in a criminal case before today?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. How many criminal cases have you testified in before today?

A. Less than half a dozen.

Q. Were they primarily in Los Angeles?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. In any of those criminal cases, were you also involved in a parallel civil proceeding?

A. No.

Q. In any of those criminal cases, were you involved in a parallel divorce proceeding?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, a divorce proceeding is a civil proceeding, correct?

A. Yes, it is.
